QUINCY PASTORS REPLY TO CHALLENGE

Address of Cardinal O'Connell the Theme of Revs. Hudson, Willmott, Davison and Others

Pastor of Bethany Church Asks Some Questions of Cardinal

REV. ADELBERT L. HUDSON.

REV. B. A. WILLMOTT.

Three or more of the Quincy pastors replied on Sunday to the address of Cardinal O'Connell before the Holy Name Societies of Boston; Rev. A. L. Hudson of the First Parish church, Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of Bethany Congregational church, and Rev. Thomas W. Davison of the Atlantic Memorial church, all having very large congregations.

AT FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. Adelbert Lathrop Hudson of the First Parish church said that President Eliot's address on 20th Century Christianity could not properly be criticised as a sermon intended to embody or express the Spirit of Christianity. It is rather a clear and thoughtful analysis of those elements in Christianity which may reasonably be expected to survive on the hypothesis that the 20th century will continue the progress of the 19th in the development of democracy and scientific thought.

The careful reader will find in this analysis two essential elements. The first of these is as the pervading life of the universe, which dominates its activities as the spirit of man dominates the activities of his body, and which is manifested alike in the tireless and wondrous energies of nature; in human loves and aspirations and in the evolution of human society. So long as man is man this universal life will continue to be thought of as a person, and the name "Our Father" will continue to express our conception of his relation to mankind.

The second element which Dr. Eliot regards as essential to the christianity of the future is an for the personality of Jesus, a greater emphasis on the extraordinary quality of his teachings, and a patient striving toward their just fruition.

He recognizes also two prodigious forces which have greatly modified religious doctrines and conceptions, heretofore regarded as essential in Christianity, viz the growth of democracy and the spirit of scientific inquiry. These have substituted liberty for authority; and have made it impossible for the truly modern man to yield to any ecclesiastical body or person the right to dictate what he shall think or believe.

FRIENDS CROWD THE CHURCH

At Funeral of John Sutherland Prominent Among Swedes

Representatives of the Board of Trade and the Quincy Yacht Club attended the funeral of John Sutherland a local oil merchant who died in Texas, which took place Sunday afternoon. Services were held at the Swedish Congregational church on Garfield street, which was crowded. Rev. A. G. Sporrong officiated and he was assisted by Rev. Gerard W. Palmgren or Hartford, Ct., a former pastor., Music was by a male chorus of the church, and included a solo by the pastor. The floral remembrances were numerous and beautiful. Personal friends acted as pall bearers: C. Leander, J. P. Danellson, E. G. Bergfors, L. E. Wilbas, C. Sattlund and John Anderson. Burial was at Mt. Wollaston.

WILLIAM D. McKAY.

A telegram has been received from New York stating that William D. McKay formerly of this city died there Saturday evening, of typhoid fever.

He was 29 years of age and leaves a widow.

Mr. McKay was well known in Quincy, having been employed as lineman by the Electric Light Company. He left about two years ago and obtained employment in New York, being promoted shortly after to the position of foreman, which position he has since held. His fine physique made him a conspicuous figure when he walked on the streets of Quincy, being powerfully built and active in his movements. He was a brother-in-law of Allen McPhee of Grant street.

The funeral will be conducted in Boston on Wednesday and the Rev. A. M. Thompson will officiate. Interment will be at Mount Hope.

TOUR OF INSPECTION.

A. E. Hanson of Quincy leaves Boston tonight with 34 of the members of the Electrical Engineering Society of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on an inspection trip to the leading establishments in the lines of electrical specialties of the country. The trip will take them to the Pennsylvania Railroad power station at Long Island city, Edison's laboratories at Orange, N. J., and the Harrison Lamp Works, the Western Electric Co. and the Baldwin and Brill factories at Philadelphia, Pa. They will be the guests of the New York Technology club at a dinner in Philadelphia on Thursday. The itinerary includes many interesting inspections.

EXPLOSION AT MILLER GARAGE

Causes a Loss of $5,000 or More by Fire

Almost at the eleventh hour of his service as Chief Engineer of the Fire department, Chief Litchfield was called upon Saturday night to fight a spectacular fire in the Miller garage on Canal street, the scene of several previous fires, althought at none did the damage equal that of the fire of Saturday night.

This fire was evidently caused by the gasoline tank in a large Packard truck of the Rogers Express taking fire. It was first discovered by a woman living in a house opposite who sent one of her children out to notify the police officer. Officer Broberg happened to be coming down Canal street at the time, and as he sounded the alarm, there was a loud explosion which blew open the front doors and blew out the skylights on the top of the building, the explosion being followed by a sheet of flame.

There were four large auto trucks in this part of the building, two of which belonged to the old Abbott & Miller express company, the truck of Rogers Bros. express and a truck owned by Frank Giglio; also a five passenger automobile of Freeman W. Grant. The truck of Mr. Giglio and the car of Mr. Grant were pulled into the street, blazing fiercely and the remaining cars in the building were all ablaze. Several lines of hydrant hose were run into the building while lines from the chemical were used to extinguish the fire in the cars that had been pulled outside of the building. It did not require many minutes to get the best of the fire, although in that few minutes the auto and trucks were so badly burned that they were practically ruined.

On the westerly end of the building separated by a cement partition was a smaller garage used by Bert Miller, in which he had his two auto trucks and a five passenger automobile. This room was filled with stifling smoke, but the fire did not enter.

It was 9.31 when the alarm sounded from Box 227 and it was after 10 o'clock before the all-out sounded.

The loss on the cars is hard to estimate, and cannot be fully told until the trucks have been overhauled. The two trucks of Abbott & Millers express were old cars so that the loss on these will be problematical for it is a well known fact that the value of automobiles depreciate very fast. The truck of Rogers Bros., was almost a new one, and this will be the greatest loss. It is probable that the total loss will not exceed $5,000 if it amounts that.

The garage which was leased by Bert Miller was not greatly damaged It is of cement and there was but little on the inside of the building to burn, so that the loss will be confined to the doors and windows, and glass in the skylights. Some of the trucks were covered by insurance and some of them were not.

ENGAGEMENT PARTY.

Miss Avah Gilson entertained her club at her home on Linden place Saturday evening in honor of Miss Helene Taylor, whose engagement has been recently announced to Dr. Harold E. Diehl of this city. Auction bridge and cooncan were enjoyed part of the evening, the souvenirs for auction going to Mrs. Walter H. Soley and Joseph S. Morse and for cooncan to Mrs. Frederick H. Breslyn and L. H. Gilson of Brockton. A dainty collation was served, including the birthday cake of the hostess which was followed by a general good time of singing and dancing.

KILLED ON RAILROAD

"Scotch Mag" Struck by Train at Robertson Street

Mrs. Margaret Middlemas, familiarly known in every corner of the city as "Scotch Mag," met instant death Saturday night when she was struck by the locomotive of an outbound train near the Robertson street crossing, a short distance from the Gridley Bryant school.

How the accident occurred is a mystery which could be solved only by the woman whose lips are sealed in death. The body horribly mutilated, lay on the track until discovered by a Boston bound train and after being viewed by Medical Examiner Fred E. Jones was removed to the Hall morgue.

Saturday afternoon, Scotch Mag had been one of the delighted ones at the movies show in Music hall and on leaving she bade the ushers a cheery farewell and said she would be down next Saturday. Several hours later her remains were noticed on the tracks, and but little is known of her movements between leaving the playhouse and then.

Sunday two relatives appeared as the only known heirs of the eccentric herb and berry picker. They are Mrs. James Moody, a grand niece, and William Buckan, a nephew, both of Quincy. Today, with members of the police department and Public Administrator Maurice P. Spillane they will go to the hut where Scotch Mag passed the latter part of her life and search it.

The authorities locked up the little house until this search could be made for possible valuables. The case had been turned over to the public administrator in case it was found that the woman did not leave money enough to be buried with. This attention has not been neglected since a long-time friend has claimed the body and completed the arrangements for the funeral.

She has been known to Quincy and Milton residents for about 50 years. For the last 32 years she lived alone in a hut in the woods beyond the crown of the Break Neck hill. She was about 82 years old and her only companion was a pet cat.

Exceedingly independent she resisted every entreaty to enter the almshouse until last winter when friends convinced her that pneumonia had ravaged her system so severely that life depended only on proper care. This winter she could not be prevailed upon to become a public charge.

Her prized possession was an album containing portraits of worthies with whom she had associated in her youth in Scotland and one was the portrait of her husband, Mr. Middlemas who died in Edinborough. Scotch Mag was always reticent regarding her past, but from occasional remarks dropped now and then it was gathered that she left her home land after the death of her husband, too proud to return to parents who objected to her marriage to the man of her choice. She is thought to have lived a short time in New York and frequently said she had discovered the real way to live when she came to the woods on the outskirts of Quincy.

Living a hermit's existence in every way, Scotch Mag eked out an existence by picking and selling berries, dandelions and herbs in summer and selling evergreen and Christmas wreaths in winter. Between times she cut wood for the kitchen range which nearly filled her little kitchen.

Until age took the sprightliness from her step she was a familiar figure at gatherings of Scotsmen and frequently danced the Highland fling and Scottish sword dance, and while amateurs nights were being conducted in the local playhouses Scotch Mag was on the bill three times, and twice was winner of the first prize.

Home dressmaking under the supervision of an efficient teacher is now popular. Mrs. Neary holds day or evening classes at Miss Spear's 118 Granite street.

The Wollaston country fair will be held this year on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 12 and 13.

MAYOR MILLER REMOVES ASSESSORS

Faxon Billings New Chief Engineer Makes Several Transfers in Fire Department

John C. Murray at Head of New Board of Health

The axe fell this morning at City Hall on the unprotected heads of Assessors Wellington W. Mitchell and Eben Stocker. These two officials were requested a week ago by the Mayor to resign, and in reply sent the Mayor a tart letter stating that while they did not care to serve under the existing circumstances they declined to resign.

The Mayor therefore did the next thing this morning, and officially removed them from office for the good of the service. A notice to this effect was filed with the City Clerk and a similar notice was served by a constable on the two gentlemen.

The next thing of interest was the appointing of John C. Murray as chairman of the Board of Health. Mr. Murray was immediately sworn in and assumed office. Mr. Murray is one of Quincy's well known granite manufacturers, and is not only an ex-President of the Granite Manufacturers Association but is also an ex-member of the City Council.

Shortly after making this announcement the Mayor paid a visit to several of the offices at City Hall greeting the new officials all of whom were on duty this morning. The object of his visit was to look over available room for a new office for the Mayor.

A little later, Faxon Billings, the new Chief Engineer, drove to City Hall in his automobile, the red devil, and took the Mayor and Commission-

THE STOCK MARKET.

After a long period of scraping along on bed rock bottom, the stock market has advanced. Sentiment on the various exchanges is more hopeful.

The public that watches from afar the doings of the speculators should not think that this is necessarily a favorable time for them to engage in speculation. The cream is never secured by those who buy when hope prevails on Wall street. The time to make money, if ever, is when Wall street is convinced that the country is headed straight for the kennels. A few bargains can then be picked up.

The stock broker sees everything either all sunlight or all pitch black. There are no intermediate shades of twilight.

The man who can risk his whole career on the roulette wheel of stock investments has the gambling spirit. If gamblers were regarded as socially acceptable, he would place his shiny coins on the green cloth.

When he is hopeful, he cannot admit the possibility of clouds and storms. He buys at top level prices. These are based on fictitious valuations. They assume the persistence of flexible money markets, and disregard the yeasting social unrest that must shake the business fabric for a long time.

When this type of man is converted to the "bear" position, he goes to the opposite extreme. He ignores the fundamental common sense of the American people. He fails to see that all political parties want prosperity, and that any political party will make many flops and reversals to keep in power. Depression never goes far before it rights itself.

Wherefore no man is fit to spend a dollar on stock investment who depends much on the dope fed out by these sporting gents. It is as unreliable as tips on the races.

$1,000,000 LIBEL SUIT IS FILED

Old Dominion Line Alleges Gross Negligence In Collision

LAYS BLAME ON NANTUCKET

Claims Loss of Forty-One Lives When Monroe Went Down Could Have Been Avoided—Master of Lost Ship Says Vessel Was n No Way Responsible For Disaster

Norfolk, Feb. 2.—No official or any of the counsel for the Merchants' and Miners' Transportation company would discuss in any way the libel for $1,000,000 filed by the Old Dominion line against the company's steamship Nantucket, which rammed and sank the Old Dominion steamship Monroe, with a loss of forty-one lives. Captain Berry, master of the Nantucket, said he had orders not to discuss the accident or the suit.

The suit was filed after an all day conference among the officials of the Old Dominion line, Captain Johnson of the Monroe, and other officers of the lost steamship.

In the bill of complaint Johnson makes the direct charge that the collision was due to gross negligence or carelessness of the navigators of the Nantucket, and could have been avoided by the exercise of due care and watchfulness.

Although none of the officials of the Merchants' and Miners' line here would comment in any way, Joseph C. Whitney, president of the line, issued a statement at Baltimore, declaring that every precaution suggested by proper seamanship and merchant marine custom, as well as those required by law, had been followed in manning and equipping the Nantucket.

"The company asserts," he said, "that the equipment and discipline aboard both vessels must have been of the highest order, as shown by the work of the captains, officers and crews in the number of lives saved after such a disastrous collision, in view of the short time that the stricken steamship remained afloat.

In his bill Johnson, in summarizing his charges against the Nantucket, declares them to have been negligent in the following particulars:

"In not having a competent master and crew; in failing to give the signals required by law of a vessel under way in a fog; in proceeding at a high rate of speed in foggy weather; in not stopping her engines when she heard the fog whistles from the Monroe; in failing to keep and maintain a proper and efficient lookout; in making absolutely no efforts to avoid the collision, but instead coming on with undiminished speed after she had heard the signals from the Monroe; in that the Nantucket was carelessly and negligently navigated."

Johnson declares that the Monroe was in no way responsible for the accident, that he had a double lookout posted, that he was running at greatly reduced speed, that the Monroe's automatic fog whistle was being blown, and that on hearing the Nantucket he gave the proper signals.

EIGHTEEN LIVES LOST

Five of Bark's Crew Saved by Heroism of Her First Officer

Falmouth, Eng., Feb. 2.—Captain Lorenz, the first officer, and seventeen of the crew of the German bark Hera, from Pisagau, Chile, for Falmouth, lost their lives through the vessel striking a rock as she had almost concluded her voyage.

The remaining five men were saved through the gallantry of the first officer, who, realizing his own end was near, fell back dead after handing his whistle to a comrade with orders to blow it. This attracted the attention of a lifeboat, who rescued the men from the rigging.

The Hera encountered a gale at the entrance to the English channel. She lost her course and struck on the rocks near Porthalla bight.

ATTACKED BY THUGS

Business Man With Much Money on His Person Is Seriously Wounded

Providence, Feb. 2.—Two gunmen, accompanied by a 16-year-old boy, shot down Frank C. Pettis, an oyster dealer, early Sunday morning as he was leaving his private garage at the rear of his home. Pettis, the surgeons believe, will recover. One bullet was taken from his head and a second passed through his shoulder.

Pettis had arrived at his garage about 5 o'clock. He had $1000 in bills with him, and wore diamonds valued at $2000. He had placed his car in the garage and had stepped from the door when he was suddenly confronted with the two men, each holding revolvers. A boy was standing in the rear of the men, evidently acting as their lookout.

The men told Pettis to halt and throw up his hands. Pettis, instead, started to run toward his house. As he did so a bullet entered his head. Pettis fell to the ground. He got to his feet again and started to run. A second shot struck him in the shoulder and as he dropped three more shots were fired at him.

The men and boy then started off at a lively pace and all trace of them vanished. Pettis crawled with difficulty to his house, and a startled servant opened the door as he dropped in the hallway.

Rivals May Clash at Haytien Capital Over the Presidency

Cape Haitien, Feb. 2.—A serious situation has developed in Port-au-Prince, the Haytien capital, because of the conflicting candidacies for the presidency.

Senator Theodore has been generally recognized as the leader of the revolution that culminated in the flight of President Oreste from the capital. Now, with no government existing and no constitutional machinery for the election of a president, the partisans of other rebel leaders are disputing with the friends of Theodore for the office.

As a result it is impossible to foresee who the next president will be. General Vilbrun's friends are actively promoting his candidacy. General Guillaume is aspiring to the office, and a third faction is forcing the claims of Mr. Sam, a one-time minister. They all refuse to concede the right of Theodore to assume the vacant seat, although he is apparently the strongest candidate.

NOTORIOUS GUNMAN ENDS DAYS IN JAIL

"Doc" Middleton Had Twenty-Seven Notches In His Gun

Douglas, Wyo., Feb. 2.—"Doc" Middleton died in jail in Douglas. The barrel of his "six-gun" was so covered with notches—there were twenty-seven of them—that there was not room for them all on one side, so the redoubtable owner had to turn the weapon over and begin making marks on the other.

Time was when "Doc" was "wanted" in half a dozen states, with rewards aggrgating probably $50,000 hanging over his head. The vigilantes were on the lookout for him, and instructions were that he be hanged without the formality of a trial.

Middleton died of measles and pneumonia. He had been king of the cattle rustlers, dozens of whom, as well as vigilantes, had been killed.

After the cattle rustling days "Doc" spent his time in the Black Hil's and in western Nebraska and Wyoming, operating saloons and gambling dens. Finally he started bootlegging. Two weeks ago he was arrested in Douglas for that offense and was placed in jail, where he died.

Famous Horses Lost In Fire

Lincoln, Mass., Feb. 2.—The racing stable of A. H. Higginson, off the Concord road, was burned to the ground and with it were destroyed twenty-two horses, several of them of national reputation. The loss is estimated at $40,000. The fire is believed to have been incendiary.

Letters From The People

QUINCY POINT SCHOOL NEED

D. J. Ford Favors Erection of Another Building

Editor Daily Ledger:

A word in regard to the proposed addition to the Washington school. Reports tell us that at a meeting of the Public Buildings committee of the Council the other evening, all the speakers appeared in favor. If so, then they must come from the Quincy Point end of the district, as the people of the north-western end of the ward are opposed to it as a unit.

The only solution for an overcrowded Washington school is the building of a new school somewhere in the north-western section of the ward.

Ward Two is the only ward in the city which has but one public school. Ward One has the Coddington, Cranch and Atherton Hough. Ward Three has the Adams, Lincoln and John Hancock. Ward Four has the Willard and Gridley Bryant. Ward Five the Wollaston and the Massachusetts Fields. Ward Six has the Quincy and the Montclair schools.

As I said Ward Two has but one, and precinct 2 of Ward Two is the only precinct in the city which has no public school. South Walnut, Main and the western part of Sumner street are a mile from the Washington school and it is a hardship to make little children walk that distance when they should have a school in their own neighborhood.

Now from a business standpoint is it good policy for the city to spend $40,000 to enlarge the Washington school. Let us see. Last week when the births of the year 1913 were taken, it was found that one hundred children were born in precinct 2 where there is no school, and only fifty were born in the lower precinct. Isn't that the only barometer to go by as to the future location of a school?

As it takes eight years to complete a grammar school course it is fair to assume that in that time we would have 800 children of grammar school age in precinct 2. It is one of the most thickly settled sections of the city, and while not growing in beauty it is in population.

It appears to me that there are some well meaning people of Quincy Point, among them the principal of the school, who are ambitious to get a school hall. They have had numerous meetings and petitions to that end.

Now what benefit is a school hall to the pupils of the school? Will they be any more proficient in the three R's, "Reading, 'Riting and 'Rithmatic?" Decidedly not. Thirty-five years ago under Col. Parker practically every graduate of a grammar school in Quincy was an expert penman. Today a paper written by a grammar school scholar is as easily read as a Chinese laundry check. And thirty-five years ago we had no school hall.

The school hall may be all right for a dance or a lecture or a debate on woman suffrage, and once in a year for graduation exercises. But the public school is built to educate the child and for no other purpose. We of the upper end of the district feel that the School Committee, City Council, and Mayor should look into the matter carefully before they decide to spend $35,000 or $40,000 on the Washington school when eventually an new school must be built in precinct 2.

Don't make another Adams school mistake!

D. J. FORD,
Old Washington school graduate.

THE NEEDS OF CITY SQUARE

Attention of Mayor Miller Called to Approaches

Editor Daily Ledger:

When Hon. Eugene R. Stone assumed the duties of Mayor of the City of Quincy one of his good promises was that he would re-build and improve City Square and its approaches. He made good. He widened Hancock street and made a good sidewalk from Saville street to Dimmock street and moved the Insurance company office, widened Coddington street, and placed an ornament at the head of it, making it the most beautiful spot in the square. Now, Mr. Mayor, there is still room for improvement left for you,—The sidewalk around the Stone church. We take pride in this distinguished structure, the temple beneath which lie the remains of two Presidents of the United States, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, and their wives. We enter and pass to the tombs below where their remains lie in granite caskets; then to the old hearse that bore them from their home on Adams street to their resting place. We now ascend to the main body of the church and there find the marble busts of John Adams and John Quincy Adams; read the inscriptions on the tablets; then pass down the broad aisle and sit in a pew always occupied by the younger President, John Quincy Adams, as long as he lived.

On leaving the temple we come to an apology for a sidewalk around the grounds enclosing all that we have seen, and bow our heads in shame for the City of Quincy.

Why is it thus? There is not a piece of public or private property in the Square but what has a good sidewalk with nice hammered granite curb put down by the city, and abutters paid half the cost of it. I firmly believe that if the city of Quincy would lay down a good side walk around the whole of the church property, the wealthiest parish in Quincy would cheerfully pay one-half the cost.

Now the next approach to the Square is opposite the Bethany church property. Widen there and make Hancock street of uniform width to Elm and School streets.

Now, Your Honor, in your mind take a walk to another approach to the Square. To the corner of Washington and Temple streets, just across a narrow street from that historic church and its associations and connections therewith, opposite the Thomas Crane Public Library and its beautiful grounds, also near the new Court House and the U. S. Post Office, see all that, and think it over, Mayor Miller.

Albert Keating.
Quincy, Jan. 30, 1914.

GARDNER CLUB INITIATION.

The Gardner Club met in the parish house of Christ church Thursday evening, and four new members were initiated. This was the first time that the new initiation ritual was used and the way it went off was certainly a credit to the degree team. Since the new director Merton A. Turner has taken hold the club has made long strides forward and now has a waiting list of candidates for membership.

The club is running a series of business talks of which three have already been given. The great success of the first three has assured the continuance of the series.

The young men connected with the club are now making plans for dramatics which are to be presented in the spring, probably in April. By having Erastus Osgood as their director in this line the club is already convinced that this year shows will be as successful if not more successful than those given last year.

BOGUS MONEY FLOODS BOSTON

Gang Said to Be Responsible Are In Police Net

TIP IS GIVEN BY NEWSBOYS

Identify Several Men Who Passed Counterfeit Coins and Led Investigators to Plant Where They Were Turned Out—Nine Men Must Answer to Charges In Court

Boston, Feb. 2.—The operations of a gang of counterfeiters who have flooded Boston, Lynn and surrounding cities and towns with worthless half dollars and nickels during the last two weeks were nipped in the bud yesterday, when the police raided a two-room suite at 42 Hale street and confiscated 570 unfinished coins, a crucible, a ladle, files, some nitrate of silver and various base metals.

The tip that led to the discovery of the headquarters of this dangerous gang came from newsboys who received the bad money during their Saturday night sales. The extent of the operations of the gang may be estimated from the fact that one Boston newspaper received $50 worth of bad nickels and turned them into its bank.

One Boston office reported that it had $40 worth of them, and a drug corporation that it had received $50 worth in one day. In Lynn one large department store received so many bad half dollars that it ordered its clerks not to accept any more half dollars at all.

A delegation of six newsboys visited Patrolman O'Brien in front of the North station Saturday night. They declared they could identify several of the young men who had passed the coins and led the police to the homes of several men in the West End. Eleven men were arrested before the investigation was completed. Two of these were later released. The others were held for arraignment in the United States district court.

Then the newsboys led the police to the tenement at 42 Hale street, the home of Giuseppe Piazzo, who let a room to Guiseppe Viola and Giovanni Lalla, said to be professional counterfeiters. Piazzo was arrested, charged with having counterfeiting implements in his possession. Viola and Lalla were arrested as they were entering the Hale street house.

According to the secret service men, Cologorio Ruino was a go-between, disposing of the counterfeit money at the rate of $50 in bad money for $25 in real money.

The coins were crude. They were cast instead of being stamped, were lighter and had a higher pitched ring than government money, and felt greasy.

The coins were made, according to the Boston police, by using a plaster of paris cast of both sides of a genuine half dollar. The coins were soiled to prevent suspicion and sold at 25 cents each to anybody who would buy them. The coins had several different dates. The moulds were evidently destroyed as none could be found on the premises.

The entire amount of counterfeit money passed in Greater Boston in the last seventeen days is estimated to be $3000.

Iceboat Plunges Into Water and Occupants Narrowly Escape Death

Winchester, Mass., Feb. 2.—Plunged into the middle of Upper Mystic lake when their iceboat, traveling at the rate of fifty miles an hour, struck a piece of ice that would not support it, Frank H. Gerlach and M. D. Cabot of this place were rescued from drowning by the narrowest of margins.

Gerlach's rescue was most spectacular, for after repeated attempts to reach him with a ladder and a rope had failed, two men put out into the open water in a canoe, and at the danger of capsizing the frail craft, managed to haul him in and bring him to shore.

Militants Interrupt Consecration Services In a London Church

London, Feb. 2.—Aroused by the bishop of London's letter, declaring "there is no truth in the allegations that the suffragettes in Holloway jail are subjected to torture while being forcibly fed," suffragettes yesterday repeatedly interrupted the consecration services conducted by him at St. Michael's church.

The women set up a chant, in which references was made to forcible feeding. The disturbers were quickly removed. An attempt made by the women to reach the bishop as he left the church was frustrated by the police.

It is a worthy cod liver preparation in which a physician may have every confidence."

Dr. L. B. Bouchelle of Thomasville, Ga., says: "I have used Vinol in my family and in my general practice with the most satisfactory results. It is exceedingly beneficial to those afflicted with bronchial or pulmonary troubles, and to create strength."

Dr. W. N. Rand of Evans Mills, N. Y., says: "I want to say that I have used and prescribed Vinol in my practice and it will do all you claim for it and more."

ST. JOHNS CHURCH.

Rev. Fr. Henry E. Murray has been assigned by Cardinal O'Connell to St. John's parish during the illness of Rev. Fr. John J. Casey. Father Murray has been attached to the Boston diocese for a number of years. He was graduated from Boston College in 1895 and was a classmate of Rev. Fr. Walter Fegan of Quincy. He has been in Somerville and Haverhill parishes as a curate.

The annual reunion of St. John's church is being planned and committees will be appointed Wednesday night at a meeting to be held to consider the program. Edward J. Fegan has been chosen chairman and John Lynch, secretary.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

Sunday morning the holy communion service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. George M. Bailey, who also received three members into the church on probation. The subject of the evening service was "The gospel of good health."

The regular meeting of the Ladies Aid Society will be held in the church parlor this afternoon.

Friday evening the congregation will enjoy a supper and social evening when the reports concerning the month of tithing on the part of the members will be rendered.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

This is Christian Endeavor week and the church auditorium was finely decorated with flags and flowers on Sunday. The C. E. Society and the Juniors sat in the church in a body. Dr. Sneath spoke upon the topic "Facing toward Jerusalem." He spoke of Daniel always facing the Holy City and suggested that it represented the ideal of the spiritual life. We are to have a spiritual frontage toward the highest ideal, which is the character and life of Jesus Christ. We are to seek the incarnation of that ideal in our lives.

At 6 o'clock the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was largely attended, members having gone out two by two in the afternoon to give personal invitations to young people. A special program concerning he progress of the C. E. movement was presented. Mrs. Dewitt Taylor sang several solos and Dr. Sneath spoke.

Tuesday evening the society of this church will serve a banquet to the East Norfolk C. E. Union in its bimonthly session. Addresses will be made by the pastors of the churches represented.

Wednesday afternoon at 3 the Ladies Auxiliary of the church will meet with Mrs. A. A. Lincoln, 109 Lincoln avenue.

Thursday evening at 7 the Pastor's Round Table will meet in the church and consider the subject of "Jesus My Brother." At 7.45 the members of the Y. P. S. C. E. will come to the mid-week meeting in a body and consider the topic "The Christian life; why am I endeavoring to live it?"

Friday afternoon at 2.30 a silver tea will be held at the home of Mrs. Carroll Bates, 141 Warren avenue. All ladies are cordially invited.

Saturday morning at 11 o'clock the Mission Band of the church will hold a sale of valentines and candy in the church vestry. In the afternoon the Junior Endeavor Society will attend a rally in the Bethany church.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

Although the pastor's message at the Sunday morning service was not delivered especially for the young people, it nevertheless was most appropriate for those who had gathered to celebrate Christian Endeavor day. "God's Ambassadors" was the subject and the idea expressed was that Christ was God's ambassador to us; we in His stead, are His ambassadors to men, bringing the message, "Be ye reconciled to God."

The right hand of fellowship was given to Mrs. Charles A. Bennett, Mrs. Ida Stanley, Miss Rachel McLeod, Miss Ruth Price and at the close of the service, the ordinance of communion was observed.

At the Sunday School session in the men's classes, Mr. E. W. Campbell spoke briefly on "A Sunday abroad." Mr. Campbell is a most entertaining speaker and has given several very interesting talks on his recent trip.

Mrs. Walther was in charge of the Junior meeting at 3.30 with 72 present. The subject was "Events in Christ's life."

A glorious meeting of the Senior Y. P. S. C. E. was held at 6. Henry Christopher, one of the former members, now at Somerville was the leader and brought a splendid message. The chapel, where the meeting was held, was crowded.

A mass meeting of the honorary, senior and junior members was held at 7 in the auditorium. The scripture was read by William H. Bartlett, president of the society. The message of the evening was delivered by George B. Huntington, subject: "Endeavor work the world around."

Friday evening at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Seldon H. Nickerson, 2 Ardelle street, Montclair.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN

Of all the ministers with whom the Rev. Carl G. Horst is in the habit of exchanging pulpits none is more welcome than the Rev. Chester A. Drummond, pastor of the First Unitarian church in Somerville, who occupied the pulpit Sunday. There was a large congregation to geet this talented young preacher.

Among the Lenten preachers this year will be the Rev. Charles F. Dole, D. D. of Jamaica Plain, the Rev. Julian C. Jaynes of West Newton, the Rev. James DeNormandie, D. D., of Boston, the Rev. Frederic Gill of Arlington and the Rev. Benjamin R. Bulkeley of Beverly.

The regular monthly vesper service will be held Sunday, February 8 at 4.30 o'clock. The music will be furnished by the Apollo quartet of Boston which as far as known makes its first appearance in our city at this service.

The Rev. William Sullivan of All Souls' church, New York City will conduct the King's chapel services at noon Thursday and Friday, February 5 and 6. Mr. Sullivan, a native of Quincy, is the author of "The priest" of which Sherman, French and Co. of Boston has just issued a new edition.

The American Unitarian Association is soliciting the help and co-operation of the members of Unitarian churches to erect or buy a home for young women students who come to Boston from Unitarian homes. Such a home will provide rooms for a certain number of young women and boarding facilities at low rates for a considerably larger number.

The next church sociable with supper will be held Friday, Feb. 6, at 6.30 p. m. We hope to see many of the new comers into our parish, as these social gatherings furnish the best opportunity for better acquaintance.

The Imperial Dramatic Co. will soon present the five act drama "The Country Minister" in the vestry. It is said that this will probably be the last appearance of some of the actors that have been before the footlights for over twenty-five years.

HALL PLACE M. E.

Rev. T. C. Martin of the Hall Place M. E. church preached from two texts at the morning service Sunday, "No man cared for my soul." Psalm 142-4 and "As thou hast sent me into the world even so have I sent them into the world." St. John 17-18. The choir sang "Sweet the moments." The attendance at Sunday school is increasing as well as the interest in the roll of honor. Miss Maud Nicholls led the Epworth League service on "A song of forgiveness."

The Library committee meets in the vestry this evening. Friday afternoon the Juniors will meet at 3.45 with Mrs. D. H. McNeil in charge. Prayer meeting Friday evening at 7.30. Rehearsal for the old folks' concert Saturday night at 8 P. M.

Sunday, Feb. 8, will be observed as "Everybody-go-to-Church Sunday in conformity with the State-wide campaign.

QUINCY PASTOR'S REPLY

A third force which as he thinks, will more and more enter into the evolution of 20th century Christianity is the doctrine of taught by Jesus but never put into effective practice until democracy began to come to its own. Now the old selfish idea of personal salvation has largely given place to the nobler aim of service to others; and with the continued growth of democracy this third force, he believes, will bring in a new era of peace and good will.

Some of the criticisms of Dr. Eliot's address are based on doctrinal controversies which were very general, and very bitter, during the latter part of the 19th century, and which did much to hold Protestant churches apart, but which have ceased to interest the modern mind.

The fact is that the natural tendency of Protestantism is toward individual freedom, and this tendency has been so accelerated in the life time of the present generation by the rapid growth of democracy and of scientific thinking that today all the leading Protestant churches are growing more liberal in their real beliefs. In many of the so-called Evangelical churches which retain unchanged the form of their ancient creeds, both ministers and congregations frankly confess that they repeat these creeds with large mental reservations.

In short these old credal controversies among Protestant churches are practically out of court today.

A MORE VITAL CRITICISM

is presented in the attack made by Cardinal O'Connell in his recent address before the Holy Name Society, which, while it squints primarily at the utterances of Dr. Eliot, is at the same time an arraignment of modern Protestantism.

His argument is two fold:

1st. That Protestantism is directly responsible for the lax morality and declining reverence everywhere apparent in modern life, with the obvious implication that if these apostate Protestant sects would only return to the fold of the Mother church, all this irreverence and immorality would disappear.

2d. That the Protestant churches as they grow more liberal in thought, and farther removed from ecclesiastical authority, are becoming less efficient in commanding the allegiance of the non-Catholic people, whose point of view in religion they are supposed to represent.

OUR ANSWER.

The first of these propositions is plausible rather than convincing. Historically it becomes absurd when we recall that at a time when the church of Rome, according to its own claims had been in absolute control of Christendom for 15 centuries the protest of Luther was not so much against any doctrine of the church as against the most gross and palpable corruption on the part of its leading officials, and the open licensing of immorality through the sale of indulgences, while at the present time it is quite pertinent to inquire whether in our large cities where vice and corruption are most notorious, the standard of public morals is higher when the reins of government are in the hands of men who recognize the authority of Rome, than when non-Catholics are in power.

In his second proposition the Cardinal strikes a

in liberal Protestantism, viz. that the result of its liberalizing tendency is found in wide spread neutrality and indifference, showing itself in meagre support and empty pews, while Catholic churches, "Every Sunday in the year, are crowded to the doors, not once but many times, by earnest fervent worshippers."

It is quite useless to retort that the Catholic church is able to maintain its authority through the powerful motives of fear and superstition, which we have outgrown. The issue raised by the Cardinal is one not of theology but of efficiency. And that is a test which the modern man cannot refuse to recognize. If liberal Protestantism with its nobler motives of enlightened individual conscience and social responsibility cannot secure the loyalty of the non-Catholic masses, while The Church of Rome commands its large following through the baser motives of fear and superstition, then by the very logic of evolution the Catholic church will survive while Modern Protestantism

WILL PASS AWAY.

In that case it goes without saying that the spirit of scientific inquiry, liberty of thought and worship, together with all the higher intellectual gains of our boasted democracy, will for a time be lost. For the Roman church has never surrendered its claim to absolute authority over Christendom.

The fiction that the Pope is held as a prisoner in the Vatican is the outward sign of a persistent claim, made by his church, that is it divinely ordained to absolute rule in all things —temporal as well as spiritual.

It is also vain to say that such a backward step in the progress of civilization would be impossible in view of the achievements of modern democracy. No one is able today to guarantee that American democracy will even last out the present century. Civilization does not always go forward. It has its "backward streaming curves." And certainly in the past no form of civilization has ever survived the downfall of those religious ideals which inspired its progress.

Our present

of civilization with all its glorious gains has been the outgrowth of those religious ideals of individual liberty in thought and worship planted by our sires in this New England soil and nurtured by their sons to fuller and complete growth.

If all that has thus been won is to be preserved then the challenge of the Cardinal must be squarely met. Not by argument or counter attack, but by facing the facts to which he calls attention.

The only effective answer which can be made to the Cardinal is a larger loyalty on the part of Protestant people toward that church, whatever be its name, whose aims and purposes most nearly correspond with their own ideals.

A movement toward such increase in the efficiency of Protestant churches seems to have already begun. But one important step is to comprehend the present situation and the present need and then take hold together with that splendid earnestness which made New England great.

Mr. Hudson announced that on the two following Sundays he would consider the spirit and aims of Unitarianism. On Sunday, Feb. 8, he will speak of "The period of protest," and on Feb. 15 of "The new Era of constructive faith."

AT BETHANY.

The announcement that Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, the pastor of Bethany Congregational church, would reply to Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, Sunday evening, filled the church to overflowing. People gathered a half hour before the hour of commencement, and every seat was taken before the ringing of the church bell. About fifty took seats on the platform and on the pulpit steps, and more in the chapel out of sight of the pastor, while others stood. Even then hundreds were turned away.

Rev. A. L. Hudson of the First Parish church assisted and music by the girls vested choir was a feature.

The pastor has furnished the press with the following abstract of the lecture.

THE CHALLENGE.

The address of Cardinal O'Connell, given before the Holy Name Society, has raised a question of importance to all, especially to Protestant men. He has offered a challenge that we, who wish to be true to our fathers' faith, and the religion that gave to us our freedom to think and speak, cannot ignore.

A greater part of the address is beyond doubt true to fact. His diagnosis of social and moral conditions compels our approval on account of its sturdy frankness and our knowledge of facts; we feel he has spoken the truth and for this all men should be thankful, since such rebukes are for the good of our common life.

But it is unfortunate that he should have used such an opportunity to that we hold dear, and to place the responsibility for the present social trend on the religion in which our fathers and mothers believed, and which inspires and saves their sons. The blame, if blame there be, must rest upon all, and not upon any class or sect.

The ridicule of some of our churches is unkind and not in the spirit of charity. It is true that some Protestant clergymen preach to "coal barons, steel kings and oil emperors," and even at times may "extol their virtues" when these men pass away. But even such barons, kings and emperors are men and sinners, they need some one to preach to them; and the Cardinal should not forget that such a group of men as a group of liquor dealers to whom some priests of the Catholic church minister every Sunday, since it must be known to him, that not a small proportion of the civic corruption and the most abominable traffic in liquor is carried on by men who are communicants is that church of which he is local head.

All observers of contemporary religious thought must acknowledge, that those churches that have lost their grip on a vital Gospel, and attempt to offer to tired and tempted men a series of human speculations about that same Gospel, are almost empty of worshippers; but those Protestant churches that have still the to proclaim have no difficulty about attendance and support.

The Protestant church, as a social and religious force, has a greater future than ever in its history, "the stars in their courses are with us." This attempt to discourage our people will have another result than that intended by the Cardinal; without meaning to do so, he has helped us by adding to those incentives which are rapidly uniting us all as one great "Protestant Church of America."

This address of the

to fact in blaming the "new paganism" and "moral degeneracy" to the "decay of even the external semblance of Christianity" outside of the Catholic church; and by the assertion that his church as the "true church" and his creed as the true creed alone can save America.

His attempt to unload responsibility on to the Protestant church compels us to ask questions, which out of respect we cherish toward the Catholic layity we have hitherto refrained from asking, for now as always, our contention is not with the people of the church. It is now, as it will be in the future, with the Hierachy, with its Popes and Princes so alien to democratic sentiments.

We shall be compelled to ASK IN ALL CHARITY,

why if the Catholic church inspires men, so that "every day the Catholic is a Christian," over 80 per cent of those in our prisons and penal institutions are of that faith.

If the answer is, that they take a class of emigrants of meagre education and low morals; then we must reply "that those people come from lands where education and morals have been under the direct control of the Catholic church for centuries and these men and women are the product of civilization her faith has inspired.

We shall be compelled to ask why the backward races and civilizations of Europe are Catholic.

Why the progressive nations are Protestant who were cursed by the Pope; and from the day he cursed them commenced to prosper?

We shall ask why those nations of Europe that have commenced to enjoy the

and make social moral progress, have had to cast aside the control of the Hierachy; and in other countries the people have fallen into Atheism after centuries of Catholic faith and instruction.

We might point to the Southern Republics, where for many generations Rome has been in absolute religious control, only to leave the lowest standards of civic righteousness and personal morality that we have on this hemisphere.

We Protestants have no contention with the Catholic people, we live with them as neighbors and citizens, we respect their convictions, but self respect has compelled us to ask these questions in answer to the

ARROGANCE OF THE HIERARCHY

The fact is known to all travellers, whether Catholic or Protestant, that the Catholic church is at its best in America, that her priests are exponents of a more spiritual message than elsewhere; this we claim is due to the fact, that she has to live beside the vigorous alert and spiritual faith of Protestantism.

We regret that the Cardinal has shown such a spirit of sectarian bitterness, for we can ill afford to have the forces that make for social redemption divided into hostile camps while our common enemy ruins our goodly heritage.

AT ATLANTIC.

Rev. Thomas W. Davison of the Memorial church at Atlantic and other Quincy pastors spoke along the same lines, but a report of their address will appear in the Daily Ledger of Tuesday. Mr. Davison's subject was: "Ye shall known them by their fruits." Matthew 7:16.

FURS RECOVERED.

A set of furs, stolen from the store of Joseph Szathmary on Hancock street last February, has been recovered by Inspector Goodhue, who was assigned to the case by Chief Burrell when the loss was reported to police headquarters.

The theft was discovered by Mr. Szathmary shortly after two Quincy girls left the store. He furnished the department with descriptions of the girls and furs and since then Inspector Goodhue has been making an investigation.

Monday night a girl wearing furs identical with those stolen was seen on Washington street, and later identified by Mr. Szathmary as one of the two girls that were in his store before the theft was committed.

Shortly after she was approached by Inspector Goodhue as she was returning by Washington street, but when questioned by the officer she insisted that she knew nothing about the larceny from the Szathmary store.. Upon being grilled she burst into tears and said she had taken them because she wanted furs and had no money with which to buy them.

She implored Inspector Goodhue to be lenient and he discussed the situation with Probation Officer Fahey. Because it was her first offense he recommended that Mr. Szathmary allow the girl to make restitution and the latter agreed.

The department officials have withheld the name of the girl because Mr. Szathmary has dropped his complaint. Inspector Goodhue expects to recover a muff which disappeared simultaneously within a few days.

—Junius Spencer Morgan, grandson of the late J. P. Morgan, is evidently a chip of the old block. He is the richest student in Harvard, yet his annual expenses are but $1464 a year. Young Morgan is said to be extremely democratic and engages in nothing that is expensive. Yet he is no piker, as he says, for his club dues amount to $250 a year, theatre and opera $150 and flowers $120.

—A correspondent, says the Listener of the Boston Transcript, sends in a rare bit of English. It was written by a woman in excusing her tardiness in answering an inquiry that had been addressed to her: "I would have written before but I have been sick with a dog bite in the arm. The man that owns the sawmill's dog bit me in the road." The excuse was accepted as sufficient.

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER

LEE'S FAREWELL.

After four years of arduous service, marked by unsurpassed courage and fortitude, the Army of Northern Virginia has been compelled to yield to overwhelming numbers and resources. I need not tell the survivors of so many hard fought battles, who have remained steadfast to the last, that I have consented to this result through no distrust of them; but, feeling that valor and devotion could accomplish nothing that would compensate for the loss that would have attended the continuation of the contest, I have determined to avoid the useless sacrifice of those whose past services have endeared them to their countrymen. By the terms of the agreement officers and men can return to their homes and remain there until exchanged. You will take with you the satisfaction that proceeds from the consciousness of duty faithfully performed, and I earnestly pray that a merciful God will extend to you his blessing and protection. With an increasing admiration of your constancy and devotion to your country and a grateful remembrance of your kind and generous consideration of myself, I bid you an affectionate farewell.

—Robert E. Lee, 1865.

Use Doan's Kidney Pills—the tested kidney remedy.

Quincy people endorse their worth.

Mrs. M. A. Jacobs, 499 Washington Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I was greatly annoyed by too frequent action of my kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected this weakness and made me feel better and stronger in every way."

Mrs. Jacobs is only one of many Quincy people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. Jacobs had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. QUINCYS LOSE TO NEWTON

Second Y. M. C. A. Team However Win 29 to 16

Newton Y. M. C. A. clinched its hold on first place in the Greater Boston league by beating the Quincy team in one of the best games of the season Saturday evening at the Y. M. C. A. This victory will in all probability give Newton the championship of the league as only one more game is needed to settle the title. Newton has but three games to play and they are with easy teams except that with Brockton. Boston and Chelsea ought to prove easy.

The game here on Saturday night was won in the last few minutes of play; the score was 29 to 20 when a foul was called on Quincy for holding. Jacobs tried the foul but missed it; the referee gave Jacobs another try because one or two of Quincy's "ten-cent sports" made a disturbance and tried to rattle Jacobs. This time his try was successful making the score 21 to 20. The life seemed to go out of Quincy's playing, for in the few minutes remaining Miley and Chivers scored 3 goals from the floor the game finishing up 27 to 20.

The second team took sweet revenge on their opponents for the defeat administered at Newton last week. The final score was 29 to 16. Miller played one of his best games while Thomas also played well. Shirley and Croucher put up fine games in the back field. Vile played best for Newton.

FORE RIVER LEAGUE.

The only change made in the Fore River league standing the past week was the increase of points by the Machine Gallery and the Yard who are in the leading positions. The feature of the week was the three string total made Tuesday night by Bergfors of the Blacksmiths, who reached 332 and tied Fromme of the Hull Draftsmen who held the record. Westland remains the holder of the individual single string record. The standing:

QUINCY A. A. DEFEATED.

The Quincy A. A. lost to St. Alphonsus Saturday night, 28 to 11. Cy O'Rourke and Charles Hebert were the only two regular first team men who appeared. Joe Pinel and "Bull Moose" Brown of the second team were sent in, while Jerry McCarthy of St. Alphonsus substituted in the back field. McCarthy was no stranger in a Quincy suit since he played with their football team the past season and was a member of the eleven that defeated the champion Pawtuxet team on their Rhode Island grounds. He secured two baskets.

Cy O'Rourke and Hebert got two baskets apiece and three points from fouls were also added by Hebert. Bull Moose Brown who entered fast company this year is developing to the point where he is being spoken of in Boston basket ball circles as "having arrived," due principally to his centre work Saturday night. Pinel is having the same experience and is proving to be a valuable back field man. Okey O'Connor got four baskets for the winners and snapped five fouls. One point was allowed for interference. The second team game was forfeited to St. Alphonsus by Referee Ruby.

FORMER QUINCY RESIDENT.

Michael Connor, son of Mrs. Hannah and the late Cornelius Connor of 97 South Walnut street, and brother of Cornelius Connor, a letter carrier connected with the Quincy post office, died Saturday at Pasadena, Cal., in his 37th year.

Mr. Connor was a native of this city and has many friends here. He was a salesman for the United Shoe Machinery C. and well known to the shoe trade that did business with the St. Louis, Brockton, Boston and San Francisco offices.

Eight years ago in an effort to regain his health he left Quincy and until a few months ago his improvement was rapid. Besides his mother and brother he leaves one sister, Annie Connor of this city. Burial will be in Pasadena, Cal.

Mr. Connor was a member of the Brockton lodge of Elks and was prominent in its lodge affairs while living in the East.

MILTON DEATH.

Thomas Forbes, for many years a resident of East Milton, died Saturday at his home at 81 Bryant avenue. He was in his 70th year. The deceased while well known in all parts of the town never took an active part in public affairs. He leaves three sons, Thomas, William and Robert Forbes. His funeral wil be held at his home Tuesday afternoon.

HALF A CENTURY IN PUBLIC EYE

Interests of General Wilson Were of Wide Character

PASSES AWAY AT NEW YORK

Soldier, Promoter of Statues of Columbus and Halleck, and Noted Contributor to Literary World, Writing Many Historical Works—Married Admiral's Widow at 74

New York, Feb. 2.—General James G. Wilson, one of the last of General U. S. Grant's staff during the Vicksburg campaign and famous as a writer and lecturer, died here after an illness of several weeks.

Wilson had been in the public eye since he started the Chicago Record as a journal of arts and literature in 1857, stopping its publication upon the outbreak of the Civil war to become major of the Fifteenth Illinois cavalry, until a short time ago. His interests were varied, devoting the greater part of his time to literature, and also to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Wilson was responsible for the statue of Columbus in Central park and always took a great deal of interest in it, going there frequently. In 1890, while dining with Alfonso XII., King of Spain, in Madrid, Wilson said he would like to see a replica of the Madrid statue of Columbus in Central park. He said he would see that it was made if the king would come to this city and unveil it. King Alfonso promised, but died before the statue was completed. Vice President Stevenson unveiled the statue in 1892.

Romance figured in the latter years of General Wilson's life, too, for at 74 years he married the widow of his war time friend, Admiral Nicholson, who was twenty years his junior. It was at Vicksburg, where he was a colonel on Grant's staff, that Wilson met Nicholson, who was in Farragut's command. The friendship lasted until Nicholson's death.

Wilson was born in Edinburg, Scotland, April 28, 1832, and was educated in academies and by private tutors. He came to this country as a youth and located in Chicago. He served throughout the Civil war and was breveted brigadier general of volunteers for faithful and meritorious services March 13, 1865, and resigned from the army June 16, 1865.

Upon laying aside the sword Wilson came to this city and took up his pen, and made many valuable contributions to the literary world.

He also wrote histories of the lives of Gitz-Greene Halleck and U. S. Grant; also the memoirs of General Halleck, Commodore Hull and the frigate Constitution, the Presidents of the United States, and other historical works.

He was president of the American Authors' guild; president of the American Ethnological society, a member of the Drawing Room club and vice president of the S. P. C. A. He was also responsible for the bronze statue to Fitz-Greene Halleck, and has knighted by the Queen Regent of Spain for the Columbus statue.

FOUR HELD FOR STABBING

Three Men Said to Have Held Victim While Another Wielded Stiletto

Brockton, Mass., Feb. 2.—Pasquale Torchil, 18 years old, who is charged with stabbing to death James Russo while three other men held the victim, was arrested last night.

James and John Catabonne and Baptiste Bonaparte were also arrested, charged with being accessories after the fact. All four denied any connection with the stabbing.

Russo's body, covered with stab wounds, was found on North Main street about midnight Saturday night. According to the police, the five men participated in a drinking party which concluded in a riot. The police say Russo was then seized by three of his companions and Torchil wielded a stiletto with such deadly effect that Russo died a short time later.

CURLEY IS INAUGURATED

Short Exercises as Mayor of Boston Is Inducted Into Office

Boston, Feb. 2.—In the presence of a throng of the most distinguished people of the city and state, James M. Curley took the oath of office of the mayor of Boston in Tremont Temple at 10:30 this morning.

City Clerk Donovan went through the customary procedure of reading the certificates from the election commissioners of the persons elected at the city election.

Following this Mgr. Splaine offered prayer. At the conclusion of this, Mayor-elect Curley walked to the front of the platform where he was administered the oath of office by Chief Justice Rugg. He in turn administered the oath to the three new members of the council.

Councilman Ballantyne then introduced the new mayor, who delivered his inaugural address. This was shorter than that of his predecessors and dealt for the most part with the development of the waterfront and city for commercial purposes.

TARIFF REDUCES PRICE OF BUTTER

Large Importations Cause a Drop of Ten Cents a Pound

New York, Feb. 2.—An influx of butter from all parts of the world, due to the reduction of the tariff from 5 to 2½ cents a pound, has caused a decline of 10 cents a pound in the New York wholesale price of that commodity since the first of the year.

Butter has been coming to this city from as far off as Australia. Three hundred thousand pounds from that country has been received here recently. Butter has also been shipped from Argentina, Denmark and Siberia.

These shipments, butter dealers admit, have created marked uneasiness in the wholesale market, with the result that there has been an unloading of surplus stocks.

MILITIA CALLED OUT

Will Take a Hand In Quelling Strikers In Colorado Mine District

Denver, Feb. 2.—As the result of the shooting up of two trains, one bearing strike breakers from Iowa into the the Fremont county strike field, 150 militiamen mobilized from various arms of the service and equipped for ten days, left for strike duty in the Florence district.

Feeling, incited by the success of the strikers in driving the trains back to Pueblo under a hail of lead, is believed to be at a high tension in the Florence district of Fremont county.

Pittsfield, Mass., Feb. 2.—Mayor Moore removed the entire board of license commissioners consisting of Messrs. Bardwell, Pease and Kelly, whom he found guilty of charges preferred by P. H. Dineen.

The charges included granting a license to a hotel after alleged violation of the screen law, failure to file quarterly report and discrimination. The commissioners will appeal to the supreme court.

REFORMATORY FIRE DOES GREAT DAMAGE

Hundred and Thirty Boys In Vermont Made Homeless

Vergennes, Vt., Feb. 2.—Nearly 130 boys, whose ages range from 7 to 19, were made homeless by a fire that destroyed the main building of the Vermont industrial school, a reformatory institution of which they were inmates.

Although not organized for systematic fire fighting, the boys worked valiantly and through their efforts practically all the contents of the building were removed before the flames could reach them. The loss is about $75,000.

The fire is believed to have been caused by a spark from an electric wire igniting gasolene. Low pressure hampered the firemen.

None of the boys or their keepers was injured, although a thick snowstorm and falling temperature caused them considerable discomfort.

Billy Unburdened His Guilty Conscience

By LILLIE WENTZ

"Tomorrow's a holiday, Aunt Molly," began Billy, perching himself on the arms of her chair.

"Isn't that jolly?" returned pretty Miss Gale as she tousled his curly hair. "Washington's birthday, eh? What are you going to do, dear?"

"That's for you to say," replied Billy, grinning. "Will you come over to the lake and skate with me, Aunt Molly?"

"Oh, dear!" cried Molly regretfully, and then Billy knew that Ned Hildred had asserted his rights as Molly's fiance and that if Miss Gale went to Silver lake it would be to skate with the handsome Ned and not with her nine-year-old nephew.

"I'm so sorry, Billy," faltered Molly at last. "You can come with us."

Billy shook his head and slipped down from the chair.

"Two's company and three's none," he quoted glumly as he went away.

"Poor little Billy!" smiled Molly as she gazed after him with lovely, misty eyes. The tears soon cleared away, but the smile remained, for Molly was watching for Ned Hildred. He was going to take her out along the boulevard for a spin in his new car. The absence of snow and the crisp, dry cold of the season would make the driving ideal.

Molly skipped away to the mirror and tried on the new fur motor bonnet that enhanced her delicate loveliness. Her face blushed rosily as her own eyes admitted her fairness.

"Silly!" she chided herself, tossing the bonnet aside.

An hour passed by and then another. Ned Hildred did not come. The afternoon was drawing to a close when Billy came stamping in, a big book tucked under his arm. His cheeks were rosy with the cold, crisp air of a winter day.

"HE NEVER TOLD A LIE!" WAILED BILLY.

"What book have you got, dear?" asked Molly.

"'Life of George Washington,'" returned Billy as he settled himself by a window to read in the fading light.

The door opened and Billy's mother looked in.

"You here, Molly?" she cried. "I thought you were going to drive with Ned."

"I'm waiting," smiled Molly.

"It's too late now, dear; it's getting colder, too," objected Mrs. Moore.

"Oh, I shall not go now," returned Molly hastily, and as her mother withdrew a hurt look came into Molly Gale's face.

Something serious must have happened to prevent Ned from communicating with her. He was always punctilious about such matters.

Suddenly Billy's voice piped boldly out of the darkness.

"I saw Ned Hildred this afternoon."

"You did?" replied Molly quickly and then carelessly, "Where did you see him, dear?"

"He was in his new car. He had a girl with him." There was malice in Billy's tone.

"Billy!" Miss Gale's voice was breathless. That was all she said for a few seconds.

"She was a peach, too," went on Billy cruelly. "She wore white furry things and a big bunch of violets."

"You are very observing for a little boy," said Aunt Molly quietly.

Billy stirred uneasily. "It wasn't his sister Josephine, either. He was going at a great clip up the avenue."

"Did he see you, Billy, dear?"

"Naw!" giggled Billy. "He didn't see nothin' but her!"

After that it was so still in the library that Billy crept up to his own room, where he snapped on the light, and, planting himself in the middle of the floor, proceeded to eat peanuts and enjoy the youthful escapades of the Father of His Country with equal enthusiasm.

Presently Molly gathered up her furry wraps and the charming bonnet and went slowly up the stairs to her own room. If she shed tears over Ned Hildred's defection no one knew it, for she was as sweetly serene as ever when the dinner bell rung.

"Of course you are going to the ball, Molly," observed Mrs. Moore as her sister sat down at table.

"I wouldn't miss it for anything!" cried Molly enthusiastically. "Certainly not with that dream of a gown waiting for me."

"That peach colored satin is the prettiest gown you ever had, Molly," put in Mr. Moore.

Molly flashed a smile at her brother-in-law. "Thank you, James. I can return the compliment by saying that the mulberry velvet is most becoming to you."

There was some gay chatter over the costumes for the Bigleys' colonial ball that evening. Molly's peach satin was to be a surprise for Ned Hildred.

"Johnson says Hildred is to wear white satin as the happy bridegroom," teased Mr. Moore as they arose from the table.

"Nonsense!" laughed Molly, blushing.

Billy, sleepy and solemn even, sulkily endured Molly's good night kiss when she came to his bed in all the glory of the peach colored satin. He expressed open disapproval of the high piled masses of her powdered hair and the audacious black patch on her round chin.

"Good night, lover boy!" whispered Molly. But Billy turned a hot pink cheek away from her caress. "Will you go skating with me tomorrow?" she asked.

"Alone?" he questioned.

"Alone with me," said Molly, and she did not know her tone quavered.

"All right," growled Billy and kissed her sheepishly. "You look fine," he added.

Molly quite forgot Billy and his jealous heart by the time she reached the Bigleys'.

But when Ned Hildred hurried up to her, incomparably handsome in white velvet and silver embroidery, Molly's color deepened and all softness vanished from her eyes.

"You haven't saved one for me?" he asked, his face quite white.

"So sorry," murmured Molly as she glided away with her partner for the first waltz.

Ned Hildred stared dumbly after lovely Molly. The exquisite strains of the waltz wrung his heart.

Presently he went home. After that Molly's gayety was entirely fictitious.

The next day it was a very pale and wan Molly who tramped over the snowy paths to Silver lake. Billy trudging beside her with their skates swung over his shoulders, was a gloomy companion.

Once there among the crowd of merry skaters Molly recovered a degree of cheerfulness, but Billy's gloom deepened with each passing moment.

They had skated to a secluded part of the lake, where Molly sat down on a fallen log to rest.

"I'll go and buy some sandwiches, Aunt Molly," said Billy, turning away.

"Very well, dear. Don't be long."

Billy raced back among the skaters. His bright eyes sought out Hildred's tall form.

"Oh, Mr. Hildred, please come to Aunt Molly right away; it's awful important," quavered Billy, grasping the man's hand.

Hildred's one thought was that Molly had fallen through the ice. He uttered a strangled cry of alarm and darted off, dragging the frightened Billy by one hand.

Breathlessly they dashed up to the spot where Molly sat pensively upon her log. She started violently as they pirouetted to a standstill.

"Why, what is it?" she stammered indignantly.

"I—I beg your pardon," murmured Hildred with a furious glance at the wretched Billy. He lifted his cap and wheeled about.

"Wait a minute, please!" cried the small boy. "I've got something to say, and you both got to be here and listen."

"Billy Moore, what is it?" demanded Molly, and then, seeing the quivering lips of the little man, she realized that he was bracing himself for some difficult performance. She put her arms around him, and he seemed glad of their support.

"What is it, dear?" she asked.

Billy told his story in a shaking voice—how he had hated Mr. Hildred because he came between Billy and his adored Aunt Molly. Then the day before, when he had met Mr. Hildred in his car, he had lied to Aunt Molly. He had not told her that Mr. Hildred had stopped the car and bade him take a message to Molly; that the fair passenger in the car was Hildred's sister-in-law, Mrs. Reed, who had been called to the deathbed of a parent in Westchester and that Hildred was rushing her there at top speed.

Billy related how he had gone home and read about the exemplary youth of George Washington, and now, smitten by remorse, he unburdened his guilty conscience to those he had wronged.

"He never told a lie!" wailed Billy in a final outburst of anguish. "I did tell one. I can never be the same as him."

"Laddie," whispered Hildred tenderly, "at this moment there is no man greater than you." And Billy was comforted.

Later the three sat there with arms entwined and heads in loving proximity.

"Old man," suggested Hildred, "I wonder if you wouldn't feel differently toward me if you called me Uncle Ned?"

"Hurrah!" cried Billy. "It does seem different somehow. Let's both kiss Aunt Molly. Uncle Ned." And his suggestion was carried out.

AEROPLANES AS LIFE SAVERS; MANY RESCUES BY LAND AND SEA

The Machines Have Preserved Armies In Wartimes.

On the Water They Have Many Potentialities.

THE casualties caused by aeroplanes, the large loss of life which they have entailed, have so impressed themselves upon the public mind that the other side of the question—the lives saved by aeroplanes—has hardly been considered. Saving lives by aeroplanes may sound strikingly surprising to most people, and it is amazing, if the short career of the aeroplane is considered, to find that it has saved thousands of lives in war and a number of lives in peace times and that it promises to be the most efficient life saver the world has ever had.

The aeroplane's career as a saver of lives in large number began as early as 1911, in the very war in which it first demonstrated its potentiality as an instrument of war, and the result shows that its use was still greater as an instrument of peace—a life saver.

Those who followed the developments of the Italian-Turkish war will remember how at the very start of the campaign, before the first engagement took place, the newly landed Italians were saved from an unpleasant surprise by the aerial scouts, Captain Piazza, with his Bleriot, and Captain Moizo, on his Nieuport, who observed three advancing columns of Turks and Arabs of about 6,000 men. The Italians, after receiving this information, could successfully calculate distances and arrange for their defense.

The following day the battle of Sciara-Sciab took place, resulting in an Italian victory. During the battle the two aeroplanes circled the air and directed the firing of the big guns from the battleship Carlo Alberto and also of the mountain artillery. Without the finding of the enemy the Italians would have met with defeat, probably involving thousands of lives.

Perhaps the greatest surprise of the Balkan war was that Adrianople, the Gibraltar of the Balkans, which the Turks were supposed to defend to the last breath of life, was captured with little loss of life by a comparatively small force. The aeroplane—even the old type clumsy machine manned by an untrained pilot, used by the Bulgarians—deserves the greatest credit for the saving of life and money.

The Bulgarian air scouts, though untrained in military matters and poorly equipped mechanically, went out over the besieged city and brought to their commanders information which enabled them to attack the weakest spots. Then others—messengers of peace—soared over the city and dropped messages to the besieged, which, if not of peace, made for peace.

The moral effect of these messages weakened the defense and made the capture of Adrianople possible sooner than it otherwise would have occurred, and the defenders did not sacrifice themselves in number in an attempt to defend the stronghold.

An admirable feat in saving the lives of 500 French soldiers is credited to a single aeroplane of the French Morocco squadron. In December, 1912, a column of 500 French troops had been surrounded by rebels to the south of Mogador, and for five days some anxiety was felt for their safety. Then Lieutenant Do-Hu in his Bleriot monoplane was able to convey information to the commander that re-enforcements were close at hand, and, encouraged, they renewed their defense, while the rebels, seeing ominous signs in the arrival of the aeroplane, retreated.

Life saving in times of peace, while it has not attained more than a fraction of the number of lives saved in war, is perhaps more interesting to most people than the latter, being closer to daily needs and experiences of the general public. It is therefore gratifying to find that the water aeroplane, the hydroaeroplane and the flying boat seem destined to save life. Already there have been quite a number of cases of rescue from the water by these means. Glenn Curtiss himself, the inventor of the hydroaeroplane and the flying boat, rescued two occupants of a broken down motorboat last June during a storm on Lake Keuka. But what these machines have so far done is but an earnest of their life saving potentialities. The air boat and hydroaeroplane may be said to be the logical adjuncts of life saving stations and therefore absolutely necessary. As an essential purpose of a life saving station is to relieve wrecks and save people from drowning, speed in doing it is the essence of efficiency. The aeroplane—the water kind—is revolutionary in this respect. It can fly to the spot where relief is needed at the rate of a mile a minute, and the air man who sees every detail of what goes on below can either land by the object of rescue or just drop life belts, ropes, food, medicine or stimulants, according to the urgency of the needs.

With all the navies working to develop means for launching aeroplanes from battleships and receiving them back, it is safe to say that the problems connected therewith will be solved very soon. Then liners will carry aeroplanes to use for carrying dispatches and for general pilot duties.

Just as the water aeroplane is a wonderful auxiliary of the navy, so is it a wonderful auxiliary for ocean liners, promising to afford to passenger carrying ships services of the highest kind. To those who are acquainted with marine travel the services which the air boat or hydroaeroplane can render become at once apparent. Nothing can surpass the aeroplane in efficiency for this use. The water aeroplane is destined to perform a wonderful mission as a life saver and averter of disasters as an auxiliary of ocean liners.

The sea is an unknown quantity in many respects, and the biggest of steamships is very much at its mercy, and assistance of the kind which the flying boat affords is a necessity. A vessel at sea often meets signs of wrecks or it is signaled by craft in distress. At the present time there is no way to investigate such things without involving a great delay or putting the craft itself in danger through taking it out of its marked route, which is the safety zone. A flying boat can do all these things for the vessel. It can be launched with two men, one of whom searches the surface of the sea with powerful glasses. The vessel can proceed on its course. The flying boat will overtake it after having discharged its mission.

COMMISSIONER BROWN.

Quincy Point. Chief Billings announced that there were other transfers to come, in the near future.

As announced some days ago, the Mayor asked Chief of Police Burrell and Michael E. Shea of the Street department to resign, asking them to hand in their resignations by the first Monday in February. Neither of these gentlemen have complied with the request and both are on duty this morning. Foreman Shea reported for duty this morning and asked Commissioner Brown if there were any orders. The new Commissioner replied that he had none, and that he understood that there was some trouble between Mr. Shea and the Mayor. Nothing more was said and Mr. Shea started out to look after the men employed in the different parts of the city. It is probable that something will drop in relation to these two gentlemen before many hours.

All of the new city officials were in their various offices this morning. All seemed happy and started in immediately to get onto their jobs.

ALL MEN ARE INVITED

Y. M. C. A. Arranges Series of Sunday Afternoon Meetings

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. has arrangements practically completed for a series of Sunday afternoon meetings for men, to be held in Kincaide Theatre at 3 o'clock each Sunday beginning Feb. 15.

For several weeks past the Association's Religious Work committee, under the direction of its able chairman Chas. P. Hutchins, has been working out the plans for these big meetings. They have engaged men to make the addresses who are recognized the country over as able speakers. Musical features, chorus singing and the comfort and beauty of the theatre will combine to make these meetings mighty attractive. In fact, the men of Quincy have a rare treat in store for them, in each of these great meetings.

February 15 the speaker will be John Callahan, Superintendent of the Hadley Rescue Mission of New York city, one of the strongest speakers to men in the country. The Wollaston Cadet band will furnish the music and a male chorus of forty will lead the lively singing.

For Sunday, February 22, there are several speakers in view but as yet a definite selection has not been made, but will be announced later.

March 1 the speaker will be Ora Samuel Gray, the noted lecturer. Mr. Gray has a great message and magnificent delivery. He is without doubt one of the most forceful speakers to men in America. On that day also the men will have the pleasure of hearing University City bell ringers. These artists will fill the house with melody and music by skilful manipulation of Swiss hand bells. The chorus of forty will also be there to lead the singing.

On March 8th J. Frank Knots of Somerville will be the speaker. March 29 Dr. F. N. Seerley of Springfield is coming. Many men who heard him speak at the auditorium last year one Sunday afternoon will welcome this opportunity to hear him again. He is indeed a powerful speaker.

There will be no admission charged. Every man is welcome and it is hoped that the theatre will be packed each Sunday afternoon.

Overheard at the Club.

QUINCY SCOUTS PROMINENT

Do Good Work In Search for Eleanor Arlin

The search for the body of Eleanor Arlin, the missing Brookline girl was carried on Saturday by members of Boy Scouts. Quincy troop 1, under Scoutmaster B. F. Hodgkinson took the most prominent part.

Quincy troop left here at 8 o'clock Saturday morning prepared to take the field for an arduous day's work. They carried rations and water. High fences, open woods where the ground was uncertain were only some of the difficulties that confronted the Scouts, and when Scoutmaster Hodgkinson sent them out in "search formation" Norman Whitney of Malden, a close friend of the missing girl joined them and took an active part in the hunt.

Travelling about 40 feet apart and in a straight line they traversed territory that was covered with underbrush and water and although they carefully searched the ground nothing tangible was picked up regarding a possible location of the body.

Field Commissioner Page had entire charge of the scouts and was relieved in the afternoon by J. N. Ronald.

DOCK DEBATE IN CITY COUNCIL

Unfavorable Report of Committee Is Side Tracked and Appropriation Favored

Mayor Miller Appoints Assessors and Other Officials

Monday night's meeting of the City Council brought out one prominent thing, and that is that there are a number of ready debaters in this year's Council, and that they are not afraid to make themselves heard when occasion demands. The occasion Monday evening came on appropriating $200 to make borings on the site for a public dock recommended by the special committee of citizens of 1913 to ascertain data relative to the bottom of the land. The committees report was ought not to pass, but Councilman Gilliatt offered a minority report recommending an order for $200. After a short sharp debate the minority report was adopted and the order sent to the Finance Committee.

Councilman Sodergren was the only absent member. The attendance of citizens was large, as many desired to learn first hand who had been selected to fill the remainder of the city offices. There was also a good attendance of the new city officials in the seats reserved for them, inside the rail. There was considerable new business but the matters were transacted with dispatch and an early adjournment was reached.

APPOINTMENTS.

Communications were received from Mayor Miller making the following appointments:

Eric G. Bergfors assessor in place of W. W. Mitchell, removed. Placed on file.

Thomas Swithin assessor in place of Eben Stocker, removed. On file.

Joseph B. Grossman, as registrar of voters for three years, from April 1. Confirmed.

Faxon Billings as forest warden. Confirmed.

Edward D. Henry and Charles H. Tower as constables. Confirmed.

Ezekiel C. Sargent as City Engineer. On file.

John C. Murray, Dr. John T. Reynolds and Thomas L. A. Musgrove as members of the Board of Health. On file.

L. Kenneth Edwards as measurer of leather. Confirmed.

SCHOOL REPAIRS.

Communications were received from the School Committee requesting an appropriation of $200 for lights and repairs at the Gridley Bryant school, and $200 for lights and repairs to the Massachusetts Fields school. The communication relative to the Gridley Bryant school was referred to the Executive and that relative to the Massachusetts Fields school to the Committee on Public Buildings.

PETITIONS.

Councilman Williams presented a petition for the acceptance of Dysart street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Petitions of the Electric Light Company, for relocation of poles on Wibird, Chubbuck, Park, Verchild and Scammel streets, Federal and Cummings avenues, were granted.

The Telephone Company presented petitions for attachments on several streets which were granted.

The Electric Light Company petitioned for location for poles which was laid on the table until later, when Councilman O'Dowd offered an order for a public hearing Feb. 16, which was adopted.

Petitions for the oiling of Faxon road and Sea avenue were received and referred to the Committee on Streets.

Several petitions for minor licenses were received and referred to the Committee on Licenses.

PUBLIC HEARINGS.

Public hearings were held at 8 o'clock on petitions of the Telephone, Electric Light and Street Railway companies for pole locations. Mr. Green of the Telephone Co., Supt. Gammons of the Street Railway Co., and Supt. Austin of the Electric Light Co. appeared. There was no opposition and the orders were recommitted.

A hearing was held at 8.30 on petition of the Central Garage to keep and sell gasoline. Mr. Hodgkinson favored and no one opposed: the order was recommitted.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Soldiers' Relief reported an order granting soldiers' relief which was adopted.

They also reported leave to withdraw on the application of Elizabeth T. Pope for soldiers' relief. Accepted.

The Finance Committee reported reference to the Executive on several petitions for the apportionment of sidewalk assessments. Accepted.

The Finance Committee reported ought to pass on order authorizing the City Treasurer to borrow $500,000 in anticipation of taxes. Report accepted and order passed under suspension of the rules.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported reference to the Executive, on order appropriating $400 to make certain repairs at the Gridley Bryant school. Report accepted.

SCHOOL PLAYGROUND.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported an order appropriating $4,400 for the purchase of land for a playground adjoining the Massachusettts Fields school. Referred to the Finance Committee.

PUBLIC DOCK.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported ought not to pass on the order appropriating $500 for obtaining borings on the site for the proposed public dock, near the Poor farm.

Councilman Gilliatt offered a minority report appropriating $200 for making the borings. The question was on accepting the report of the minority.

In support of the minority report, Councilman Gilliatt said that last year the special committee of twelve citizens had given this subject considerable thought and that a number of meetings had been held. Conferences had been had with the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. and with the Street Railway relative to connections with the dock and they had promised to make them. This committee, or a majority of them, favored this site near the Poor farm. This order was simply that borings might be made to ascertain the bottom of the land, and it was due to that committee that this appropriation should be made.

Councilman Carlson opposed having

ACCIDENT TO QUARRYMAN

Might However Have Been Much More Serious

Peter Djerf of 16 West street, had a narrow escape from serious injury this noon when he was struck a glancing blow on the head by a large block of granite that tumbled off the headway at Swingle's quarry. Djerf was at work in the quarry and was about to complete his work before going home to dinner when the rock that had become loosened in some way fell into the quarry grazing Djerf's head and taking a piece from his scalp. He was treated by Dr. Ash after which he was taken to his home in the police ambulance. Had the stone struck him on the top of the head, death must have resulted.

James R. Wild of Canton, formerly of Quincy, has been seriously ill since Christmas with carbuncles.

NEW APPOINTEE MAY NOT ACCEPT

Thomas Swithin Too Busy He Says, to Become One of Board of Assessors

Can Charges Against Chief Ante-date January 1?

Thomas Swithin, who was appointed Monday night by Mayor Miller as one of his new board of Assessors, is not going to accept the appointment. Mr. Swithin in conversation with a representative of the Daily Ledger this morning made that statement. He said that he believed with a proper adjustment of the assessment in Quincy that the tax rate would go down to $16 which he considered high enough, and that it should not have been more than that for several years. He would have liked to take the appointment if he could have filled the position nights, but it was impossible for him to give the time necessary in April and May, when the Assessors are doing their field work to attend to it. That was the season of the year when his large real estate business demanded his entire attention, and he could not neglect that.

Chief Engineer Billings has designated William Leahy as his chauffeur. Richard Williams who was chauffeur for ex-Chief Litchfield, being assigned to the auto chemical at the Central station. John Dillon has also been transferred from the Central station to chauffeur of the auto chemical at Atlantic.

Mayor Miller has received a letter from J. H. Crofton of 33 Main street, Auburn, Maine, under date of Jan. 31 asking for information. It reads in part: "I am in search of the name of Crofton. I would like to locate one Edward Crofton, and know for a certainty there were people of that name living in Quincy, stone cutters, some 30 years ago or thereabouts. I wish to trace the name so that I can communicate with them, asthere is a business matter of interest come up.

While the Mayor has not so stated, it has been generally understood that the charges which he intends to make against Chief of Police Burrell and Street Foreman Shea are based on things which transpired last year. Under the Civil Service law however it will be impossible for the Mayor to prefer charges against a man for something that took place during another Mayors administration, for if there was anything wrong it was up to the Mayor of that year to take the matter in charge. It would seem therefore that any charges which Mayor Miller may have to make against these two officials must be things that have transpired since he took office as Mayor.

Eric G. Bergfors, who was Monday night appointed as a member of the Board of Assessors to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of W. W. Mitchell took office this morning and sat with the board at its meeting, the Board being made up of Chairman Bates and Mr. Bergfors.

Dr. John T. Reynolds the new member of the Board of Health called at the office this morning but did not remain long.

About the only thing the Mayor had to offer this morning was a statement in regard to the claim that the departments had been living within their appropriations during the past year. That they have not been living within their appropriation, or some of them have not, he said, was shown by a report which he had just received from Chief Engineer Billings, which was to the effect that bills had been filled with him Monday amounting to over $900 for suplies purchased for the Fire department early last year which were still unpaid.

NOTICE

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

It is reported that John Lind opened his mouth long enough the other day to order dinner.

Aviator Hamilton had to die in bed without any gate receipts.

Mr. Bryan has received a three pound radish from admiring friends, but as long as it was not thrown over the footlights, he ought not to care.

President Wilson pronounces "been" like "bean," but no one has been discharged from the government service for failure to do the same.

Some soulless capitalist proposes that the new rural credits legislation shall require the farmers to pay back sometime the money they borrow.

The Emperor of Germany is sawing wood, but in this country if a fellow does that in his back yard, the neighbors don't call on his wife.

The express companies lowered their rates Feb. 1, and some people had faith to believe they were just about to do it anyway when the government started the parcel post.

The railroads are holding "Safety first" meetings among their employes, but it is not true that an engineer will be disciplined if he brings his train in on time.

Now is the time for congressmen to get jobs for their constituents, as there is nothing pending but appropriation bills each spending only a hundred or two millions.

WOMEN AND NEWSPAPERS.

If the financial daily newspaper for women, about to be established in Berlin, Germany, shall prove a success, the feminine subjects of Kaiser Wilhelm must be quite different from our sisters, cousins, and aunts at home.

A number of projects for daily journals for women have been formed in this country, but few of them ever attained success. A financial woman's journal would have about as much chance in this country as a periodical devoted to beauty hints for men. The many women of America who take an interest in financial problems are perfectly able to comprehend the investment news in any newspaper. They do not need to have it diluted and babyfied as for inferior minds.

It is customary to poke fun at women's periodicals and newspaper women's page. These publications often have an ephemeral atmosphere of froth and flutter. The latest Paris freak fashion, problems of love and marriage, beauty hints, the etiquet of calling and cards and sweethearts, these don't greatly exercise the muscles of the brain.

Yet the question when one should make party calls may be just as important as a half column of gossip about Connie Mack's prospective pitchers for 1914, which millions of men are reading with avidity.

The large place in the newspaper women's page given to scientific cookery and household economy is a healthful sign. It indicates that a great many women wish expert information on their side of the industrial partnership.

Newspaper reading by women seems to be on the increase. In England women are about as much interested in politics as men. There is an increasing number of sweet and stylish women in the United States who can put a great many disconcerting questions about politics to the average American voter.

DANIELS RELIED UPON EXPERTS

Wrongly Informed as to Strength of American Navy

CLAIM OF TWO CONGRESSMEN

United States Rated Below Germany by Omissions and Faulty Comparisons In Navy Year Book—Committee Hears That Statistics Were Juggled by the Naval Sharps

Washington, Feb. 3.—That experts of the navy department juggled the statistics in the navy year book for 1913 to make the American navy appear inferior to the German navy and thereby set the United States down from second to third place as a naval power, was charged by Representatives Witherspoon of Mississippi and Hensley of Missouri, members of the house naval affairs committee.

With Secretary Daniels before the committee to explain the naval program for the coming year, the two congressmen, who are strongly opposed to a "big navy," questioned him at length on what they declared were omissions and faulty comparisons in the year book.

The secretary explained that he was not an expert in comparing navies, and said he had relied on what experts in the navy had advised him about the facts.

In their questioning the congressmen brought out that three American battleships, the Oregon, Massachusetts and Indiana, which are of the same tonnage and of heavier armament than ten listed German battleships, are left out of the United States list altogether; and that the year book, instead of giving the United States thirty-six battleships built and building, compared with Germany's thirty-six, should have credited the United States with thirty-nine battleships of heavier total tonnage and armament than Germany.

They also developed that the navy statisticians have this year for the first time taken out of the dreadnought class the battleships South Carolina and Michigan, which have dreadnought armament, and have put into the German dreadnought class four ships of eleven-inch gun armament.

The year book's comparison gives Germany thirteen dreadnoughts and the United States seven, while the congressmen insisted that the correct figures should give Germany and the United States nine dreadnoughts each.

WANTED AS A WITNESS

Subpoena Servers In Metropolitan Case Cannot Find Mellen

New York, Feb. 3.—Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, failed to appear as a witness in the suit brought by Jennie R. Morse, sister of Charles W. Morse, for an accounting of the affairs of the Metropolitan Steamship company, a former Morse line purchased by the New Haven.

The master in chancery who is taking the testimony announced that subpoena servers had been unable to find Mellen, whose testimony is wanted to throw light on the negotiations for the purchase of the Metropolitan's stocks and bonds. Another effort will be made to serve him.

TOO MUCH FLIRTING

No More Mixed Services In Ohio Penitentiary Chapel

Columbus, O., Feb. 3.—Warden Thomas of the Ohio penitentiary has ordered that men and women prisoners be separated at chapel services.

"There has been too much flirting at mixed services," explained the warden. "It is bad for prison discipline. Hereafter men will attend services in the chapel. The women will have special services in their own quarters."

Some of the prisoners are incensed at the order. The warden is married.

FRENCH AIRMEN KILLED

Two Officers Fall With Biplane While Flying Over Military Aerodrome

Bourges, France, Feb. 3.—Captain Niquet of the First artillery and Lieutenant Delvert of the Twenty-first artillery, both attached to the French army aviation corps, were killed by falling with their biplane while flying over the military aerodrome.

The officers intended to drop explosive bombs and had reached a height of about 300 feet. In making a turn the biplane suddenly inclined to the left and fell. The bombs were found among the wreckage.

PINDELL DECLINES POST

Illinois Man Will Not Go to Russia as Our Ambassador

Washington, Feb. 3.—Henry M. Pindell of Peoria, Ills., who was recently nominated and confirmed as ambassador to Russia, has declined the appointment, according to a letter to the president made public at the White House.

Pindell wrote President Wilson that although the senate had investigated accusations in connection with his appointment, he felt, nevertheless, that no controversy of any kind should surround the appointment of any ambassador, as it was liable to be misunderstood abroad. The president, in a letter of regret, accepted Pindell's declination.

It is understood the president will appoint Pindell to an important post under the administration. To the vacancy caused by Pindell's retirement as ambassador, it is considered certain that Charles R. Crane of Chicago will be named.

THIEVES BUSY AT BOSTON

Get Away With Booty Valued at $5300 In Series of Breaks

Boston, Feb. 3.—The usual Monday crop of burglaries came to light and in at least one case the thieves got plunder to the value of $5000 after destroying a safe. This break was in the offices of W. C. Williams & Son, manufacturing jewelers, on the fifth floor of the building at 293 Washington street.

The office of Kelleher & Beckwith at 771 Washington street was entered and three safes were opened. The burglars got jewelry and other articles to the value of about $300 but failed to open the inner door of one of the safes which contained a large sum of money.

The third attempt was in the grocery store of Peter Terrill at 200 Commercial street, but is hardly credited to skilled burglars.

SEAMEN MOVE TO END SHIP SLAVERY

In Favor of Bill Now Before Congressional Committee

Washington, Feb. 3.—"Abolish the slave laws! Let American soil become free soil for seamen, as it is for all other men!"

This appeal was issued by President Furuseth of the International Seamen's union, on behalf of the La Follette seamen's bill, now before the house committee on merchant marine and fisheries.

Slavery on shipboard he explained as the existing legal status of the enlisted men, who, except in the domestic trade, may be arrested, detained and sent back to their ships or to prison for quitting the service of their employers.

MISER LIVED ALL ALONE

Friends Who Had Kept Him Alive Find He Had Small Fortune

Greenfield, Mass., Feb. 3.—David M. Arnold, a recluse, who carried penuriousness so far that neighbors were forced to bring in food to keep him alive, left $5000 to the Advent Christian Publication society of Boston in a will which was probated here.

Arnold lived in Monroe for years, allowed no one around his home and did all his work himself. He refused to purchase any food for himself and at first refused offers of assistance made by neighbors.

The discovery of a will after the death of Arnold was a great surprise to the neighbors who had helped to keep him alive.

SLAUGHTER IN MEXICO

Forty-Five Thousand Federals Said to Have Been Slain

Mexico City, Feb. 3.—The astounding fact that secret records on file at the office of the minister of war show that 45,000 federal soldiers have been killed and more than 85,000 wounded in conflicts with rebels since President Madero was driven from office, was revealed by an attache of the government.

No accurate figures for the property loss in Mexico are available but is estimated at more than $150,000,000 in the last nine months.

Washington, Feb. 3.—A shortage of 18,259,000 meat animals in January, 1914, as compared with the number in this country in January, 1910, is the reason for the high meat prices assigned by government officials in a report from the department of agriculture.

YACHT CLUB CONCERT.

A goodly attendance was present at the concert of the Arion Mandolin orchestra at the Wollaston Yacht club house Saturday evening and enjoyed a pleasant evening in spite of the downpour outside.

The program was one of eleven numbers and besides the selections by the orchestra included readings by Miss Nina Bearse Wilbur and banjo solos by Miss Anna S. Appleton.

The orchestra was under the direction of Miss Marion Franklin Ellis and played very acceptably. Among the numbers was "A day in the cotton field" a descriptive piece which included negro melodies steamboat whistles and other effects. "U. S. A. Patrol" included the national airs and brought the evening to a successful close.

The banjo solos of Miss Appleton were very well received and her nimble fingering brought forth much applause. "March impromtu" by Eno was included in her offerings.

Among Miss Wilbur's readings were: "Tiger lily wins" a tale of the racing stable, "My sister"s feller" a juvenile piece, "Studies in dialect" including Hebrew and Irish versions, and "The boy at 3 A. M." a child study.

One of the features of the performance was the sextette of young ladies from the orchestra which played "Lion du ball" by Gillet and "Myopia Intermezzo".

The evening closed with social dancing.

Can't Play Game Fair In Congress

By Representative J. J. WHITACRE of Eighteenth Ohio District

ALL I've done since I've been down in Washington has been to SIT AROUND AND TRY TO LOOK WISE, and that's what any man has to do who isn't willing to BARTER HIS CONVICTIONS FOR POLITICAL EXPEDIENCY.

I GOT A LETTER FROM A FRATERNAL ORGANIZATION ASKING ME TO VOTE FOR THE IMMIGRATION BILL NOW PENDING. I VOTED AGAINST THE BILL ONCE, BUT IF I PLAYED THE GAME AS IT IS PLAYED IN WASHINGTON I WOULD WRITE TO MY CORRESPONDENT THAT I WOULD CAREFULLY CONSIDER THE MATTER, THEN I WOULD KEEP ON BLUFFING UNTIL IT CAME TO A SHOWDOWN.

After I had voted against the bill I would hurry around and explain that matters arising at the last minute had made my act necessary and hand out a lot of stuff like that.

I CAN'T STAND THAT SORT OF BUSINESS. I THOUGHT THERE MIGHT BE A CHANCE FOR AN HONEST, WIDE AWAKE, FRANK AND OPEN BUSINESS MAN IN CONGRESS, BUT I WAS QUICKLY DISILLUSIONED.

English Occupation of Egypt Proves Beneficial

By Dr. BENJAMIN IDE WHEELER, President of University of California

I WENT to Egypt, believing that the English were not just masters there, but after seeing the results of English rule and talking with many people in Egypt, both natives and Englishmen, I have been convinced that ENGLISH OCCUPATION OF EGYPT IS MOST BENEFICIAL TO THE EGYPTIANS. The United States can learn a valuable lesson from England for the government of the Philippines. What we need in the Philippines is a policy that does not wabble.

Income Tax Law Crude and Obscure

By STUART H. PATTERSON, Income Tax Expert

THE income tax law has arrived, and I think it has come to stay in one form or another. BUT THE PRESENT LAW WILL HAVE TO BE CHANGED. I criticise the law, but in a general way defend the treasury department for the efforts it has made to make the law workable.

IN OLDEN TIMES THE GREAT INJUSTICE WAS THAT THE FEW POWERFUL RICH UNJUSTLY TAXED THE MANY POOR. UNDER OUR MODERN AND ENLIGHTENED CIVILIZATION THE MANY IN POWER ARE ATTEMPTING UNJUSTLY TO TAX THE FEW RICH, AND ONE CONDITION IS AS UNJUST AS THE OTHER.

Portland, Me., Feb. 3.—Arguments on the motion of counsel for Rev. Wilbur F. Berry of Waterville for arrest of judgment in his case in the superior court, where he was convicted by a jury of libelling Associate Justice Haley of the Maine supreme court, were made before Judge Connolly. Counsel for the defense maintained that the indictment was faulty in that it did not charge that the circulation of the alleged libelous statement in Cumberland county was "wilful."

Connolly overruled the motion for arrest of judgment and imposed a sentence of four months in jail upon the respondent. The case will go to the law court on exceptions.

FOR PROTESTANT AND CATHOLIC

A New Religion Is Coming Which Is Founded on Godliness

Rev. Thomas W. Davison of the Memorial Congregational church of Atlantic spoke Sunday morning on the text: "Ye shall know them by their fruits."—Matthew 7: 16, being a reply to the challenge of Cardinal O'Connell. He said in part:

It is not my purpose to criticise the Roman Catholic church, or to point to any supposed errors in its doctrines, neither is it my intention to even suggest a lack of sincerity or morality in its clergy. I have acquaintances among the Roman Catholic clergy for whom I have the utmost respect. And there are Catholic men and women in this community that appeal to us and commend our admiration as citizens.

The Cardinal in general was not speaking of Catholics, but of those outside of that church. However we know that the statement may well be applied to all, and the words "Lovers of pleasure, more than the lovers of God or goodness" may well be applied to multitudes today."

How does this affect the nation? The moral tone is lowered, there is laxness in regard to the enforcement of laws; there is the assertion of the most Godless sentiments both in politics and in business. Yet the only organization that can stand against this current is the Christian church.

If I were to say that every Congregationalist, Baptist or Methodist is a Christian every day in the year, I would be as Cardinal O'Connell when he said every Catholic is.

With this growing indifference to the church, the wise clergyman, be he Catholic or Protestant, will look for a reason, because the home can only be safe and sacred as it recognizes its spiritual element.

Now the Catholic church has failed in its antagonism to science and progress. It has changed very much in the last twenty years. It has now its church organizations and activities by the laity unthought of years ago. It has its modernists in its priesthood, though they are warned of the danger of excommunication.

The Protestant church has in many instances failed. To use Cardinal O'Connell's words—"Millions are growing up without even an intelligent knowledge of God, of Christ, of religion, of spiritual life." It fails if it allows the masses to go without giving them the GOSPEL OF GOOD-WILL.

However there is a New Religion that is coming to both Catholic and Protestant. It is not new, any more than the sun is new each days and each year. But it is a new conviction and a new authority which is founded on Godliness, and recognized in the souls of men today. This new conviction fills the religious life with meaning, and is leading to service which costs sacrifice not for opinions, or even denominations as in the past, but genuine work for the good of others.

There is a new conscience at work in both Catholic and Protestant alike, it has come with the growing civilization, and the man who interferes with the convictions of that conscience, be he sexton or cardinal, will find that the conscience is going to have liberty and advance the CAUSE OF BROTHERHOOD.

Cardinal O'Connell is right in saying that there is indifference in regard to creeds among Protestant churches, and that indifference looks like disintegration to a person who does not understand independent or democratic christianity. But what has been the effect of men dropping their denominational ties? In some communities where three Protestant churches existed, and only one was needed, men found a better and larger church life by all meeting in one building—and leaving the unnecessary church buildings, or using them for some community benefit.

To say that our Protestant churches even in their narrowest periods were failures would be far from the truth. Those churches founded hositals, endowed colleges, and every agency of charity, and the men who are struggling in settlements and working to uplift the masses receive their instruction and inspiration in those churches. Here is where of Cardinal O'Connell's criticism comes in. It is unfair to class every independent thinking minister and professor as insincere. Especially when he knows that in his own church, the modernists in the schools of instruction and throughout all European countries are thinking in scientific terms.

I refrain from any remark of bitterness, because of my complete trust in God, in democracy, and the ultimate triumph of the Kingdom of righteousness and peace on the earth. The day of priestcraft, bigotry and intolerance is past and the day of brotherhood is here, and the Cardinal or any man that tries to hinder it, is fighting a losing battle. The time is not far away when we will have a united church of America to meet and overcome all of our religious problems.

REV. WILLIAM B. AYERS.

At the Park and Downs Congregational church Sunday morning a very forcible sermon was delivered by the pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers. The text was the 13th verse of the 4th chapter of Ephesians—"The unity of faith." The subject brought out some exceedingly strong points pertaining to our local or communal life as also our national life, a comprehensive view being given.

The great problem before America is the problem of amalgamation. This is the problem also of our community life. We must return nineteen hundred years for the solution. Out of this heterogeneous mass one people wil emerge only as they are able to meet in one common affection.

The thoughts of races are spoken in different tongues, and misunderstood often, between them, but there is a common language among all the races of this world i. e., the language of the heart. It needs no interpreter, no lexicon, or grammar. Its affections are the golden threads that bind them together. The heart speaks a common tongue and tells out a common need. Men may be alike in nothing. Their industrial, educational and social interests may be miles apart but where the heart is concerned the millionaire is no better than the "stoker." The "Irishman" and the "Jew" are one.

And so the ground upon which the race must meet for unity and equity must be that of the affections or it can never become one. Upon this ground Jesus sought to build His Kingdom. He appeals to the heart of the race. It meets in him and becomes one.

The Sunday evening service also drew a large attendance as usual. The subject was a continuation of the Sunday evening sermons—"God in Man". This subject also brought out some interesting points that held the attention of his hearers.

Four Hundred Suffragists Pay Visit to White House

ASK FOR "VOTES FOR WOMEN"

President Says He Cannot Advocate Legislation Not Approved by Democratic National Convention—Shakes Hands With Advocates of "Cause"—Dr. Walker In Little Near-Tragedy

Washington, Feb. 3.—The women suffrage delegation of 400 which stormed the White House to line President Wilson up in advocacy of "Votes for Women" failed in its mission.

The president stuck to his position that he could not, as leader of the Democratic party, advocate any legislation that was not approved by the party in its national convention.

The entire demonstration had been arranged to refute the charges made by anti-suffragettes to congress that women who earn their bread were indifferent to suffrage questions. Every woman in the line was a worker and most of them were members of organized labor. They came from New England, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

The reception of the delegation proved one of the most picturesque episodes since President Wilson was inaugurated. Headed by a band, the 400 women, with flags and streamers flying to the breeze, marched from their headquarters to the White House.

There the column halted while a committee of twenty-five, of which Mrs. Glendower Evans, of the Massachusetts Trades Women's league, was chairman, entered the executive offices. They lined up in one corner of the room and half a dozen speeches—more or less pathetic appeals—were made to the president.

Mrs. Evans very plainly reminded the president that prior to his election, in a conversation with her at Sea Girt, N. J., his attitude toward suffrage was very much more encouraging.

"We worked our fingernails off then to get you elected," she said, and added, "but you were gunning for votes then."

"Asking for the votes of the people," corrected the president mildly.

The president explained that he was more free then to express his views, as his party had not instructed him on this question.

After a while Mrs. Evans explained that 400 workers were still waiting outside in the cold. The president ordered that they be permitted to enter and they filed by him, shaking hands.

One little near-tragedy which the president knew nothing about marked the visit of the women here. Dr. Mary Walker, Civil war nurse, holder of the congressional medal of honor, dragged her weary way to the White House with the delegation. She wanted to see the president and say something to him about the "cause."

But the women in charge of the demonstration didn't want her there, and they told the doortenders not to admit her. So Dr. Mary, a pathetic figure, in her frock coat, trousers and silk hat, sat disconsolately on a sofa and watched the women file in and file out.

"They ought not to have done that," she said nervously, as she left the White House.

MARRIED ON DEATH BED

Old Railroad Builder Dies Three Hours After the Ceremony

New York, Feb. 3.—Charles W. Schofield, once a prominent railroad builder, 78 years old, was married in Brooklyn to Miss Jean D. Fitzsimmons, aged 28, a trained nurse. Within three hours he was dead of pneumonia. He realized that death was upon him, and asked that the ceremony be performed.

Schofield was born in Stamford, Conn. Several years ago he retired from active business. His first wife, Lillian E. Schofield, died in Los Angeles in December, 1912.

Slayer of Kenyon Pleads Nolo to Charge of Manslaughter

East Greenwich, R. I., Feb. 3.—A sentence of ten years' imprisonment was imposed upon John J. Maloney, indicted for the murder of Christopher Kenyon on Sept. 26 last. Maloney is alleged to have suffocated Kenyon by stuffing leaves and grass down his throat.

As no motive for the alleged murder could be ascribed, Maloney was allowed to plead nolo to the charge of manslaughter.

PICTURESQUE DAMASCUS.

A Garden City Whose Beauty Halted Mohammed at Its Gates.

The hotel in Damascus in which we stay is called the Grand Victoria, but it is above a blacksmith shop and a saddle shop. The lower stories are mostly blank, bare walls. From the upper stories project balconies of latticed oriels, some of which extend so far over the street as to make it easy for the veiled damsel of the harem to leap across.

In contrast with these plain exteriors the interiors are often exquisitely beautiful, having an open court paved with marble and a fountain fed by the waters of the Abana, tinkling and splashing through the hot hours of the day, and wooing one to rest during the cool of the evening. Palms, orange trees and oleanders stand here and there. Within the house you discover rooms cold and formal to an American, but brilliant with oriental hangings, brasses and inlaid mother-of-pearl furnishings. Damascus is perhaps the second city in importance in the mind of the Mohammedans. It is a garden city made to be indeed an oasis in the desert by the Abana river, which, finding life in the snows of Hermon's breast, flows through this city with increasing volume as if it intended to regenerate the desert, into which it pours all its wealth, and does veritably make this section to "blossom as the rose." It is not to be wondered at that Mohammed drew rein outside the walls when first he saw the city and said, "Since man can enter paradise but once, I will not enter this earthly paradise lest I be shut out from the heavenly."—Christian Herald.

WHO TOLD THE TRUTH?

Feminine Life From the Viewpoints of Home and Business.

Who told the truth?

They met in the subway one morning, a young mother and a young professional woman. They had been friends at school, but eons had passed, and now, after some ten years, they began to discuss their present jobs—of motherhood and journalism. However, journalism seemed to fill most of the time, and motherhood was dismissed after a few desultory questions about Billy, whose fame consisted in being seven years old and just entering school.

"Oh, tell me about your work," said the mother.

"There is quite a bit to tell of it," said the egotistical woman of business, and immediately launched upon the joys, woes, disadvantages and advantages of the business woman's career.

"My, but that is most interesting!" said the mother, whose eyes were popping out of her head at the mere mention of the famous persons the journalist knew. "I certainly shall buy your magazine and read it!"

"Grand Central station!" mumbled the guard.

"Goodby," said the mother. "Your life is certainly worth while."

"Goodby," replied the journalist. "Not nearly as much worth while as yours."

Who told the truth?—New York Tribune.

Ben Franklin's Keenness.

Two incidents recall the keenness and the thoroughness—the great twin abilities, to see and to utilize—of Ben Franklin. One day he chanced to observe a lady in the possession of an imported whisk broom. With his usual interest and careful consideration he examined it as a novelty. He discovered on the brush of the broom a seed, which he carefully removed. Presently he planted it, and the growth from this seed was the first crop of broom corn in this country. Again one day when Dr. Franklin was walking by Dock creek he saw stuck in the mud a wickerwork basket, which had sprouted. Carefully he fished out the basket and carefully took it apart. He gave cuttings to his friend, Charles Norris, who planted the twigs in his garden, where they grew to great size. They turned out to be yellow willows and, as Franklin had foreseen, proved of great commercial value.

Spoiled Their Appetites.

"Why is Sweden like heaven?" asked the thin boarder, coming to the breakfast table.

"I know," came from the little blond typewriter.

"Well, if you know push it along, Sweetmeats," said the thin boarder.

"Because"—

"The same old answer."

"No, it's not. I was going to say because it is a foreign country," essayed the little blond.

"Wrong," came from the thin man. "Listen. Because nearly all the matches are made there."—Yonkers Statesman.

WANTED ONE MORE RIDE.

But Neither Pride Nor Glory Figured In His Ambition.

The Boston Transcript tells an amusing story of one of the subjects of Lord Kitchener, consul general in Egypt, who turned the power and influence of the famous English soldier to his personal profit.

While driving one day Lord Kitchener noticed an old man in the street whom he recognized as an acquaintance from the Sudan. The consul general ordered the driver to stop and invited the old man to take a seat in the carriage. So the two drove together through the town to the place to which the Sudanese wanted to go.

A few days later the dark friend of Lord Kitchener was seen hovering about the British agency. At last an officer asked him what he wanted.

"I should so much like to drive out with Lord Kitchener once more," the old man replied.

"Why?" the officer asked.

"You see," the Sudanese answered naively, "after my friends and acquaintances saw me sitting at the side of Lord Kitchener they came to me, one after the other, and from one I received £5, from another £2, from others £1 and 40 piasters from the very poorest. They all believe that I could speak in favor of El Lord.

"And," the old man added, "I should very much like to see that happen all over again."

VARYING FORCE OF RADIUM.

Powers of the Three Different Rays—Alpha, Beta and Gamma.

There are three kinds of so called rays having their inciting origin in radium. The three rays are known as alpha, beta and gamma rays, and each of these has characteristic peculiarities.

The alpha rays have a range inside of half an inch from their source, the beta rays reach about three times as far, and the gamma rays are yet more penetrating. A thin sheet of paper or a film of tin foil or mica will effectually halt the alpha rays. A millimeter of lead or five millimeters of aluminium will stop the further progress of the beta rays, but the gamma rays will go through nineteen centimeters of iron or seven centimeters of lead before their original intensity is reduced 1 per cent.

The alpha rays consist of positively charged atoms of helium advancing at a velocity of 12,000 miles a second, and the beta rays are negatively charged bodies projected at a speed of quite 150,000 miles in the same interval of time. Roughly, the beta rays are a hundred times more penetrating than the alpha rays, while the gamma rays, in their turn, are a hundredfold as searching as the beta rays.—Exchange.

Primrose League.

The Primrose league was formed in 1884 in memory of the late Lord Beaconsfield, whose favorite flower the primrose is thought to have been. Beaconsfield died on April 19, 1881, and the anniversary of that day is termed "primrose day," when the flower is generally worn by his admirers and also placed upon his statue in Parliament square. The joke of it is, the primrose was not the great statesman's favorite flower. It was, however, the favorite flower of Queen Victoria, and when asked about the floral tribute to be sent to Beasonsfield's funeral she advised sending "the primrose, my favorite flower." In some way the matter got mixed up, and the delusion sprang up that materialized in the Primrose league.—New York American.

Persistent Carlyle.

The father of Thomas Carlyle was a stonemason and a good one, so his son said. The elder was as proud of his stone walls as was the son of his own "French Revolution" when he threw the complete manuscript on the table and said something like this to his wife:

"There, let the world have it. I have put my best blood into it."

But his patience and pride in his work was to receive a severer test. He lent the manuscript to a friend, who did not safeguard it. As a result a servant threw it into the fire. The author was not mirthful by nature, yet he went cheerfully at his work again and for the second time put his best blood into it.—Boston Globe.

How to Glace Nuts.

Glace nuts are always great favorites. Use walnuts, filberts, almonds, Brazil nuts and pecans. For the glace turn into an enameled saucepan one-half pound of granulated sugar and one-half cupful of water. Boil until it threads, then add three tablespoonfuls of vinegar and boil again, removing from the fire the very instant it changes color. Dip the nuts as quickly as possible, let them dry and dip again and cool upon paraffin paper. If many nuts are to be dipped it is better to set the syrup into a larger vessel of warm water, so that it will not harden.

Stage Paint.

Painting the face on the stage is a barbarous custom come down to us from the age of oil lamps and candles. With gas and electric light and opera glasses for the remote seats in the house it is not needed.—London Dramatic Journal.

Charges.

"Your lawyer made some pretty severe charges against the other fellow, didn't he?"

"Y-e-e-s, but you ought to see how he charged me!"

There is a sufficient recompense in the very consciousness of a noble deed.—Cicero.

THE PLAYHOUSE

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

Sapho is to be given at Quincy Music hall Wednesday afternoon and evening. Probably no good woman ever lived who did not, at times, wonder how a bad woman could possibly fascinate any self-respecting man. The terms "good" and "bad," in this relation, are merely comparative. No "good" woman ever existed who was perfect—no "bad" woman has been ever utterly unworthy of some consideration. The book, "Sapho," as Alphonse Daudet wrote it, portrays a woman by no means altogether bad, and his portraiture of such a woman is artistic to the last degree. The Nethersole play, dramatized from this book, lost much of Daudet's delicacy and gave the impression of a woman whose thread of life we would prefer not having touch our own. The film adaption as acted by Florence Roberts and shown in all Moving Picture Theatres, however, may be described as thoroughly human.

One gets the underlying reasons which made the life of Fanny Legrand—or Sapho—what it was, and the supporting cast strengthen the impression. As those who read the book will remember, Fanny Legrand was picked out of the gutter by Caoudal, the sculptor—who used her as the model for his famous statue—Sapho—the creation which made him, as a sculptor. For some months, or years—the time does not matter—she was faithful to him—their life was idyllic.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

Quincy's popular playhouse was packed to the doors last night and the big audience was delighted with the feast of good amusement Manager Wardwell had provided for them. It is a fact that this enterprising local theatre is semi-weekly offering a program which is more thoroughly enjoyable than many in the big Boston playhouses. And the large audiences daily show that the people of Quincy appreciate that fact.

The daily matinee is affording great enjoyment to mothers and others who cannot attend the evening performances. Yesterday afternoon the attendance was over 600. And the fact that many mothers with their babies were enjoying the program was proven by the go carts and carriages that practically filled the large foyer of the theatre.

All the acts were interesting. Many items of interest were shown in the Animated Weekly, the great pictured newspaper of the world. And the comedy "Getting rid of his Mother-in-law" was a scream for sure.

DUAL MEET WITH CAMBRIDGE

Quincy Y. M. C. A. Up Against a Strong Team

The Cambridge Y. M. C. A. athletes will invade the Quincy Y. M. C. A. camp tonight in an effort to show our boys how to make records on the field and track. Cambridge has not lost a track meet this year, having defeated Boston, Newton and Lynn in dual meets. Several college athletes have recently joined the Cambridge association and at present the team is the strongest that has ever represented the gym.

The events will include 15 yard dash, 300 yard run, 12 pound shot put three standing broad jumps, running high jump, eight potato races and relay races on the track. The following men will represent Quincy: Joe Phelan, Henry Trask, Harry Glover, Fred Kingsbury, Thomas Djerf Fred Oleson, Philip Wood, Fred Croucher, George Shirley and Alton Hall.

Kingsbury is out to break the track record for the 300 yards made by Harry Glover last year in the senior cup contest. The record at present is 39 and 3-5 seconds and as Fred has been training with the B. A. A. athletes under the guidance of Ryder his effort will be closely watched.

SPORT NEWS

A rolloff of some importance to the fans is scheduled for Thursday evening on the coliseum alleys between Louis Ross and Jim Olindy of Quincy, and the Smith brothers of Weymouth. Many are giving the Weymouth boys the preference, believing that their actual alley experience will carry them over the rough places.

Another shift in basket ball centres will take place Thursday evening when the Quincy A. A. teams play St. Alphonsus in Hibernian hall. The Quincys have not yet got underway but when once started feel they will be in a fair way to cop the championship. It is fairly certain that Putt Kelly will not play any more this season, he promises to be on hand for the spring base ball practice. Dan Duggan is overweight and unless he can work off the superfluous coating appears to be indifferent toward the game. Clinton Scollard at the request of his mother, has discontinued for the season. With Bootus Chapman at Williston Academy and his brother Millard in New York another loss is felt, but according to Manager Flynn the success of the season will not be affected since he has arranged to put two full quintettes on the floor that will take the eye of the sporting public. In booking Hibernian hall he intends to fill his dates there this season.

Quincy High will play an at home game with the strong Franklin quintet this afternoon. The game should be one of the fastest played in High school circles this season. Referee Coady will direct the scrimmage. The Quincy players are in the pink of condition, and hope to be able to conquer the team which has a reputation throughout New England as a "hard nut to crack."

Archie Walsh, Poehlers bowling partner, broke the Maine record at Portland on Monday when he defeated Poehler in a 10-string match by 100 pins. Walsh's total was 1162 and Poehler's 1062. Fred Pine of that city held the former record which was 1147. In the match Archie got two singles of 134. Following the special Poehler and Walsh teamed against Pride and Hooper and beat them 1110 to 1093. Again Walsh beat Poehler to the best single, getting 128 while Poehler got but 120.

The open tournament golf season will open April 30 on the Montclair links of the Wollaston Golf club.

Milton High school faces a discouraging base ball outlook. The available men are Capt. Merle Poole who plays second base; Margeson, a fielder; Gerald Poole, a pitcher; and "Dutch" Reiser, formerly of Boston Latin. Coach Sid Hazelton expects a large squad to report for practice which will be commenced early. Thirteen games have been arranged, two of which will be with Quincy. The schedule opens April 20 with Arlington.

Capt. Foster Trainor, McDuffie of the fielders, and Winslow Felton are the only available base ball players at Milton Academy. A thirteen game schedule has been arranged which is subject to a change. The annual game with Milton high will be May 2. The schedule opens April 18 with Brookline High.

LANGUAGE.

Language is the most subtle apd plastic of all instruments. Its mastery is the most difficult of all achievements. A faultless pronunciation and a perfect syntax may serve only to expose the poverty that hides behind the purple. I do not undervalue the physiological and the rhetorical training, but there must be something to say, else the saying it well only makes the speaker ridiculous. And not only must there be something to say, but there must be a proper perspective to which the sentences are adjusted. Language is only a means to an end, and the aim of all expression is impression. * * * Speech is one of God's noblest gifts to man, and it should be kept firmly to its divine intention—to make plain and radiant the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. —Adolphus J. F. Behrends.

Boston's New Mayor Promises to Stop Policy of Discharging Political Debts Through Mediumship of City Treasury—Municipal Corruption Will Be Eliminated Through Publicity

Boston, Feb. 3.—Ten minutes after he had entered city hall as mayor, James M. Curley removed Building Commissioner Arthur G. Everett "for the good of the service." It was the new mayor's first official act, and in accordance with statements made by him during the city campaign and since his election.

Everett had been warned by Curley to resign within fifteen minutes after inauguration, but had failed to do so.

The new mayor, forcing his way through a crowd of several thousand on School street, entered city hall, after he had been inaugurated in Tremont Temple. He went at once to the mayor's office, which was packed with admirers and floral tributes, and found Miss Bessie Clayton, stenographer, there.

"Has Building Commissioner Everett sent in his resignation?" asked Curley.

"No," was the reply.

"Then please take this dictation and have it sent to the city clerk," requested the mayor, adding:

"I hereby remove, for the good of the service, Arthur G. Everett as building commissioner."

Then the mayor addressed a similar message to Everett, curtly notifying him of his removal and adding that he had notified the city clerk of the removal.

The city charter gives the mayor power to remove, and the removed official has no other recourse but to file a statement of his position with the city clerk.

After removing Everett, Curley announced the appointment as building commissioner of Patrick O'Hearn, a wealthy builder and contractor.

"There are other positions which I will be called upon to fill, and I will attend to them as soon as possible," remarked the mayor.

Striking features of Mayor Curley's message follow:

The old order, which I trust is happily ended, is largely responsible for our present tax rate and debt.

I recommend such legislation as will result in purchases through the supply department for every department, and that advantage be taken of seasonable purchasing and cash discounts.

A monthly conference on city planning, to be participated in by committees * * * is necessary.

It is not my purpose to criticise my predecessor in the office of mayor for the present financial condition of Boston, but it is my determination that the policy of discharging political debts through the mediumship of the city treasury shall cease.

The pay rolls * * * call for the exercise of economy and efficiency. The adoption of this system (recommendations for salary increases should be submitted in department estimates each November), coupled with general equalization of salaries, would result in the fullest possible measure of justice.

In my opinion a conference of engineers should be called to determine the most durable and economic material and method of street construction for the future.

The abolition of the parental school at West Roxbury and the correctional institutions at Rainsford island * * * should be undertaken.

Medical experts today are unanimous in the opinion that drunkenness is a disease, and such being the case, for the protection of unfortunates thus afflicted, a system of segregation should be adopted.

The present syste of holding primaries and elections for municipal offices at a time when the weather is unusually severe * * * demands a change in date.

I am a firm believer in the value of publicity, and as sunlight destroys the microbes that lurk in dark and damp places, so, in my opinion, by making the city's business become the property of all, rather than the office holders alone, it will result in the elimination of graft and corruption, and the development of that degree of efficiency and economy at this time imperative.

Accused Dentist a Suicide

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb. 3.—Dr. James M. Taylor, for twenty-seven years president of Vassar college, has formally retired. He will soon start for Honolulu.

Lederer Again Bankrupt

New York, Feb. 2.—George W. Lederer, the theatrical producer, filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $144,797. This is Lederer's third plunge into bankruptcy.

EXECUTED BY VILLA

Guzman, Messenger From Felix Diaz, Faces Firing Squad at Juarez

Juarez, Mex., Feb. 3.—Francisco I. Guzman, who figured prominently in the revolt against President Madero in Mexico City a year ago, was executed in the front yard of a house occupied by General Villa here.

Guzman had just come from Havana, where, it was charged, he had been given a secret mission by Felix Diaz to induce Villa to renounce General Carranza and throw the strength of the revolution to Diaz.

As soon as he heard of the proposal, Villa gave Guzman a conference and, after making sure of the nature of the visit, ordered the messenger shot. Within a few minutes after his arrival Guzman was led out of Villa's room, stood up before an adobe wall, and, with his hands tied and eyes blindfolded, was executed.

NEITHER "HIM" NOR "IT"

Woman's Argument In Refusal to Declare Value of Property

Philadelphia, Feb. 3.—Who is an "it" and "what is an 'it'?" are questions being asked by Dr. Anna H. Shaw, president of the National Woman's Suffrage association, in connection with her refusal to declare the value of her personal property for taxation.

The blank sent Dr. Shaw to be filled out called for a declaration on personal property owned by "him or it," and the suffrage leader argues that as she is neither a "him" nor an "it," she is, therefore, exempt.

When Dr. Shaw refused to declare the value of her property at Moylan, Pa., the county commissioners placed upon it an assessed valuation of $30,000. This, according to Dr. Shaw's secretary, is nearly four times its actual value.

OFFICER CARRIED WAIF UPSIDE DOWN

Bachelor Copper Not Accustomed to Handling Babies

New York, Feb. 3.—"How to handle a baby" may have to be added to the curriculum of the police school. The reason for it is Patrolman James Bradley. Bradley is a bachelor and known nothing about babies, so when William Hammond accosted him in the street and told him that there was an unclaimed baby lying in the hallway of his house Bradley went to the rescue.

He picked up the baby and started for the police station. When he deposited his burden on the desk Lieutenant Raynor, who is the father of a flock of little Raynors, gave Bradley a fine "bawling out." It seems Bradley had carried the baby upside down and nearly ruined it.

WALLS ARE BLWON OUT

Gas Explosion Thought to Have Been Plot of Black Hand

Somerville, Mass., Feb. 3.—One man was blown into the middle of the street and seriously injured and the house at 58 to 60 Medford street was wrecked by a gas explosion that is believed to have been the result of a black hand attempt to asphyxiate the fifteen men who lived in the building.

No one was in the house at the time. Vincenzo Lecesse, 21, a lodger, was just about to enter the front door when the explosion sent him with terrific force to the street, where he fell unconscious. He is in a critical condition.

The force of the explosion, which occurred in an empty tenement on the first floor, blew out the rear wall and a part of the side wall. The neighborhood is thickly settled with foreigners.

GREAT SLASH IN RATES

Price of Trip to Europe In Steerage May Be Reduced to $10

Boston, Feb. 3.—A ticket to Europe from Boston for $10 is a possibility. The transatlantic rate war opened yesterday when the Hamburg-American line startled its opponents by a flat steerage rate of $22 to continental ports.

All the other lines will meet the last cut of the Germans, for Manager Thomas of the International Mercantile Marine company, including six ocean lines, declared he had been authorized to go as low as any competitor.

A well-informed steamship man said he thought the steerage fares might go to $10 before the smoke of battle clears away.

Chicago's Municipal Store Fully Stocked, but Not Opened

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Stocked with provisions and ready for business, Chicago's first municipal grocery store has remained closed for over a week, while hundreds in the stockyards district have besieged the doors daily.

County Agent Meyers, in charge of the store, says the doors cannot be unlocked until the committee authorized by council meets and gives formal approval.

Strathcona Leaves $500,000 to Yale

London, Feb. 3.—Yale university benefits to the extent of $500,000 under the will of the late Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, who died Jan. 21. The Royal Victoria college at Montreal was bequeathed $1,000,000.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

If you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

My Management

It Was Not Wise, but the Gain Was Considerable

By THOMAS R. DEAN

It was not long after I became a manager that I was besieged by playwrights who desired their productions put on the boards. I could withstand the men and the elderly ladies, but when it came to pretty young women it was very hard for me to stave them off. One day when I had already accepted more plays than I could use in several years a young lady called at my office and asked permission to submit a play. I told her that it would be useless for me to read any play unless it promised a phenomenal success whereupon she looked at me out of a pair of very beautiful blue eyes and said she was quite sure her play would be a phenomenal success. I could not but smile at her confidence, since it was difficult to predict such result even of a work by an experienced playwright.

What could I do? I took her manuscript from her, agreeing to look it over and if I should find it meritorious would read it carefully. The young lady asked when she might call for it, and I told her I would drop her a line when I had read it. This seemed satisfactory to her, and she took her departure, leaving with me very pleasant remembrances of her.

But not having a spare moment I forgot all about her and her play. A month passed, and one day I received a note from her reminding me that she had left a manuscript with me and would be pleased to be informed what had been done with it. I determined to return it with the usual thanks and a few complimentary words, but—We who must deceive authors have so many buts that it would not be worth while to specify this one. I went to a closet where I kept manuscripts handed in for my inspection; but, although I went over all of them carefully, I did not find "Constancy," the one I wanted. Then I remembered that I had taken it to my home. But I did not find it there. I usually stopped at my club on my way home and sometimes at other places. I must have left it somewhere, but inquiry failed to elicit any trace of it.

However, hoping that it might turn up, I ventured to put the authoress off. I wrote her that I had read enough of her play to become interested in it, but had been so busy with those I was preparing for the boards as to prevent my giving it the attention it seemed to deserve.

The truth was that I was having about that time hard luck with the plays I had brought out and was losing money. Indeed, most managers were in the same fix. There was but one play, "A Sylvan Butterfly," that was successful, but that had enough success to make up for all the failures. Hearing of the new attraction, I went to see it and was delighted with it. Its theme was one that will always appeal to human sympathies. I wondered if the manuscript could have gone the rounds, as most manuscripts of plays by unheard of authors are apt to do. I certainly would never have turned it down if it had been offered to me.

I didn't find the manuscript of "Constancy" and was much troubled about it. Another month passed, and the pretty playwright called at my office and asked for her play. She said that other playwrights were getting their productions on the boards and she saw no reason why she should not do the same. Mentioning "A Sylvan Butterfly," she said that her own play was just as good and if produced would attain equal success.

Being used to the estimate playwrights attach to their plays, if I had spoken my mind I would have told her that there were ninety-nine chances in a hundred that if her play was produced it would be a lamentable failure. As it was, I could only look wise and say nothing. But when I saw that her eyes were wet I broke down and told her that I had read enough of her play to warrant my paying her $500 for her play, my object being to compromise with her for that amount for having lost the manuscript.

At first she scouted the idea of accepting such a sum for a play which she fancied, as most young authors fancy, would make a fortune, but I represented to her the cost I would incur and the risk in staging her play, and she finally consented to accept my offer, but stipulated that, since she had never made but one copy of her play, I must not call on her for another. Glad to get out of the scrape by paying a stipulated sum, I agreed to this and gave her a check for $500 in payment for a play that I had never read and did not possess.

This embarrassing matter having been put out of the way I began to show the young lady some attention. Indeed, Miss Alice Woodruff and I became gradually fond of each other. She did not trouble me about her play except to indicate a desire to have it produced. I put her off for some time. Then one day, when by my devotion I had got her into a condition to bear a disappointment, I told her that the reason I had never returned her play was because it would not do for the stage. I had given her the money for it because I had not had the heart to tell her the truth.

She seemed quite overwhelmed at this, and I took advantage of the situation to tell her that I desired her to make me happy instead of pleasing the world by her plays. There is nothing like such a sacrifice as I had made to produce love, and I was rewarded by an acceptance.

During our engagement my fiancee told me that she was engaged in writing another play. "But I'll not offer it to you," she said. "After your noble act in paying me for a play that was worthless rather than hurt my feelings it would be a shame for me to put you to such a test again."

"You will permit me to read it simply as your critic, will you not?" I replied.

"We'll see about that when I have finished it."

One evening soon after this when I called on Alice I met a theatrical manager well known to me coming away from her house. I wondered what he had been doing there and wished to ask him, but refrained. I thought he looked at me with something akin to jealousy. We bid each other good evening and passed on without a word upon the subject that was uppermost in the mind of each. Entering the house, I found Alice, and it was not long before I gave her an opportunity to inform me why he had called.

"Oh, you mustn't think that you are the only string I have to my bow," she replied laughingly, and that was all I could get out of her.

The next day as I was about to enter my office Parkinson, the man I had seen coming out of my fiancee's home, passed by and, seeing me, stopped and said:

"It seems that you and I are after the same thing," he said.

"The same thing! What do you mean?"

"Come. Don't pretend to be stupid. You know where I met you last evening."

"Certainly I do!"

"Well?"

"Well?"

"I've got it all in my own hands, and there's no use in your interfering. You can't do anything."

"You speak in riddles."

"What nonsense! Own up, man. You're trying to get ahead of me, I having been first in the field."

"See here, Parkinson," I said, with rising color, "Miss Woodruff is engaged to me, and there's no use for you to try to get ahead of me. It is you who are intruding."

The most singular expression came over his face I have ever seen on the countenance of any one. He stood gaping at me for a few moments, then, with an abrupt good morning, turned on his heel and left me.

I called on Alice during the afternoon, hot for an explanation.

"I supposed," I said haughtily, "that you and I were engaged?"

"So did I."

"Will you please explain what you mean by encouraging another man?"

"I encourage another man?"

I told her of my meeting with Parkinson and of his having accused me of trying to get ahead of him. She burst into an uncontrollable fit of laughter.

"I think it time," she said, "that you and I came to an understanding. Sit down. I have a story to tell you."

I obeyed her impatiently.

"The first time I saw you," she said, "was when I left you a play called 'Constancy.' The next day the manuscript was returned to me by some one who found it, though I don't to this day know where."

A cold chill began to creep down my back.

"I offered it to several other managers and finally to Mr. Parkinson. He brought it out under the name of 'A Sylvan Butterfly.'"

"'A Sylvan Butterfly?'"

"Yes. You remember that the play was a great success."

"Go on."

"Well, Parkinson made up a lot of losses on other failures through 'A Sylvan Butterfly.' Then you, out of deference to my feelings, paid me $500 for a play you had lost. Never mind that now, dear; it's all in the family, and I've made a good deal of money which you will share with me out of the play. And now you can understand why I laughed at you when you told me of Parkinson's accusation that you were trying to get ahead of him. He is trying to get me to sign a contract for my new play. I have been holding off till I could learn whether you or he had better produce it. Having made one success for me, he naturally feels entitled to my second production. He knew nothing about my engagement to you and thought you were coming to see me with a view to getting my play."

Having finished her explanation, or, rather, confession, she leaned back on her chair and regarded me with an amused expression, though there was a slight sign of worry as to how I would take it. I sat thinking, and the more I thought the more it was apparent to me that Miss Alice Woodruff had held over me a most beautiful advantage. Finally I went to her and took her in my arms.

"If you could play a part on the stage," I said, "as well as you have played me you would be the most remarkable actress on or off the boards. Let Parkinson have your new play. He is entitled to it, and I am not. I shall be content with your love; the other fellow may have your plays."

It was this experience more than all others that taught me that a play is a lottery. My wife's second play was a failure, and she never wrote another one. Parkinson lost on it what he had made on "A Sylvan Butterfly," and I, so far as my wife's plays were concerned, came out with nothing lost or gained, but my profit came in getting a wife I adore.

Centenary Celebration, Birthday Anniversary Of Samuel J. Tilden

THE one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Samuel J. Tilden occurs on Feb. 9 and will be appropriately celebrated. A Tilden memorial commission appointed by the governor of New York state has the matter in charge. A wreath will be laid on his grave at New Lebanon, N. Y., on Feb. 8, which falls on Sunday. On the following day, the anniversary, there will be ceremonies at the capitol in Albany and also in all the states of the Union. On Tuesday, Feb. 10, a memorial meeting will be held in Carnegie hall, New York city, at which President Wilson has been invited to make an address.

Samuel J. Tilden occupied a position in the eyes of the American people and performed services to the country which amply entitle him to remembrance. His works and example still powerfully influence public opinion and mold legislation. Tilden never held a federal office, yet it may be doubted if any other man since Lincoln exerted so great an influence upon national affairs.

He was "the great American reformer." His successful fight against the Tweed ring was the beginning of the great movement to throw off the shackles of political corruption. His successful fight against the canal ring gave a new impetus to political reform in nearly every northern state. It is possible that historians will always divide on the question of whether or not Tilden was wrongly deprived of the president's office, but that he was the choice of a majority at the polls there can be no doubt whatever. Neither can there be two opinions as to the great patriotism which he exhibited during the tremendous conflict which brought the country almost to the edge of another civil war. Many men have been great in victory, but Tilden belongs to that smaller company who proved themselves great in defeat.

At the age of eighteen, Tilden, who was born in 1814, wrote a political paper which Van Buren, then the power in Democratic politics in New York state, ordered printed as an official party appeal. It had an important part in the next Democratic victory in that state. At the age of twenty-three Tilden was writing on national questions in a way that created a profound impression. He was admitted to the bar in 1841, but his clients were so few that he became the editor of a political paper. After Polk's election to the presidency he resumed the practice of law and was elected to the state assembly, where he took a prominent part.

His most notable legal work, which was in part detective work as well, was his exposure of the corrupt ring under Tweed. Tilden was the chairman of the state Democratic central committee, and in his fight on the Tweed ring he opposed leading men of his own party. When the struggle with Tweed closed with the overthrow of the ring and Tweed's imprisonment, Tilden entered the assembly and helped to enact laws to prevent repetition of such a reign of loot. He became governor of New York state in 1874. He gained a nation wide reputation for reform and built up a great political organization. He was master of his party in the greatest state of the Union, so he easily secured the presidential nomination in 1876.

The story of that remarkable campaign is a matter of history and need not be repeated here. After it Tilden passed practically out of public life. But his party frequently sought his advice—the advice of "the Sage of Gramercy park," as he was styled. He declined to permit himself to be again nominated for president in 1880 and in 1884. He withdrew more and more into private life and devoted himself to studious pursuits. His death took place on Aug. 4, 1886. He bequeathed the greater part of his fortune of about $5,000,000 to philanthropic purposes, chiefly for the establishment and endowment of a public library in the city of New York. The will was contested and only about $2,000,000 went to the establishment of the Tilden foundation of the New York Public library.

CHINESE JUNKS.

Their Shape Due to the Whim of Some Ancient Autocrat.

In striking contrast to the modern constitution and government of China are its industrial methods. The leaders of the new republic have succeeded in transforming the land politically, but the every day life of the people remains practically unchanged and the primitive ideals of craftsmanship still persist.

Chief among the industries which have languished for hundreds of years under the blighting influence of an ignorant, tradition bound autocracy is that of shipbuilding. Because some celestial Nero of a bygone age decreed that all ships constructed within the realm should be replicas of his majesty's shoe, the Chinese mercantile marine became a mere swarm of enlarged sampans of weird shape known as junks, and junk they surely are.

While the shipbuilders of Europe and America were gradually progressing from the caraval and the square rigged Indiaman to the clipper ship and later to the iron ship, and its lineal descendant, the modern ocean greyhound, the Chinese—pioneers in many lines of endeavor—continued to build their ridiculous seagoing slippers.

The inferiority of the Chinese upon the sea today is directly traceable to the whim of an almost forgotten ruler of the Flowery Land.—Detroit News.

A GARDEN TRAMP.

Travel of the Smiling Daisy From the Old World to the New.

Tradition has it that from the early garden of Governor John Endicott in Salem, Massachusetts, came what is now perhaps the commonest field flower in the United States. Few persons, writes Grace Tabor in "Old Fashioned Gardening," know that the pestiferous white weed, the jubilant, smiling daisy, is an imported exotic.

From this old dooryard garden it has danced to the music of the east wind straight across the land, up and down the meadows, through the long grass and the short grass, along every highway and every byway. Wherever man has gone it has followed gayly. Often it has driven him completely out of the fields he has made.

That Endicott valued the daisy enough to bring it with him to the new England from the old marks him as a man of taste, for this flower had in ancient days "found its way into the trimmest gardens; the greenswards and arbours were 'powdered' with daisies," and Chaucer wrote of it in superlatives. It is not native to England, either, however, but came from the continent, or perhaps by way of the continent, from an original home still farther east, in northern Asia.

An Elephant's Appetite.

Since the elephant's digestive functions are very rapid it requires a large amount of fodder daily—about 600 pounds in most cases. In its wild state the elephant feeds heartily, but wastefully. It is careful in selecting the few forest trees that it likes for their bark or foliage, but it will tear down branches and leave half of them untouched. It will strip off the bark from other trees and throw away a large portion. As it is a nocturnal animal, it selects its trees by the senses of touch and smell. Its sense of smell is said to be so delicate that wild elephant can wind an enemy at a distance of a thousand yards, and the nerves of its trunk are so sensitive that the smallest substance can be discovered and picked up by its tiny proboscis.—Harper's Weekly.

Stern George Washington.

Etiquette at the White House has never been so severe as in the days of Washington. The first American president had a code of observances drawn up, with which all persons coming into contact with him were expected to make themselves acquainted. He exacted well nigh as much deference as royalty. At receptions he greeted all comers with a stately bow, but never deigned to shake hands, and nobody was allowed to address him until he took the initiative. The gentlemen ushers in attendance were expected to see these rules observed. Washington never visited a private house, and at his own dinner parties the protocol stipulated that "the president does not remain at the table drinking after the cloth is removed."—London Chronicle.

Won a Wife by His Skill.

Action was a Grecian painter of about the time of Alexander, and he won his wife by his great work. He painted a picture called "The Nuptials of Alexander and Roxane," which was exhibited at the Olympic games. It created such a stir that one of the judges cried in admiration, "I reserve crowns for the victorious athletes, but I give my daughter in marriage to the painter Action as a recompense for his picture." Action was one of the artists who excelled in the art of mixing colors. He could not go to the nearest store and purchase them, as artists do today.

The Waning Honeymoon.

"I forgot something," said the husband.

"Yes," pouted the wife, "you forgot to kiss me."

"That may be, but what I came back for was my overshoes."—Kansas City Journal.

Not Deliberate.

Wife—I claim that the story you told me last night when you came home was a deliberate lie! Hub—And I say it wasn't. I never thought up one more quickly in my life!

All I have seen teaches me to trust the Creator for all I have not seen.—Emerson.

Quincy—Nicholas Sprunk to Catherine Sprunk, Ruthven street, Ardell street.

Although two editions of the Daily Ledger were printed Monday to supply the demand, both were sold out early.

STATE HIGHWAY HEARING

An effort is being made to secure the building of a continuous State highway from the City of Boston to the city of Brockton, through Milton, Quincy, Braintree and Holbrook, via Willard street, West Quincy.

Petitions which have been signed by the several officials of the cities and towns mentioned are with the Massachusetts Highway Commission and a hearing will be given Wednesday, February 4, at 2.30, at 15 Ashburton place, Boston.

The route selected is the most conveniently direct over present highways having the least number of heavy grades.

t avoids congested districts, yet serves all interests and will be an important trunk line in connecting with several detached pieces of State Highway south of the City of Brockton, thereby connecting the southeastern part of Massachusetts together with its valuable business enterprises and valuable seashore and summer resort real estate.

ASK FOR WRIT OF MANDAMUS

Against Officials of Democratic City Committee

Members who did not receive notification of the organization meeting of the Democratic City Committee last week will petition the Superior court for an injunction restraining the officers from exercising the duties of the office and ask for a writ of mandamus compelling a new election, according to stories being circulated in West Quincy.

The action is expected to grow out of the meeting of the Ward Four Ward Committee of Sunday afternoon when the committee went on record as being opposed to the present officers of the city committee on the grounds that many members had received no notification of the meeting.

Many claim that the by laws said to have been accepted by the City committee of 1889 which require that each member receive notice of the meeting by registered mail, are still in force that they have not been complied with a public dock built for a few. The granite people are the only ones that desire it, and it was unwise to expend $200,000 for something that did not promise to give the city any interest in return. This $200 seemed a useless expense. If we are to take the land for a dump it was all right and it would be time enough then to learn what the bottom was.

CITY COUNCIL

Councilman Bailey said we cannot act intelligently unless we get at the cost, and it seemed to him that before any move for a public dock should be made we should learn the cost and he thought it advisable to pass this order.

Councilman Little said that the granite business was quite a factor in Quincy and if there is business enough to demand a dock we should give it due consideration. He did not claim that it would pay, but it might be like other enterprises, that some energetic men took hold of that proved profitable. It was worth $200 to find out if this land was suitable.

Councilman Corcoran said that he could not vote intelligently as the city had not decided to build a dock. He asked if this was to get a dock location.

Councilman Ross asked about the $25,000 to be expended by the State in dredging Town river and Councilman Gilliatt replied that as soon as the city secured a site for a dock that the State would expend that amount.

Councilman Nelson said that he had not had time to inform himself on the subject and moved to lay it on the table. Motion lost on rising vote, 8 yes and 10 no.

Councilman Craig thought it foolish to buy land until we knew what kind of land it was. We would make no mistake in making these borings.

Councilman Griffin said the order did not bind the city to anything, but the question had been given considerable consideration, and no mistake would be made to find out what kind of a bottom this land had.

Councilman Carlson said that $200 was not much but he did not believe in this proposition. If the city needs the land for its dump let us take it and we can find out about the bottom later.

Councilman Ericson said the time will come as it had in Boston when the city wanted its water front, and it would find that it had been gobbled up by private interests and the city would have to pay dear for it. We should take a lesson from Boston.

The minority report was then accepted by a large majority on a voice vote and the order was referred to the Finance committee.

NEW LIGHTS WANTED.

Councilman Ericson offered an order for lights on Bay View avenue, Houghs Neck.

Councilman Ross offered orders for cluster lights on Federal avenue and Liberty street.

Councilman Carlson offered orders for lights on River and Apthorp streets.

Councilman Hadlock offered orders for lights on West Squantum street corner of Hancock street.

Councilman Nelson offered an order for a light on Warwick street.

Councilman Williams offered an order for a cluster light corner of East Howard street and Des Moines road and a light on McKinley avenue.

Councilman Craig offered an order for a light on the corner of Madison avenue and Bradford street.

All of the above were referred to the Executive.

Councilman Beeman offered an order for a public hearing Feb. 16, on the petition of the Edmund Van Bever Co. for a license to keep gasoline. Adopted.

BROOKLINE PETITION.

Councilman Griffin offered a resolve requesting the Mayor, and City Solicitor with a committee of three of the City Council to attend the hearing before the Committee oi Metropolitan Affairs of the Legislature and oppose the bill to make Brookline a part of Suffolk county. Adopted. The committee appointed are Councilman Thompson, Nelson and Bailey.

NEW ORDERS.

Councilman Nelson offered an order for the rebuilding of the southerly end of Billings road. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Beeman offered an order for granolithic sidewalks about the Quincy school at Atlantic. To Street Committee.

Councilman Craig offered an order for crosswalks across Water and Franklin streets at Dobles corner, also catch basins at this point. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Gilliatt offered an order accepting Chapter 216 of 1908. Adopted. The acceptance of this act allows the Board of Assesors to apportion sidewalk assesments. Heretofore petitions for such apportionments have had to come to the Council.

Councilman Craig offered an order granting permission to the Sons of St. George to have children appear on the stage Feb. 20. Adopted.

Councilman Griffin offered a resolve endorsing House Bill 1653, which is for the State to build a breakwater along Manet avenue, Houghs Neck. Adopted.

Councilman Craig offered orders calling the special election in Ward Three, March 10 and designating the polling places for the same. Adopted

Councilman Griffin offered a resolve endorsing House Bill 1687 for the State Highway Commission to take Coddington and Sea streets as State Highways. Adopted.

Councilman Griffin offered a resolve endorsing House Bill 795 authorizing the state and City of Quincy to pay the Restelli reward to Patrick Milford and James R. Qualey. Adopted.

Adjourned at 8.55 until Feb. 16.

MISS EDNA MacDONALD.

The funeral of Miss Edna MacDonald the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander MacDonald of Warwick street, Norfolk Downs, was held Saturday at the Sacred Heart church, where requiem high mass was celebrated by the Rev. Fr. John P. Cuffe. There was a large attendance of friends present, including a delegation from the Arrow club, and the Intercolonial club of Roxbury. The pallbearers were, Daniel MacDonald, John Boyd, Burton Trask, Cornelius Collins, Frank Marr and Martin MacDonald.

There was a large profusion of flowers, including a large wreath of carnations from the lady associates of the Intercolonial club, and a large standing cross from the Owl club. The burial was in the family lot at Mt. Wollaston.

ON CHARGE OF LARCENY.

Frank Branland, a Finlander, arrested by Capt. Daniel R. McKay in a Boston hotel Monday evening, on a charge of larceny of $60 at the store of Robert Frederickson on Suomi road, was sentenced to six months in the house of correction by Judge Avery this morning.

Branland, according to the police, reached over the counter and robbed the cash drawer while the proprietor was bringing potatoes from the cellar. He was seen leaning over the counter directly opposite the cash drawer by a young girl of the neighborhood, and the loss was discovered after he had left the store on the run.

Capt. McKay was assigned to the case by Chief of Police Burrell on Jan. 22, the morning after the theft was reported to headquarters. He secured a description of the man accused and while making a search for him Monday night saw him at the bar in a Boston hotel. He was easily recognized because of tatooing on his right hand.

When approached by Capt McKay he denied that he had ever been in Quincy, but later admitted that he had eaten dinner several times at a lunch room at Brewers corner. His testimony was given through an interpreter and he stoutly maintained that he was not guilty. Judge Avery asked several questions relative to method employed by Capt. McKay in locating his man.

At the meeting of Mount Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., this week, the initiatory will be worked by past grands of the lodge, brothers who have passed through the chairs. Past Grand Charles H. Wood will be the degree master, and the ex-officials will give the kids a few pointers.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Mayor Miller Having Plans Made for New Office

Mayor Miller is attending the hearing this afternoon before the Massachusetts Highway Commission on the acceptance of Willard street as a State highway. A large number of citizens also attended this hearing, which will be reported by the Daily Ledger tomorrow.

Tomorrow afternoon the Mayor will attend the hearing or rather conference before the Public Service Commission on the matter of abolishing the grades at Saville and Water streets. Just what the conference is for, no one seems to know. There is a rumor, however that the railroad in view of the present financial condition desire to postpone indefinitely the abolishing of all grade crossings.

The Mayor was asked this morning if he had made any appointment to the Board of Assessors in place of Thomas Swithin. In reply he said that he had not been officially notified that Mr. Swithin would not serve and therefore could not appoint anyone else. He said that all he knew about it was what he had read in the newspapers, and they could not always be believed.

The Mayor is having plans made for a new office at City Hall. The small inadequate Mayor's office has never been satisfactory to any of the Mayors and Mayor Miller announced the first day he took office that he would make a change at an early date. Just what he will do, has not been definitely decided but if the present plan is carried out the office now used by the City Engineer will be fitted for a Mayor's office and the room used by the Mayor will be used as an office for the City Solicitor.

There will be doors connecting the office of the Mayor with that of the City Solicitor so that it will be possible to go direct from the City Clerk's office into the Mayor's office without going into the corridor. There will also be a door leading from the City Messenger's office into the Mayor's office as well as into the office of the City Solicitor.

If this change is made the City Engineer iwll be moved to the basement in room 11, now used by the Mayor's clerk and by the Managers of Public Burial Places. As this Board meets but once a month, their desk will probably be moved into the room now occupied by the Inspector of Buildings as there is plenty of room there for it. It is probable that something definite will be decided in a few days.

The Mayor said that he had visited the Central Fire Station and that some needed repairs would be made there so as to provide for a new office for the Chief. The Chief, he said, desired more permanent men and claims that the department is handicapped for men. With the one day off in five for the permanent men and with the time taken for meals ,there are certain hours of the day when there is just one man for each piece of apparatus. And it is obvious that in case of a fire at that time the department would be seriously handicapped. It is more than probable that the City Council may be asked to give the department from three to five additional permanent men

The United States Engineers office will give a hearing at the Council chamber, City Hall, Thursday morning on the complaint about delays in the opening of the drawbridge at Quincy. The hearing will be held at 11.30 and is in response to a complaint of a street car passenger.

FALSE ALARM FOR NEW CHIEF

New Orders Issued As to Runs of the Steamer

Chief Billings answered to his first bell alarm as Chief of the Fire department Tuesday night at 9.40, when an alarm was sounded from Box 161, located on Newport avenue, near the iron foundry. The alarm however proved to have been false. Th erecall sounded in a few minutes.

Chief Billings has ordered the steamer to leave quarters on evry alarm, f the box is some distance from the Central station the orders to the driver of the steamer are to start at a slow pace so that if after the chief arrives and finds that this piece of apparatus is needed it can get there quickly. The plan under Chief Litchfield was for the steamer to respond only to certain boxes, and if it was found to be needed on other boxes the steamer call would be sounded, and if the run was a long one the horses would be tired out by the time they arrived. Now, however, the steamer starts at a slow pace and if not needed the horses are not used up, and if wanted it is on the scene.

NEW CITY APPOINTEES

City Engineer Sargent the Only Official Retained

A brief introduction of the city officials appointed by Mayor Miller on Monday will be of interest:

ASSESSOR BERGFORS.

Eric G. Bergfors the new member of the Board of Assessors was born in Sweden in 1863 and came to Quincy in 1884. He learned the trade of a carpenter in his native town and this business he has since followed. Some years ago he entered the building business for himself and during the past few years has built many houses in Quincy, among his buildings being the Swedish Congregational church on Garfield street.

CITY ENGINEER SARGENT.

Probably no appointment gives more general satisfaction than that of Mr. Sargent to the position which he has held for several years. It is very doubtful if many outside of city officials understand the importance of the office of City Engineer and what a valuable asset it is to the city. Had the Mayor heeded the advice of certain gentlemen, who have since cancelled their friendship with him, he would have abolished this office, and he would later have realized what a serious mistake had been made. It is in this office that all data in regard to streets is kept, and it was this office that made the survey and later the plans which have proved so valuable to the Assessors. He also does work for the Tax Collector and other repartments.

Mr. Sargent although a native of Concord, N. H., has been a resident of Quincy for many years. He was born in 1874 and came to Quincy when quite young. He received his education in the public schools and at the Adams Academy and Massachusetts Institute of Technology where he was graduated as a civil engineer. He entered the office of City Engineer Flood and when that official was removed by Mayor Shea, Mr. Sargent was appointed his successor and has filled the position ever since.

He has given much of his time to his office work, outside of the regular hours, and it is no uncommon thing to find him at work evenings upon city matters, so that he might be called an official who devotes on an average more than 16 hours a day to his office.

He is affiliated with Rural Masonic lodge and St. Stephen's Royal Arch Chapter and the Boston Society of Civil Engineers.

NEW REGISTRAR.

Joseph B. Grossman appointed as registrar of voters for three years to succeed Henry W. French, whose term expires on April 1, will probably be the youngest city official, for he is but a little over 21 years of age. Although of Hebrew parentage he was born in Quincy in July 15, 1892. He received his education in the public schools of Quincy completing his education at the Quincy branch of the Plymouth business college. Leaving school he was employed for a time with his father, but latter accepted a position in the office of the Lavers Granite Co., where he is now located. He has always worked for the interest of the Republican party and cast his first vote last November. He was a hard worker for the election of Mayor Miller. Aside from his business in the office of the Lavers Granite Co., he has done quite a little in the way of writing for newspapers, keeping the public informed on what

NOW A STATE WIDE GO-TO-CHURCH SUNDAY

Quincy Churches Pleased to Co-operate and Observe Sunday, February 8

Ministers Note Increase in Interest Since January 11

This appears to be a time of wide spread and growing interest in the work of the churches. Never before in this generation has there been so spontaneous and general a movement in this direction. Not only those officially connected with the various churches have taken an active part in promoting this impulse, but public men have interested themselves in it as something of vital importance to our democratic institutions.

Though William H. Taft is no longer the head of the nation, his views of life and duty still appear to command the respect of the American public. Not long ago he uttered a warning to the effect that unless there was a return to the old-fashioned custom of attending church there would be no hope for the future of the institutions of the country. That admonition seems to have been somewhat widely accepted as the voice of a prophet. There has been a response to it that has probably surprised him quite as much as anyone else. Far and near there has been started a movement for a "Go-to-Church" Sunday, and in various cities throughout the country special dates were set and the people urged to go to church. In each of these individual cases the response to such appeals has been so general that many of the churches had upon that particular Sunday larger congregations than had been seen there for years.

In Quincy, the second Sunday in January was set as the day for such general observance. The result was reported in the Daily Ledger at the time, and not only did it show the same generous and surprising response here as in other cities, but reports of attendance in our churches on each Sunday since January 11 show a large increase over the usual congregations.

Under the stimulus of this reaction both the ministers and the laity of the different churches seem to be taking hold with new hope and courage, and consequently the churches have assumed greater interest to those who heretofore have found them rather dull and unattractive. It is quite possible that the effect of this mutual stimulus will be to bring the churches into closer relations with the present needs of the people at large, while on the other hand those who for some time have been indifferent or neutral will be more and more attracted to the churches until at last they come to feel a common sense of responsibility with the few who have been carrying the burden alone.

As a general thing we have little faith in the appointment of special days for special responsibilities. We do not believe that "clean-up" days, "fire prevention" days and the like accomplish much, but in this case the indications are that the results will be more lasting. Doubtless were there a general popular attendance for a few weeks sufficient interest might be aroused in many minds to effect a continuance. It is a good habit, to put it on no higher ground. It sets a good example and good examples are none too common. Doubtless if more people went to church we should have better business methods, cleaner politics, and less sensational news sheets Monday morning.

Following the encouraging results in particular cities like Quincy, the State Federation of Churches in Massachusetts has decided to make next Sunday, Feb. 8, a State-wide "Go-to-Church-Sunday;" and the Ministerial Association of this city, recognizing the loyal work already done by the people of the several churches,as well as the business men and the newspapers of the city, in fostering this movement, have voted to co-operate with the State Federation in the plan for a State wide observance of the day.

The Daily Ledger most heartily joins in recommending the plan, and hopes that all those who went to the churches on January 11, will go again next Sunday and continue to go,and urge others to go with them. It cannot fail to be a good thing for all concerned.

NOTICE

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

It must be an awful temptation to John D. to go to work in Mr. Ford's factory.

President Wilson writes such short messages that the Congressmen can no longer get a hair cut and shave while they are being read.

The trusts don't object much to the cut of their new style government suits, but they want the pockets just as numerous and deep as ever.

T. R. keeps on hunting in South America, although there is so much better shooting on the Mexican game trails now.

It seems likely that employers will have to share their profits, and they must also learn to live on their losses.

It is admitted that every one should have a winter vacation, even if people have to overwork themselves sick to get it.

The United States is considered an agricultural country, yet it has to import food from abroad. But so far the farmers are able to raise enough to feed themselves.

Thee is a growing suspicion in Wall street that some of the big and fierce bogeymen it has been seeing are only scarecrows stuffed with straw.

The people who feel in danger from Harry Thaw will probably be perfectly safe if they remain within the confines of New York state.

FROM MILLIONS TO NOTHING.

The head of a chain of dry goods enterprises, a number of which failed a short time ago, testified that though he was recently a millionaire and drew $4000 a month from his stores now he hasn't a cent. How characteristic such a story of reverses is of our up and down American life.

The American temperament takes bankruptcy rather easily, too much so, no doubt. Unless fraud can be proved, it is rare that harsh things are said. A failure is regarded as more or less of an incident, simply an experiment that did not work, but which may leave a fellow wiser and more competent to succeed another time. Even the creditors often feel pretty good natured. Perhaps they have made more money than if the debtor had all along pursued a policy of safe conservatism.

Theoretically the man who has failed is supposed to be crushed by the contrast between his former luxury and his present deprivation. Actually the creditors rarely take away the basic comforts of life. They feel that the debtor is a good spender, and there is money in his carcass for them yet. They would rather have his friendship than his bottom dollar. Fortune's wheel turns quickly in this country.

The business world would go along more smoothly if business men were content to keep wider margins of safety. The average creditor may not suffer greatly from such a failure, if past profits are figured in. But there are always weak spots where one failure drags in a train of others, where the shaky concern is forced to the wall by the loss of a single credit.

The lesson of these mischances should be clear to the average business man. It happens over and over again that millions of apparently solid assets have to be sold for a song, simply because creditors want their money and won't wait. A business is strong only when it has quick assets in a liquid form, enough to pay the debts that may be called for in a hurry.

GET ARMS FROM UNITED STATES

Proclamation Restoring Rights to Both Huerta and Rebels

WILSON LIFTS TAFT EMBARGO

Contending Factions In Mexico May Now Equip Armies In This Country —President, After Long Study of Situation, Believes It Only Way to Bring About Peace

Washington, Feb. 4.—President Wilson, by an executive order dated yesterday and made public at the White House last night, removed all restrictions against the exportation of munitions of war into Mexico from the United States, placing the contending elements on a basis of equality with respect to the purchase of arms and supplies in this country.

The executive order emphasized that it was the desire of the United States to be in the same position of neutrality toward the contending factions in Mexico as were the other powers.

Accompanying the order the White House issued the following statement of explanation:

"The executive order under which the exportation of arms and ammunition into Mexico is forbidden was a departure from the accepted practices of neutrality—a deliberate departure from those practices under a well-considered joint resolution of congress determined upon in circumstances which have now ceased to exist.

"It was intended to discourage incipient revolts against the regularly constituted authorities of Mexico. Since that order was issued the circumstances of the case have undergone a radical change.

"There is now no constitutional government in Mexico, and the existence of this order hinders and delays the very thing the government of the United States is now insisting upon, namely, that Mexico shall be left free to settle her own affairs and as soon as possible put them upon a constitutional footing by her own force and counsel. The order is, therefore, rescinded."

American embassies and legations abroad were instructed last Saturday to inform foreign governments of the above decision. Similarly, Secretary Bryan late Monday informed the members of the diplomatic corps here.

This was in line with the policy of the present administration of keeping the nations of the world informed of developments in the Mexican policy.

The president's decision was reached after many months of careful study of the arms problem, and while in the first instance the belief of the administration was that the denial of arms was a humane act the conviction has grown upon the Washington government that its policy had operated inequally toward the warring factions.

The administration believes that to permit the situation to drift along would be merely contributing to an incessant struggle with additional bloodshed. It has been urged by many administration supporters that the removal of the embargo would in reality shorten the contest and bring it to a quick conclusion, thus decreasing bloodshed.

President Taft issued the proclamation which barred the exportation of arms to all sides on March 14, 1912. He did that under the authority of a joint congressional resolution which empowered the President of the United States to take such action whenever he should find that "in any American country conditions of domestic violence exist which are promoted by the use of arms and munitions of war procured from the United States."

WOMEN RUSH TO REGISTER

Two Hundred Thousand May Vote at Next Chicago Election

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Women citizens of Chicago turned out in full strength to take advantage of their first opportunity to register as voters. Perfect weather favored a large registration, and estimates vary from 150,000 to 200,000.

The requirement that women registering must state their ages, which was expected to be a cause of some awkwardness, proved to have been overrated as a stumbling block. Women gave their ages nonchalantly.

Mistakes of women were few, and in the opinion of many of the judges and clerks were no greater than mistakes which have been made by men on every registration day.

LOST HEAVILY ON FAIRS

Assignee Says Rockingham Park Will Be Sold at Auction

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 4.—Frank M. Andrews of this city, assignee of a mortgage of $100,000 on Rockingham park at Salem, N. H., previously held by Edward F. Searles, which has been foreclosed, announced the property would be sold at public auction.

Andrews places the liabilities of the company at $229,623.15. He says an auditor's report of the accounts of the concern show that $33,000 was lost on the Rockingham fair in 1912 and $18,000 on the 1913 fair.

DIED OF NATURAL CAUSES

Finding of Bridgeport Coroner In the Case of Mrs. Cross

Bridgeport, Conn., Feb. 4.—According to information received by Coroner Phelan, the stomach of Mrs. H. A. Cross, the wealthy New York woman who died last month, and whose death has been investigated, contained less than a grain of codeine.

This coincides with the testimony of Mrs. Mary T. Luquer, her nurse. The coroner said his finding would be "death from natural causes."

Mrs. Cross died last November at her home here. When her will was probated, her sons, William T. and Ferdinand L. Cross, appealed from the probating, alleging incompetency and undue influence. Other allegations were also made, the suspicion of foul play was raised and the body exhumed.

The finding of the coroner eliminates this last suspicion, but certain evidence is said to have been presented at the inquest which it is thought may affect proceedings of the will contest.

HIGH LIVING AT POOR FARM

Items of Luxury Said to Be Included In "Necessities of Life"

Barre, Vt., Feb. 4.—Such "stern necessities of life" as Florida water at $1 a bottle, candy, peanut butter, grape fruit at two for 25 cents, native and tropical fruit in and out of season, have been purchased at the highest market prices at the city's expense for the matron and nine inmates of the city poor farm, according to a report of the charity committee of the board of aldermen.

A member of the committee said that through loose methods in buying supplies and gross extravagance by the officials in charge of the poor farm from $800 to $1000 of the city's money has been wasted in the last few months.

A sweeping investigation by the committee resulted in the disclosures. It is hinted that the matron will be asked to resign.

POISON FOUND IN MRS. GRONDIN'S BODY

Preliminary Hearing of Husband Is Begun at Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 4.—John H. Grondin, formerly of Waterville, Me., chemist, accused of wife murder, appeared for preliminary hearing in police court. Hyman Stockey, a medical school pathologist, testified for the state that he had found poison in Mrs. Grondin's body.

Grondin was arrested two weeks ago. His wife was found dead in October with a gas tube in her mouth. A "suicide note," purporting to have been signed by her, was held by handwriting experts to have been a forgery.

Grondin, after a few days in jail, said the detectives had taken him at midnight to the room where his wife died, and that a white robed "ghost" was paraded before him, the police doing this, he said, with hope of securing a confession.

ASKS $500,000 DAMAGES

Woman Sues Rich Young Man For Alleged Breach of Promise

New York, Feb. 4.—Octavio Guinle, a wealthy young Brazilian and member of a New York exporting firm, was arrested here in an action brought by Miss Monica P. Borden to recover $500,000 for alleged breach of promise of marriage. Guinle, who was later released in $50,000 bail, was to have been married to Miss Borden yesterday, she asserts.

Miss Borden declares in her complaint that after promising to marry her, and going as far as to have the banns published and the date set for the wedding, the young man had made preparations to leave the country, complying in this with the cabled wish of his mother.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

INDICTMENT OF A CUSTOM

Rufus B. Tobey Replies to Henry B. Sheahan

Editor Daily Ledger:

Mr. Sheahan's interpretation of my letter is so utterly wide of the mark, and so misleading, that I reluctantly break over my rule not to reply to communications.

As a matter of fact my former letter was marked "private" and I did not imagine the Ledger would publish it in full, since it was confidential. My only object was to protest against the displacement on the Board of Trustees of the Library of such competent gentlemen as Messrs. Smith and Hearn, both of whom were filling admirably their positions on the Board.

Briefly, let me say that if I intended to malign the memory of the dead, as Mr. Sheahan states, it was simply brutal, and to make this accusation against me is unjust and false.

All I stated was an indictment of a custom which has prevailed for too long a time, of displacing men who have labored hard to fulfill their duties, and yet who were displaced without any regard to its effect upon the efficiency of the Library. My sentiments on this point are even stronger than when I wrote my previous letter.

When I am accused by certain readers of Mr. Sheahan's letter of charging previous Trustees, now gone home to their reward, with dishonesty, I feel myself both injured and insulted, and I hasten to assure the friends of the gentlemen whose names Mr. Sheahan marshalled, that I am not so far lost to all decency as to be guilty of such a contemptible act.

An analysis of the membership of the Trustees for the last ten years will show that a majority served only a short term. Part of these were not re-appointed and part of them died in the harness. Certain others through ill health could give only of their limited powers to their work.

In consequence of this I will simply repeat what I previously stated, that in many important respects Library matters were in such shape as to need the persistent and determined efforts given to put them on an efficient business basis.

Personally, I do not claim any large share in bringing about the high grade of the work at the opening of this year, but without calling names, I have the authority of others who have been in close touch with the Library work for some years for statements I made.

I might say right here that I was summoned to the telephone Saturday evening by a former Trustee, whom I never have met personally, who assured me that my letter stated the truth, and he would back me up in it. Let me add that he is a business man whose Trusteeship was terminated by his removal from the city.

I will stand censure for my protest against displacement of well tried men with new men on the Board of Trustees, but resent with all my might the accusation that I intended to reflect upon the character of the good men and true whom Mr. Sheahan asserts I maligned.

It may be because Mr. Sheahan is anxious again to get on the Board of Trustees, as is currently reported, that he allowed himself to characterize me so unjustly. Or it may be that he was unduly influenced by the person whom he consulted several times before preparing his article. But this interests me far less than my anxiety to justify myself.

PAST GRANDS WORK DEGREE

Creditable Exemplification at Mount Wollaston Lodge

During the thirty years of Mount Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., since its re-organization in 1884, it has had over fifty presiding officers. Several of these have died, but over twenty, responded for Past Grand's night on Tuesday evening. They had been asked to give an exemplification of the initiatory work, and this they did very creditably under the direction of Past Grand Charles H. Wood.

Without exception all the stations were filled by former presiding officers the list including two of the charter members of the lodge, Past Grand Tobias H. Burke and Frank F. Prescott. The officers for the ocasion were:

Noble Grand—Abel Gomez.
Vice Grand—Archibald Macleod.
Past Grand—Charles E. Harwood.
Chaplain—James Moorhead, Jr.
Conductor—Charles B. Tilton.
Warden—Frank W. Flowers.
R. S. N. G.—Edward L Goodridge
L S. N. G—Mathew Swanson
R S. V. G.—Alexander Shirley.
L. S. V. G.—D. Edward MacDonald.
Inside Guardian—Charles S. Jones
Outside Conductor—George N. Fisher.

Tableaux—Tobias H. Burke, Frank F. Prescott, Albert Clark and Charles H. Wood.

R. S. S.—Thomas J. Smith.
L. S. S.—Aubrey R. Keith.

A well known young man was initiated into the mysteries of Odd Fellowship, and the work of the past grands was frequently applauded.

Under the good of the order plans were discussed for the 30th anniversary of Mount Wollaston lodge on March 10, 1914 and the campaign for new members. The annual ball of the lodge will be held March 12.

BIRTHDAY OF ADAMS CHAPTER

One of the most enjoyable of many meetings held by Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution was that of Monday at the birthplace of President John Adams. It was the regular monthly meeting and also the 18th birthday of the chapter, hence the entertainment was more elaborate than usual.

A chafing dish luncheon was served at one o'clock, two tables being laid for twelve each. Mrs. Nelson V. Titus, regent of the chapter and Miss Harriet B. Pierce presided at the chafing dishes at one table and Mrs. Francis F. Brewer and Mrs. Charles Wilson at the other, serving chicken and oysters. Besides the chafing dish viands there were hot rolls, coffee, olives, home made cake, cookies and candies. The committee for the luncheon were Mrs. Walter E. Piper, Mrs. Frank F. Prescott, Mrs. George T. Magee, Mrs. E. G. Pratt.

The after dinner speaking was most informal. Mrs. Titus the regent cordially welcomed members and guests to the birthday feast saying in part:

"For 18 years the Adams Chapter have gathered here in this old house, so rich in memories of the past.

"We do not know, we cannot tell
Who built this house and built it well,
Its ancient rafters, massive frame
Do not the maker's name proclaim.

In fancy we can look around
To view the well-remembered Farm
And fields, where in his childhood plays
The young John Adams passed his days.

Within that quiet ingle nook
Busy with spindle wheel and book,
We may again in fancy see
The tiny infant on her knee.

While the young mother looks askance
Upon the highway just without,
While hastily the shutters close
To keep out view of passing foes.

We know not of her daily life
Its patient toil mid scenes of strife,
When amid the dread of wars alarms
Our brave New England marched to arms.

"To keep alive these memories Adams Chapter was organized Jan. 27 1896 at the home of Miss Annie L. Prescott and for 18 years we have labored here diligently to keep alive the memories of the patriotic men and women who struggled so nobly to assist in the great struggle for independence of the Colonies from the hated British Rule with their lives and fortunes. In this band of brave men and women, John Adams and his wife Abigail Adams stand forth like stars shining in a dark night encouraging all by their sturdy patriotism and heroic courage.

"The work of Adams Chapter during the past 18 years is so well known that it hardly needs reviewing, except to recall briefly the building of the cairn upon Penn's hill, where upon memorable days in June the chapter erected the cairn to mark the spot where Mrs. Abigail Adams with her son John Quincy Adams then a boy of 7 by her side, watched the smoke of burning Charlestown, while listening to the guns of Bunker Hill 17 June 1775.

"The next event to be recalled was the flag raising at the old house, when the new flag pole was erected by the chapter.

"Many other pleasant events may be recalled but time fails—during the past 18 years some of our members have left us for immortality among others to be mentioned is Miss Elizabeth Adams the granddaughter of John Adams, who so dearly loved the chapter and was so deeply interested in its welfare. Intensely patriotic herself—she should never be forgotten by the chapter members.

"So for 18 years we have met here together doing such patriotic work as has been given to us to do—welcoming here the stranger and passing guests within our gates. Ours is the task to guard and care for this ancient house as faithfully in the future as we have done in the past, so as the years pass on and other hands than ours take up the task, it may be said of us,

"We shall not be missed if others succeed us
To reap down the fields that in spring we have sown,
He who plowed and who sowed is not missed by the Reaper
He is only remembered by what he has done.

"Needs then the page of the law written record
The name and the epitaph graved on the stone?
The things we have lived for let these be our story,
We, ourselves, but remembered by what we have done.

"So in closing, dear friends, what shall I say to you all on our eighteenth birthday? I wish you joy, I wish you wealth and may you ever enjoy good health. So success to you all, is what I would say, to this, add the hope may we all meet here again on our next birthday."

Mrs. Charles M. Chase of the Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter, D. A. R. responded for her chapter; Miss Prescott one of the founders and charter members of Adams Chapter responded briefly, and cheers and good wishes were extended various active members for past work for the chapter.

The afternoon was passed in a social game of cards four tables being in play.

STATE FEDERATION AT DORCHESTER

By invitation of the Dorchester Woman's club the midwinter meeting of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's clubs will be held at the Second church, Codman square, Dorchester on Friday. The morning session will open at 10 o'clock. The legislative department will present legislative measures recommended by the executive board for the endorsement of the federation. Hon. W. Cameron Forbes will make an address.

At the afternoon session at 2 o'clock, Miss Angela Morgan will read from her own verse. Norman Hapgood eidtor of Harper's Weekly will speak on the topic "The Social Significance of Contemporary Fiction and Drama."

Box luncheon will be eaten at noon, hot coffee being provided at a nominal price. Brown tickets will be necessary for admission and members of the various Quincy clubs should provide themselves with the tickets which may be obtained from the corresponding secretaries of their clubs. There should be a large attendance as the meeting is near home and promises to be an interesting one.

Codman square is at the junction of Washington Centre and Norfolk streets, not far from the Dorchester Woman's clubhouse.

MUSICALE OF WOLLASTON CLUB

A musicale of merit formed the program for the regular meeting of the Wollaston Woman's club in the Park and Downs church Tuesday evening.

The contributing artists were James D. D. Comey, organist of the Commonwealth avenue Baptist church of Boston; Mrs. Rose Thayer Thomas of Boston, soprano; Miss Marion L. Moorhouse of Wollaston, 'cellist and Mrs. Edith Barry of Quincy accompanist.

The business session, at which the president, Mrs. Arthur D. Ropes presided, opened with the reports of the secretary, Miss Fanny L. Johnson, and the treasurer, Mrs. Charles M. Bryant.

The death of a club member, Mrs. Carrie L. Couchier, was mentioned. A New Years greeting, sent from Shanghai, China was received from Mrs. William M. Chase, who is accompanying her husband on a trip around the world.

Mrs. Arthur D. Ropes and Mrs. Percy L. Davidson were appointed delegates to the State Federation meeting in Dorchester on Friday. It was voted that the chair appoint a committee to meet with the Quincy Women's club to consider the matter of a city federation.

Mrs. Willard E. Keyes, chairman of the Education committee, announced guest tickets available for the members of the Current Events class for the meeting to be held on the afternoon of February 23.

The program of the evening was a most enjoyable one and opened with organ selections by Mr. Comey. Mr. Comey's part of the program consisted of three groups all well rendered and loudly applauded. They included: the introduction and chorale of "Suite Gothique," "Minuet Gothique" by Boellmann, "Prayer in Notre Dame," "En Bateau" by Debussy, "Meditation" by Sturgis, "Liebesfrend" by Kreisler, "The Answer" by Wolstenholm, "Andantino" by Widor and "March Pontificale" by Lemmens which brought the evening to a close.

The soprano solos of Mrs. Thomas were very pleasing the rich contralto quality and full tones of the voice adding much to the evenings enjoyment. Her numbers included "La Forza del destino" by Verdi, "In Autumn" and "Spring Song" by O. Weil. For an encore she sang "Annie Laurie" which made one of the most distinct impressions of the entire program.

Miss Moorhouse, a local artist of wide note, gave much pleasure as usual and her renditions brought forth well deserved applause. Her contributions included; "Hungarian Rhapsody" by Kletzer, "The Swan" by Saint Saens and "Tarantella" by Cossman.

The proceeds from the sale of guest tickets went to the endowment fund of the general federation of women's clubs.

COUGH TWO YEARS OLD

Yields to Vinol. Read Why.

Strong vigorous men and women hardly ever catch cold; it's only when the system is run down and vitality low that colds and coughs get a foothold.

Now isn't it reasonable that the right way to cure a cough is to build up your run down condition again?

Mrs. D. A. McGee of Waycross, Ga., says: "I had a chronic cold and cough which kept me awake nights for two years and I felt tired all the time. Vinol cured my cough and I feel stronger in every way."

The reason Vinol is so efficacious in such cases is because it contains in a delicious concentrated form all the medicinal curative elements of cod liver oil, with tonic, blood building iron added.

Chronic coughs and colds yield to Vinol because it builds up the weakened, run-down system.

You can get your money back any time if Vinol does not do all we say.

The Y .M. C. A. Employed Boys basket ball team will play the crack Cambridge Pirates tonight at 7.30 in the local "gym." The following players will compose the team: Forwards Osberg, Sullivan and Robertson; centers, Eastman and Hall; backs, Gronberg, Thompson and Beaton.

Costa, with Bernard Burke as his partner, has issued a challenge to the winners of the Ross and Olindy vs. Smith Bros. match on Thursday evening. Beyond a question the winners will take up the challenge. The coming match has created much enthusiasm among the rollers.

Manager William H. Flynn of the Quincy A. A. basket ball team, in a statement issued Tuesday night, corrects the impression formed by many fans that his team had been denied the use of Alpha hall for the opening game. Mr. Flynn says that to the contrary Col. Henry L. Kincaide expected the game to be played there, but owing to a delay in the delivery of paraphernalia to be used for the protection of windows and lights it would have been impossible to have fitted up the hall until a late hour. Rather than keep a large crowd of fans waiting he took advantage of the Y. M. C. A. court through the hospitality of A. F. Bromley.

Manager Flynn has Hibernian hall in shape for the game Thursday night between the Quincys and St. Alphunsus. Two new faces will be in the lineup, Eddie Hoyt and Matt Cummings, in place of Clinton Scollard and Putt Kelly, both of whom will pass up the game this season.

The basket ball game at High school Friday between Quincy and Brockton means much to the student body since Arthur Staff, a former Quincy High coach, has the visitors in charge. Quincy has beaten his football team and expects to beat his quintette. It is probable that the game will be witnessed by the largest gathering of rooters of the season.

Frank Gillis, one of the best known third baseman on the South Shore who was operated upon for blood poisoning in the right arm is gradually recovering. It will be a month or more before he will be able to use his arm. The infection will not probably affect his throwing. Gillis is known in base ball circles at the "boy with the whip."

Once again the ranks of the basket ball squad at Quincy High school has been invaded by mumps. The victim this time is Paige, a forward on the first team. Whet Brown has but recently recovered and is reporting for practice with the second team.

Next Tuesday night the first and second place teams roll against each other, and if the Averyites drop four points a tie for first place will result between that five and the Sullivans.

SCHOOL QUICKLY EMPTIED

Value of Fire Drill Is Demonstrated In Boston Building

Boston, Feb. 4.—Six hundred boy students of the Wendell Phillips grammar school marched out of the building in less than 2½ minutes. The efficiency of the fire drill was shown, as the boys left the school in an orderly manner and were not aware there was a fire inside until the apparatus came along.

Flames broke out in a dressing room on the third floor, when matches in a pocket of a coat owned by a student became ignited. A teacher had the fire drill sounded and a fire alarm was sent in.

Students in the school believed they were to go through a practice drill when the gong sounded. They lined up quickly and marched down stairways and out into the street. They were surprised a few minutes later to see the firemen coming.

Janitor Collary threw the blazing clothing out of windows, and the fire was put out before the firemen arrived.

NEW YORK'S IDLE MEN

Number More Than 325,000, but Conditions May Soon Improve

New York, Feb. 4.—More than 325,000 men in New York city are trying to find employment, according to a report just completed by the bureau of employment of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor.

The association's total exceeds by 225,000 the figures reported by the state excise department recently for the "homeless unemployed" of the city. Furthermore, the association significantly points out that its statistics represent for the most part men who have homes and families to support.

Conditions will grow better within about six weeks, according to Superintendent Hopkins, who said he had been assured by the managers of large construction companies, as well as by representatives of the cloak and suit industry, that thousand of workers would be recalled about the middle of next month.

NOT CAPABLE OF BEING EXAMINED

Mousseau Breaks Down From Hunger and Sleep Strike

Quebec, Feb. 4.—J. O. Mousseau, who recently resigned as member of the legislative assembly after a charge of bribery in connection with legislation had been preferred against him, has begun a "hunger strike" and a "sleep strike," and is in a condition bordering on unconsciousness, according to testimony given the assembly's special investigating committee by Dr. DeMartigny of Montreal, who was called during the committee's efforts to learn why Mousseau had not responded to a subpoena.

DeMartigny said Mousseau was neither capable of appearing before the committee nor being examined at his home. It was said it might be months before his condition would improve sufficiently for him to be questioned. It might be that Mousseau would not recover from the shock recently experienced, said the witness.

There was a series of explosions, the walls bulging and falling outward, scattering bricks and debris in all directions. The property was owned by former Senator Crane and his brother Zenas.

Maguire is held on the charge of murder.

HIS EDUCATION

It Was In Two Lines, Both Valuable

By JOHN TURNLEE

Tom Ainsworth was for many years a prospector in western gold fields. He missed several chances to make a fortune on account of not being able to analyze the dirt he took out of his holes. He was not even ordinarily educated. On one occasion he took a specimen of ore to a chemist for an assay and was told that there was no gold in it. A few days later a man came along and offered Ainsworth $100 for his claim. Tom's wife was ill at the time, and his boy, Charley, was without a decent suit of clothes. The offer was accepted and a deed to the property passed. It turned out that the chemist had found some gold in the specimen he had assayed and had bought the property through another. The mine turned out a bonanza.

This is a specimen of the way Tom Ainsworth got swindled. Nevertheless most of the time he kept his son at school, and when the boy came to be seventeen years old his father determined to send him to college. Charlie had not shown much proficiency in his studies, but had manifested a fancy for science. He was fond of hunting and climbing and all out of door sports, besides constantly wondering why some rocks lay flat and others stood up on end. His father thought he saw in this the material for making a mining engineer, and with a son to advise him on his digging operations he might yet strike and hold on to a bonanza.

So Charlie went away to college. His father feared that his taste for out of door sports would overtop his desire to learn and during his son's college course kept himself informed as to what Charlie was doing. The first news of an honor conferred on his boy was disappointing. Instead of being given for an essay on some chemical subject, it was an appointment as pitcher of the university baseball team.

Charley spent most of his time for two years in college attending to athletics and neglecting his studies. Then, being two years older than when he entered, he grew ashamed of himself. He was a practical chap at bottom and began to look at the subject practically.

His main object was to set himself right with his father. What was the surest way? He decided to leave the academical department of the university and enter a school of mines. To mining engineering he devoted himself as exclusively as he had to athletics and after taking his degree returned to his home, ready for an application of what he had learned.

"I forgive you, Charley," said his father, "for the time wasted in pitchin' balls, considerin' what you done in larnin' about mines."

"You can't tell, father," replied Charley, "what's going to be most useful to a fellow in this world. During those two years I was practicing those curves I was laying the foundation for good health, though I'll admit that it was the scientific reasons for the curves that interested me more than the physical exercise."

"Reckon that was it, Charley. You was always wonderin' why things was so."

Charley Ainsworth began to practice his profession about the time that gold was discovered in a new region, and nothing would do but that the family must pick up, bag and baggage, and seek its fortune in the latest opened territory. Mrs. Ainsworth, who had been with her husband through several experiences in nearby discovered gold fields and knew that the people in them were like a large pack of dogs fighting for a very few bones, was loath to go, but the men of the family overruled her.

Charley, whose muscles seemed to crave exertion, resolved to suspend professional work for others and give himself solely to repaying his father for the education he had given him. So the two went to work with pick and shovel, and Tom Ainsworth found that what he had always believed about the importance of his own assaying was true. Charley could form opinions from the character of the rocks and the soil, the way they lay together and their tilt, which were very valuable. Besides, he could assay any specimens they suspected of being valuable and get the result at once without going to an assayer, who might deceive them. So the old man was happy, even if they did not discover a mine.

Whether from Charley's knowledge of minerals or from sheer luck, a very valuable piece of property was struck by the two men. Charley one day assayed some ore from a new opening, and it turned out very handsomely. Moreover, the vein from which it was taken opened instead of closed as they dug down. They kept their secret; but, as ill luck would have it, the parties digging on the next claim struck a continuation of the same vein, but at its end. Following it toward the Ainsworth property, they found that it opened in that direction, showing that, though their own property was of little value, that of their neighbors was liable to be a bonanza.

These neighbors were three toughs, named Harding, Murphy and Gunn. They resolved to drive off Tom and Charley Ainsworth, hoping to do so before they should discover the value of their property, for if they knew of the vein they possessed they might fortify themselves; if they did not know it they might be easily frightened into abandoning it. If the three men could not scare the owners they might kill them in a free fight, which would be lawful in that lawless country, though murder was apt to be punished by a vigilance committee.

Meanwhile Tom and his son were working away with a view to finding out as much as possible about the nature of their mine, its paying qualities and its extent, after which Charley was to go back to the east and get capital for its development. The family lived on the property in a hut it had built.

One evening one of the neighbors, Harding, came to the hut with a dirty piece of paper on which something had been written and handed it to Tom Ainsworth.

"What's this?" asked the latter.

"It's a deed to this property you're on."

"If that's what it is I decline to read it."

Harding folded the paper and put it in his pocket, saying:

"This yere property belongs to me and my pals, and yer wants to understand that we hain't got no use for claim jumpers. We'll give you till tomorrer mornin' at 9 o'clock to git out."

He turned on his heel and went away. Ainsworth knew that the paper he had offered was merely a pretext for an attempt to drive them off the claim. Charley was not at home at the time, but when he came in his father informed him of Harding's visit and what it meant. The two sat down together for a conference. If they had known exactly how their enemies were intending to proceed they would have been able to make preparations intelligently, but being without this information they did nothing.

Tom Ainsworth had spent most of his life where shooting was in vogue without being himself armed, because he was opposed to both arming and shooting, the former leading to the latter. As for Charley, he said he knew nothing about handling a revolver, and any one who did would have such an advantage of him that it would be better for him not to enter any shooting match. Mrs. Ainsworth dreaded bloodshed and was in favor, if their neighbors demanded the property, of giving it up and recovering it by law. This plan did not suit the father or the son, who proposed to hold on to what belonged to them.

The morning brought an end to any suspense they felt. A few minutes after 9 o'clock their neighbors showed signs of an offensive movement. They came out of their cabin and stood talking together, casting occasional glances at the Ainsworth home. They were about 200 yards distant, the intervening ground being covered at intervals by protruding rocks, earth thrown up from digging and an occasional tree. Charley Ainsworth insisted on his mother keeping in the cabin, behind the log walls of which she would be safe from bullets if any were fired. Charley also persuaded his father to remain inside till he was called out, the young man thinking it better that he alone should receive their enemies and determine whether there was to be fighting. These matters being arranged, Charley went outside and, picking up a few round stones off the ground, each about the size of a goose's egg, put them in his pocket.

Charley did not wait long before learning that there was to be fighting. The toughs, thinking to frighten their neighbors, started for the Ainsworth cabin, each flourishing a revolver. Harding leading the way ten paces ahead of the other two. Charley took one of the stones from his pocket and, taking aim threw it at Harding and hit him in the stomach, knocking the wind out of him and doubling him up.

The other two men didn't seem to know just what to do. Presently they both advanced to Harding, picked him up and carried him back to the cabin. Charley could see him between his gasps for breath, evidently urging them to go for their enemy and shoot him down. Murphy, cocking his revolver, started on that errand, moving forward to get within range, keeping a tree in line between him and his enemy. The ex-pitcher threw an "outshoot." The stone went circling around the tree and took Murphy on the temple.

Murphy dropped and lay perfectly still.

It was now Gunn's turn to take up the fight, and, profiting by the experience of his pals, he ran forward to a breastwork of earth that had been thrown out of a mine and with his eyes above it was taking aim with his revolver at his opponent when his eyesight was seriously interfered with from the dirt knocked up by a stone that grazed the top of the barrier. He ducked, while Charley kept sending stones, one of which, a drop, took him in the top of the head and, though it did not crack his skull, knocked the life temporarily out of him.

This finished the fight. Harding could by this time stand on his feet, but was shaky. Murphy was still insensible. He died a few days later. Gunn had had a bruise on the skull that had taken all the ambition out of him. Charley called his father and sent him off to the nearest mining camp for assistance. Tom returned with some friends a couple of hours later, but meanwhile no further demonstration had been made by the enemy.

Nor were the Ainsworths ever again interfered with. They are now rich mine owners. Tom says that Charley's education in mining engineering was mighty valuable, "but it warn't nothin' alongside of the way he larned to pitch stones around corners."

PROPOSES TO REOPEN PROBE

Senate Resolution Directed at New Haven Railroad

ITS ADOPTION ALMOST CERTAIN

Sentiment in Favor of Punishing Men Who Made Money Out of Alleged Wrongful Transactions — Government Wants Corporations to Hurry in Bringing About Reorganization

Washington, Feb. 4.—Following is the complete text of the resolution for a further investigation of the affairs of the New Haven road offered in the senate by Senator Norris of Nebraska:

"Resolved, that the interstate commerce commission be requested to reopen its examination of the affairs of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, and to make further investigation of the financial transactions of said company, with a view of ascertaining:

"First, what became of the funds of said company wrongfully invested at fictitious values, in the various enterprises and corporations mentioned in the opinion of the interstate commerce commission, numbered 2384, case No. 4845, entitled 'the New England investigation in the matter of rates, classifications, regulations and practices of carriers, submitted May 12, 1913, and decided June 2, 1913.'

"Second, whether the person or persons authorizing such investment of the funds of said company and the person or persons receiving the benefit thereof are liable to punishment under the existing laws.

"Third, whether under existing law, such funds so invested can be recovered on behalf of the stockholders of the said company.

"Fourth, what legislation, if any, is necessary to prevent the recurrence of similar transactions."

Senator Norris said he should not press the resolution for a day or two, but the senate is practically certain to vote upon and probably to adopt it. Although the resolution simply "requests" action by the interstate commerce commission it is understood that an investigation will be undertaken.

The resolution is regretted by some who believe the railroad company should not be hampered in its attempted settlement with the government, but sentiment in favor of "reaching" the men who made the money out of the New Haven purchases and punishing them if possible is strong.

Plans for the separation of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad and its subsidiary transportation lines was discussed at a conference between attorneys for the department of justice and counsel for the road. It was the first appearance here of representatives of the New Haven system since Chairman Elliott agreed to meet the department's demands several weeks ago.

Although the proposals of the two New Haven lawyers were listened to carefully, the department made it plain that it expects the New Haven to bestir itself and bring about its promised reorganization in as short a time as possible. Attorney General McReynolds did not figure in the discussion, but it is said he feels that it is about time that the road brought its plans to light.

Little Boy Sent by Parcel Post From Oklahoma to Kansas

Wellington, Kan., Feb. 4.—Mrs. E. H. Staley of this city received her 2-year-old nephew by parcel post from his grandmother in Stratford, Okla., where he had been left for a visit three weeks ago.

The boy wore a tag about his neck showing it had cost 18 cents to send him through the mails. He was transported twenty-five miles by rural route before reaching the railroad.

He rode with the mail clerks, shared his lunch with them and arrived here in good condition.

LEADERS KEEPING THEIR PLAN SECRET

Women to Make New Onslaught on Congress

Washington, Feb. 4.—The congressional union for suffrage, devoted to advocacy of equal rights through a constitutional amendment, announced that preparations had been completed in half a dozen eastern states for the biggest suffrage demonstration yet contemplated.

The union plans simultaneous demonstrations in all states on May 2—mass meetings, parades and the like—and choice of delegates from all states who on May 9 will come to Washington and march on congress.

Suffragette leaders here refuse to say what sort of an 'onslaught they will make on congress on May 9, but the plan of parading seven times around the Capitol, as did Joshua and the Israelites around Jericho, is under consideration.

Judge Promises to Pummel All Wife Beaters Brought Before Him

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Feb. 4.—Henry E. Miller, justice of the peace of Swoyersville, announces that he will physically maul every man brought before him on complaint of his wife to answer a charge of wife beating.

He also offers to take the case free of charge, and says that he will get full pay by whipping the wife beater until the latter believes he has had enough. He also agrees not to fine or send the husband to jail, a good, sound beating being all the punishment that he will give.

"Let the man who beats his wife be as big as a mountain," says Miller, "and if I cannot give him all the fighting that he wants I will be glad to take a licking myself."

EXCLUSION PLAN IS REJECTED

Amendment to Immigration Bill Beaten by 203 to 54

AIMED PRINCIPALLY AT JAPAN

All Party Lines Wiped Out In Disposing of Measures Introduced by California Representatives—One Would Abrogate Present "Gentlemen's Agrement" With Japan

Washington, Feb. 4.—Placing patriotism above partisanship, the house, by an overwhelming vote of 203 to 54, refused to make any declaration of an Asiatic exclusion policy aimed principally at Japan.

All party lines were wiped out in the vote, which defeated an amendment by Representative Hayes of California to the Burnett immigration bill, proposing to bar all Asiatic laborers except those exempt by treaty.

The house also defeated, 182 to 6, a substitute anti-Japanese amendment offered by Representative Raker of California.

Hayes' amendment proposed to exclude Hindu laborers and those "of the Mongolian or yellow race, the Malay or brown race, and the African or black race," except those exempt from exclusion under existing or future treaties.

This would result in abrogation of the present "gentlemen's agreement" between the United States and Japan, whereby the Emperor of Japan has refused passports to Japanese laborers to come to the United States, thus shutting off all immigration of this class. Japanese are classed as Mongolians. There is no treaty between the United States and Japan covering immigration.

It was reported that President Wilson, through Secretary Bryan, had earnestly urged the Democrats to "get together" and prevent any open hostile demonstration against the Japanese.

Democratic and Republican leaders, including Representative Mann of Illinois, joined in over an hour's debate pleading against embarrassing Wilson and the state department in their negotiations with Japan.

Mann appealed to the patriotism of all members, regardless of party, to defeat the amendments, which, he said, would inject further difficulties into the delicate Japanese situation.

"While I have no especial admiration for our present state department policy," said Mann, "it is our duty to assist in preserving the harmonious relations which exist between our own and other governments. We of the Republican side as well as you of the Democratic side, all of us—owe allegiance to our country."

This marks the end of all Asiatic exclusion legislation at this session of congress.

WOMAN BITTEN BY DOG

Husband Sucks Wound Infected by Animal Inflicted With Rabies

Wrentham, Mass., Feb. 4.—Deputy Sheriff Charles W. Pond and his wife are both under the Pasteur treatment for rabies. Mrs. Pond was bitten in the throat by a dog supposed to be in the advanced stage of rabies. Her husband sucked the wound.

The head of the dog was examined in the laboratory of the state department of animal industries. Inspector Bristow of the department reported that the dog was in the advanced stage of rabies.

Pond was advised to take the Pasteur treatment, as the infecion might have been transmitted to him. It is believed his wife has been infected, though the prompt action of Pond may have extracted with the blood of his wife's wounds the virus from the dog's saliva.

Hungry Pet Alligator Tackles Banker and Refuses to Let Go

St. Mathews, S. C., Feb. 4.—J. A. Banks, state senator and president of the Home bank, is nursing a leg lacerated by a pet alligator, owned by Barry King, cashier of the bank, who kept it in the yard. It wandered into Banks' office while he was reading a newspaper and seized his leg when he arose from the chair.

Its grip was so tenacious that it took two men to pry its jaws loose. King said that the alligator, which is about half grown, had not eaten a mouthful before in six months.

TAXPAYERS ARE ROBBED

DOG SCARE.

Officers Cahill and Broberg, armed to the teeth were sent to Billings road this morning to corral a mad dog that excited neighbors telephoned was cutting circles and on the point of starting out on a rampage. The officers lost no time in making the trip and rounding up the animal. While making an examination the dog broke away, when the owner whistled, and ran to the house. The owner then told the police that the dog had been sick for several days and was being treated by a veterinary.

RUNAWAY TAXICAB.

The Dimmock street hill was the scene of an unusual runaway Tuesday, when an unoccupied taxicab, owned by Charles H. Penniman, started at Munroe road and Dimmock street sped down the hill at a high rate of speed and crashed into a pole at Coffe street, completely overturning the machine. The steering gear was put out of commission, the lights were broken and the radiator punctured. It is estimated that the damage will reach $60. The machine was left standing opposite the residence of William R. Bateman by Fred Holbrook, the chauffeur. The taxicab is thought to have started when the brakes did not hold.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. Frank W. Sampson desires to extend his heartfelt thanks to many friends who have remembered him in the time of his affliction and bereavement, particularly his associates of the Bay State Street Railway. Their kindness will long be remembered.

QUINCY HIGH VICTORY

Defeat Franklin High at Basket Ball 27 to 13

Quincy High school defeated the crack Franklin High basket ball team at Quincy Tuesday afternoon 27 to 13 and the Latin students beat the Commercial classes 15 to 6. The game was witnessed by the smallest crowd of the season, but they were so enthused with the fast, ready play that Referee Coady was obliged to ask them to quiet down because the cheering was drowning his whistle.

Quincy led at the close of the first period, 12 to 11. Shattuck of the visitors, on a free try tied the score in the first two minutes of the second period and Franklin put Quincy on the defensive. Quincy soon recovered and piled on 15 more points while Franklin got but one.

Earl Bates tossed seven fouls and missed two. He also secured a goal from the floor. Martin played the forward position the first half, but in the second was sent down to the backfield and Captain Jenkins put forward. Crocker was substituted in the closing minutes.

Hamlin, by covering his man and following the ball, prevented Franklin from scoring more points. They outclassed Quincy in passing but were unable to complete the play because of Hamlin's work in the backfield during the whole game, Jenkins during the first period and Martin and Crocker in the last half.

White had an easy time at centre and secured two baskets with ease. Housman and Tapley shot two baskets apiece for Franklin while Shattuck scored five points from free tries. The game was not free from fouls, double ones being called twice.

The Latins in beating the Commercials furnished more excitement than usual for a students' game. Cummings and Roach shot three apiece and the latter got one foul. Cummings threw one overhead which settled on the ring, rounded it twice and dribbled in from a very difficult position. The shot caused Referee Coady to show his approval by a broad smile.

JOY OF TOIL.

Do not look on your work as a dull duty. If you choose you can make it interesting. Throw your heart into it, master its meaning, trace out the causes and previous history, consider it in all its bearings, think how many even the humblest labor may benefit, and there is scarcely one of our duties which you may not look to with enthusiasm. You will get to love your work, and if you do it with delight you will do it with ease. Even if at first you find this impossible, if for a time it seems mere drudgery, this may be just what you require. It may be good like mountain air to brace up your character.—Lord Avebury.

I HEARD A FLUTE.

I heard a flute that sang unto the dawn,
The dawn dove-gray,
Until it flushed to swift desire the wan
White heart of day—

Until it brimmed the virgin breasted hills
With golden fire
And sang through all the azure veined rills.
Love's wild desire.

O child heart of the dawn, who lay so mute
On night's dark breast,
I saw you quicken to the shepherd flute
Of love's unrest;

I saw you ravished from your skyey sphere—
Fleet foot you ran.
Down dryad paths you followed clear
The flute of Pan.

ANNUAL MEETING KINGS DAUGHTERS

The annual meeting of Unity circle of King's Daughters at Bethany chapel on Tuesday evening was not only a delightful social affair but also gave the friends and guests present an insight into the splendid work done by this organization.

The business meeting was held at 5.30, at the close of which the King's Daughters service was given to 25 new members by the leader, Mrs. Emma S. Moore, assisted by the secretary, Mrs. George L. Badger. As the silver crosses were presented, Mrs. Hoffman of Weymouth sang a solo very effectively.

At 6.30 an excellent supper was served in the banquet hall by Mrs. Herbert Pratt and a corps of efficient workers.

At the head table were the officers, invited guests, including the honorary members; Mrs. W. M. Farley, State Secretary; Miss Grace Isaac, Mrs. J. P. Sears and Mrs. Leila M. Johnson, three former leaders of Unity circle; and Rev. B. A. Willmott and Mrs. Willmott.

At the close of the supper Mrs. Moore, the leader, graciously welcomed the guests, after which a double quartet of young men under the direction of Mrs. Jennie H. Hunt sang "A winter song," by Bullard. They were enthusiastically received and responded to an encore.

Mrs. George L. Badger, the retiring secretary submitted an interesting report. Unity circle has 126 paid members, and 24 on its honorary list. At this meeting 25 more have taken the service. The list of officers will show that there are ten tens, and the secretary outlined the duties of each, telling of work accomplished. Among the organizations helped financially are the Visiting Nurse Association, Associated Charities, Day Nursery, Floating Hospital, Quincy City Hospital, Bethany church, Mount Pleasant camp, Childrens hospital, South End settlement, Bethsaida Rescue Home, and Pond Home, the special charge of every Kings Daughter in Norfolk county. Many entertainments and socials have been enjoyed including the annual reception to older friends. A tribute was paid to Miss Amelia Bumpus an honored and esteemed member who passed away.

The treasurer's report showed that the receipts of the year were $963.65, and the expenditures $779.93.

The quartet sang "Water Lilies" by Lindere and responded to an encore.

Rev. B. A. Willmott was then introduced, who spoke in happy vein and commended the good work of the circle. He presented Dr. Sarah A. Dixon of Tewkesbury as the speaker of the evening, who entertained her audience with "Personal impressions of religious life in Europe." Connors. In court Monday he was fined $10, and in default of payment was sentenced to the Dedham jail. He was committed Tuesday afternoon. He said he could not explain why he jumped into the auto unless a generous quantity of good spirits had convinced him that it was the new police auto of Salem, his native place.

Although the meeting of the Board of Trade Wednesday night was not a lengthy one, considerable business was transacted. At this meeting President Hamilton put into operation a new scheme, if such it might be called. In times past the meetings of the Board of Trade have been marked by long drawn out debates over minor matters, or as some members have described it, an exhibition of an endless flow of hot air. This has resulted in keeping many away from the meetings, who did not desire to sit and listen to this bantering until 11 and 11.30.

Wednesday night President Hamilton adopted the plan such as is in vogue in all legislative bodies. That is referring to appropriate committee different matters to investigate and report. This scheme will also do away with hasty action upon matters with which the members are not familiar.

As a result an adjournment was reached a little after 9 o'clock and according to President Hamilton this method is to be followed in the future.

BANQUET SPEAKERS.

In opening the president called attention to the annual banquet to be held next Tuesday evening. The speakers secured for the evening are Representative T. W. White of Newton and Rev. A. L. Hudson of the First Parish church. In addition to this there will be an entertainment.

In regard to the proper marking of the street cars so that one may readily know the destination of the cars, it was reported that the matter had been taken up with Supt. Gammons and that the new plan of marking cars was about ready to be put into operation.

INTERESTED IN THE VETERANS

Mrs. John A. Boyd Joins the Boyd Auxiliary

A notable event in the history of Gertrude A. Boyd auxiliary to Camp Boyd, United Spanish War Veterans, was the initiation on Wednesday evening of Mrs. John A. Boyd. It was for her son that the camp was named and for her daughter that the auxiliary was named. More than this Mrs. Boyd is the Daughter of a Veteran

Widow of a Veteran
Sister of a Veteran
Mother of a Veteran
Neice of a Veteran

The initiation took place at a regular meeting of the auxiliary held at the residence of Mrs. John Hanley (Gertrude A. Boyd) on Glendale road, and at the same time, Mrs. Harry T. Boyd, a daughter-in-law was initiated. A flag presented to Mrs. John A. Boyd by the Grand Army, at the time of the death of her son, was used in the ceremony. Mrs. Boyd is in good health, about 65 years of age, and has been a resident of Quincy since infancy. When a child she lived at Quincy, then for 40 years at West Quincy and now with her daughter on Glendale road.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Mayor and Other Officials at Grade Crossing Conference

Mayor Miller, City Solicitor Pinkham and City Engineer Sargent are attending the conference of the Public Service Commission this afternoon on the matter of abolishing the grade crossings at Saville and Water streets The conference is not a public one and will only be attended by representatives of the city and the railroad. There is a rumor that the railroad, in view of the present finanical conditions now existing, desire to postpone indefinitely the abolishing of grade crossings, and there is another rumor that as the problems of Quincy and Braintree have gone so far that these may possibly be undertaken this year.

The Mayor, City Solicitor and City Engineer were in conference all the forenoon going over the plans, in order that the Mayor and City Solicitor might familiarize themselves with the proposed plans. As City Solicitor Pinkham has only been in office for a few weeks he only had a general idea of the problem and he desired to become better posted. For this reason the Mayor was in his office but a few minutes this morning and although there were several waiting to see him they had not been succesful up to 11.30.

It is reported that under the requirements of the new system of auditing and accounting, that all pay

SILVER WEDDING AT FAXON HALL

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Johnson Have Many Friends

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Anderson of 63 Revere road observed the 25th anniversary of their marriage in Faxon hall on Wednesday evening, assisted by nearly 400 friends. Speaking by long time friends and a musical program followed a sumptuous banquet.

Theodore Hermanson was toast-master and the speakers were Rev. Leander K. Hokenson of the Swedish Lutheran church, Rev. Hilman Larson of Lynn, and Rev. Henry Hanson of Malden, former pastors of the Swedish M. E. church of this city, and Representative Edward J. Sandberg.

Vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. Bertha Carlson Porter and popular selections by a chorus of mens voices consisting of John F. Johnson, Jacob Bergvall, Fritz Swanson, Nils Carlson and Emile Hallquist. Music was by Wilsons orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson received the feliciations of all present, and were also the recipients of many beatuiful and costly remembrances.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were married in Grand Army hall by Rev. G. F. Johnson. In their wedding party were Mrs. Hannah Edgren, Oscar Frisk, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Nelson and Mrs. Selma Ryden, all of whom attended the celebration.

Mr. Anderson is a former granite cutter and for a time was a partner in the granite firm of Johnson and Anderson. He is now an unattached agent for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. He has lived in this city for 34 years and is one of its best known Swedish residents. Mrs. Anderson is very popular in a wide circle of friends. They are the parents of two boys, Carl and William Anderson.

The committee in charge of the affair included Oscar Sandberg, John Palmer, Henning Torn and Henry Sandberg. The banquet was served by the Misses Olga Lundquist, Clara Carlson, Ester and Hilma Weeden, Elizabeth, Lillian and Helen Nelson and Mrs. Celia Ericson.

MRS. MIDDLEMAS.

The funeral of "Scotch Margaret," Mrs. Margaret Middlemas, who was killed by a train Saturday night, was held at the undertaking rooms of John Hall Wednesday afternoon with many of her life long friends present.

Many floral remembrances, one of which was from the employees of the Cunningham Park, lay on the casket while the services were conducted by Rev. T. C. Martin of the Hall Place M. E. church. Burial was in Mount Wollaston ceemtery.

Today the little hut in which she lived will be torn down by the employees of the Cunningham Park system. The absence of the cat was explained today by friends, who said that the pet died of lonesomeness when "Scotch Margaret" was placed in the Quincy Almshouse last winter to recover from a severe attack of pneumonia. As far as can be learned Mrs. Middlemas was more than 80 years of age, although the general impression of friends is that she was some years older.

Mrs. Jennie Dunnack of 93 Edison Park street has some attractive flowers in a window at her house. On Tuesday while the window was open a good sized butterfly flew in, the kind that is usually seen about flowers in the spring, with yellow wings tinted black. Is spring coming?

MANY CITIES AND TOWNS INTERESTED

State Highway Via Willard Street Advocated at Largely Attended Hearing

Mayor Miller and City Solicitor Speak in Favor

Mayor John L. Miller, former Mayor Eugene R. Stone, senators, representatives and prominent business men to the number of 200 appeared before the Highway Commission Wednesday to argue in favor of a State highway between Brockton and Boston. The proposed route passes through Milton, Quincy, Braintree and Holbrook and was first broached at a meeting of the Ward Four Improvement Association three years ago.

The hearing was held in Kingsley hall in the Ford building which was opened after the crowd packed the small hearing room in the offices of the commission. Chairman W. D. Sohier presided and Commissioners Kemp and Synan were also present. Arthur B. Hayward of Braintree conducted the hearing and presented a stack of petitions which when added to by more petitions from Brockton business men and residents gave the table at which the commission sat a most interesting appearance.

Arthur B. Hayward said that the route which passes over Willard street in West Quincy, through the towns of Milton, Braintree and Holbrook was selected because it was the most direct way from Brockton and would also enhance the territory through which it passed. Land values are low and road material is along the line in quantities. He argued that the roads 15 miles from Boston leading to the South Shore were not particularly good and that this route is needed for motor and pleasure traffic and in order to take advantage of the state system below Brockton it is necessary to construct this link, and it would result in the relief of towns and city of road repairs.

Mr. Hayward presented petitions signed by selectmen of Chatham and Wareham and other Plymouth county towns in favor of the route, and letters from Chester I. Campbell and Temple A. Winsloe of Wollaston favoring it.

The following speakers described the benefits of the highway: President John L. Hamilton, of the Quincy Board of Trade; L. R. Spear, president of the Massachusetts Automobile Association; Selectman B. Herbert Woodsum of Braintree; James F. Powers, Superintendent of highways of Brockton; Selectman Arthur Paine of Holbrook; John Shields of Milton, Chairman John F. Merrill of the Norfolk County Commissioners;

NOTICE

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

One of the favorite occupations just now is sitting on the front steps of the Ford Automobile Company's factory.

It is claimed that the railroads are losing money by carrying the parcel post, in spite of the fact that they can always assess their stockholders.

Confidence is expressed that the question of railroad rates will be decided before 1917.

Although President Wilson talks to the reporters freely ,they don't seem satisfied with his interesting exposition of the Aeneid of Virgil.

THE THREAT TO KILL.

Two current newspaper items state that Ignace Paderewski, the pianist, has had to cancel his Pacific coast engagements, having collapsed as the result of persecution by Black Hand threats. Also that William T. Jerome has received a great many letters, threatening him with death if he does not stop pursuing Harry Thaw.

The threat to kill is getting altogether too commonplace. In every large city insidious and cowardly attacks of this kind are frequently reported to the police.

Of course nearly all these warnings are mere fakes. No doubt many of them are written by boys as a joke. The writers would not dare become highwaymen, or express their opinions of public men by writing to a newspaper.

Nevertheless, the anonymous threatening letter is the most dangerous kind of a weapon. It deserves a penalty not unlike what would be given for an assault with intent to murder. Meanwhile victims should never yield to these silly attacks, remembering that a man who resorts to such means is afraid of his own shadow.

PUBLIC MEN.

If the managers of a charity ball, chamber of commerce, or church fair can get a president, a governor, or other high public official to attend one of their functions, its success is assured. It is the cheapest form of advertising, provided one has the "pull" to "put it over." Every public man is overwhelmed by these invitations.

President Wilson has shut down the lid pretty close on this kind of thing. He opened up to some extent however in the matter of making long distance speeches to such gatherings over the telephone. Now he is flooded with requests for this favor, which he has had to announce he must refuse.

Governors and Congressmen yield too willingly to these impositions. It is to them one means of feeling the pulse of the people. They like it to an extent to break over their isolation from daily life.

No doubt it helps in a superficial way. When a governor or congressman attends a dance, shakes hands with all comers, exchanges witticisms with local celebrities, hands out compliments on the locality, he gains a reputation for being democratic, though inside he is horribly bored.

But as for getting closer to the life of the people, he fails. Only the glossy surface of life is touched in these functions. To get close to what the people feel, he needs to have his secretary cull every significant expression of opinien from the newspapers, and talk things over with close observers of human drift.

The train travel, the upsetting of regular hours, uncertainty of hotel accommodations, make these jaunts a severe physical strain. Even the little speech over the telephone is a burden, if a public man is not to say something that will sound flat and crude in the newspapers next day.

HOUSE PASSES BURNETT BILL

Literacy Test Stands In the Immigration Measure

FINAL VOTE IS 241 TO 126

Day of Vigorous Debate Attended With Much Confusion—Similar Bill Has Been Vetoed by Taft and During Second Administration of Cleveland

Washington, Feb. 5.—The Burnett immigration bill, prescribing a literacy test for applicants for admission to the United States, was passed by the house by a vote of 241 to 126.

All proposed amendments relating to the exclusion of Asiatic immigrants had previously been eliminated.

As the bill passed, it provides that every immigrant admitted to the United States must be able to read "the English language, or some other language or dialect, including Hebrew or Yiddish." It prescribes the method of testing immigrants, providing that each applicant for admission must read a slip on which is printed between thirty and forty words.

In its present form this measure passed the house and the senate in the last congress, but was vetoed by President Taft. A similar bill was vetoed during President Cleveland's second administration.

The supporters of the bill are confident it will again pass the senate, although President Wilson has let it be known that he does not approve the literacy test.

Opponents of the literacy test fought strenuously, but on the last effort to eliminate it from the bill they were defeated 140 to 239.

The final vote came at the end of a day of vigorous debate, which at times threw the house into confusion and on several occasions threatened to cause serious trouble.

Representative Burnett, in charge of the bill, tried to hurry the proceedings along and frequently moved to proceed and shut off the discussion.

On one occasion Representative Manahan commented upon what he called "the unfairness with which this bill has been driven through" and "the unfair statements of the chairman, Mr. Burnett, in view of the fear and cowardice which he has shown in not daring to answer objections."

With a bound Burnett was on his feet.

"That's a lie, Mr. Speaker, and the gentleman knows it," he shouted.

Amid a tumult of demands for recognition, points of order and a general outburst of disorder, Representative Hay, in the chair, finally called Manahan to order.

Another outburst followed, in the course of which Manahan withdrew the word cowardice. Minority Leader Mann eventually brought about an exchange of apologies.

At another point in the debate the chairman and Mann had a heated exchange, the latter declaring that "the chair is disrespectful to the house."

STATE HIGHWAY

James H. Stedman of Braintree, manufacturer and prison commissioner; President A. H. Andrews of the Brockton Chamber of Commerce; Col. A. C. Drinkwater of Braintree Selectman; Senator Clark, of the second Plymouth district; Senator Louis F. R. Langelier, of the First Norfolk district; Representatives Edward J. Sandberg and Michael T. Sullivan of Quincy; Representative Moses McGaughey of Braintree; City Solicitor Walter S. Pinkham of Quincy; George T. French of Holbrook; Elmer Abercrombie of Braintree; Councilman Stephen B. Little of Ward Four, Quincy; Patrick F. McMahon, chairman of the highway commission of Brockton.

Representatives Charles Proctor of Randolph asked that the highway pass through the towns of Randolph and Avon and that the first work be done between Five Corners in Braintree and his town.

Chairman Sohier told those appearing that they must not get the impression that their section of the state was neglected. He said that approximately $400,000 had been expended for State highways in the vicinity of the route proposed and that one-third of the roadways were to the south of Boston. He also mentioned that there is now proposed a state highway passing through the town of Stoughton in case the town accepts the proposition made to it by the commissioners. Another fact he emphasized is that the commission can only build 50 miles of highway annually.

After several inquiries relative to the position of Brockton by Chairman Sohier, Patrick McMahon, chairman of the highway commission of that city, arose and said Brockton was willing to stand half the expense from the end of their present macadam to the Holbrook line and that he believed the route under consideration would be more direct than the one proposed route through Stoughton.

President Hamilton of the Quincy Board of Trade said the organization was in sympathy with the improvement and that congestion in Quincy during certain hours is decidedly marked.

L. R. Spear, president of the Massachusetts A. A., said that the Hon. John F. Fitzgerald, former mayor of Boston and other representative business men of that City favored the highway. He said the association favored it, and after discussing the roadways from Plymouth to Boston said, "I have never been able to find the direct route and I have been over it so many times my brain is jarred on account of the poor roads."

Mayor Miller of Quincy said ninety per cent, without any exaggeration, of the people of Quincy, favored this road, particularly because it will give them a direct route to Brockton and the cape. The way to Brockton is poor and it may be well enough to reach the cape through Weymouth and Abington, but Brockton has much traffic that passes through Quincy and the city has shouldered the burden of it, as has Holbrook and Randolph, and it has been a heavy burden. The proposed route has no heavy grades and it would make a fine highway of commerce. It passes through West Quincy which is quite isolated from Quincy center. The opportune time to build this highway is the present. I hope for the good of all concerned and the commerce of all this section that you will see your way clear to take over these streets and rebuild them, for we feel there has been much taken by the state from Quincy and but little given in return.

B. Herbert Woodsum said that Braintree stood in the Metropolitan district bearing the burdens and its people feel that the limit has been reached. Last year 100,000 gallons of tarvia were used in the upkeep of roads, and the town seeks relief from heavy burdens imposed because of its natural position.

Superintendent Powers of Brockton said, "We are heartily in favor of any State highway that will connect Brockton with any place." Brockton has no good state highway to Boston and the route proposed is the most direct one. Many more thousands would be accommodated. Mayor Howard of Brockton favors the building of the proposed route.

Arthur Paine of Holbrook said his town was in a direct line with the traffic from Brockton to Boston and that the increased travel has made it irksome to maintain the four miles of gravel street to the Braintree line.

Chairman Merrill of the County Commissioners said that notwithstanding the fact that the greater part of the proposed highway comes in Norfolk County and that it will have to assume 25 per cent of the cost, the commissioners are nevertheless disposed to favor the road. Of immense benefit to the county it would be a still greater one to Plymouth county. We have to contribute to our neighbors, and if the petition is granted and the highway built, we are doing Plymouth county a great deal of benefit. I am willing to be recorded in favor of it. It would be useless to tell your board about the good things that would follow the building of this route for you know them fully as well as I.

J. H. Stedman said the proposition appealed to him from the practical point of view as a manufacturer in Braintree. The question of safety should be considered. The traffic of late afternoon and early evening through Quincy and Braintree is a menace.

President Andrews of the Brockton Chamber of Commerce said the project has been unanimously endorsed, and no pressure was brought to bear on the men and manufacturers that signed his petitions. The proposed route appeals to the business interests as the one solution of traffic problems. The present roads do not handle the traffic from Brockton to Boston. This one would. After presenting petitions signed by George E. Keith, M. A. Packard co., and the Barry Co., Mr. Andrews said Brockton has asked for but little from the state and has received much less. Names totaling 20,000 could be presented in favor of the route.

Colonel Drinkwater advocated the building of this highway. Braintree has never received any benefit from being in the Metropolitan district. The route would open up a section of country that can be developed and there might be some taxable property. The route goes through farming territory, is practically level and it should be built for the development of business in greater Boston, for safety, and to relieve the congestion there is on the only main street in Braintree. Braintree's tax rate, with a valuation practically up to the limit, is over $20. It has 70 miles of streets and the expense of maintenance is great.

Senator Clark of Brockton said everyone of his constituents in the Second Plymouth district is very much interested and favors this matter. The 65,000 people of Brockton, its large and growing manufacturing interests, are immensely interested. Much transportation is carried on by motor truck and a good road means more of it. Canal communication will be established between Taunton and Bridgewater and with this highway it will be means of increasing the prosperity and growth of that part of the state. "I predict increased prosperity for South Eastern Massachusetts. It will blossom like the Garden of Eden. Its vast resources are undreamed of by the residents."

City Solicitor Walter S. Pinkham of Quincy said much traffic comes through Quincy and if it can be deflected City Square will be relieved to a great extent. The city bears the burden of South Shore traffic. We feel it should be borne by others. The City Council has gone on record favoring the building of the route as proposed.

George T. French of Holbrook said the road is no longer a local matter. The town has much difficulty in obtaining material to maintain its present gravel roads.

Elmer Abercrombie said the Highway Commission has constructed a fine system of State highway in southeastern Massachusetts and Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook are awaiting the building of the connecting link.

Councilman Little said if any petition was ever presented to the commission that was more full of merit he wanted to knew its purport. These men, he said, do not appear here in the light of favor seekers. They look upon the matter as one of public necessity. All hope that your commission will see the justice of the claim and grant it so that we will not be a thorn in the side of your commission in the future.

The hearing closed by all rising in favor of the petition.

DUTCH SUPPER.

The Quincy Point Social Club entertained their friends and the families of their married members at a Dutch supper in their rooms at Washington and Chubbuck streets on Wednesday evening. Mellen as the presiding officer of the evening during the impromptu entertainment. There were solos by Adams Porter and Councilman Williams and remarks by former Councilman Frank J. Duffy. Late in the evening floor was cleared for dancing and all participated in the Highland schottisches, square and modern dances. Music was furnished by an orchestra.

ENGINEER LOSES HIS JOB

Holds Up Train to Break "Spell" While He Chases Black Cat

Alton, Ills., Feb. 5.—Peter Houseman has lost his job as engineer on the Illinois Terminal railroad because a black cat sped across the track in front of the train.

There was no chance of the cat being hit, for it cleared the track well ahead of the engine. Nevertheless, Houseman put on the air brakes and made a sudden stop. When the surprised train crew and passengers looked out they saw the engineer throwing snowballs into an osage hedge tree, wherein was perched the black cat.

"This blamed cat ran across the track and I've got to chase it back across again to break the spell," said Houseman. He soon dislodged the cat, which fled back across the track.

It happened that a company official was on the train. Houseman promptly got a "pink envelope" saying that his services were no longer needed by the company.

GIRL SPURNS ATTENTIONS

Providence Man Fires at Her and Escort and Then Shoots Self

Providence, Feb. 5.—Springing out before Miss Ruth Carlson, aged 27, from behind a fence, as she was walking with a man named Benson, George Hanson, 27, whose attentions she had spurned, fired four shots from a revolver at the young woman and her escort, and then sent a bullet into his own brain.

The girl was shot in the right elbow and fell at the first report. Hanson shot again, but the bullet went wide. Noticing that the girl lay still on the sidewalk, he evidently thought he had killed her and fired twice at Benson, who fled down the street.

It is believed Benson was not hit, though the police have been unable to locate him since the shooting. Hanson then placed the gun against his forehead and pulled the trigger. His death is momentarily expected. Miss Carlson is not dangerously injured.

GLASS LOSES SENATE SEAT BY ONE VOTE

Clapp Changes Front and Leads to Undoing of Alabama Editor

Washington, Feb. 5.—By one vote —32 to 33—Frank P. Glass of Alabama, editor of the Birmingham News, lost his fight for a seat in the United States senate.

The vote sustained the recommendation of the committee on privileges and elections, which held that Glass was not entitled to be seated because his appointment by Governor O'Neal to succeed the late Senator Johnson was made after the constitutional amendment directing election of senators by the people had been proclaimed in full effect.

Senator Clapp, who had signed the minority report favoring Glass, proved eventually to be the undoing of Glass. He declared he had become convinced that his original interpretation of the case had been erroneous.

OPPOSED BY DEMOCRATS

Equal Suffrage Will Not Receive Their Support at Washington

Washington, Feb. 5.—Equal suffrage is dead and buried as far as the Democratic party is concerned, Majority Leader Underwood indicated to the house.

Charged with choking off the equal suffrage issue through a caucus vote, Underwood replied that the judiciary committee still has power to report the suffrage constitutional amendment.

But he positively refused to throw his influence toward a favorable report from that committee.

"I am not in favor of it," he said. "My party stands for local self-government; the one thing above all others is that right of suffrage should be governed by the state instead of the national government."

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

The exhibit loaned by the Library Art Club for this month, is now hung and open to visitors.

It consists of a series of photographs and sketches of Italian doorways,— Renaissance period,— gathered and published by the American Architect and Building News Company.

The pictures will be more than usually useful, as they are grouped by the editor into their architectural elements. To quote: "These groups are based on the handling of the simples elements of design, right lines and curved lines,—the arc, the lintel and the triangle; that is, after first dividing the subjects into two general groups according as the door opening itself is square or round headed, we have considered whether the decorative treatment of this opening, in its simplest diagramatic expression, could be represented by lintel over lintel, lintel over arc, arc over arc, arc over lintel, and so on, through the possible combinations of these three elements of composition. To this logical grouping, have been added two other special groups, one consisting of the canopied or hooded, doorways and the other of doorways where the motive of the decorative treatment is dual or compound."

The doorways thus treated are those of palaces, cathedrals and public buildings of Italian cities long known as centres of all that is best in the artistic world.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Class debating societies have been organized at the High school, and will be an efficient aid to the English department as well as to the spirit of the school.

Not for many months has there been so much illness among school children as at the present time. In addition to the juvenile diseases which are epidemic, colds and grippe are keeping large numbers out of school.

SCHOOL HALLS.

A largely attended hearing was held this week before the committee on education of the Legislature on several bills governing the use of school halls. All the bills thus far presented have been for the purpose of further extending their use and making them available for a larger variety of meetings. The regulations of the State Police recently put into effect restrict their use for dramatic purposes except where they are equipped with certain non-inflammable curtains and other accessories which none of the buildings now possess. This does not interfere in any degree with the regular school use, but does narrow the use by the general public.

OUTSIDE ACTIVITIES.

A letter issued by the Springfield school authorities a short time ago is pertinent to the condition in any town or city. The following is an extract:

"Every year there is a demand on the part of one or more charitable organizations in the city for large numbers of the pupils in the public schools to take part in theatrical productions. Much time is required for rehearsal in advance of the play; in fact, much more time as a rule than the children are led to believe will be necessary when they take up the work. Many of them are compelled to keep late hours during the period of preparation and the time of giving the production, with the result that they are unfitted for their school duties.

"The work necessarily required of the children in our schools is sufficiently large to call for all their time and effort. Any additional tax upon their strength and nervous energy is unwise and dangerous. Their time out of school, not necessary for the preparation of their studies, should be spent in some activity wholly different from school work, if possible. Sufficient rest and sleep are absolutely necessary if the physical well being of the child is to be conserved.

"No child is strong enough to do both,—to attend faithfully to studies and to such a multiple of social duties. When inevitable failure or breakdown comes, the parent is somewhat prone to blame the teacher or the school system for what is the parents' own lack of judgment and control.

"There will be time enough for social pleasures when the child has reached maturity, but there will then be no time to correct mistakes in training, or to retrieve failure to acquire the fundamentals of knowledge.

"Parents should cooperate with the teachers in reducing as far as possible the unnecessary school activity which takes the interest and time of the children to the end that the schools may attain the highest efficiency and minister in the most complete way to the welfare of the pupils."

LATEST NEWSPAPER CENSUS.

The 46th annual census of the publications of the United States and Canada, published in the American Newspaper Annual and Directory, shows that an average of five new publications were started every working day during 1913. The suspensions and consolidations make the net gain only three a week.

The total number of publications is 24,527. There are 2640 dailies—the evening editions outnumbering the morning by about three to one.

There are 572 Sunday papers. It requires forty different languages to carry the news to the people of this country. Large lists are devoted to the special publications, agricultural, religious, etc., but every class, every cult, every trade, every profession, every fad, every "ism," has its printed spokesman in the 215 different lists into which they are subdivided.

Only four industries now exceed in capital invested and value of products the business of publishing and printing. In ten years the output increased 86 per cent., and it is estimated that at present the earnings of newspapers and periodicals average nearly a million and a half dollars per calendar day. Two-thirds of this amount perhaps represents the income from advertising. In the nature of the case no one individual can be familiar with a large part of the publishing industry which is carried on in more than 11,000 different towns; each of these is located and described, together with all of the publicaitons, in the big book which presents the latest report of our publishing world.

MISSIONARY PAGEANT

Novelty Presented by the Gleaners of Atlantic

Those who attended the entertainment given by the Gleaners Sunday School class at Memorial church vestry Wednesday night had an unusual treat, and saw something far ahead of the expectations of the most enthusiastic for a missionary pageant in Atlantic.

The entrance to the platform was decorated with flags of different nations and the four letters M. H. M. S. representing the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society covered all the flags.

The young people had costumes from almost all the European countries; many of which had been brought over by ancestors of the young people.

The following program was rendered in the most satisfactory way to the audience that filled the vestry.

Candle Exercise,—Seven girls.
Imitation Japanese—Marjorie Dame
A little boy's plea,—Earl Beeman.
Two pennies.—Laura Rogers.
Who? Why? How long?—Bertha Wight.
Sad—Anna Olson.

Recitations by Elizabeth and Margaret Phillips.

Mrs. Isabel S. Smith had the general charge and preparation of the entertainment and was ably assisted by Mrs. Fred Osgod, Mrs. Alvin T. Beede, Mrs. William T. Davy and Miss Margaret Read and Miss Winifred Cole. Light refreshments were served by the committee.

SURPRISE FOR CAMBRIDGE

The employed Boys second team of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. defeated the crack Cambridge Pirates Wednesday night by the large score of 40 to 20. This is the third defeat out of 18 games for the Cambridge boys, and they were somewhat surprised to receive such a severe drubbing. Owing to the small size of the visitors it was found necessary to change the Quincy team with one exception and to play much lighter weight boys. For Quincy John Osberg was the bright star getting 11 goals from the floor and also doing very good work in passing. "Midget" Joe Robertson also played a good game. The two backs McNeil and Wren held their opponents to three goals between them. McMillan was right forward. The only player on the Pirates who seemed able to find the basket was McDonald who scored 6 goals from the floor.

—The legislators have filed over 2000 bills for 1914, the largest number in the history of Massachusetts. All kinds of freak and foolish laws are wanted. The state would be much better off in our estimation if the great and general court could be closed down for about five years, and give the people a much needed rest from new laws.—Winthrop Sun.

HIGH SCHOOL CLASS GAMES

Seniors Defeat Freshmen; Juniors Win From Sophomores

The High school gymnasium was Wednesday afternoon the scene of two class basketball games. The first game, between the Seniors and the Freshmen, resulted in a score of 18 to 13, in favor of the former. The game was played at a lively pace, although it was characterized by too much roughness. Young and Mathewson were the stars for the victors. Young made a very good basket from the middle of the floor, while hard pressed by the opponents. Stedman, for the Seniors, also made a basket from the corner of the floor which was out of the ordinary. Le Caine and Bill starred for the Freshmen.

The teams were as follows:

SENIORS	FRESHMAN
Mathewson, rf	rb, Le Caine
Cumming, lf	lb, Gilliatt
Anderson, lf
Stedman, c	c, Berg
Young, rb
Sutermeister rb	rf, Bill
Atwood, lb	lf, Chisholm

Score—Seniors 18, Freshmen 13. Baskets, Mathewson 4 on free trys, Young 1, Cummins 2, Stedman 3, Atwood2, Bill 2, and 2 on free trys, Le-Caine 1, Chisholm 1, on free trys, Gilliatt 1. Referee—French. Scorer—Crocker. Timer—Atwood.

JUNIORS WIN.

The second game was between the Juniors and the Seniors and was won by the former by a score of 8 to 6. This game was an exceptionally good one for a class game. There was a 6 to 6 tie until the last three minutes of play, when Barstowe, of the Juniors, won the game for his team with a pretty basket from a difficult position. Barstowe was the star for the Juniors. Welsford played a very good game for the Sophomores. He got two very good baskets in succession and set the gallery of fans into fits of enthusiasm by his playing.

JUNIORS	SOPHOMORES
Morrison, rf	rb, Torrey
Barstowe, lf	lb, Favreau
Roache, c	c, Johnson
Safford, rb	rf, Welsford

Score—Juniors 8, Sophomores 6. Baskets—Roache 1, McDonald 1, Barstowe 1, Morrison 1, Baker 1, Welsford 2. Referee—French. Scorer—Crocker. Timer Atwood.

A small, but noisy crowd of fans watched the games. The Faculty team, which has already played and won two games, will play the Juniors on Feb. 11.

BIG PINFALL.

By getting a team total of one more than 1400 the Houghs Neck A.A. beat the Sons of St. George in a special match at the City Square alleys Wednesday evening. Kingsbury got the best single, 119 and took the best team total with 292, one more than the tally of Ben Sturgis The summary:

TO RAISE TITANIC BY HUGE MAGNETS

Novel Scheme to Float Liner and Fit Her For Sea.

SUBMARINE WILL BE USED.

Will Transmit Electric Power Shot Under Water From Ship Above to Sunken Vessel, Which Will Be Surrounded by Magnets—Architect Believes Plan Practicable.

To raise the Titanic, recover the bodies from its hold and again fit the ship for ocean service is a scheme which Charles Smith, an architect of Denver, hopes to carry out this year.

For several months Mr. Smith has been drawing plans of submarine boats, scows and other apparatus to be used in raising the Titanic, the ill fated liner upon which 1,503 persons perished.

The scheme of the Denver man is first to locate the ship. He then intends to lower a submarine, carrying seven persons, by means of a steel cable. The submarine will be attached to a ship on the surface and communication is to be had by means of a telephone and electric signal bells.

Submarine of Special Type.

The submarine is to be operated by electricity furnished through cables from the ship above and is to be especially constructed so as to withstand the terrific pressure, which is estimated to be almost forty tons a square foot.

As the submarine is lowered powerful electric magnets will be attached to its prow. Light steel cables are to be attached to the magnets, the other end of which will be wound around steam winches on scows on the surface.

When the Titanic is found the submarine will push the magnets against the side of the wrecked ship and then signal to the men above to turn on the electric current, thus adhering the magnets to the sunken vessel.

To Surround Wreck With Magnets.

Magnets will be placed all around the ship, and when the last one is in place the submarine will be pulled to the surface and the work of raising the vessel begun.

This will be done, Mr. Smith says, by winding up the steel cables on the winches. When the Titanic is raised to a depth where it becomes too heavy to be supported by the flat scows Mr. Smith's plan is to tow the Titanic to some point where it will rest on the bottom at a lesser depth. He then intends to attach larger cables to the ship, get more flat scows and so raise the boat.

CHEAPER FISH FOR LENT.

That Is the Object of Movement Inaugurated In Cincinnati.

The civic organizations and the women's clubs of Cincinnati have combined for the purpose of securing the erection of a municipal market as was proposed at a meeting of the Cincinnati Trades council.

Among the arguments advanced for the market is the present high price of fish in the city. The organizations claim that if the city of Cincinnati buys fish direct from the net men of the great lakes as well as from the net men along the Atlantic coast states, it can resell it to the people of the city at one-half the price now charged. The women of Cincinnati are conducting a campaign against the high cost of living and they have started the movement early, so as to try and force down the price of fish before the beginning of the Lenten season, as it is during that period that fish is a necessity.

Similar movements are beginning to take root in all parts of the country because of the high cost of living.

SOOT FOR AIRSHIP SIGNALS.

Recent Invention Visualizes Morse Code Dots and Dashes.

Aviators are investigating an ingenious method of signaling from aeroplanes. The device consists of a tube placed in such a position that a strong current of air from the propeller passes through it, and is connected by a valve with a reservoir filled with soot. This valve can be operated by the passenger in the aeroplane in such a manner as to release either a large or small quantity of soot from the reservoir into the tube. The soot, whirled out of the tube by the draught, forms in the wake of the machine long or short streaks of black, by means of which messages can be given in the Morse code.

It is stated that in the course of some experiments with this device the dots and dashes of a message were made out, with the help of powerful field glasses, more than five miles away. The whole apparatus weighs not more than nine pounds.

CAUGHT ON A CROSSING

Two Men Killed and Two Others Injured When Train Hits Auto

Woonsocket, R. I., Feb. 5.—Hurled fifty feet through the air when a train crashed into their automobile at the grade crossing near the East Blackstone station, two men were killed, and two others, both priests, were badly injured.

J. F. A. Roberg, a real estate agent of this city, and Oreste Leoni, the chauffeur, 17, are dead. Rev. Henry J. Gaudet of Woonsocket and Rev. George Trottier of Gardner, who were in the tonneau, were badly cut and bruised.

Bleeding profusely and barely able to stand as a result of their painful injuries, the two priests dragged themselves to the sides of their dying companions, administered the last rites of the Catholic church, and then collapsed.

The crossing is hidden from view from the road by a small hill and is provided with neither gates nor a tender. Only a few trains pass on the single track during the day.

SETTLED OUT OF COURT

Woman Drops $75,000 Suit Against Boston Wool Importer

Boston, Feb. 5.—When the $75,000 breach of promise suit of Sarah A. McDonald, 28, against her employer, Frank A. Messenger, a wool importer, was called for trial in the Suffolk superior court, it was announced that the case had been settled out of court. Messenger is a widower and is 62 years of age. No details as to the settlement were given out.

Messenger's wife died in 1910, and Miss McDonald, who had been in his employ for ten years, alleged that two years later her employer became engaged to her. After the engagement, Messenger, according to Miss McDonald's claim, became attentive to a western girl, with the result that the suit was filed.

BARONETCIES IN HANDS OF BROKERS

Large Sums Alleged to Have Been Paid For British Titles

London, Feb. 5.—The first number of The Candid Review, a new quarterly brought out by Thomas G. Bowles, ex-member of parliament, attacked the method of replenishing the political parties' war chests by the traffic in honors. It says:

"One party gave £50,000 ($250,000) to the party fund and was subsequently made a baronet. One gave £150,000, another £200,000 and yet another £400,000 for peerages.

"Brokers in the city, we are told, have gone about shouting for buyers of baronetcies at £4000 down and £6000 to be lodged at a bank in two names, 10 percent commission to be paid to the first introducer of the customer."

TO RE-ESTABLISH "LINE-UP"

Commissioner Will Have Masked Detectives View Prisoners

New York, Feb. 5.—Among police department reforms which Police Commissioner McKay proposes to bring about is the re-establishment of the "line-up," under which the city's detectives, their faces masked, used to line up at police headquarters and view, one by one, the criminals who have been arrested, with the purpose of becoming familiar with their appearance and characteristics.

McKay reported to the mayor that "remarkable progress" had been made in one month in driving professional criminals and gunmen from the city.

ARMS RUSHED TO THE BORDER

Carranza Greatly Aided by the Lifting of Embargo

MANY GLOOMY POSSIBILTIES

Huerta's Doom Sealed Unless He Acts at Once—Likely to Take Field In Person, In Which Event Demonstrations of Serious Nature Are Bound to Occur

Washington, Feb. 5.—Modern arms and ammunition are already being rushed to Texas for transmission across the border to General Villa. This was admitted at the headquarters of the Carranza junta in this city. The shipments followed immediately on the issue of President Wilson's proclamation lifting the embargo.

By the first of next week Villa will have siege guns and rapid-fire armament of the most modern pattern, with plenty of fresh ammunition. As a result it is believed Torreon will soon fall, and then the march on Mexico City will begin in earnest.

The situation is viewed by officials as fraught with many dangerous possibilities. Huerta is expected to take the field in person. Not a single one of his generals has proved a match for the Villa strategy. Huerta is his own last hope. The rank and file of the federal army is loyal only to him. If he takes the field he may be able to check Villa. But it is admitted by army officers who have carefully studied the situation at long range that unless Huerta acts at once his doom is sealed.

If he leaves the Mexican capital with the majority of his troops, rapine and bloodshed may result there. Bandit Zapata, with his followers, is encamped near the city. The peons in the city itself, facing starvation, are only held in check by the large force of soldiers kept there by Huerta.

There is still a feeling of apprehension in official quarters over the possibility of anti-American outbreaks as the result of the president lifting the embargo.

While the Mexican capital is outwardly quiet, there is no doubt in the minds of officials here of the resentment of the Huerta followers. It would require only a leader to start a demonstration that would be hard to check.

Members of the senate and house committees on foreign relations expressed themselves as well pleased with the action of the president. They insisted the result will be a speedy determination of who is to rule in Mexico. They believe, from the information that has been placed at their disposal by the president, that the constitutionalists are certain to win.

It is believed by members of the committees who have talked with the president that he is disposed to recognize the belligerent rights of the constitutionalists if they formally request it. That they will do so is thought certain.

Such recognition would make it easy for Carranza, as head of the constitutional government, to float a loan. Money is badly needed for the purchase of arms and ammunition and to pay the troops now in the field.

No orders for the withdrawal of United States troops from the border will be issued by the war department unless recommendations are made by Brigadier General Bliss, in command there.

THE WRECK OF THE ROSY DAWN

A Story of Plans That Miscarried

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Whenever work was slack at the shipyard Lem Peters was always the first man to be laid off. People said that it was a good thing for Lem that his wife was a popular dressmaker, for her busy fingers enabled them to live very comfortably in the little white cottage.

It was rather dull now at the shipyard, and in consequence Lem Peters was sitting idly on the wharf, swinging his feet and waiting for the arrival of the daily steamer from the city across the sound. The departure and arrival of the Dunton were matters of daily excitement in Quank village. In winter, when the harbor was frozen over and the Dunton was icebound at her wharf, things were very dull indeed in the remote village.

But today, in the late autumn, the weather was still mild, with a haziness in the air that was suggestive of distant forest fires. The cliffs that embraced the harbor in two long protecting arms were clothed with ancient cedars and sturdy oaks; the oaks were dripping a golden shower of leaves against the dark background of the cedars.

The bay was deep blue, with little whitecapped waves that broke crisply. The sun shone brightly, and the west wind murmured gently.

Lem Peters pulled gently at his pipe and dreamed of many adventures he had shared with little Captain Charlie Sayles, whose tight little schooner, the Rosy Dawn, lay at anchor a half mile down the bay.

Their last adventure had led them down among the Florida keys in search of the fabled fountain of youth and the hidden treasure of that famous pirate, Black Duffy. They had returned richer in experience, but poorer by some hundred dollars.

That had happened a year ago, and now the wanderlust was upon Lem Peters again, and it also gripped Captain Charlie Sayles.

"I'm going aboard the schooner, Lem. Want to come?" Captain Charlie's bluff voice broke in on Lem's pleasant somnolence.

"Uh-huh," agreed Lem, and he followed Captain Charlie down the ladder to the little boat that bobbed in the rising tide.

In silence the two men rowed out to the Rosy Dawn, and it was not until they had boarded her and were sitting side by side in comfortable chairs under the canvas awning that the silence was broken.

"You got something up your sleeve, cap'n," ventured Lem hopefully.

Captain Charlie spat thoughtfully.

"I got an idee," he said, with a wary glance around as if he expected his wife, Elsie, might be within listening distance.

"What is it?"

"You remember a steamer went down off No Point three years ago?"

"Yes, dead of winter, howling gale, wasn't it? Everybody saved except the vessel. I remember. I heard there was considerable money aboard of her and"—

"That's what I'm after," said Captain Charlie quietly.

"Jerooshelum! How do you figger on doing it? I ain't no diver, you know," Lem hastened to explain.

"No more am I," retorted the captain irascibly, "and I ain't a consarned fool neither! That there steamer went down off the long jagged rock off No Point. Well, I was around there t'other day, fishing for blues, and, Lem, I seen her ribs down there, and I found this here on the beach."

He dropped a dull looking coin into Lem's horny palm.

"What do you call that, eh?" he asked, with thinly veiled triumph in his tone.

Lem examined it, polished it on his blue flannel sleeve and calmly pronounced it a twenty dollar gold piece.

"I'll bet there's a sight more where you found that," he hazarded.

"There ought to be," agreed the captain. "Dare you to come along and find out?"

"Take you. When you going to start?"

"Tonight. Full moon. Light as day. Don't want no talk about it. Jest hist sail and slip out while all the folks is dancing at the firemen's ball. If we can clear up a few hundred of these here coins I'll be satisfied. What say, Lem?" The captain punched his friend in the ribs with a playful forefinger.

"Sure. But, cap'n, how we going to get hold of the money? It's not all washed up on the beach and"—

"I got a small oyster dredger—a hand dredger that belonged to my brother Hiram," explained the captain patiently. "I've overhauled the donkey engine and got it rigged up under the tarpaulin yonder." He pointed to a lumpy mound on the foredeck. "One of us 'll bring up the mud, and t'other can poke around in it for gold. What say?"

"Captain Charlie," said Lem, with slow emphasis, "you got a head on you."

"Oh, I dunno, but I'm bound to git rich some day!" responded the captain modestly.

"There ain't nothing to be said to the wimmen folks about this, eh?"

"Not a hanged thing!" cried the captain. "Now let's get ashore so they won't suspicion we're hatching up anything."

"But you got preparations to make," protested Lem.

"Lem, I've been getting ready for this for weeks. You ain't got a thing to do 'cept step aboard, and away she goes. We oughter be back by tomorrow night."

"What you going to say to Elsie?"

"Tell her I'm going fishing. So I be, only it's for gold. She won't suspicion a thing. Any rate, why should she care?"

"They think it's contrapted nonsense," muttered Lem, thinking of his busy little wife.

* * * * * * * *

The midnight moon found the Rosy Dawn riding at anchor off No Point. The sand faced cliffs ran steeply down to the beach, and now with a steadily rising tide the water was washing the base of the cliffs.

Clouds scudded across the sky and now and then an ugly puff of wind from the northeast. The two adventurers, one at the donkey engine, the other paddling around in the tank of oozy mud that the dredger disgorged, shivered with the chill of the approaching storm. Lem Peters by the light of a lantern had searched the mud and had found a large coin. To their disgust, it proved to be an English penny instead of the gold they sought.

Clink, clank, creaked the old engine, while Captain Charlie swore picturesquely as he labored over its balky machinery.

Paddle and splash went Lem's paddle as he worked in the mud. At last he found a gold coin and another. Excitement ran high. The two treasure hunters forgot the rising storm. They did not see that the moon had hidden her face nor that the Rosy Dawn had dragged her anchor and was boring toward the rock strewn beach.

The lust for gold was in their eager eyes, and they worked frantically now, both of them plunging their hands into the dark mass salvaged from the sea.

"She's rocking some!" panted Captain Charlie as the Rosy Dawn lurched uncertainly. "But, Lem, we're bound to be rich men before morning."

"Sure thing!" puffed Lem as he uncovered another muddy coin. "Gee, cap'n, this was a great thought of yours."

"Yes—uh-uh-uhumph!"

The doughty little captain's voice ended in a shrill shout as the bow of the Rosy Dawn lifted high in the air and then drove down with a mighty crash.

The two startled adventurers were precipitated into the tank of mud, while the decrepit donkey engine gave one horrid shriek and was still forever.

When the two men faced each other in the dim light of the smoky lantern their faces were plastered with mud, and only their white, scared eyes were visible each to the other.

"Gone ashore, by grass!" shouted Lem Peters.

"My poor Rosy Dawn!" groaned Captain Charlie as he clambered out on deck.

As they stood there, peering up at the beetling cliff above, the clouds broke away from the moon and showed them that the stanch little schooner was high and dry on No Point beach.

"We'll be the laffinstock of all Quank!" groaned the captain once more as he realized their painful position.

"It's the wimmen folks I mind most," said Lem gloomily.

And at that very moment laughter broke in on their despondent murmurings. With one accord they turned frightened faces toward the deckhouse of the schooner, to start back in affright as a broad glow of light shot up from the open companionway. Then appeared two heads side by side. They were feminine heads, and they were followed by the substantial forms of Mrs. Elsie Sayles and Lem Peters' wife. And Mrs. Sayles and Mrs. Peters were laughing heartily, and when they saw the faces of the mud bespattered adventurers they laughed more than ever.

The doughty little captain took umbrage and shook his fist angrily.

"What does this mean, Elsie?" he demanded.

Mrs. Sayles ceased her laughter for a moment.

"Lizzie and me have found out that you two need gardeens," she explained. "So when we suspected you was hatching up more ridiculous trouble for yourselves, why, we jest made up our minds to come along. When you and Lem came aboard the Rosy Dawn we was all settled down in the spare state room, and we've had a reel nice time enjoying how two big men can rastle so hard for a few dollars. And, Captain Charlie, I'm thinking Quank folks will laff when they hear about the Rosy Dawn going ashore almost to home!"

Lem Peters' wife spoke up now.

"But if you and Lem'll divide up them gold pieces with us we won't breathe a word," she said.

"Done!" said the two adventurers eagerly. Captain Charlie sniffed the air hungrily.

"Seems like I smell ham frying, but I didn't bring no cook along," he muttered dazedly.

"Yes, you did; you brought two cooks, Lizzie and I've got supper all ready—ham and corn bread—and, cap'n, I guess you and Lem better go and wash some of that there mud off if you want some supper."

While they removed the mud from their faces Captain Charlie turned his little nutcracker countenance to his friend.

"How much will we have left out of this here gold after the wimmen git their share?" he asked.

"I reckon about one English penny apiece," answered Lem gloomily.

HE SURRENDERS TO REBELS

Government Overthrown Within an Hour After Palace Is Attacked by Troops—Revolt Due to Stand For Curtailment of Expenses and Cutting Off Perquisites of Officials

Lima, Peru, Feb. 5.—The Peruvian army mutinied and joined the revolutionists, who have been besieging the city for several days.

The government was overthrown within an hour after the soldiers mutinied by the capture of President Billinghurst. The troops, led by Colonel Bernavides, attacked the palace, and after a short parley the president surrendered.

Sharp fighting took place about the palace before Billinghurst yielded. General Valera, prime minister and head of the department of war and marine, received wounds from which he died a short time later.

The revolt was instigated by Augusto Durand, who had led several revolutions in Peru and whose arrest was ordered when the latest plot was revealed.

Durant has seized all state papers and will form a new government. Fighting at the palace began shortly before dawn. Many of the palace guard remained loyal to Billinghurst and kept up the conflict until the president sent a message to the rebels offering to surrender if his life were guaranteed.

Residents of the city were terrified by the sound of fighting and hundreds ran into the street. One man was killed and several others were wounded. The city is being patrolled by the rebel troops, but all business houses have been closed.

The revolt against Billinghurst was caused by his stand for the curtailment of government expenses, including a reduction of the army and the cutting off of certain perquisites that have gone to the officers. Durand, on the contrary, has always been an advocate of militarism.

Billinghurst was installed on Sept. 5, 1912, to serve four years. Durand will proclaim himself president ad interim and will establish a military government.

President Billinghurst was taken by the rebels as a prisoner to Callao, from which port he will be sent into exile.

Gloucester, Mass., Feb. 5.—After 18-year-old John O'Hanley of this city had been caught and treated like a naughty boy by his mother because he took out a license to marry 16-year-old Frances Silva, he managed to escape and the young people were married.

This became known when Mrs. John O'Hanley, the mother, called on City Marshal Marchant, leading John, and wanted to know what she was going to do with him.

The marshal was unable to say what she could do, on the spur of the moment, and Mrs. O'Hanley took John home again. The girl bride is living at home with her parents. They are also said to be much opposed to the match.

Many of the crew were in their bunks and had only time to get a few personal effects and lower away small boats. All the freight was lost. The survivors reached Arrandale cannery, where they were picked up by the Venture.

Ten-Day Campaign For Hospital Fund Nets Far Above $250,000

Boston, Feb. 5.—With $250,000 received and money still flowing in from all directions, the $200,000-in-ten-days campaign for the St. Elizabeth's hospital ended in a triumph of such magnitude as to surprise even the most sanguine of the promoters.

The ten-day period ended at midnight last night and as the stream of contributions will probably keep flowing in the greater part of today, it would not be considered surprising by the campaign managers if the final total would easily reach $300,000, instead of the original $200,000 expected.

ENGINEERS GIVE HEARING

On Complaints Relative to Quincy Point Drawbridge

A hearing was held at the Council chamber, City Hall, this morning by Col. John Millis of the United States Engineers' office at Boston, on the complaint of Arthur B. Shedd of 109 High street, East Weymouth, over the delay at the drawbridge at Quincy Point.

In opening, Col. Millis read the letters of complaint, and stated that his report on the first complaint had been that no action be taken in the matter. This resulted in another letter and he had decided to hold a public hearing. Parties having anything to say were requested to present the same in writing.

Mr. Shedd the complainant, read his complaint. He claimed that he was frequently delayed at the bridge by the draw being opened before necessary which held up his car so that when he arrived at the Fore River yards he was docked fifteen minutes. This meant a financial loss. He cited one case Nov. 8, when the draw was opened when the barge was a mile away which made quite a delay.

He said that under the old method of opening the draw was slow, and it was necessary to give the signal early. He however did not think it necessary to open the bridge as early now that it was operated by electricity.

Col. Millis also read a letter of complaint from Miss L. B. Thayer of Wellesley who complained her automobile had been held up.

Dock Commissioner Crane, who handled the case for the respondents, first called upon Supt. Conway of the street railway, who said he had never received any complaints of cars being held up unnecessarily.

Mr. Crane then read letters from D. J. McDuncan, manager of the Patch Coal Co., Capt. Daniel Higgins; John E. Ford, master of the tug Palace; Martin Cleverly, pilot; Harry W. Pray the drawtender; Capt. J. F. Kemp, Charles T. Clapp, H. H. I. Smith, Marcus Wight, and his own statement.

All of these were to the effect that drawbridge tender Pray was a most efficient man, and that he had used exceptionally care that passenger travel over the bridge was not delayed. Pilot Cleverly who was bringing up a barge on the date Nov. 8, stated that on that date it was very foggy and that it was impossible to see 300 feet away. That he whistled for the draw when off Germantown but it was not until within 300 feet of the head of the bridge that he made the bridge out. That there had never been any unnecessary delay in the opening or keeping the bridge open. Capt. Higgins said that in forty years experience he had never seen a drawbridge operated more efficiently and with as little delay as the Quincy Point draw. Th letters of all of the respondents was to the same effect.

Col. Millis also read a letter from President Bowles of the Fore River Corporation, stating he was satisfied with the operation of the draw. The hearing then closed and the matter taken under advisement.

BOARD OF TRADE

question. He declared that it was not true that the granite industry would be the only ones benefitted, and that he did not advocate it from a personal standpoint. He believed every dollar expended to investigate this project would return good interest, and would be the means of bringing new industries to Quincy.

President Hamilton reported the action of the City Council Monday evening on the matter, and looked for favorable report.

A communication was received from the State Board of Trade relative to a plan proposed by the executive committee for keeping track of trade matters in the Legislature, and suggesting the advisability of the State Board employing counsel to look after these matters that no matter of interest might be side tracked. The executive committee desired to raise a fund of at least $1,000. Contributions by the different Boards were requested. The matter was referred to the committee on legislative matters.

A communication was received from the secretary of the State Clean-up and Paint-up committee suggesting that local communities take part by appointing local committees to work with the general committee. The date for the clean-up and paint-up campaign is the week of May 3-10. This was referred to the committee on civic matters.

MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN.

The President called attention to the slogan posted on the wall, which was "Boost Quincy all the time." The Board he said was striving to increase the membership this year to 500 and they could do it if the members would take hold. If this was done the year 1915 would mean a campaign for 1000 members. With a membership of that number steps could be taken for a Board of Trade building which would have stores on the street floor, offices of the secretary and committee rooms on the second floor and a large hall on the third floor. Several had agreed to help back the plan by subscribing for bonds when the project was launched.

It was voted that the initiation fee of $5 be suspended for a period of 90 days.

The following were then elected to membership: Joseph L. Whiton, Hazen B. Chapman, W. J. Martin, Benjamin F. Chase, George H. Kendrick, E. W. Campbell and Edward H. Sass.

MOSQUITO PEST.

At this point W. N. Kenyon of Squantum called attention to his bill before the legislature for the extermination of the mosquito pest, a hearing upon which is to be held Feb. 5.

He explained in a general way what the bill called for. It had been determined by experiment he said that the pest could be eliminated by draining marsh land and filling swampy places. Last year he had tried the experiment at Squantum with good results. The idea of the bill was that cities and towns through their Board of Healths under the supervision of the State Board of Health do the work. All low lands would be filled or drained within the next four years. Once this was done it would be an easy matter to keep the pest down. Property of one ownership of less than five acres should be done in one year, while others would be extended over the entire period, the idea being not to make it a burden to the city. If the work is done under the supervision of the State Board, the expense would be divided as follows: One fourth on the city, one fourth on the state, and one half on the owners of the land. There was no question but what the land would be enhanced in value. He would like to have the Board of Trade favor the general terms of the bill. He also spoke of the successful work elsewhere and of the many documents which he had received from these places giving the result of the work.

When asked as to the expense he said one contractor had agreed to do the work from $12 to $15 an acre, but he believed other contractors could be found who would do it for $5 to $8 an acre, which extended over a period of four years would make the expense to about 67 cents a year.

The Board did not take final action on the matter but referred the subject to the City Improvement committee.

The amendment to the By-Laws proposed a the last meeting then came up for action. This amendment in brief provides that the Board of Directors shall consist of two members from each ward of the city. The amendment unanimously adopted.

The meeting then adjourned.

QUICK RESPONSE FOR CARPET

Action Taken at Supper of Wollaston Baptists

Wit the same spirit that always comes to the fore when some good cause is mentioned, the members of the Wollaston Baptist church raised $200 for a new church carpet in seven minutes at the social held in the chapel Wednesday evening.

The announcement came from E. W. Campbell that for some time a committee of the ladies had been trying to raise money for a carpet by means of subscriptions through the children. They had secured about $100. The carpet would cost about $300. He called for pledges. Immediately they began to flow in and in the time mentioned above the amount was raised amid bursts of applause and three cheers for Mr. Campbell.

The occasion was a hot roast beef supper served by members of the Ladies' Social and Benevolent Society, and a good supper it was too with all the famed cooks of the parish contributing.

The entertainer was Erastus Osgood of Quincy, who held the attention of a large audience for some time. The assembled company were welcomed by Charles B. Hall. Mr. Osgood's selections were all original, including; "The 11.30 train," relating hapenings between Boston and Quincy; "The society women," with interpolations by the Boston Elevated; "Hamlet under difficulties," contributed by Mr. Osgood to Harper's; "The Pink Tea," a tale of the Callahans; and "In the drug store," a story of the effeminate drug clerk.

Mr. Osgood had his guitar with him and rendered several musical selections including "The Comic song" and the "Ha Ha Song." Both were extremely funny and brought with them laughter and aplause.

The large committee of ladies serving the supper included Mrs. George K. Drew, chairman; Mrs. Charles B. Hall, Miss Margery Rideout, Mrs. Estes Mrs. Kendall F. Miss Allen is a pupil of Mrs. Wilbur Hascall, who is among foremost exponents of voice culture in Boston. Miss Kellogg and Mrs. Tourtellot are graduates of the Conservatory of Music. The program was of unusual enjoyment to all lovers of good music. It included a number of songs with violin obligato. Miss Allen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Redfield H. Allen of Presidents hill.

Public Service Commission Approves of Plans For Abolition of Grade Crossings

Mayor Miller Said to Have Given His Endorsement

The much mooted subject of the abolition, or as it is technically called the separation of the grades at the Saville and Water Street railroad crossings, which have been under discussion for several years, was practically settled Thursday at a conference held by the Public Service Commission with Mayor Miller, City Solicitor Pinkham, City Engineer Sargent and the citys expert engineer Mr. Breed

At this conference the commission informed the Mayor that it had no power to change the decree and that if the decree was thrown out it meant going over the entire subject again which would doubtless consume fully as much time as had already been given. The commission said that it desired to hold a conference with the city separate from that with the railroad to see if the parties at interest could not agree.

The whole subject was gone over thoroughly and at its conclusion Mayor Miller agreed on behalf of the city to accept what is practically the decree plan.

The commission informed the Mayor that the railroad would probably agree, and that it would use its best offices to have the work separating the grades commenced in the early spring.

The special commission appointed by the Superior court were ex-Governor John L. Bates, Winfield S. Slocum and Arthur H. Wellman, and their decree was given out on March 23, 1913.

It was under the administration of Mayor Thompson that the first hearings were held. There were several public hearings at which various plans were presented for consideration.

The presentation of so many different ideas complicated matters as was foretold by the late James F. Burke, who at the first hearing urged the citizens of Quincy to unite on one plan. His argument, which has since proved true, was that, unless the citizens could unite that Quincy might be the loser. His advice was not heeded however and plan after plan was presented. There was the city plan, the Board of Trade plan, John Q. A. Field plan, the Hayward plan and the famous Bates plan which was first, last and all the time for depression and the continuance of Saville street over the railroad.

Then at Water street there were about as many solutions offered with the result that the matter dragged along year after year with the end no where in sight.

THE DECREE.

Then came the decree last March which included a modification of all plans. This decree in brief extends Upland road through the Penniman property to Granite street; the discontinuance of Saville street at the railroad tracks with a subway under the tracks for foot passengers; the widening and straightening of the railroad at Granite street, leaving Granite street at practically the same grade as at present.

At Water street the tracks will be raised and Water street lowered so as to pass under the tracks. Water street will be widened to a width of sixty feet. That part of Liberty street adjoining Water street will be discontinued and a new street constructed. It also means the moving

GRAND BALL OF QUINCY POLICE ASSOCIATION

The eighth annual concert and ball of the Quincy Police Relief association was held in Music hall, Thursday evening and was one of the largest attended social events ever held in this hall. So large was the attendance that it was late in the evening when some of the guests had departed before dancing became comfortable.

Chief Burrell and the officers of the association were on hand early, and the wants of the specially invited guests, as well as the general guests, were well taken care of. This committee was headed by Lieut. Mark E.

CHIEF OF POLICE BURRELL.

Hanson, president of the association, Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue, Sergt. Ernest H. Bishop, Jeremiah Dinneen and Patrick A. Milford.

One of the earliest guests to arrive was Mayor Miller, who was escorted to the hall by Chief Burrell. The Mayor was given a seat of honor at the left of the stage, and here he held an informal reception, many of those present coming forward to shake him by the hand during the evening. During the first part of the evening he had several of the members of the City Council as a body guard and they made quite an imposing scene.

Aside from the Mayor, other officials noticed were: Senator L. F. R. Langelier, Representative Edward J. Sandberg, Councilman Charles A. Ross, chairman of the committee on fire and police matters; Councilman Herbert G. Beeman, Charles L. Gillatt, Charles A. Ericson, Robert B. Craig, and John B. Bass; City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell; Clerk of Council George T. Magee; John L. Hamilton, president of the Board of Trade, and others.

CAPTAIN DANIEL R. McKAY

There were also many prominent in police circles outside of Quincy, and this list of invited guests many of whom were present included the following: Chief Maurice Pierce of Milton, Chief Horace W. Hunt of Braintree, Chief Washington James of Hingham, Chief John Reynolds of Hull, Chief Inspector John R. McGarr, Superintendent William H. Pierce, Inspectors Patterson, Shields, Rooney, McCaulay, Burr, Geddes, all of Boston; Chief William Hill of Everett, Marshall Arthur Lays, Deputy Marshall James F. Morey and Inspector William Brouillard, all of Brockton, Supt. Redmund Welch of Lowell and Inspector John Walsh of Lowell, Superintendent Bartholomew Costello and Sergeant Garrett of the Metropolitan Police; Chief W. Kendall of Somerville and Officer O'Day of Station 5 Boston.

The arrangements for the evening were in charge of a most efficient committee including: Lieut. M. E. Hanson, Sergt. E. H. Bishop, Jeremiah Hinchon, Chief F. E. Burrell, P. A. Milford, Capt. D. R. McKay, Inspector A. W. Goodhue, Henry F. Riley, Jeremiah Dinneen, David L. Farrell, Claes A. Broberg.

From 8 to 9 o'clock Wilson's orchestra of ten pieces gave a promenade concert, their selections including the following numbers:

March, "The Dandy Fifth" George Devlin
Overture "Hungarian Lustspiel" Kela Bela
Concert Waltz, "1001 Night" Strauss
Medley Overture
"The Red Canary" Orlob
Duet, "The Larks" Bendix
Flute and Clarinet
Finale, "The Belle of Havana" Bendle

The dance was opened by a grand march which was not largely participated in. These grand marches are going out of style for active participants do not care for a mile or more walk about the hall before indulging in the regular program. The march however was very prettily executed. Leading off was Master Herbert Farnum, dressed in a full uniform of a

INSPECTOR GOODHUE

Sergeant, while the march proper was led by Chief Burrell and daughter Miss Elsie Burrell.

Following close in their wake were Capt. Daniel R. MaKay, Senator Langelier, Representative Sandberg, President Hamilton of the Board of Trade, Councilman Craig, Beeman, Ross, Gilliatt, and Ericson with their ladies. Then came the officers of the association. The march terminated in a waltz.

The dance program contained twenty numbers, which with the encores was greatly extended. There was a brief intermission shortly before midnight during which Whittemore served a lunch in the annex.

Special cars for all points left the hall after the dance.

The floor marshall, floor directors and aids, were distinguished by handsome badges. This corps of officers were as follows:

Marshall—Chief Frank E. Burrell.
Floor Director—Jeremiah Hinchon.
Ass't. Floor Directors—Capt. D. R. McKay, Henry F. Corbett, David L. Farrell.

Aids—Sergt. J. T. Larkin, John Halloran, Edward Johnson, Michael Donovan, Claes A. Broberg, Edward J. Curtin, James W. Murray, Henry W. Thorne, Thomas A. Malone, Daniel J. Ford, Daniel M. Shea, Alexander T. Black, Henry F. Riley, George A. Cahill, John P. Duffy, Charles T. Crooker, Charles Olson, John J. Duane, John J. Avery, William Hebert, Jeremiah D. Dhooge, James H. Whelan, James McNamara, George W. Fallon, Frank Canavan, Daniel H. Doran and George F. Phillips.

The children of the Junior Auxiliary of the Christ church will present the "Star Fairies Mission" a musical production, in the parish house this evening.

COMMODORE RE-ELECTED

Quincy Yacht Club In Good Financial Condition

The annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht club was held Thursday evening at Electa hall and there was a large attendance of members. The one important matter in the call aside from the election of officers was an amendment to the by-laws raising the dues from $8 to $10 per year. There was but little debate on this proposition, however, and the amendment was carried by a vote of 55 to 15.

The reports of the various officers showed the club to be in a most prosperous condition with a membership of 400.

The treasurer's report showed the total receipts from all sources during the year to have been $5,460.94 which included $190 from new members, while the general expenses amounted to $5,462.87, leaving a cash balance on hand of $8.07.

There was no contest for any of the officers of the club and the secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for the list as nominated. The following were then declared elected.

IN DEFENCE OF CARDINAL O'CONNELL

Edward J. Parker Replies to Sermons of Revs. Hudson and Willmott

Answers Some of the Questions That Were Asked

Editor of the Ledger:

So much has appeared in your columns recently, not only in criticism of Cardinal O'Connell's recent address to the Holy Name Society, but also in an attack upon the Roman Catholic church, that I am sure you will not deny me space in an attempt to answer certain questions, and to say a few words about the Cardinal's address.

What Rev. Mr. Hudson and Rev. Mr. Willmott said may be divided into three parts.

First.—An arknowledment of the truth of a great deal of what the Cardinal said.

Second,—A criticism of something claimed to have been said by him.

Third,—A series of questions and statements, showing such an utter disregard for the truth, that it is incredible they were made.

I am going to deal first with the statements of Rev. Mr. Hudson; he says, was not so much against any doctrine of the church as against the most gross and palpable corruption on the part of its leading officials, and the open licensing of immorality in the sale of indulgences, while at the present time it is pertinent to inquire whether in our large cities where vice and corruption are most notorious, the standard of public morals is higher when the reins of government are in the hands of men who recognize the authority of Rome, than when non-Catholics are in power."

"THE PROTEST OF LUTHER"

If the statements herein made are not true, from what can they proceed if not hatred, bitterness, ill will and ignorance; if these statements are untrue, here indeed, is liberty without authority, and the absence of the "human brotherhood," "democracy," "service to others," "scientific thinking," and "peace and good will," about which Rev. Mr. Hudson talked with such unctuousness.

Of the first of these statements, I have to reply, that history does not record, and the fact is, that INDULGENCES WERE NEVER SOLD either under the authority, or by the direction of the Roman Catholic church, and the statement is therefore untrue, to the statement made by Rev. Mr. Hudson that indulgences licensed immorality, either openly or covertly. I have to reply, that that statement also is not only untrue, but brutally and cruelly so, and unworthy of any intelligent person.

To Rev. Mr. Hudson's inquiry in regard to vice and corruption in large cities when governed by Roman Catholics and when governed by non-Catholics, I have only to reply there is no need to be hunting for vice and corruption all the time; there is virtue and honesty and good will enough

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

Even if they did give every one $35.11, his share of the money of the country, some people would have self-control enough to show up at the office next day.

It is claimed that the railroads should reduce the pay of high salaried officials, although these men have unusual difficulty in meeting the cost of living.

It is not true that John Lind remarked that the weather was pleasant the other day as he never talks recklessly, to interviewers.

No, sporting friends, when the Mexican Federals are mentioned in the newspapers, it does not refer to any teams connected with the new baseball league.

As the Congressman realize what a calamity to the country it would be if the ywere not re-elected, it is believed they will adjourn early and begin campaigning in good season.

There are 10,000 applications for 400 jobs as income tax inspectors. Is it not delightful that there are so many patriots willing to make sacrifices to save their country?

ANOTHER BATCH OF HEROES.

Thirty more certified heroes were created by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, in connection with their annual meeting. This makes a total of 871 that so far have received rewards.

Most of the beneficiaries of these awards seem to be quiet or even obscure people, the presence in whom of possibilities of grand self sacrifice would not be guessed until some moment of crisis. Lacking this chance for self devotion, they might pass through life with their possibilities unrecognized. The hero fund must be very valuable, in giving these fine and quiet persons a considerable reputation. This attracts attention to their worthiness, wins public confidence, and helps give them better chances and broader opportunities in life.

The commissioners' records show awards to only about eight per cent of the persons for whom application was made for recognition as heroes. One man lost some false teeth while swimming out for a friend, and asked for a new set. A woman who ran out without wraps to help the victims of an automobile accident, wanted a reward for taking the risk of pneumonia. Some of the apllications have been fakes. Sometimes under the scrutiny of weather records, the terrific storm in which a water rescue was effected, turns out to be a still and sunshiny day.

A force of ten expert hero sleuths spends all its time hunting down these cases. All these men are former newspaper reporters, which calling the commission feels gives superior qualifications for hunting out and judging evidence.

These awards can not directly stimulate acts of heroism. The hero is not a fellow who bargains for medals, pensions, or fame. But the emphasis given to these stories of devotion must create an atmosphere of admiration of the heroic. Indirectly, this may cultivate a tendency toward heroic acts.

At the whist party Thursday evening in I. O. O. F. hall at Wollaston, under the auspices of the Wollaston lodge of the American Benefit Society the prizes were awarded to F. L. Willis, F. G. Osgood, T. P. Hanson, Mrs. A. X. Gardiner, Mrs. F. G. Osgood, Miss Kathleen Jones and Miss Elvina M. Young.

ARE ENTITLED TO PROTECTION

Non-Combatants In Mexico Will Be Guarded by Officials

HUERTA INCREASING HIS ARMY

Available Fighting Force Will Be Brought Up to 239,000 Men—Forbids Anti-American Demonstration at Capital—Charge O'Shaughnessy Continues to Hold Down His Job

Mexico City, Feb. 6.—A circular of instructions was issued by Provisional President Huerta to the chiefs of all army divisions and governors of states to the effect that the government having begun a more active campaign against the rebels extreme diligence be observed in giving all possible protection to non-combatants, foreign as well as native, removing them when necessary from the zones of operations.

Huerta issued a decree authorizing an increase of the army of 50,000 men. Including irregulars, according to official figures, this will bring the available fighting force of the army up to 239,000. Huerta declares he will begin an active campaign immediately in all sections of the country.

Huerta cabled to newspapers in Buenos Ayres, London, Paris and Madrid and to a few in the United States about the army increase and invited the newspapers to send correspondents to Mexico, saying he would place them in a position where they could ascertain the truth concerning conditions in the republic.

Students in the capital made plans to hold a public demonstration against the American government, but the governor of the federal district, acting under instructions from Huerta, announced that no anti-foreign demonstration would be permitted.

Satisfaction was expressed at the American embassy over the prompt manner in which the authorities denied the students permission to hold a meeting.

Although the newspapers continue to print bitter articles dealing with the lifting of the embargo on arms by President Wilson, the public generally has as yet displayed no active interest in the subject.

Nothing has yet developed to indicate that Huerta intends to hand Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American charge of affairs, his passports.

The management of the National railways notified shippers that the company would accept for transportation only perishable goods such as are necessary for the maintenance of the public. This action was taken because of the scarcity of fuel oil and coal.

The railway line from San Luis Potosi to Tampico, over which most of the oil is shipped, is in control of the rebels.

An unconfirmed report was in circulation here to the effect that the outposts of Tampico had been attacked by rebels at Altamira.

Brownsville, Tex., Feb. 6.—A Mexican brass band marched through the streets here, leading a parade of eighteen wagons loaded with ammunition, the first regular importation for the constitutionalists of northeast Mexico since the lifting of the embargo by President Wilson.

There were 600,000 rounds in the wagons. They crossed the Rio Grande to Matamoras, headquarters of the constitutionalists.

NEW SCHOOL ENDORSED

Alarming Increase of Juvenile Population Noted

At the meeting of the Parents and Teachers Association of the Massachusetts Fields school Thursday evening, it was voted to appoint a committee of five to co-operate with the Norfolk Downs Improvement Association in the effort for a new grammar school between the Massachusetts Fields school and the Quincy school in Atlantic.

Speakers mentioned the crowded conditions of all schools in the vicinity and the alarming increase of the juvenile population. The need of an assembly hall for the present building was discussed but no action was taken.

It was voted to observe Child Welfare day on February 17, and Joseph K. Barber chairman of the playground committee stated that the order for a playground rested at present in the finance committee of the City Council.

The speaker of the evening was Mrs. Arthur D. Ropes president of the Wollaston Woman's club who delivered a stereopticon lecture on "The Wonderland of America." The views were many in number, and showed in a way that words could not tell the incomparable colorings and landscapes of Yellowstone Park and the Yosemite Valleys. The geysers and hotsprings of the country were realistically described by Mrs. Ropes, and many humorous and interesting details of the trip were related. The drive through the Yellowstone by coach covered over five days. A very graphic account of the Yosemite trip followed and the ascent on mule back was one of the funniest stories related. Mrs. Ropes was appreciated and was tendered a vote of thanks.

MAKING INCANDESCENT LAMPS.

The ordinary Mazda incandescent lamp is not expensive, although it is the product of elaborate manufacturing processes. Each lamp contains twenty-five separate pieces of material and not less than forty-six operations are required to finish and assemble it. And not one of these twenty-five materials is a finished product, or raw material. They are all products of separate processes and factories, each represents in itself a number of careful and expensive operations. For example, the manufacture of the glass bulb is a complete operation in itself, requiring large factories, extensive furnaces to melt the the various compounds, some of which are imported, and an army of skilled workmen. The different parts of an electric lamp are:

The glass bulb.
The wire filament.
Top and bottom anchors for filament.
Cane glass hub to support filament.
Leading-in wires.
Glass stem.
Air tight seal.
Brass screw shell of base.
Glass insulation for base.
Brass cap contact of base.

The work of assembling the lamp requires skill and attention to detail. Some of the operations require the highest skill, some are of such a nature that a few sceonds, or a few degrees variation in temperature, will ruin the lamp. The vacuum is obtained to a degree undreamed of a few years ago, being as good as 99,999 per cent of an absolute vacuum.

RESTELLI REWARD.

Ex-Mayor Stone was the only one to appear at the State House hearing today on petition that the city of Quincy be authorized to pay rewards in the Restelli murder case to James R. Qualey and PatrickA. Milford. There was no opposition. The amount named was $500.

BEALE STREET FIRE.

The alarm from Box 59 at 3.30 this morning was for a lively blaze in the bicycye store of James Tabb on Beale street. Just how the fire started is not known but it was evidently caused by an explosion for the officer on duty in that section heard an explosion in the store which was followed by flames and he sounded the alarm. There were a number of bicycles in teh store which werr uined. The loss is estimated at about $200.

FORESTERS' SUPPER AND DANCE

The twelfth annual supper and dance of the Degree Staff Social Club of the Foresters of America, Court John Adams, was held Thursday evening in Clan MacGregor hall. The members and their wives and families were present and although there was a smaller crowd than in previous years everyone enjoyed themselves immensely.

After the supper, dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. George Thompson furnished the music for the dancing. Vocal solos were rendered by William Walsh and John M. Troupe. During the latter part of the evening Mr. Walsh gave a good exhibition with his partner of the way in which the tango is danced properly.

Much of the credit for the success of the affair was due to the following committee of ladies, who helped to prepare and serve the supper: Mrs. William T. Lillie, Mrs. Edward Shaw, Mrs. John Kennedy, Mrs. John Pritchard and Mrs. Clara McGregor.

The committee which had charge of the affair included William B. Allen A. Murray Pierce, John Pritchard, John Hackett, Neil Johnson, William T. Lillie, Cornelius Driscoll, John M. Troupe, Henry Allicon and Edward Shaw. John M. Troupe acted as floor director.

VISITATION AT WOLLASTON

The degree team of Milton lodge, Knights of Pythias, paid a fraternal visit to Merrymount lodge of Wollaston, Thursday evening and conferred the rank of knight on eleven squires of that lodge. The Castle hall, opposite Wollaston station was packed with the members of Merrymount lodge and many visiting knights, over 40 from Milton lodge attending.

The degree was exemplified in fine shape, and after the work, cigars, refreshments and a social time was enjoyed, enlivened with speeches by the visiting brothers. Among the speakers were Harry B. May of Crusade lodge, South Bend, Indiana; Will F. Davis of Branhall lodge, Portland, Maine; Dr. R. C. Achorn of A. C. Moody lodge, Lynn; George E. Wragg of Milton lodge; Deputy Charles Stevens of Washington lodge, Dorchester and several others.

Chancellor Commander Harrie announced that Merrymount lodge had won the prize flag awarded by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts for the greatest gain in per cent of membership during the last six months. In that time the local lodge made a gain of over 90 per cent.

COD LIVER OIL AND IRON

Two Most World-Famed Tonics Combined in Vinol.

Cod Liver oil and Iron have proved to be the two most successful tonics the world has ever known—iron for the blood and the medicinal curative elements of cod liver oil as a strength and tissue builder for body and nerves and for the successful treatment of throat and lung troubles.

Two eminent French chemists discovered a method of separating the curative medicinal elements of the cods' livers from the oil or grease which is thrown away, but to these medicinal elements tonic iron is now added, thus combining in Vinol the two most world famed tonics.

As a body-builder and strength creator for weak, run-down people, for feeble old people, delicate children, to restore strength after sickness; and for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis or pulmonary troubles we ask you to try Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. LAUGHS AS HE IS CONVICTED

Jury Finds Schmidt Guilty of First Degree Murder

COUNSEL CLAIMED INSANITY

Slayer of Anna Aumuller Protested and Will Refuse to Assist In Preparation of Appeal—Pieces of Girl's Body Found In the Hudson, but Head Was Never Recovered

New York, Feb. 6.—Hans Schmidt was found guilty of murder in the first degree for killing Anna Aumuller, a young woman he had married by a self-performed ceremony while acting as a priest at St. Joseph's church.

The penalty for the crime is death in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison. He will be sentenced next Wednesday.

Schmidt, whose defense was insanity, laughed when the verdict was pronounced. He had steadfastly declared himself guilty and at his arraignment before being held for the supreme court pleaded that he be punished by death. Later he protested against the insanity defense advanced by his counsel and last night said he would not assist them in any way if they prepared an appeal.

"I would rather die tonight than tomorrow," he said. "It is as it should be and as I wish it."

This was the second trial and the jury was out a few minutes less than five hours. At the first trial the jury disagreed. Alienists for prosecution and defense supplied most of the testimony at both trials.

A. G. Keeible of Schmidt's counsel asserted after the verdict that owing to the former priest's persistent silence concerning the crime it had not been possible to place all the facts before the jury. He said Schmidt was not guilty of murder, but had shielded a physician after the woman's death.

She was not murdered, the lawyer declared. If the police would display energy, he said, they could get at the truth. The lawyer was undecided whether he would take an appeal. "Father Schmidt will never go to the electric chair," he said, however.

Anna Aumuller's body was cut up with a knife in Schmidt's flat Sept. 2 last and the pieces, in several bundles, were thrown into the Hudson river, where most of them were found before suspicion was directed against Schmidt. The head was never recovered. Schmidt in his confession to the police said he was commanded to make a "sacrifice" of the Aumuller girl's life by his patron, St. Elizabeth.

Dr. Ernst A. Muret, a dentist, Schmidt's friend and companion, who was arrested shortly after the expriest was accused of murder, was sentenced in October to seven years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta after his conviction for counterfeiting.

Schmidt declared at Muret's trial that it was he and not Muret who planned the counterfeiting operations.

CASE TAKEN FROM JURY

Suit Dismissed Because of Article In Boston Newspaper

Boston, Feb. 6.—Because of articles published in a Boston newspaper relative to the suit of James M. Hall against Paine, Webber & Co., Judge Brown, who was hearing the evidence, took the case from the jury.

Complaint was made Wednesday to the court because of an article in a newspaper. After a long conference Brown polled the jury. None of the jurors read the article and the case was allowed to continue. Yesterday another article appeared and counsel for the defendants asked the court for a ruling. The result was that the case was taken from the jury.

Hall, in his suit, seeks to recover $59,885, which he claims is due him on stock transactions.

MRS. COLBY'S BODY TAKEN FROM LAKE

Long Search Had Been Conducted For Missing Woman

Newton, Mass., Feb. 6.—The body of Mrs. Annie E. Colby, the widow of a Boston lawyer, who disappeared mysteriously from the private sanitarium of Dr. Eaton in this city several weeks ago, was found floating in Crystal lake yesterday afternoon.

Search for Mrs. Colby had been prosecuted vigorously by the police of all Greater Boston cities and towns and by her relatives and friends for weeks without revealing the slightest clue as to what had become of her. The police dragged Crystal lake several times, but found no trace of her.

Mrs. Colby wandered away from the sanitarium one night while her nurse was absent from her room. She left all her money and jewels behind. The body, badly decomposed, was identified by the clothing she wore.

Suffering from a nervous breakdown, Mrs. Colby had been a patient in the sanitarium for more than a year. She was wealthy in her own right.

IDENTIFIED BY VICTIM

Man Held at Providence Supposed to Be New York Gunman

Providence, Feb. 6.—Frank C. Pettis, who was held up and shot by two men and a boy near his home, identified Rafaelo Fruscionte, believed by the police to be a New York gunman, as one of the two men.

Pettis was shot twice, but not seriously injured, and his assailants fled without obtaining anything, although Pettis carried $1000 in cash and about $2000 worth of diamonds.

Fruscionte was arrested with two others in connection with a series of robberies.

MATRONI IS INDICTED

Barge Captain Held In Connection With Death of Annie Walsh

Taunton, Mass., Feb. 6.—An indictment charging murder in the first degree in connection with the death of Annie Walsh at New Bedford was returned against Charles Matroni, captain of the barge Snipe.

When Matroni was arrested on board the barge the police found a blood-stained axe near the partly dismembered body of Miss Walsh.

LADIES' NIGHT PLANNED.

A regular meeting of Quincy Herd, Benevolent Order of Buffaloes, was held Thursday evening in Hibernian hall. In the absence of President Finn, Vice President John J. Byron was in the chair. Preparations are completed for the annual ladies' night which will be held Thursday evening Feb. 12. Through the good work of the Red Sox rally team, captained by George Davies, seven applications for membership were received and two candidates were initiated into membership. A social hour followed the meeting. Last Sunday night President Finn and the degree staff conducted a class initiation for the Boston herd, No. 6. On Monday evening they installed the officers of the Beverly herd No. 9.

—Whatever may be said regarding "tango" dancing by its friends, the trend of public opinion on the part of the clergy and of the best and most thoughtful of the laity is so strongly against it that it cannot gain a place in decent society. Admit if you please, that in its original form, as danced among those who are entirely conservative, it may not be objectionable, it becomes most decidedly so as ordinarily practiced. Young girls seem too willing to participate in it in its most objectionable and suggestive poses and it is not possible to handle pitch without becoming defiled.—Walthem Free Press.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Bowling Contests Athletic Leagues
Illustrated Lectures Banquets
Basket Ball Conferences

A ladies' night will be held on Tuesday evening, Feb. 17, for members of the Senior class and older student members. The committee promises something new this time in addition to the usual bowling, games and refreshments.

The Silent Five will play the Walpoles of the Roxbury Y. M. C. A. on the local floor Saturday evening, and between the halves the Employed Boys will play an out-of-town team. The first and second teams go to Brockton to meet the Y. M. C. A. teams of that city. Quincy should take both games although their rivals have the reputation of being a hard proposition.

The Sunday School basketball teams are practicing regularly for the league series which begins the latter part of the month. The schedule of practice hours is as follows: Mondays 4 to 5,—Bethany, Christian Science, Swedish Lutheran, First Presbyterian (younger boys.) Thursday, 3.30 to 5—Park and Downs, Union chapel, Wollaston Congregational, Swedish Congregational, Washington Street Congregational. Friday 3.30 to 5—Wollaston Methodist, Christ Church, Wollaston Baptist, Sacred Heart. Fridays, 6 to 7—United Presbyterian and First Presbyterian (older boys.)

The first match in the Sunday School bowling league will be rolled off tonight when the Davis class of the Calvary Baptist church meet Alex. Clark's class of the First Presbyterian church.

Edwin Mulready, deputy commissioner of Probation for Massachusetts, is to speak at the Saturday morning meeting this week. He was scheduled for an address two weeks ago but was unable to keep his appointment. The subject of his talk will be "Responsibility."

The Duffers pool tournament for Employed Boys was won by James Sullivan. In the final match he defeated Allen Connor by a score of 25 to 71.

The Tufts team is in the lead now in the Employed Boys gymnasium competition. In the contests Wednesday evening they got enough points to pass Carlisle which has led from the opening of the spring term until now.

The Pilgrims still have a commanding lead over the B. A. A. team in the Junior gymnasium contest. The Wanderers are a good third, and the Puritans fourth.

During the seven weeks in which the Mens meetings will be held in Kincaide's theatre, the Y. M. C. A. will be closed Sunday afternoons until 5.30 when the doors will be opened for an hour and a half, or until the church services begin.

B. A. A. leads in the Junior bowling not having met defeat yet. On Saturday they defeated the Wanderers by 24 pins, getting 352 pins to their opponents 328. This week the Pilgrims and Puritans are to bowl.

The cups won by Djerf and Hunt in the State Boys division games championship have arrived. Djerf won the State championship in bowling and Hunt in ping pong.

The return meet with Cambridge Y. M. C. A. will be held on March 4 at Cambridge. The men from the University city promise to come back strong in this second contest, but Quincy has an unusually strong team this year and should win the second meet by a good margin.

The Lynn Y. M. C. A. boys track team which took first place in the State meet at Quincy in December repeated at Salem last Saturday, winning the meet by a total of 41 points. At Quincy they had a total of 46.

Plans are being formulated for making State Boys Day a bigger event even than it was last year. The money raised on this day is to be used for a special purpose which will probably be the purchase of a camp site and equipment. A year ago the boys raised over $100, half of which was laid aside for local needs. This year the boys hope to double the amount and thus get a good start toward the realization of the desired end. State Boys Day comes on March 14 this year.

The first meeting of the committee on Mother and Son banquet will be held early next week. A committee of fathers of boys in the boys department is to take charge of arrangements.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

A Sunday School convention of the Swedish Mission churches and Eastern Sunday School Association is announced for Saturday evening and Sunday at the Swedish Congregational church, Rev. A. G. Sporrong, pastor on Garfield street.

The delegates will be welcomed about 6 P. M. Saturday by the Sunday School teachers of the local church who will serve a lunch.

At 7.30 a business session will be held in the church.

Sunday morning at the Sunday School session there will be addresses by delegates.

At the 10.45 service the pastor will speak on the subject:—"How can the Sunday School become more efficient?"

At 3 P. M. a session of the convocation will be held when three topics pertaining to Sunday School work will be discussed. Music by male chorus and soloists.

Coffee and refreshments will be served at 5.30.

At 7 o'clock, at the regular Sunday evening service the pastor's subject will be:—"The great cloud of witnesses."

TWIN DAUGHTERS.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Carlson, well known Swedish residents of this city, are receiving the congratulations of their many friends on the birth of twin daughters born at their home at 166 South street Thursday night.

The mid week services at the Washington street Congregational church will be renewed tonight. Rev. Stephen Lang will officiate and preach on the subject: "The place and use of the prayer meeting."

CARDINAL O'CONNELL

in the large cities whether governed by Roman Catholics or Protestants; but if a comparison must be made, I have only to say there was less vice and corruption and the standard of public morals was never higher in any city in the United States, than it was in Boston, Massachusetts, when governed by Roman CATHOLIC MAYORS.

The city of New York has lately elected a Roman Catholic to the office of mayor, who promises to be the best mayor New York ever had; and he was elected in spite of Tammany.

To come nearer home, I would like to ask Rev. Mr. Hudson how much vice and corruption existed in Quincy, Massachusetts, the four years the lamented Hon. William T. Shea, a Roman Catholic was mayor of Quincy; and if he was not one of the best mayors Quincy ever had. I do not like to stigmatize any city, but can Rev. Mr. Hudson tell me if Philadelphia, Penn., was ever governed by Roman Catholics, and if so when.

Rev. Mr. Hudson says "The Church of Rome commands its large following through the baser motives of FEAR AND SUPERSTITION."

I have to reply to that statement the following, viz:—There lived in the last century in France, a gentleman named Louis Pasteur. His life was given to actual scientific thought and work, rather than to talk of scientific thought. Indeed, to such an extent did he do this, that he is commonly acknowledged as one of the benefactors or humanity. In one of his letters to his children he said, "The more I know, the more nearly is my faith that of the Breton peasant. Could I but know all, I would have the faith of the Breton peasant woman."

This gentleman a devout Catholic during his life was one of the greatest scientific men of his time and died with his rosary in his hands, after listening to the life of St. Vincent de Paul which he had asked to have read to him, because he thought that his work like that of St. Vincent would do much to save suffering children.

Was this fear and superstition, or was it the faith and humility of the true Catholic?

The statement made by the Rev. Mr. Hudson that the persistently claims that it is "divinely ordained to absolute rule in all things temporal as well as spiritual," is so absurdly incorrect and untrue that it is quite apparent his education is incomplete, and if all that he said is to be taken as a specimen of the new scientific thinking then no intelligent man wants anything to do with it.

If Rev. Mr. Hudson, or the readers of the Daily Ledger would like to know what may result from scientific thinking as taught in Roman Catholic schools, he and they might read with profit "The Berlin Discussion of the Problem of Evolution," where they will learn how Rev. Eric Wassman S. J., an humble Jesuit, floored eleven opponents, whose scientific thinking was of the description of that spoken of by Rev. Mr. Hudson.

Of Father Wassman's treatment at this debate, Dr. M. Senff, wrote, "If scientific truth prevailed, the awkward situation would not arise that, in a Protestant country, a sense of honor compels a third person to come to the assistance of a Jesuit."

Another non-Catholic author wrote, "The disgraceful fact remains that Wassman, an insignificant priest, routed out collective scientists, and in the course of the discussion displayed the greatest tact in combating that scientific arrogance which deals with truths that are limited to an existence of twenty years," as Ibsen Stockmann tells us, "whereas the church, in her exalted wisdom, is fully conscious that no earthly truth, of any kind whatever can be contrary to a divine truth."

BAXTER STREET FIRE.

An exploding lamp in the home of Daniel Sheahan at 25 Baxter street, Thursday evening started a fire which damaged the kitchen to the extent of $15. When the explosion occurred the occupants of the house ran to the street crying fire. Michael Giglio who heard their screams and saw banks of smoke rolling out of the open door sounded the alarm. In beaking the glass door two of his fingers were lacerated. The fire was extinguished by streams from the auto chemical and car of Chief Billings. The house is owned by Mrs. C. Ewell and occupied by Daniel Sheahan and Frank Stoddard.

BENEVOLENCES OF THE CITY

Four speakers described benevolent work in Quincy to the members of the Women's Guild of Christ church Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur discussed the Hospital Aid after which the Guild voted to give one day of the Lenten work days to sewing for that institution.

Mrs. Eugene C. Hultman spoke on the Day Nursery in a way which made it evident that her plea for donations would meet with a ready response.

Dr. Fred E. Jones set forth the needs of the contagious hospital and explained the plans of one proposed for this city, meeting with enthusiastic applause.

Miss Jennie M. Purchase of the Associated Charities described the work of the association in an illuminating and convincing manner.

President Mrs. C. M. Chase, after expressing the appreciation of the ladies for the talks, closed the business meeting and a pleasant social hour followed. Refreshments were served by a committee of which Mrs. W. F. Torrey was chairman.

OUR SENATOR TO THE DEFENSE

There was a lively debate in the Senate on Thursday over the bill to authorize the expenditure of $75,000 at the rate of $25,000 each year under the direction of the Directors of the Port of Boston, in improving the harbors outside the City of Boston for which an appropriation of $9,000,000 was made.

The debate was started by Senator Hogan who claimed that the appropriation was for the benefit of private individuals such as the Fore River Corp. at Quincy.

This brought Senator Langelier to his feet, and he made an able reply, claiming that the statement was not true, and that even if it was, any appropriation that would aid a concern which had built the largest battleship in the world was entitled to some consideration, especially when the sum of $9,000,000 was to be expended about Boston harbor alone. He said that the City of Quincy and the Fore River Corp. were entitled to some consideration.

After considerable debate the bill was acted upon favorably the vote being almost unanimous, Senator Hogan only being against.

ON CHARGE OF LARCENY.

George McDonald of Brackett street was arrested Thursday on a charge of larceny of an automobile in Cambridge. The arrest was made by Officers Normole of the Cambridge police, who had Henry C. McDonald, a brother, in custody, who had been arrested in Randolph. The automobile is said to belong to Fred L. Owen of Cambridge. The McDonalds denied they had stolen the auto or had any part in its disappearance. They were taken to Cambridge.

The submarine boat K 1, built at the Fore River shipyard for the United States government will be given her battery discharging tests today in Boston harbor. The boat will be turned over to the naval officials at the Charlestown Navy yard Saturday.

THE SQUANTUM WOMEN'S CLUB

Mrs. Charles Bostwick entertained the Squantum Women's club Wednesday afternoon at her home on Bellevue road. The president Mrs. William A. Reed, presided at the business meeting. Reports of the various committees were heard, and Mrs. Hiram Morse chairman of the finance committee made a favorable report in regard to the building of the clubhouse. Yards of pennies were turned in to Mrs. Charles Ramsdell, treasurer.

After adjournment Mrs. Bostwick had a pleasant surprise for the ladies in the form of a "heart luncheon." The dining-room was prettily decorated with pink streamers from which hung pink hearts and cute little pink cupids. At the head of the table was a heart shape cake with the following "1914 S. W. C.," done in pink candies. Fancy sandwiches, cut heart shape, were served with coffee and cake. The table cloth, napkins and dishes all carried out the color scheme. Little pink baskets, trimmed with hearts in the same color and filled with candies were given the guests as favors. All agreed that the meeting was one of the most enjoyable ever held.

QUINCY A. A. VICTORIES

Defeat St. Alphonsus 27 to 20 and 18 to 10

The St. Alphonsis A. A. first and second teams, contenders for the championship of the Greater Boston league were defeated by the Quincy A. A. representatives in Hibernian hall Thursday evening. The first team score was 27 to 20 and the second team score 18 to 10.

In the first game O'Neil, while chasing the ball, collided with Sid Duggan, and was thrown against the side of the wall. He received four slight gashes in the back, over the right kidney. On reentering the game he displayed practically the same grit as before his accident.

Bull Moose Brown played in both games, and did fine work in the four periods he appeared. In the first game his work against Dacey, a resourceful player, was first class, and in addition he shot two baskets. In the second team game he outplayed his man and scored. Bull Moose filled in the vacancy on the first team caused by sickness of Birnie Boyle.

Both the O'Rourke brothers played the forward position, netting two apiece after good hard strategic work. Sid Duggan shot six, three of which counted as velvet because they were from the centre of the floor. O'Neil and Dacey excelled for the visitors. Few fouls were called and Hebert gathered in his possible two points. The summary.

QUINCY	St. ALPHONSUS
J. O'Rourke rf	lb Collins
F. O'Rourke lf	rb Nea
Duggan c	c O'Neil

SECOND GAME.

The score at the end of the first period of the second team game was 6 to 6. Manning who had not opened up in his first half, got underway and passed and covered, attempting very little shooting. Pinel got four baskets. Mattie Cummings played to fill out the lineup caused by the absence of Clint Scollard. Brown filled the duties of his position in his usual manner. Ennis and J. Hendron featured for the visitors. The summary:

GOOD ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN

Joseph M. Larkin Speaks on Vocational Training

Joseph M. Larkin, supervisor of apprentices at the Fore River shipyard lectured in the Boston Public Library on Vocational Training on Wednesday evening to a large number of young men and teachers from various trade and industrial schools of Boston. The remarks were supplemented by a review of the successful training of apprentices, and illustrated with lantern slides of the departments at the shipyard.

The lecture was the ninth of a series on Vocational Training which is being given under the auspices of the Boston Placement Bureau. Mr. Larkin said in part:

"In every sort of an undertaking, it is important that the right start should be made. It is better to take a little time to find an opening in the line of work in which the boy expects to remain permanently, than it is to take the first thing that is offered, with the expectation of changing later. A boy will do well to consult with friends or acquaintances to secure for him employment with the firm in whose service the conditions and terms of employment, and the rate of advancement of the workers is known, and is desirable.

"After employment has been secured, the boy should note what preparation he needs to make, in order to be ready when the opportunity for promotion comes. He should enter upon such evening studies, in addition to the day study, as will make him more proficient in the trade he desires to master.

"When a boy is undecided as to the trade he desires to learn, he will do well to consult with his parents, the teachers who have directed his work in the school, or if there is among the friends of the family some one who has been successful in some vocation, it would perhaps be well to consult with them.

Factories and shops in which the employees are mostly young people are to be avoided, because the chances for promotion must necessarily be slim in places in which the number of boys who are employed is much larger than the number of men. It is also well to avoid those places in which the managers are not ready to join in giving the boys every opportunity to fit for higher positions.

Many persons believe that if a boy at an early age enters into the lower grade of office work, that the force of circumstances will naturally bring him to the top. This is not true, as industries are organized today, it is more than likely that the petty routine of office work will so use up his youthful energies that he will have no time to prepare himself for larger usefulness.

He should, therefore, at an early date enter upon some apprenticeship, where after a few year's of faithful application he will be prepared, not only to demand trademens wakes, but to advance to some higher grade of work.

The young man who enters the service of a corporation, and thoroughly masters a trade may make himself so valuable that he may dictate the terms of his employment to his employer, or secure favorable terms from some competitor.

The conclusions must be that in the selection of a trade, the nature of the work is of more importance than the wages, that which requires a boy to exert and use his best powers, means more than the wages which enables him to satisfy the wants of the passing moment.

The more varied are the demands of his trade, the more it will contribute to his development and the greater will be his capacity for meeting new and better situations.

BREMNER DIES CANCER VICTIM

Radium Treatment Fai's to Save Life of Congressman

HE SUFFERED FOR FOUR YEARS

American and European Doctors Tried to Cure Him Before He Entered Sanitarium, Where $100,000 Worth of Precious Metal Was Used In Effort to Prolong Life

Baltimore, Feb. 6.—Robert G. Bremner, member of congress from New Jersey and editor of the Passaic Daily Herald, died of cancer in a local sanitarium, where he had been undergoing treatment since last December. He had suffered from the disease for four years. Bremner was 39 years old.

Bremner came to the sanitarium to try the radium after physicians in this country and Europe had vainly tried to cure him. It was found the disease had made such inroads that little could be done to help him and that the fight against death would be made with all the odds against him. Brumner was optimistic, however.

The gallant fight which Bremner made against death attracted the attention of the entire country. It also augmented the public interest in the treatment of cancer with radium.

Upon several occasions, when the patient seemed to be sinking to his death, he rallied, giving hopes to his family that his natural vitality, coupled with the curative properties of the radium, might at least prolong his life.

In many circles the death of the representative made itself felt. To medical men it brought home the fact that radium is not a sure cure for cancer.

Dr. Kelly, owner of the sanitarium in which Bremner died, is now in Europe and the administrations of radium which were begun by Kelly in person have been made by attaches of his staff since his departure from this country. In the treatment $100,000 worth of radium was imbedded at regular intervals into the patient's left shoulder, where the malignant growth had its inception.

The precious metal was put into tubes, coated with rubber, which were placed in incisions made with a surgeon's knife. The treatment was regarded as one of the most important in the recent history of medicine in this country and the progress of the patient was closely watched.

Bremner was a warm personal friend of President Wilson, who was kept advised of his condition.

Boston, Feb. 6.—President McDonald of the Boston and Maine Railroad company and the Maine Central Railroad company is to withdraw from the presidency of the Boston and Maine, according to dispatches from Portland which were virtually confirmed at the local offices of the Boston and Maine.

McDonald has been president of the Boston and Maine less than a year. He has received a salary of $35,000 a year from the Boston and Maine and $15,000 a year from the Maine Central, according to testimony at an interstate commerce commission hearing.

This was announced by Siegel's attorneys, who said that more than $450,000 had been provided for the purpose.

They added that Siegel and his partner, Frank E. Vogel, would agree, under certain conditions, to pay the remaining 70 percent within five years.

FUNERAL OF SLAIN TRAMP

Vagrants Contribute Flowers and Follow Hearse to the Cemetery

Cincinnati, Feb. 6.—The body of a tramp who was shot and killed here after breaking into a house to steal food was given a novel funeral.

A number of vagrants who had been his companions at a charitable institution contributed 75 cents to buy flowers for him. Fifty of them organized a choir and sang hymns at the funeral service.

An undertaker donated a hearse and coffin, and more than 100 tramps trudged behind it to the cemetery bearing banners asking for work.

CHARGES AGAINST BERRY

Nantucket's Skipper Will Be Tried by Board of Steamboat Inspectors

Norfolk, Feb. 6.—Formal charges against Captain Berry of the steamer Nantucket, which sank the liner Monroe with a loss of forty-one lives, were formulated here and forwarded to steamboat inspection headquarters.

It is said they charge Berry with negligence and misconduct. The board of steamboat inspectors at Philadelphia will try the accused captain.

READS NEWSPAPER IN SENATE GALLERY

Page of Vermont Is Promptly "Called Down" by Doorkeeper

Washington, Feb. 6.—The discovery that he lost his rights as a senator the moment he entered a senate gallery was made by Mr. Page of Vermont when, accompanied by his daughter, he attempted to read a newspaper while she listened to the debate.

There is a strict rule against reading, making notes and several hundred other comparatively harmless occupations while in the galleries, and there are hawk-eyed doorkeepers to enforce these rules against "showing disrespect to the senate."

One of them spied Page calmly reading and "called him down." So Page put his paper in his pocket until he took his seat on the floor.

MEET TRAG C FATE

Notorious Jamaica Plain Bandits Have All Been Killed

Boston, Feb. 6.—Tragic deaths in keeping with their lives of bloodshed have come to all three Jamaica Plain bandits, who killed two men, wounded twenty persons, and held 400 patrolmen at bay for hours in Forest Hills cemetery, July 22, 1908, according to an official announcement by the Boston police department.

Edmund Gutman was killed in the cemetery, the police say, by his companions, because he felt himself unable, on account of physical weakness, to keep up their fight against the law. Poolka Mourrivitz was shot in London, and Fritz Svarrs was burned to death when the police destroyed a house in which a number of anarchists of that city had taken refuge.

That is the police story, which does not agree, however, with contemporary versions of the battle of Forest Hills, which stated that Gutman was shot to death while fleeing from the cemetery.

SUICIDE IN CHURCH

Ex-Treasurer of North Providence Leaves Instructions For Funeral

Providence, Feb. 6.—On his knees in the chancel of Grace church, John Ogden, former treasurer of North Providence, drew a revolver and fatally shot himself in the head.

Before he approached the chancel, Ogden had been sitting in a pew in the rear of the church writing in a book, which he handed to one of the deaconesses.

In the book were found notes to his wife and to the superintendent of a mill in which he had been employed as bookkeeper. In the notes Ogden gave instructions for his funeral. No reason for the suicide was given.

Rose Cramer's Fortune

How It All Came True

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Peggy Moffatt giggled softly as she stole down the front stairs in the darkness. Behind her crept three other girls clad in dark sweaters.

It was long past the hour when the pupils of Mrs. Dacey's boarding school were supposed to be wrapped in innocent slumber. Every light in the house was extinguished, yet the four conspirators moved as carefully as though a stern monitor lurked in every corner.

It was Peggy, the ringleader, who opened the wide front door and slipped the night latch so they could reenter without a key. It was always Peggy Moffatt who led her companions into mischief, but they were singularly ready to follow her leadership.

Now they gained the driveway and turned into the darkness of the evergreen walk. They held tightly to one another as they passed through the dark tunnel and finally gained the little gate that opened on to the highway.

"It is only a few hundred yards down the road," assured Peggy as they went hand in hand along the narrow path. "You can see the lights of the camp in a moment."

"There it is!" cried Grace Wilde.

"Doesn't it look romantic and mysterious?" quavered Susie Agnew.

"Romantic folderol," said Peggy Moffatt loftily. "It's merely a gypsy camp, and some of them really need a good scrubbing with soap and water. So there! Did you notice the children? One of them was eating half a pineapple and"—

"Never mind about that," interrupted Maud impatiently. "Remember our errand, girls. We happened to see the caravan this afternoon when it was making camp, and Miss Cramer has promised to take us tomorrow to have our fortunes told, and we want to give that fortune teller a little information about our music teacher that will create some fun. Won't it be great?"

"Ripping!" said Peggy slangily. "Have you decided whether it is to be De Mauros or Mr. Holloway?"

"Oh, Mr. Holloway, by all means! He's so tall and lank and gloomy looking."

"Hush! Here we are." The four girls walked boldly into the circle of firelight among the oak trees. In the surrounding gloom could be seen the dim outlines of gaudy wagons. A dog barked, and a man's harsh voice stilled the animal. Then the man himself appeared, a gray headed gypsy, yawning sleepily.

"WHAT YOU WANT?" HE DEMANDED.

"What you want?" he demanded shortly, staring at them with curious eyes.

Peggy Moffatt told him in a few words that they were from the boarding school, that they wanted to consult the fortune teller and that they would pay well for rousing her from slumber.

He nodded and went to one of the wagons, where he talked in a low tone for several moments. Then he turned and motioned them to sit down.

"Her come," he said briefly and disappeared.

The four girls sat there, alternately shivering with nervous dread and giggling hysterically over their plan for the morrow. It would be easy to persuade the fortune teller to pour a marvelous tale into Miss Cramer's ear. Rose Cramer was teacher of music in the school and as a newcomer was an object of amusement to the half grown girls.

Presently the door of the wagon opened, and a woman's fat form came down the steps and waddled toward them, adjusting as she did so a spangled scarf over her tousled dark hair. Her calico dress was tumbled and soiled, and she had every appearance of having slept in her clothes.

"You want me?" she asked.

"Yes," said Peggy, drawing out her pocketbook.

Then the firelight shone on five heads bent close together in eager converse. Four girls and the old gypsy fortune teller.

* * * * * * *

The next afternoon found Rose Cramer and a dozen laughing girls strolling toward the gypsy camp. The four conspirators lingered behind the group that surrounded the young teacher. Many of them were very fond of the dark eyed little woman, dressed in black, who brought such wonderful music out of violin and piano and whose sweet contralto voice had thrilled them with homesick longing in the twilight.

The gypsy camp looked like a stage setting. There were the half circle of wagons, the glowing campfire among the fallen autumn leaves, the picturesque people themselves moving about with the slow grace of their race or drowsing idly on the grass. The sun shone warmly over all.

Just as the girls and their teacher seated themselves about the fire another and an unwelcome element was added to the occasion. This was the unexpected appearance of Professor Holloway, the German instructor. His tall, lean figure was almost upon them before his nearsighted eyes discovered their identity. Then his face went scarlet, and he stood there, hat in hand, entirely embarrassed.

Rose Cramer smiled a pleasant greeting, but Susie Agnew clapped her fat hands with almost infantile delight.

"Sit down here, do, dear Professor Holloway," she chirruped. "We are all going to have our fortunes told, and you must have yours."

"I—er—I was merely strolling through the camp. Very fascinating, you know—study of the Romany language," he said haltingly.

"Do sit down and have your fortune told!" pleaded Maud Beals.

So Professor Holloway sat down opposite Rose Cramer, and the group fell into silence while Fanita, one by one, took the little palms in her own and read them glibly, promising such fairy tale fortunes as all schoolgirls love.

"And now, you, Miss Cramer—you promised," urged Peggy at last.

Rose shrugged her shapely shoulders and held out her slim white hand to the gypsy.

Fanita took it in her brown palm and looked long and deep into Rose's lovely eyes. Then she glanced half contemptuously at the eager faces of the schoolgirls, and her eyes dropped to the rosy palm that lay in her grasp.

"I see much happiness for the pretty lady," she began softly.

The girls cast a startled glance at their teacher's face. They had never thought of Miss Cramer as pretty, but now, with the swift blush on her pale cheeks, she was more than pretty. What wonderful eyes she had—blue or brown or gray?

"The pretty lady has traveled along a pleasant road," droned the gypsy. "The sun shone every day, but there came a time of storm and trouble, and the way led through the darkness of death; then music and the sound of young voices and through it all a love song.

"I see two men—one to whom you are indifferent, and he is unworthy. The other loves you, but he is afraid to tell. The lovelight shines in his eyes. Silly butterflies flutter about you. Brush them aside and take your happiness. I see a journey, a marriage and much happiness in a new place. It is in a warm land where the sun shines and the birds sing all winter. You will be happy."

Fanita dropped Miss Cramer's hand and for the first time smiled.

The girls stirred uneasily. There seemed to be an undertone of gravity in Fanita's voice. There was no joke about this fortune. It was not exactly as they had planned—to embarrass Miss Cramer. Rose was still blushing, but her long lashed eyes were studying the campfire.

"And now the gentleman's?" asked Fanita in a wheedling tone. Her big pocket was heavy with silver, and she was greedy for more, but, above the greediness, there was a note of eager interest in Professor Holloway. He had listened to the telling of Rose's fortune with impassive countenance. Now, at the suggestion that his own be foretold, he blushed like a schoolboy.

"Oh, be a sport!" burst out incorrigible Daisy Nevins, and she only laughed when Miss Cramer's delicately penciled eyebrows were lifted in mute surprise.

Professor Holloway held out his long, lean hand, and Fanita took it in her own, studying the strongly marked lines.

"Happiness for the gentleman," said Fanita softly. "His way leads wherever the pretty lady goes, even to the sunny south, where they will live in peace and plenty. Butterflies are about you, too, but brush them aside. Heed not their silly laughter. Love and happiness are more important."

"Thank you," said Professor Holloway gravely as he tucked a crisp greenback into Fanita's hand. He arose to his tall height and looked around at the group of girl faces. Then his eyes rested on Rose Cramer's delicate face.

"Come, Rose," he said simply. And she arose and walked beside him.

"Come, children," she said absently over her shoulder. And the girls followed silently.

Fanita smiled scornfully upon them as they passed her.

"Fortunes, love and happiness cannot be bought with money," she said. "I have spoken as it was written in the hand. It is well." She pointed at the hilltop, where the professor and Rose waited for the girls. Their forms were outlined against the primrose of the evening sky. They saw that Rose and Holloway were standing there, hand in hand.

"It is beautiful!" said Peggy Moffatt soberly as they went away.

TAFT LEADS ATTACK

Proposed Reforms In Court Procedure Are Ridiculed by Lawyers

Boston, Feb. 6.—The Boston University Law School association's reception and banquet to Professor Taft of the Yale law school last night assumed the character of a vigorous and general attack upon the reforms in court procedure urged by Sherman L. Whipple at the recent meeting of the Connecticut Bar association in New London.

Professor Taft, now also president of the American Bar association, led in the attack upon Whipple's suggestions, characterizing him as belonging to the "real red radicals," the "explosives."

It was declared by all the speakers that Whipple's suggestions that the rule of "privileged confidence" between counsel and client be abolished was amazing and if put into effect would have the result of bringing cases into court without any foundation whatever, cases in which the client's counsel would be ignorant of the real underlying facts of the case.

BRYAN CHECKS ACTION

Says Baker Bill Would Hinder Negotiations Now In Progress

Washington, Feb. 6.—Secretary Bryan urged the house immigration committee to take no action on the Baker bill for exclusion of Asiatic immigrants. Diplomatic negotiations between the United States and Japan over the California anti-alien land laws and the whole question of the Asiatic exclusion was discussed at length behind closed doors.

The secretary bound Republicans and Democrats alike to secrecy and told them the administration needed to be free from legislative embarrassments in dealing with the situation diplomatically. It was generally understood the wishes of the state department would be respected.

Bryan told the committee that unless some untoward circumstances arose he hoped for an amicable adjustment of the Japanese question. An agitation in congress at this time, he declared, would be most unfortunate.

YEGGS TRY TO LOOT BOSTON PAWN SHOP

Make Their Escape After Seriously Wounding a Clerk

Boston, Feb. 6.—While hundreds of persons were passing constantly back and forth on the street two gunmen entered the store of the Roxbury Loan company at 1247 Tremont street, in the busiest section of Roxbury, last evening, and, in an attempt to loot the place, murderously attacked the clerk, John J. Gately, and shot him.

Gately is in a serious condition at the City hospital, while the two robbers and a confederate, who was waiting on the outside, are at large.

The three men made their escape after a long chase through the crowded streets, during which only a fleeting glimpse of them was obtained. The police have discovered clews to their identity, however, and arrests are expected.

"DOOR IS WIDE OPEN"

But Maine Bull Moose Will Not Go Out to Meet Republicans

Portland, Me., Feb. 6.—A resolution that the Progressive party of Maine has decided to put a complete ticket in the field at the coming state election, "as it is on principle opposed to any form of merger or amalgamation," was adopted at a conference of Progressives.

The action was taken in response to a request from the Republican state committee that committee conferences be held for the purpose of bringing the two parties together. The resolution added that "the door of the Progressive party is wide open and all men that are progressive in purpose are invited to enter."

THE PLAYHOUSE

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

The regular mid-week change of program yesterday brought another good show to Quincy and it was enjoyed by a big audience last night and will entertain thousands more today and tomorrow.

The show coming Monday will include Elnora Dane, character violinist O'Brien & Brooks, comedy Italian impersonators; Bicknell & Gibney Comedy skit creators, Marcus & Gartelli, Skatorial Nonsense; and all new pictures and music.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

"The Message to Headquarters" at Music hall Saturday matinee and night is something new in the way of Thanhouser plays. It is melodrama from beginning to end—and yet, melodrama which seems to have a most convincing atmosphere of realism in spite of a few rather impossible stunts which can better be done in a few seconds before a camera than in actual life. These stunts, however, will not be amiss to the average audience—because they are thrilling enough to make the spectator catch his or her breath and wonder what is going to happen next.

The brigand-infested slopes of Vesuvius back of Torre del Greco and Herculaneum give an effective setting for the beginning of the play. There are the usual rich American and his children—kidnapped by the brigands, the dashing Captain of Carabineri, who, rescues them and earns the hatred of the Brigand Chief, and all the supporting characters that one expects to find with such a combination. Then—the scene changes to New York—the underworld, Secret Service territory of New York which we read about in the papers but seldom see, because we feel that we are probably safer in the more civilized wards. The moral of the play is really good. The scoundrelly Mafia gets the worst of it in the end, as all villains should. The Hero gets the right girl. The Assistant Hero gets another one.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Incident upon incident makes "The Great Ruby" a play of continuous and exciting interest. It will be given by John Craig at the Castle Square next week, and among its many spectacular scenes is that in which is displayed a real balloon floating above the stage. The plot involves the theft of a valuable jewel, and the chase after it and the discovery of the thief offers no little stimulus to the curiosity of the audience. Everything will be done to make this one of the most complete productions ever seen on the Castle Square stage. The cast will include Mr. Carleton, Mr. Meek, Mr. Walker, Miss Olsson, Miss Colcord and Miss Shirley.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Miss Annie Russell and her players of old English comedies will turn from the brilliant wit and pungent cynicism of Sheridan and take up again the kindlier humor of Oliver Goldsmith. The actress-manager will begin the second and final week of her engagement at the Hollis Monday night when she will offer Goldsmith's appealing comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer." This is the classical comedy with which Miss Russell inaugurated her first season devoted to the old masters, and one which we saw in her repertoire in Boston last season. Her production then was marked by a charming simplicity and an authoritative regard for the period. The comedy will be played next week by practically the same company that was seen in Boston last season. It includes besides Miss Russell who again will be seen as lovable Kate Hardcastle, Oswald Yorke, Percival Stevens, Littledale Power, Harold Metzler, Leslie Austin, Johnson Briscoe, Ffoliot Paget, Henrietta Goodwin, Florence LeClerq and others. There will be matinees, as usual Wednesday and Saturday.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

There are many good reasons why "Under Cover," Selwyn & Company's play now at the Plymouth theatre is deserving of its great success. In the first place it entered upon its present engagement practically unheralded and is enjoying the biggest prosperity and popularity of any play that has visited Boston this season. It is by far the best play of its type and from present indication the piece will establish a record run. Monday it begins its eighth big week without the slighest sign of a letup for many weeks to come. "Under Cover" is an unusual play inasmuch as it possesses an emphatic appeal to all classes of theatregoers. The play moves with a rapid-fire action and never lags for a single moment from the rise of the first curtain until the drop of the final. The audience is kept in a high pitch of suspense throughout the entire four acts of bright, breezy and snappy dialogue until the final denoument which comes almost at the end of the play in a surprisingly unexpected manner. The story presents a graphic picture of up-to-date fashionable society and the workings of the United States Customs. The latter in their effort to capture a supposed smuggler engage the services of a highly bred young lady to spy upon a guest in the household of where she is stopping also as a guest.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

In the production of "Prunella," the current attraction at the Majestic Theatre, which remains but one week more, closing its engagement on Feb. 14th, Winthrop Ames has used every subtle aid to create and preserve the atmosphere of poetic unreality, in which the blend of legendary fancy and symbolic suggestion unfolds itself. In the writing, prose and verse alternate. There is also admirable interpretative musical setting which accompanies every detail of the acting. The bare outlines of the plot convey but an imperfect notion of the charm of the play which depends for effect largely upon its satirical and whimsical humor; its allegorical suggestion, its literary cleverness and its romantic and poetic atmosphere.

That world-wide dramatic sensation, "Within the law," with beautiful Jane Cowl and the original New York company comes to the Majestic, Feb. 16, for a limited engagement. The event will be the most interesting of the season for many reasons. "Within the Law" is the most successful play produced in the past 25 years. It comes to Boston fresh from its 700 night run in New York. Boston will be the only city in this country outside of New York to see the play presented by the company headed by Jane Cowl, who is considered the most beautiful actress in America and who created the role of Mary Turner. "Within the Law" tells a story which appeals to all classes of playgoers. It is an intense and absorbing revelation of the unfair social conditions injustices of law courts, and the tyrannies of police systems which exist in America today. But, strong as are the lessons taught by this powerful melodrama, there is absolutely no trace of the sermon. The arguments being presented against backgrounds of such thrilling episodes that the spectator is held in a grip of steel from the rise to the fall of every curtain.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

Charles Frohman will present those popular co-stars, Richard Carle and Hattie Williams at the Colonial Theatre, Monday, Feb. 9, in the most enduring of the season's musical comedy successes, "The Doll Girl." The engagement will serve in the nature of a home-coming for the stars as they still call the city of their birth, Boston, home.

"The Doll Girl" had its original production with Mr. Carle and Miss Williams at the Globe Theatre, New York, last August and it boasts of having had the longest run of any musical comedy seen in that city this season.

There are lots of things to commend in this new piece. Its story is all about a little girl who has not outgrown her love for her doll. A naughty marquis lures her to Paris, where she goes chaperoned by her doll. A fiery-tempered Spanish woman makes things warm for the marquis and complicates matters, but through it all the doll girl passes unharmed and in the end marries the man of her choice. It is all sweet and clean and there is an absence of anything suggestive. The fun is all wholesome.

Both Mr. Carle and Miss Williams have the best roles, which means they have more to do and better things to do, than they have had in anything else that has been in their possession. Mr. Carle is seen as the marquis and Miss Williams plays the role of the Spanish woman. They have one scene in particular that is so funny that it will be remembered for the laughter it occasions. Two of the song hits of the piece, "Come On Over Here" and "Love With a Capital L" fall to Miss Williams.

"You've seen them in 'reel' life, now see them in 'real' life," is the unique manner of the publicity conducted by the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Massachusetts for their first annual entertainment and ball to take place Tuesday evening, Feb. 17 in Symphony hall, Boston. The reason for this unusual headline is due to the fact that the committee comprises a large number of the best known moving picture actors including Mary Fuller, Lillian Walker, Pearl White, Norma Phillipps, Marion Leonard, Crane Wilbur, King Baggot, John Bunny, Sydney Alcott, Arthur Johnston, Gene Gauthier and others. In fact it is planned to have the grand march led by Governor Walsh and Miss Fuller, the leading player of the Edeson company. The occasion promises to prove one of the biggest events of the season and is open to the public who may procure tickets from the members of the league or at the various moving picture and vaudeville theatres throughout the state.

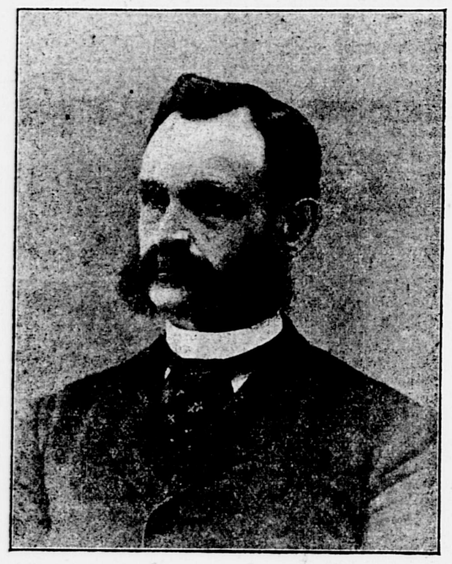
HELPED TO FRAME QUINCY CITY CHARTER



Thomas Gurney, one of the pioneer business men of that part of Quincy known as Atlantic, passed away this morning. Aside from that he was one of those selected to frame the City Charter, which has always been known as a model form of charter for city government, he was also a veteran of the Civil war.

Born in South Hanson, he obtained his early education in the schools of his native place and was graduated from the Bridgewater Normal school, after which he taught school until the outbreak of the Civil war. He enlisted in the 3d regiment for a period of nine months and at the close of his enlistment he re-enlisted in the 58th regiment for a period of three years or until the close of the war. At the time of Lee's surrender he was with his regiment at Farmville, Va., about ten miles from Appomattox court house.

Coming to Quincy in 1865, Mr. Gurney took up his residence at Atlantic, at that time there being scarcely twenty-five families within a radius of a mile.

There was no post office in that section until 1872, when an office was established and Mr. Gurney was appointed as the first postmaster, the office at that time paying a salary of $12. Mr. Gurney held the position for 21 years when a change in the administration, caused his retirement. In 1898 however he was again appointed as postmaster and held office for a number of years. While acting as postmaster the office was located in his grocery store.

Being a man of quiet demeanor he never sought office but he was elected a member of the School Committee during the last years of the town government which office he held for six years, including the first years of the city government.

When he started in business his store was located on Hancock street not far from Neponset bridge, but he outgrew that location and some years later erected the building on Newbury avenue which he occupied up to the time of his death.

He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and also of Paul Revere post 88, G. A. R.

He leaves a widow who is also seriously ill, and a son, Lyndon D. Gurney who has been for many years associated with his father in business.

WILL BEGIN WORK

of the Quincy Adams station to a point about 150 feet south of its present location and making other necessary alterations.

An abstract of the decree submitted by the special commission is herewith submitted, and as this is what has been agreed upon it will be read with interest:

In view of this great difference in cost, and because of certain suggestions which had been dropped by the Commissioners relative to the enormouse expense of the Saville street project acording to the Citys plan, $225,000, certain interested citizens of Quincy proposed that a foot-subway or a foot-bridge be constructed across the railroad at Saville street and that Upland road be extended to Granite street, the foot-subway to serve for pedestrian travel between the shopping district and the residential district west of the railroad, and Upland road extension to serve pedestrians and team traffic as well.

The Commissioners, looked with favor on the extension of Upland road to Granite street, and so reported. The Commissioners require that not only shall Upland road be extended through to Granite street, forming a public way 40 feet wide, but also that a foot path 15 feet wide shall leave Saville street near the corner of Upland road and pass diagonally toward Depot street. This foot-path will lead to an ample foot-subway which will pass directly under the tracks, terminating at the foot of Depot street. The public will have perpetual use of this way. Upland road extension is to be a road of reasonable grades, paved with macadam with granite block gutters; the sidewalks are to be of crushed stone with granite curbs.

James T. Penniman	290	sq. ft.
Henry M. Faxin	5500	"
William G. A. Pattee	3240	"

Henry M. Faxon

James T. Penniman, Henry M. Faxon, William G. A. Pattee, Marcia Hatch, Ellen M. Clark and Parties Unknown, 32,800 sq. ft.

This project will cost in round numbers $68,000, of which the City of Quincy will be obliged to pay ten per cent. or $6,800.

Certain other changes will be made which the railroad will pay for entirely. These include the construction of new passenger station for outbound traffic, which will be located on the westerly side of the tracks about opposite the foot of Depot street. This new station will be reached directly from Upland road extension and from Saville street, and will be approached from the easterly side of the tracks by the foot-subway at the foot of Depot street.

The grade of Granite street will not be changed by this plan.

WATER STREET.

In the report of the Commisioners Water street is to be depressed at the railroad 10 feet and the railroad is to be raised 8 feet. Water street is to be widened from Franklin street to about 160 feet west of Pleasant street from its present width of 45 feet to a new width of 60 feet, which will be a great improvement. The widening at the Franklin street end will be done on the northerly side, the taking being made entirely on the Faxon property; there will be no taking of land from the Pinel property. On the westerly side of the tracks there will be no taking of land at the Falconer property at the corner of Pleasant street, the widening being made entirely on the southerly side of the street. The sidewalks are to be 10 feet wide, paved with tar-concrete with granite curbs, and the roadway is to be paved with granite block pavement throughout.

The railroad is to be carried over Water street by means of a drip-proof ballasted solid floor steel bridge which will be watertight and as noiseless as any type of steel bridge which can be constructed. Ample headroom of 14 feet has been provided under the railroad bridge at Water street.

The street will be drained into Town Brook by means of a new 20-inch drain constructed from the lowest point in Water street directly to Town Brook north of School street.

Water street at the foot of Pleasant street is to be depressed about 2 feet and the grade up Pleasant street will be lowered for a length of about 250 feet to conform to this change of grade in Water street, but Pleasant street will not be made any steeper in grade than it is today. A new macadam roadway will be constructed on Pleasant street, and the sidewalks will be reconstructed of the same material as the present sidewalk.

LIBERTY STREET

Liberty street will be closed at its junction with Water street, but a new street 60 feet wide will be constructed running from Liberty street about opposite Frank H. Cranes grain store to Water street opposite Pleasant street. This new street will have an easy grade and will be paved with granite block pavement, with sidewalks paved with tar-concrete and with granite curbs. Liberty street from the corner of this new street toward Water street will rise on a slightly up grade and pass over Water street on a highway bridge which will lead directly into the freight yard where the travelling crane is located; the freight yard will be raised to the grade of the new railroad. This will provide a direct route of low grades from the granite industries along Liberty street, over the new highway bridge and into the freight yard.

NEW STATION.

The present Quincy Adams station will be abandoned and a new station constructed about 159 feet south of the present station, opposite the new street; to be approached by carriages and pedestrians directly from Liberty street, and by steps directly from Water street.

There will be a triangular shaped parcel about 175 feet long and 100 feet wide between Water street, the New street and the driveway to Crane yard, which forms a small park in front of the new Quincy Adams station.

The freight house near Water street will be moved south and located near Federal avenue opposite Goddard street.

All sidetrack connections to industries are to be retained at their present grade, and the track facilities in the Crane yard and in the Granite street freight yard are all to be at least as ample as at the present time.

PRESIDENTS AVENUE.

President's avenue between its junction with Federal avenue and Water street will be abandoned and in substitution Federal avenue will be extended straight through to Water street.

The raising of the railroad at Water street will involve the raising of the bridge at School street about 12 feet.

The property takings to be made in connection with this project are as follows:—

Homestead Trust	5330	feet

Homestead Trust	1515	"

The total estimated cost of this project will be about $275,000 of which the City of Quincy will pay ten per cent or about $27,500.

The total expense then, to Quincy of both Saville street and Water street projects will be about $35,000, which is a very low figure for the City of Quincy to pay for so important a public improvement.

When the Water street grade crossing project is constructed the Railroad proposes to construct at its own expense two new tracks on the easterly side of the present tracks and to build a new inbound passenger station which will be located opposite the junction of Federal avenue and President's avenue and which will be approached by carriages and pedestrians directly from Federal avenue and from Federal avenue extension and by stairs directly from Water street.

It is understood that the parties at interest have 20 days in which to appeal from the ruling of the Public Service Commission, but it is doubtful now if this is done and the general impression is that active work will begin in the spring.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL ASSO.

The report on the proposed addition to the Washington school made at the monthly meeting of the parent and Teachers Association Thursday evening in the school corridor developed no discussion. Nearly the full membership of the association attended and the school corridor was crowded. An interesting address on South America was given by Col. Henry L. Kincaide who was president of the committee which toured the southern continent for the Chamber of Commerce last year. A musical program was given which included violin solos by David Weinhouse of grade eight.

NEW WARD THREE ASSOCIATION

Want Plan Explained for Abolition of Water Street Grade Crossing

Will Work for Improvement of South Quincy Ward

The Ward Three Improvement Association was organized Friday evening in the former Algonquin club room. Owing to the storm only about twenty-five were present, but the enthusiasm shown indicates that at the next meeting there will be a much larger number. Joseph B. Grossman, gave his reasons for thinking that an improvement association should be organized in that section of the city. James Joss and Joseph B. Grossman were unanimously elected temporary president and secretary.

A committee was appointed to arrange for the use of a hall, and to decide the date of the next meeting, as follows: Alexander Emslie, Walter E. Piper, and Joseph B. Grossman.

A committee was also appointed to draw up a set of by-laws and resolutions which will govern the organization, to be proposed at the next meeting: Alexander Cowe, Charles Barnicoat, and Alfred Pinel. It was voted that all present should constitute themselves a committee of one, to see the business men of the ward, and enroll them as members.

Discussions followed concerning the abolition of the grade crossing at Quincy Adams and of other improvements needed in the ward. The secretary was instructed to ask City Engineer Sargent, to explain the plans for the abolition of the grade crossing at the next meeting.

Remarks were made concerning the necessity of an improvement association by the following all of whom thought that the association would be able to accomplish a good purpose and would succeed:— James Joss, Alexander Cowe, Alfred Pinel, Reuben Grossman, Councilman Charles H. Ross, ex-Councilman George Gauthier, ex-Representative Walter E. Piper, Charles Barnicoat, and Karl W. Leaf.

It is earnestly desired that all the residents of Ward Three who are interested in the improvement of the ward should be present and enroll themselves as members at the next meeting, which will be held Wednesday evening, February 18, in Clan MacGregor hall.

SINGLE TAX LECTURE.

An interested audience gathered at the Progressive headquarters in the Wollaston hotel Friday evening and listened to a lecture on "The single tax" by Henry D. Nunn, a prominent Boston attorney and vice president of the Massachusetts Single Tax League

For two hours the speaker explained the theories of the single tax and answered fully the many questions put to him. He explained that the single taxers were not working for a 100 per cent change, but a gradual one, and once the benefits were seen it would be taken up in a larger emasure. The only ones to have their incomes diminished by putting in force the single tax, would be the land speculators, those preventing full economic use of the land.

GET TOGETHER BANQUET

Wollaston Methodists will have Balance in Treasury

A large number of good people feasted and were merry in the vestry of the Wollaston Methodist church, Friday evening. The occasion was the "Get-together" banquet of the church at which the tithes were brought in and accounted.

By common consent the month of January was set aside for the "gathering of tithes" and during that month each church member was expected to contribute one-tenth of his income to the treasury of the church. This method averted what promised to be a respectable deficit in current expenses for the church year in April and will result in finishing the current year in better financial condition than it started.

An elaborate repast was served by the ladies of the church in charge of Mrs. George Crothers, and the after dinner exercises were opened by George Taylor. He introduced the pastor Rev. George M. Bailey who spoke on church loyalty and the fuller uses to which the church organization and church building should be put.

Mr. Bailey introduced Mr. Taylor as toast master of the evening and the latter with the assistance of the church treasurer, pastor and members of the finance committee proceeded to tell of the church's financial condition and ask that all the tithes be handed in.

Mr. Taylor in his usual humorous manner told of the improvement he would make to the church when he became a millionaire and in closing introduced Eric H. Ewertz who he announced would speak on "Early rising on Sunday morning."

Mr. Ewertz kept well to his subject until he launched into church finances He was followed by A. E. Roberts, president of the Epworth League.

J. A. Sedgwick was announced to speak on "Improper giving by the Sunday school" and Mrs. George Crothers on "How the Ladies Aid served the finance committee."

Mrs. Crothers replied that the finance committee seemed yet to be a long way from salvation. In closing she told an allegorical parable involving the Ladies Aid, the finance committee and church members.

Ex-Councilman Albert N. Murray was introduced as speaking in rebuttal of all previous remarks, and whether he succeeded or not is still undetermined.

Speeches, brief but pithy by Willard E. Keyes and Loro C. Merrill brought the evening to a close.

UNITARIAN SOCIAL.

A goodly number attended the church social in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church Friday evening where one of the usual suppers was served by a comittee consisting of Mrs. H. A. Stevens, Mrs. Charles S. Adams, Mrs. E. S. Taylor, Mrs. George Bennett, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. James B. Geddes, Mrs. West, Mrs. Leach, Mrs. Axel Nelson, Mrs. J. N. Smith.

The evening's program was furnished by Miss Maud Andrews Lincoln, reader, and the Park and Downs Church orchestra.

Miss Lincoln's selections were greatly enjoyed and she received hearty applause. The orchestra which also found great favor consisted of Mrs. William M. Burrell, pianist, Miss Louise Steffens and Miss Emily Bjorkman, violins, Charles A. Richardson, trombone, Mr. Wright, flute and Ernest Pletsch, cornet. The program was in charge of Mrs. Ralph W. Oldham.

PROTESTANT UNITY.

Sunday is the closing day of Christian Endeavor week. The pastor of Bethany Congregational church will have a message for young people at both morning and evening services. The evening subject—"Protestant Unity." will interest all lovers of freedom and truth. The church doors will be open at 7.00 P. M. The organ recital at 7.15. Service commences at 7.30.

MUSICAL PLAY BY JUNIORS

Forty Take Part in the Star Fairies Mission

In spite of the storm last evening a large and responsive audience gathered in the parish house of Christ church to enjoy the musical play by the Junior Auxiliary. The play entitled "The Star Fairies' Mission," in three acts, was written by Mrs. Alice W. Chaplin of Adams Shore, who also did the entire training, the costuming, and the staging of the play.

Mrs. A. W. Turtle was at the piano. Some forty children took part and the performance showed that great skill and untiring patience had been exercised by Mrs. Chaplin. The tableaux at the beginning and end of each act were most artistically arranged and all the costumes and the make-ups were carried out with a real professional touch.

The Star Fairies were in filmy white gowns spangled with stars and their background was about twenty spruce trees. One of fairies brings in her roses, sixteen pretty little girls all in white, with wreaths of roses, who have a charming song and dance, and then two girls, one in white and one in pink, their frocks all sprinkled with roses, come in each bearing aloft a basket piled high with roses and dance a rose minuet, afterwards running down through the audience scattering roses everywhere.

Through the Imp of Dreams the Star Fairies discover that there are other spheres, and they are sent to several places on the Earth, including Kalamazoo, China, Spain and Quincy, Mass. They have various experiences with strange people, some of which are depicted.

There are songs and dances by Zuzus, Chinese, Indians, a Spanish gipsy, and Backwalkers, besides a scene in the Quincy Hospital. All the parts were well taken and there was so much applause that at the final curtain there were repeated calls for Mrs. Chaplin herself, who reluctantly appeared in acknowledgment of the enthusiastic ovation.

The program was:

Cybele, Queen of the tSar Fairies,—Frances Twitle.

Star Fairies,—Elizabeth Haslett, Mary Turtle, Ethel Smith, Ruth Jones, Lily Hodge, Agnes McCarthy, Martha Marshall, Amy Torrey.

Rosebuds,—Alice Brown, Madeleine Hewson, Susie Randell, Esther Spargo, Isabelle Collins, Lillian Robertson, Mildred Finch, Margaret Finch.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Assessor Bates Talks Grade Crossings with Mayor

As was expected, the announcement that the Mayor had agreed to the plans for abolishing the grade crossings did not set well with the chairman of the Board of Assessors, G. B. Bates, who from the very first has argued and worked for Saville street to be saved and the depression of the tracks through Quincy.

The appearance of the Daily Ledger was the first real intimation to Mr. Bates of what had transpired at the conference the day before, and it was not many minutes after the appearance of the issue that Mr. Bates with a copy of the paper in his hand entered the Mayor's office.

Mayor Miller said this morning that the interview was entirely pleasant, and that Mr. Bates brought forth arguments in favor of his position. Chief among these was that his business would be ruined by the closing of Saville street and that there was no redress for him in the way of damages.

The Mayor however says that he does not believe that if Mr. Bates property and business is damaged but what he can recover. It is a well known fact in law that one party cannot injure another's business without paying damages and the Mayor believes in this case that Mr. Bates may recover for damages done to his property and business.

The conference between the two officials was free from any explosions, although Mr. Bates informed the Mayor that he should follow the question to the end, in his efforts to have Saville street at the crossing retained and the tracks depressed.

The Mayor takes the ground that all things considered the plans as approved are the best for the city. He said this morning that the bridge at Granite street was to be raised somewhat and he was in hopes of having it raised still higher. Another thing he hoped to accomplish was to have a wider bridge than the present structure which would permit of the widening of Granite street.

This matter would come up later before the County Commissioners where he intended to use his best efforts to have the new bridge wider when it was built, and raised somewhat higher than at present.

He however said that he believed that Granite street beneath the bridge could be readily drained by putting in more catch basins, although those now there were all right, the frouble being that the wash from the street clogged up the openings.

The Mayor said this morning that he had several matters of business that he was trying to find time to attend to, but the press of callers had been such every day that he had been unable to find time to accomplish

ASSESSOR BATES HOT AFTER THE MAYOR

Will Take an Appeal Against Acceptance of Grade Crossing Plans

Says It Will Be a Great Everlasting Curse on City

To the Citizens and Taxpayers of Quincy:

As a member of your grade crossing committee, elected by the people of Quincy, fighting for nearly seven years for the "City plan of depression" as adopted by the citizens in mass meeting and endorsed by the Board of Trade and every other organization and association in our city that took action upon it.

Moreover, a petition of the Board of Trade containing the signatures of over nine hundred of our citizens, favoring the city plan of depression and but fourteen signatures of those favoring the "Chinese wall plan" was presented to the Railroad Commissioners, as a remonstrance against the finding of the Special Commission. Our City Council also went on record as opposed to this plan brought in by this Special Commission.

I am astounded at Mayor Miller's action approving the finding of the Special Commission, which was contrary to the will of the people, as was clearly evidenced by the above-mentioned petition; where, from nearly one thousand signatures there were but fourteen which upheld the finding which the Mayor has recently approved.

I am astounded at the Mayor's action approving the plan of the Special Commission stopping up Saville street, raising School street twelve feet and lowering Water street ten feet lower than it is at the present time.

I am again astounded at the Mayor's approval of a plan whereby the westerly side of our City is ruined forever for business purposes, and thereby paralyzing the gorwth of this section of our city. Such a plan as his Honor has recently approved will forever stunt the increase in land values in this section and forever deprive this section of its commercial growth.

By this stunting the increase of land values of this section, the city is deprived of the yearly revenue which it should justly derive from this part of the city.

Mayor Miller very recently petitioned the legislature for an act to abolish the grade crosings at Saville street and Water street according to the City plan of depression and thereby it appeared that he had saved the peoples' rights against the schemes of the selfish interests.

I cannot believe that His Honor realized what he was doing against his city and its people when he agreed to approve of a plan that was so ruinous to our city and so expensive to the tax payers.

If these grade crossings at Water street and Saville street are consumated by the proposed "Chinese wall" I stand recorded that it will not only be the worst abortion that can ever be performed upon our city, but the greatest everlasting curse that can ever be inflicted on our people.

Being a party in interest, I shall if obliged to, take an appeal.

Yours truly,
G. B. Bates.
Member of the Grade Crossing Committee for the City of Quincy.

ST. VALENTINE.

What has become of the young fellows and girls who used to post each other those lacey, mushy, lovely-dovey valentines on Feb. 14? Perhaps they are still doing it, but the St. Valentine doings of the present time seem to be more of a kidlet affair.

With what anxious heart the youth of 12 to 18 years of age used to welcome the coming of this anniversary! With what discriminating care he selected a gorgeous display of Cupid emblems to please his lady love! With what beating heart he dropped it into the post office!

There is always more or less calf love among the young folks at this romantic age. One gets the impression, though that today more of their interest goes into wholesale athletics. The boy who has passed the age of 12 should be engrossed with basket or baseball, not playing the precocious courtier to sentimental misses. Meanwhile St. Valentine still remains a jolly old saint, who furnishes the smaller youngsters a chance for an exchange of favors.

Although we are due to have six weeks more of winter according to the old saying concerning a fair "Candlemas" day, the sun is mounting higher little by little and there have been several days lately which carried with them just a hint of spring and its mildness and gave us reason to hope that the worst of the cold season has passed. To any close observer about town and one who takes account of the significance of the little happenings it is an almost unfailing sign that "ethereal mildness" is on the way when the small boys commence to play marbles on the sidewalk. We may yet have stormy and blustering cold weather and quite likely snow but the youngster with his marbles is second only in importance to the bluebird or the robin in forecasting the coming of the vernal equinox.

Tomorrow is "Go-to-church Sunday" and the clergymen of the several local churches are hoping to see among the members of the congregation many who make it a practice to stay away from divine service on the Sabbath. Some are absent because of their work, others because they fell they are needed at home, others because they are weary after six days of labor and still others out of sheer force of habit. As one old gentleman who was somewhat of an optimist once remarked, "going to church never harmed anybody even if it didn't do them any good." Perhaps the fault is partly with the churches in not using more up to date methods of attracting people to the services and making the order of exercises more interesting. The audiences will probably be considerably augumented for tomorrow at least and the day and its purpose may lead to far reaching and good results.

ORDERS ARREST OF AGITATORS

Huerta Has Troops Ready For Emergency Calls

GOVERNMENT NEEDS SUPPLIES

Can Now Secure Them Because of Lifting of Embargo on Arms—Huerta Says Mexico Serenely Awaits Coming of Peace—Tampico Is Seriously Threatened by Rebels

Mexico City, Feb. 7.—Determined to protect American citizens here, many arrests were made under President Huerta's orders of agitators who were attempting to incite attacks and demonstrations against the United States.

Additional guards have been placed at all prisons and jails, and troops are held at the arsenal for emergency calls.

There has been a marked change of sentiment in government circles over lifting of the arms embargo by President Wilson. Many declared that the action of the Washington administration had given the government an opportunity to gain much needed supplies and its agents have been instructed to buy arms and ammunition in the United States for immediate shipment.

Similar notification was sent to Mexican agents in Europe, accompanied by the following message from Huerta:

"Mexico serenely awaits the solution of the last stage of the present problem. I assure you that no matter what may happen, the Mexican republic and its government will maintain the national honor unstained. The financial and military situations are much improved, and soon the world will know that peace has been effected in Mexico."

Huerta's reception in public shows he has gained in popularity by the developments of the last few days. "Vivas" are shouted as he passes through the streets, and among even the better classes, whom he had almost alienated, there is increasing demand that all Mexico rally to support him.

Reports that Mazatlan had been captured by constitutionalists were current here, but were denied at the war department.

Word from Vera Cruz says conditions in Tampico are hourly growing more alarming. Altamira, twelve miles north of the seaport, is reported to have surrendered to the constitutionalists without resistance, leaving an unobstructed approach to Tampico.

The federals defending Tampico are reported to be very short of ammunition and the fall of the city is feared. The investment of Tampico by the rebels is particularly vital to Mexico City because there is a great scarcity of fuel oil here. The supply comes from Tampico, and with the oil city cut off the capital faces a fuel famine.

CUTTING CITY PAYROLL

Mayor of Boston to Cancel Increases Ordered by Predecessor

Boston, Feb. 7.—Orders were issued by Mayor Curley to every department heads in the city to hold up the payrolls in their respective departments until the mayor determines definitely the salaries he intends allowing each and every department employe.

It is Curley's intention to reduce every salary increase except those given the fire and police departments, and place the salaries back at the same figure they were before ex-Mayor Fitzgerald granted the increases.

More than 2500 employes have been given increases during the past year.

Salem, Mass., Feb. 7.—In the criminal court here, before Judge Quinn, Charles H. Bath of Lynn was sentenced to not less than ten or more than twelve years in state prison for killing his father, Silas Bath, at their home in Lynn.

Bath killed his father by inflicting eleven knife wounds. Evidence showed that both father and son had been drinking heavily prior to the quarrel which resulted in the stabbing.

MUST HAVE NEW CLOTHING

Salt Lake City Air Made Girl Quickly Grow to Womanhood

New York, Feb. 7.—Salt Lake City was boomed as a health resort by the claim of Mrs. Catherine Harris in surrogate's court that her daughter of 15 went there and in three months attained the "proportions of a woman around the age of 19 or 20."

None of the girl's clothing, Mrs. Harris said, will now fit, and the surrogate allowed her $190 from the girl's estate—of which she is guardian—to buy new clothing.

FAIR PLAY.

The Boston dailies requested abstracts of the sermon of Rev. A. L. Hudson and Rev. B. A. Willmott, in criticism of Cardinal O'Connell, but none of them gave the clergymen fair play; all of them cut out the criticism and published only the complimentary comments. The Daily Ledger published the abstracts in full, as written by these pastors, and today, in the interest of fair play, gives greater space to a layman to reply.

If there is one thing the Daily Ledger desires to avoid it is a religious controversy, especially when a correspondent desires three or four columns in which to reply. Correspondents should strive to be brief and keep their letters within a column or 1,500 words.

It is seldom that the Daily Ledger reports sermons at length, and then it does not endorse the views presented. Space is freely given to churches of all denominations, and the Daily Ledger cannot be accused of being unfair to any. If one church receives better reports than another it is because that church has a more active press correspondent.

IN DEFENCE OF CARDINAL

E. J. Parker Replies to Revs. Hudson and Willmott

The letter of Edward J. Parker in reply to Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson and Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott,, started in Friday's Ledger is continued below:

Editor Daily Ledger:

"I will now try and answer Rev. Mr.

WILMOTT'S QUESTIONS.

He asks, "Why, if the Catholic church inspires men, so that every day the Catholic is a Christian, over 80 per cent of those in our prisons and penal institutions are of that faith?"

My answer to that question is, that it is a statement of fact in the form of a question, it is unsupported by proof, that proof of the statement does not exist, and that is absolutely false. Even if true, the answer might be that they have not that facility in keeping out of prison possessed by non-Catholics, who regard getting caught as a greater offense than the crime on account of which their capture is sought.

In the countries from which the emigrants referred to by Rev. Mr. Willmott come, they sometimes close the jails because no offences have been committed on account of which persons should be imprisoned. A notable instance was the closing of Kilmainham jail, in the city of Dublin, Ireland, where the teaching of the Roman Catholic church exerts some influence.

Rev. Mr. Willmott's next question is why the

and civilizations of Europe are Catholic? My reply is they are not. In proof of that assertion I offer the following, viz:—Mr. Sydney Brooks, a distinguished Protestant writer for the North American Review, in writing of the existing situation in Belfast Ulster Co., Ireland, says in an article entitled "The Problem of Ulster." Perhaps no where on earth do 390,000 people produce so much wealth as in Belfast. It is a city of inexhaustible industrial marvels. It claims to have the largest ship yard, the largest linen mill, and the largest rope, tobacco and mineral water factories in the world; all the Belfast industries are in the hands of Protestants, and the Catholics belong with hardly an exception to the employed and not the employing classes." And yet in this city in this twentieth century, Mr. Brooks says, "One of the minor amusements of the Ulsterman is chalking up reflections on the Catholics and their religion on the walls and public buildings."

And, says this writer further, "I need hardly say that with such inflammable material to work upon there is no lack of hands willing to stoke the fire, and that the ministers of the Gospel, especially among a given sect are as usual, (mark the 'as usual') doing what they can to raise passion to a white heat. There are pastors in Belfast today, who are talking and acting like so many Mohammedan Mullahs preaching a Holy War. All the detestation of Rome that animated the England of the sixteenth century is nakedly, shamelessly, alive and operative in the northeast of Ireland today; and the devil's brew of sectarian bigotry is being handed out in the form of barely veiled incitements to the roughs of the city to attempt a massacre of their Catholic fellow subjects."

Is this, Rev. Mr. Willmott, an example of Protestant progressiveness and prosperity?

And does it consist of the armed camps maintained in the so-called and the spectacle of Protestant Germany and Protestant England ready to destroy each other in an attempt, by the one to acquire, and the other to retain supremacy, in commerce and trade? And does it finally consist in England holding out the hand of friendship to the United States, and at the same time exercising the veiled arts of European diplomacy against the United States in Mexico?

If Rev. Mr. Willmott wants to get a fair idea of the kind of progressiveness the Roman Catholic church seeks to create and develop, let him go to the writings of Francis Parkman and Helen Hunt Jackson, both non-Catholics, and there learn that the policy of Protestant England in colonizing this country was to exterminate and destroy the native Indian, while the policy of Catholic Spain and France was to Christianize and civilize these same Indians.

Let him also consult the writings of a French writer, H. A. Taine, whom I believe was a non-Catholic; and there read, "English Protestants do not feel for the doctrines of Roman Catholics, the same good will and impartiality which French Roman Catholics feel for the doctrines of Protestants."

And then if he wants to get an idea of the futility of stopping the progress of the Roman Catholic church, let him go to the writings of Thomas Babington Macaulay, another non-Catholic and there learn where the Roman Catholic church will be, and what it will be doing, when the native New Zealander stands on the ruins of London bridge, and sees about him nothing but ruin, chaos and desolation.

If the Rev. Mr. Willmott's observation of the was accurate and comprehensive, he might have noticed the just cause of complaint, which one of the humblest of these republics has against the United States in the means adopted to secure land on either side of the Panama canal, and the civic righteousness and personal morality practised by the United States in securing this land.

And if his observation extended farther south than Colombia, he might have seen on the summit of the Andes on the boundary line of Chili and the Argentine Republic, a figure of the Redeemer of the world placed there by these two republics, to commemorate the settlement of a dispute between the two countries, which it was thought would result in war. In fact both countries had prepared for war and it seemed that it could not be averted, when happily a way was found to settle the difficulty peaceably and without bloodshed.

And then they took the artillery which the two armies were to use the one against the other and out of the metal of the guns they cast this colossal figure of the Redeemer of mankind, and it stands today as a memorial not alone of the successful efforts of these two Roman Catholic republics to avert war, but as an example to the world of the progress of Roman Catholic countries along constructive lines.

There was there

NO LOSS OF LIFE,

no maimed and bleeding victims, no helpless widows and orphans, no heartless employers seeking to escape liability for the injury sustained by his employee through his negligence, no attempt to overreach by the smooth tricks of diplomacy, no defiance of the law and justice, evils which are today a deadweight on civilization, in the mad struggle for wealth, industrial and material success, and supremacy in commerce and trade.

If these latter be the indicia of your vaunted progress Rev. Mr. Willmott, take them if you will; as for Roman Catholics, there is not one rightly trained in his religion and who practices its teachings, will envy you the possession of them, though they give you the wealth of the world.

THE ROSARY.

Rev. Mr. Willmott concludes his attack upon the Roman Catholic church and Roman Catholics, by the following statement, viz:—"The fact is known to all travellers whether Catholic or Protestant, that the Catholic is at its best in America; that her priests are exponents of a more spiritual message than elsewhere. This we claim is due to the fact, that she has to live beside the vigorous alert faith of Protestantism."

In reply to this, I beg leave to submit the following, viz:—Some years ago, there lived on Bigelow street, in this city, a gentleman who has since died. His life was comparatively short, and therein is the pity of it, for even from childhood, it was apparent that he would leave his mark upon the world before he died. And he did, not only by the beauty and goodness of his own life, but in the lasting fame he secured in the musical world.

His name is Ethelbert Nevin, while he lived in Quincy he was the organist of a Protestant church in this city. He was somewhat of a traveller, and he spent a great deal of time on the continent of Europe in acquiring training in music, and developing his rare musical talent.

He kept a diary and the following is an exerpt from it, viz:—"Yesterday, Sunday, I went to St. Sulpice to hear Widor's chorus and the music to the high mass. There is something very impressive about the Roman Catholic church; and if I could believe and worship as the good Roman Catholics, I think I would be the happiest man in the world! Our terrible Puritanical training makes us suspect everything and believe by the rule of three, not even permitting the 'rule of three' to be presented in an attractive form."

Before this gentleman died, as an evidence of his affection and devotion for his wife, he gave to her and the world, "The Rosary." I think further comment on Rev. Mr. Willmott's last statement is needless.

There are two paragraphs in the address of

to which I want to call attention, and that I may be as accurate as possible I will state them here as they appeared in the Boston Herald. They are as follows, viz:—

"Without sincerity in the pulpit and poor in the pews, there has been and there never can be any moral influence in any church. And no wonder today they are empty. No wonder the few sincere men, doubtless in good faith, struggling to keep alive the little spark of Christianity left in their congregations are disheartened."

"But if the Bible is nothing but a bit of oriental poetry, if faith is only superstition, if as again and again we have been told by some of the intellectuals, miracles and magic are all the same, and God is an electric current, then what wonder that men refuse to think any more of God or of religion or of moral law."

"The remainder of that address appeared with the above in the Boston Herald on the day following its delivery, and if the whole address was published by the Herald then the Cardinal did not once use and in the first of the pargraphs here quoted, he had words of commendation for the "sincere men, struggling to keep alive in their congregations, the last spark of Christianity."

In the next paragraph it ought to be apparent to any intelligent and impartial reader, that his words had no application at all to Orthodox Protestants; they were directed rather against those who seek to undermine Christianity and drive the Bible from the religious life of the world.

There was therefore, no ground for the attack of Rev. Mr. Hudson and Rev. Mr. Willmott, and they of all men, ought to understand at once, that dynasties, university presidents, ministers, emperors, kings, queens, armies, heresies and schisms of every conceivable sort have not yet once stopped in almost two thousand years, the divinely guided Roman Catholic church in its mission of regenerating the world.

Edward J. Parker.

MAY FREE MANY CONVICTS

Court Decision Opens Doors of State Prison In Kentucky

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 7.—Several hundred convicts in the Kentucky state prisons may obtain immediate release under a ruling by the state court of appeals.

The decision is based on the court's interpretation of the indeterminate sentence law and resulted from an appeal in the case of John Demoss, sentenced to a minimum of two years from Covington.

Demoss served two years and applied to the prison commission for parole. His plea was refused and he sued, the case finally reaching the court of appeals.

The court decided that under the law he was entitled to a parole when he had served his minimum sentence without the necessity of going before the prison commission and if a parole were refused the petitioner had the right to secure a mandamus for his release.

BRAINTREE TOWN OFFICIALS.

Hon. B. Herbert Woodsum announces through the Observer that he is not a candidate for the office of assessor. His many friends, appreciative of his great care in assessing, will regret his resignation from that office. Who will be his successor?

John F. Clinton, 10 Stetson street, East Braintree, electrician, is a candidate for water commissioner for three years. He desires the office now held by the "genial friend from the east part of the town."

Col. A. C. Drinkwater, who declines to serve the town another year as selectman, overseer of the poor, and highway surveyor, is looking, it is said, for the appointment as postmaster of Boston. The vacancy is already sought by R. Allen Gage, a former town father and George H. Holbrook, the contractor and builder. The report that Clarence R. Bestick will run for the same office is incorrect. Mr. Bestick desires to continue as tree warden. He is doing good work and should be reelected.

Of late the melting pot of the town has been kept in precinct three and there it is boiling with three good men in it. Henry M. Storm, the popular selectman, for eight or ten years has two bustling opponents Louis F. Bates, owner of the Bates Opera House and a hardware dealer in Weymouth Landing, and George E. Ludden. Mr. Ludden has lived in East Braintree many years, his sister Mrs. Loring is a valued member of our school board, and his son J. E. Ludden is a successful plumber.

To fill the vacancy on the school board the citizens are unanimous in the choice of William W. Gallagher of Maple street.

Much preparation has been put into the service and it is anticipated that the congregation at second observance of Go-to-church Sunday will be more than double that of January 11.

On Sunday, February 15, the pastor has invited the G. A. R., Woman's Relief corps and all allied patriotic associations to services at the church in commemoration of Lincoln's birthday.

QUINCYS WIN FROM BROCKTON

The Quincy High basket ball teams took both games from the Brockton High aggregations in the Quincy gym Friday afternoon. The first team won 18 to 10, and the second team 13 to 9. Eight of the visiting first teams points were scored by Frank Hill on free tries.

The score at the end of the first period was 6 to 4 for Quincy in the big game, and 7 to 5 for Brockton in the second game. The visitors' shooting, while not altogether good, was seasoned with hard luck the greater part of the game.

The first team game was featured by the poor shooting of Brockton. Hamlin, the Quincy back, played the best game for Quincy, doing good work in the back field and netting two baskets. Quincy lost many opportunities to score by indulging in too many short passes instead of working toward Brockton's territory.

SECOND TEAMS.

The first half of the second team game was the fastest ever played on the court by second teams and in the first period it furnished the sensation of the day when Stonberg from the extreme right hand corner passed diagonally to the upper centre to La Roque who picked the ball out of mid-air and before completing a circle sent it flying clean into the net. The second team game was nip and tuck throughout, although it slowed up considerably during the second period.

Siegel Company Schedules In Bankruptcy Filed at Boston

Boston, Feb. 7.—A partial list of the claims against the Henry Siegel company of Boston shows that the company owes over $1,078,869.58, which is the amount so far ascertained.

Pridday gives no estimate of the assets which have been in the hands of receivers since Dec. 30. It was recently stated in court, however, by counsel for the receivers, that the assets would probably reach about $900,000, of which $600,000 represented the merchandise in the Boston store.

There are over 2500 creditors, only two of whom are secured.

POVERTY BALL AT BRAINTREE

The poverty ball given by the Braintree Club Thursday evening in Braintree Town hall called out a large crowd of dancers, and there were many spectators on hand to see the fun, so that the hall and balcony were filled to capacity.

Music was furnished by Atkinson's orchestra, and the singing of many of the new song hits by Snyder's serenaders with Carleton Beale proved a very popular feature. Dancing was enjoyed from 8 until 1 o'clock with a short intermission during which ice cream was served in the lower hall.

At 10 o'clock the grand march of the aspirants for prizes was announced and shouts of laughter were provoked by the outlandish rigs of the ladies and gentlemen in line. The judges were:—Fred Drake of Wollaston, F. B. Platt of Holbrook, Charles Fagan of Avon, Joseph Farrell of West Quincy, and George Jones of Braintree.

Club members were declared ineligible, and after a short deliberation, the prizes which were of the cash variety, were awarded as follows:

First lady—Mrs. Edgar Wilde, Braintree.

Second lady—Mrs. John B. Dyer, Braintree.

First gentleman—Alden J. Belcher, Braintree.

Second gentleman—Clifton Harlow, Jr., Weymouth.

The floor was in charge of the following club members:

Floor director—L. Thurlow Torrey.

Aids—Walter R. Howland, Charles R. Cummings, Frank C. Allen, G. Dallas Willis, Jr., Chester Wilson, Courtney Atkinson, James G. Cuff, John E. McGurn, Norton P. Potter, Dr. V. C. Haworth, Carl P. Lothrop.

During the evening a suit of clothes, the reward of the holder of the lucky ticket, was awarded to John H. Sullivan of South Braintree.

The affair was a success both socially and financially, and was up to the high standard set by the Braintree Club for its functions.

The reception committee, as appointed, consisted of Colonel George D. Willis, Hon. James T. Stevens, Charles B. Cummings, William A. Ross, W. Austin Torrey, N. Gleason Torrey, Dr. F. H. Merriam, Amasa S. Thayer and Charles H. Bailey.

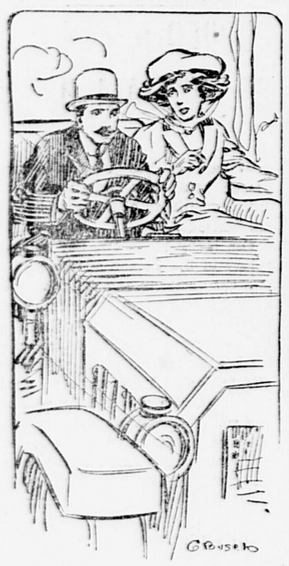
The New Automobile

Its Demonstration Trip Was an Eventful One

By F. A. MITCHEL

I was shopping and had been looking at some laces. Leaving the store, I went out on to the sidewalk, intending to go home, but it was such a bright spring morning that I was loath to do so. Beside the curb stood a new spick and span automobile, the sun glistening on it and the cushions looking so comfortable that I wished I might have a spin in it. My husband was at the time trying automobiles with a view to buying a new one, and I wished he would select one exactly like the car before me. While I was coveting it Charlie Forsyth came along and after greeting me joined me in admiring the machine.

"I'd like a spin this morning," I said to him. "I haven't been out for a week. Our chauffeur has been laid up, and I'm afraid to go out into the country alone, for if my machine should break down I wouldn't know what to do."



"I DON'T OWN THIS CAR. ISN'T IT YOURS?"

"I'll take you out," he said. "Get in."

I knew that Charlie was fond of motoring, but was surprised that the car should be his. However, he owned several cars, and I expressed no surprise. The truth is I was thinking that I should decline his invitation. My husband was not at all jealous and permitted me to accept any attentions I saw fit. But I was quite sure that if he would be displeased at my motoring with any one that person was Charlie Forsyth. This was what occupied my mind as I stepped into the car.

"Only a short ride," I said. "Tom said he might be at home at noon today with a new car he is trying and take me out with him after luncheon."

"Just as long or as short as you like," he replied.

I knew Charlie to be a fine driver, and I was therefore surprised that he had some difficulty in getting under way, but I supposed that his machine being a new one, he had not yet become familiar with it. However, we finally got out from the crowd of vehicles that frequented that part of the city, and it was not long before we were moving on a country road regardless of the speed limit. We had been out about half an hour when I asked Charlie how long he had owned the auto.

"Owned what auto?"

"Why, this one."

"This one! I don't own this car. Isn't it yours?"

"Mine! No. I never saw it before today."

"Well, I'll be jinged! We've stolen an auto."

I began to laugh.

"It's no laughing matter," he added. "The owner can make a lot of trouble for us if he likes."

"I wonder who the owner is?"

"I don't know, but I do know that I'm going to take it back from where I got it as soon as possible. I only hope—no, that cannot be expected—the fellow has been detained so that we can get it back before he misses it."

"For heaven's sake!" I exclaimed. "Turn around and go back as fast as you can!"

"It would be better to return by another road. We'll strike a crossroad presently. I'll take it and in a mile or so reach an asphalt paved way that will take us back to the city."

We kept on, but in a few minutes I heard an ominous buzzing behind. I turned and saw an auto coming like the wind.

"My goodness gracious!" I cried. "Suppose it should be the owner of the car coming for us!"

"Quite likely it is," said Charlie grimly.

I can understand the temptation of persons running autos when they knock down or run over some one to try to get out of the scrape by flight. The impulse to make a race for concealment is very strong. The almost certainty of final detection is lost sight of. This is the way I felt, and I fancy Charlie was tempted in like manner. But he never said a word, nor did I. I knew by the sputtering of the machine as he turned on more power and opened a valve to let out gas that he was going to run for it.

But both Charlie and I were fools not to turn about and, if we met the owner of the car we had taken, explain the mistake and throw ourselves on his mercy. As I have said, it was that desire inborn in humanity, and in the brute creation for that matter, for the excitement of a race.

"Don't look back," said Charlie.

I knew by this that my doing so would indicate that we were trying to escape by flight, whereas if we paid no attention to those behind us it would appear that we were simply going at high speed. But despite the caution I could not help turning my head. I could not see who was in the car behind us on account of the dust, and by other evidences of a breakneck speed I had little doubt that the driver was trying to catch us.

"I think they're gaining just a little," I said.

Tom pushed the speed gauge a trifle farther on—not to the limit, for we were already going at a tremendous gait. The telegraph poles flew like the spokes of a revolving wheel. Fortunately the road was good, but Charlie dare not turn when we reached the crossroad without slowing down, and this he did not wish to do. So we shot by it like a cannon ball.

Looking ahead, I saw what teams were in the road turn and as far as possible on the side. When we reached one of them the astonished face of the driver flashed upon me and vanished.

Looking back, I saw that we had gained on our pursuers. They were still under full speed, but they surely could not have as swift going a machine as ours. But at this moment something underneath our car began to rattle. Charlie instinctively moved back the speed gauge.

"I'm afraid we're beaten," he said.

"Oh, go ahead!" I cried. "Take the chances."

"If anything should break while going at this speed we'd be mashed into pulp."

Possibly, added to this view of the case, Charlie had had time to consider the folly of our course. The rattling continued, and he took off more power. I looked back and saw that our pursuers were rapidly coming up with us. I think I would have renewed the pace if I had known we should be wrecked, but Charlie had got some discretion into him and kept reducing instead of putting on speed.

"When they come up," he said, "don't appear as if we had been trying to get away from them. Brazen it out. I'll declare, till otherwise convinced, that the machine is mine."

So we prepared ourselves for a bluff, and our pursuers, coming near, shouted to us to stop. Charlie obeyed, and the other car slowed down beside us. When I saw what it contained the heavens grew black, all about me whirled, and I sank back on the leather cushion.

I had been dying from my husband. I didn't quite faint away. I was sufficiently conscious to see on Tom's face the look of a man who had caught his wife running away with a rival. The first words I heard came from Charlie, and it was evident that he had not lost his presence of mind.

"Hello, Tom!" he said. "What are you doing out here at this time in the morning?"

Tom made no reply. He was too appalled to speak.

"I met your wife," Charlie continued, "in front of Waterman's store looking at this auto. I thought it was hers, and she thought it was mine. I proposed a spin, and it was only a few minutes ago that we discovered our mistake."

I saw a look of mingled relief and doubt come over my husband's face. He seemed to wish to believe the story, but found it hard to swallow. Presently he said in a reserved tone:

"You are in a car I have been thinking of buying. I left it awhile ago before Waterman's, going in to buy a pair of driving gloves. When I came out the auto was gone. A policeman told me he saw a man and a woman get into it and drive off in this direction."

By this time I had recovered sufficiently to take my part in the conversation.

"We discovered our mistake," I said, "just as we heard you coming for us. Not knowing who you were, but supposing you were the owner of the car we had taken, we thought we would race you for it. Flying from my own husband—ha, ha!"

Tom didn't seem to think it funny a bit, the reason being plain. The idea that was uppermost in his head was that I was eloping with his rival. However, the fact that we had taken the automobile he had been using convinced him. If we had intended an elopement we should not have been likely to take that particular car. The fact of having been pursued by Tom began to strike Charlie as very indicrous. The corners of his mouth began to quirk up. Tom's scowl also broke into a smile.

"We've got to get back to town," said Charlie. "Do you want your wife in your car, Tom, or will you trust her to me? I promise solemnly not to run away with her again."

Tom's smile broadened into a grin, and, starting his auto—he had borrowed it for the pursuit—he left us to go where we pleased. We followed him home, and I invited Charlie into luncheon. We found Tom opening a bottle of wine, and before the party broke up we were in a gale of laughter at our stealing an automobile, being chased for thieves and finally my being considered an eloper by my own husband.

WANTS TO DROP MILITANT IDEA

Christobel Pankhurst Would End Exile In France

SISTER RAISES OBJECTIONS

Sylvia's Branch Breaks Away From Parent Organization and Will Henceforth Be Independent—Family Feud Viewed With Satisfaction by Young and Ambitious Element

London, Feb. 7.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst announced her secession from the Women's Social and Political union, the militant women's organization. Her East End of London federation, which has hitherto been a branch of the parent organization, will henceforth be entirely independent.

The rift among the militant suffragettes is said to be due to Sylvia Pankhurst's ultra-revolutionary aspirations, which the leaders of the Women's Social and Political union are beginning to believe are damaging their cause.

Reports of dissensions in the inner circles of the militant organization involving the Pankhurst triumvirate have been in circulation for some time. According to these, Christabel Pankhurst is anxious to end her long exile in Paris and return to London and take control of the organization, for it is doubtful if her mother, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who is still in Switzerland, will be well enough for some months to resume her arduous duties of commander-in-chief.

But Christabel, the reports have it, desires to come back under conditions that will not necessitate frequent terms of imprisonment for her under the "cat and mouse act."

Therefore, it is said, she wants militancy dropped. In this stand she has the support of many of the older members of the organization, who believe that, while militancy has accomplished the purpose of bringing the suffrage question to the front, continuance of militant tactics will be injurious to the cause.

Sylvia Pankhurst, on the other hand, is not prepared to abandon militancy until she has fully tested the fighting capacity of her "People's army," which she organized at the East End of London and with which she is credited as believing she can start a revolution which will force the government to enfranchise women.

Several of the younger and more ambitious members of the Women's Social and Political union view with unconcealed satisfaction the Pankhurst feud, believing it will end the autocratic sway the Pankhursts have exercised over the society since Mr. and Mrs. Frederick P. Lawrence were driven out of it last year.

WOULD BAR NEGRO VOTER

Vardaman Says Women In Black Belt Live In State of Siege

Washington, Feb. 7.—"The women of the southern states in the black belt are living today in a state of siege, with more dread than in the days when wild men and wild beasts roamed the frontier," said Senator Vardaman of Mississippi during debate on the Lever agricultural extension bill in the senate.

Senator Gallinger started the argument with a statement in favor of the Jones amendment to provide that negro agricultural colleges in the south shall share in the administration of the proposed fund for farm demonstration.

This brought forth extended remarks upon the negro by Vardaman, who declared it would be a godsend if the negro was not permitted to vote in any state.

SEIZE $70,000 IN OPIUM

Initial Action by Customs Officers Under a New Amendment

San Francisco, Feb. 7.—First application of a new amendment to the opium law found customs officers in possession of $70,000 worth of the drug. The law at present prohibits the importation of opium under bond for transshipment to another country.

Inspectors found 1600 tins aboard the Pacific Mail liner Manchuria when she docked here, consigned from Hong Kong to Manzanillo and Mexico City. It is held in the customs warehouse.

BLUEJACKETS ARE LANDED

Will Protect Lives and Property of Foreigners at Caye Haytien

Washington, Feb. 7.—Rioting and pillage broke out in Cape Haytien to such an extent that Commander Bostwick of the gunboat Nashville landed eighty men to protect lives and property of foreign residents.

Senator Theodore has lost control of his men at Cape Haytien, it was reported in a radiogram from Bostwick. Wholesale riots are feared.

No disturbances at Port-au-Prince are reported.

That proposed New York skyscraper 901 feet high would outsoar the Woolworth building, but would still be topped by the Eiffel tower in Paris. While going skyward why not go for a world record and be done with it, temporarily at least?

At Mens League of United Presbyterian Church

The regular monthly meeting of the Men's league of the United Presbyterian was held Friday evening, in the church. About sixty men faced the storm and came out to hear Rev. Kenneth Munro, the speaker of the evening. Mr. Munro gave a very interesting talk on the subject "Strong men."

Alexander Ross, the president of the league was in charge. Remarks were made by Rev. A. M. Thompson, former pastor of the church; by Rev. D. B. McLeod, the pastor, and by Andrew H. Morrison.

A social hour was spent after speaking was through. Refreshments were served by the social committee.

The league has recently reorganized and an effort is being made to get all the men of the church interested. A debate is being planned for the next meeting.

SNOW AND RAIN.

The snow storm that set in Friday shortly before 5 o'clock gave promise of being the hardest storm of the year. The snow was of the fine quality and during the early evening it fell thick and fast, giving promise of several inches before morning should it continue. The wind was from the southeast quarter however and during the evning the temperature moderated so that by 10.30 the snow had turned to rain, and likewise the snow to slush that made walking anything but pleasant.

The street railway company had its ploughs out early and but little difficulty was experienced in keeping its tracks clear so that there was no interruption in car service.

Prison Stripes For Alleged New Haven Road Offenders

IMMUNITY FEARED BY BORAH

Otherwise He Favors Resolution Calling For Investigation of Financing—Lack of Federal Legislation—Prouty Says Senate Can Accomplish More Than Commerce Commission

Washington, Feb. 7.—Declaring if five or six of the New Haven railroad offenders were behind the bars in stripes, it would be more effective than any legislation, Senator Borah in the senate expressed his fear of immunity in the new investigation of the New Haven road's finances as proposed by the resolution of Senator Norris, which came up for consideration.

Mr. Norris scouted the idea of immunity and declared that Chairman Elliott of the New Haven board ought to support and assist the proposed investigation.

Mr. Borah declared that the revelations regarding the financing of the road indicated that offenses had been committed deliberately. He favored the resolution except that he feared immunity might be given through the proposed investigation by the interstate commerce commission.

Mr. Lodge said that many of the charges aginst the road were still unproven. He said if anything could be done to recover the money of which Norris had said thousands of stockholders were robbed, that steps should be taken in this direction.

Mr. Cummins declared that the difficulty now lay in the fact that there was no federal law under which the offenders in the New Haven case could be punished.

"I was told this morning," said Norris, "that a Harvard professor who secretly in the pay of the New Haven railroad made three trips to Washington to see an influential member of one of the important committees of the house to have him use his influence to ward off anything being done in the New Haven case."

A letter from Commissioner Prouty of the interstate commerce commission was presented by Newlands, in which it was stated that nothing could be learned by a new investigation of the New Haven case.

It was suggested by Prouty that the senate could accomplish more than the commisssion. He stated that in almost every investigation made by the commission the inquiry led to the books of the company and that over these the commission had no jurisdiction.

Following the reading of the letter the senate failed to dispose of the Norris resolution and it went over until today.

The resolution provided for an inquiry by the interstate commerce commission into the investment of money at fictitious values, inquiry whether money so invested could be recovered and whether those guilty could be punished, as well as recommendations from the interstate commerce commission as to how a recurrence of high finance could be averted.

much. He imagined that after the first few weeks, that callers would fall off, but they did not seem to, and that the callers who were coming now were business men who he could not well refuse to see. There were also a number of lady callers, who of course must also be seen.

A new lock has been placed on the rear door of City Hall, and persons holding keys to the old lock will find themselves unable to enter unless provided with keys. Another thing, this door which for several years is more often unlocked than locked after City Hall is closed, is now kept locked all of the time, and anyone having authority to enter now after hours must have a key, and these keys will only be given to city officials. There are many of the old keys out but they are now no good except for old junk.

The Mayor is sporting a new derby hat, and thereby hangs a tale. His Honor attended the ball of the Police relief association at Music hall Thursday night wearing a derby hat. As he entered the hall his outer garments, including his derby, were taken in charge by one of the committee to be checked. In going up a short stairway this attendant tripped and when he landed it was found that the Mayor's derby had formed a cushion which broke the attendants fall, and likewise broke the Mayors derby, putting it out of commission for further use, unless it be to wear doing odd jobs about his back yard. However he has been supplied with a new derby.

Monday will be an off night for the City Council for the next regular meeting will not be held until Monday Feb. 16. While it is not known for a fact, it is more than probable that the Mayor and Treasurer's budget will be sent to the Council at this meeting.

Penniman, the taxi service man, has moved into his new garage on the corner of Washington and Wibird streets, and is now prepared in addition to furnishing taxies and touring cars for all occasions, to rent and store automobiles. He will also carry a full line of automobile supplies and there will be an attendant at the garage night and day.

SUDDEN DEATH OF WILLIAM H. FAY

William H. Fay of Saville street passed away this morning after a few days illness of heart disease, in his 71st year.

For many years Mr. Fay was secretary of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance company and built the house on Greenleaf street now occupied by Clyde T. Cox. Soon after his son-in-law entered business in Indianapolis, Mr. and Mrs. Fay went to that city to live with Mr. and Mrs. Spear. The death of a grandson by accident, and soon after the death of Mr. Spear were sad blows to the family, and last year Mr. and Mrs. Fay and daughter returned to Quincy where they have many friends, and purchased a home on Saville avenue. They were cosily settled, and Mr. Fay was once more an active member of Bethany Congregational church, being elected auditor at the recent annual meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Fay were married in Braintree in 1864 and on July 6, 1889 observed their silver wedding at their Greenleaf street residence. They were looking forward with interest to their golden anniversary this year. Mr. Fay was born in Chester and has always been interested in Y. M. C. A. work being at one time a secretary in Boston. He leaves a widow, a daughter, a grandson and a granddaughter. Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 37 Saville avenue.

Quincy's Record for Massachusetts Go-to-Church Sunday Without Special Effort

Sunday School and Young Peoples Services Not Included

Without any special effort on the part of the Quincy churches, there was an attendance at the Protestant churches on Sunday of over 9,000 at the morning and evening services—5,000 in the morning and 4,000 in the evening.

It should be noted that some of the churches hold only one service and that reports have not been received from others in the list. Also that Squantum, Houghs Neck, Sailors Snug Harbor and other religious services are not included. Neither are the Sunday schools of Young Peoples Societies.

Boston papers in reporting the attendance at Quincy churches have greatly underestimated the figures both on Sunday and the regular attendance each week.

Besides the two services at the Atlantic Memorial church, there were two funerals in the afternoon attended by over 900 people, which undoubtedly reduced the regular church attendance.

It should also be noted that there is considerable sickness in the city, and that the walking was very slippery and dangerous on Sunday.

The following figures of attendance have been compiled by the Daily Ledger:

SUNDAY RAID.

Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue, Captain Daniel R. McKay and Officer George Cahill raided the premises at 42 Nightingale avenue Sunday afternoon and seized 100 bottles of ale. The police say that when they arrived a crowd of men were drinking around a table. Mrs. Necoleta Marini who lives there will be arraigned in court Tuesday morning on a charge of keeping and exposing liquor for sale in violation of the law.

PIECE WORK AT NAVY YARD

May Be Necessary to Secure Contract for Supply Ship

Unless the men are willing to accept a piece and task system similar to that in force at the Fore River Shipyard, it is said that there is but little possibility of Secretary Daniels awarding the building of the Naval supply ship to the Charlestown navy yard.

Revised figures on the cost of the construction of the proposed ship show an increase approximately of $125,000 over the original bid. In spite of the increase, the bid is $125,000 lower than that of the Newport News Shipbuilding Co.

Officers of several of the unions of Navy Yard employees met Sunday and it was said that they do not favor the plan and have agreed to have their attitude decided by ballot if necessary.

They rest their objection to the installation of piece and bonus systems on a statement made by Assistant Secretary Roosevelt of the Navy department who said last spring at a conference that "The workingman can rest assured and I can officially state, that there will be no piece work or bonus systems at the Charlestown Navy Yard while Secretary Daniels is head of the Navy department."

The objection of the workmen at the yard may nullify all of Boston's chance of obtaining the contract it was said this morning.

DEMOCRATIC KICK.

Official information was not forthcoming from the meeting of the Ward Four Democratic Committee Sunday afternoon, but members stated that it was possible that the injunction to restrain the officers of the Democratic City Committee from exercising the duties of their office would be applied for this week, and that they would also seek a writ of mandamus ordering a new election. The City Committee, which organized Jan. 28, chose a list of officers which does not meet with the approval of the Ward Four committee. Because several of the members say they received no notification of the meeting the committee went on record a week ago as being opposed to the organization.

RECEPTION AT SQUANTUM

To Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon E. Wallace of New York

A reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon E. Wallace of New York was given Sunday evening by Mrs. Helen McGowan at her handsome bungalow on Orchard street, Squantum. Mrs. Wallace was Miss Phyllis Bostwick before her marriage New Year's day in Philadelphia to Mr. Wallace of Newark. It was the first visit of the young couple to Squantum where the bride's father, Mr. Perley Bostwick and her aunt, Mrs. McGowan reside.

The popularity of the charming bride was aptly expressed in a verse which accompanied a bouquet of lilies of the valley presented the bride by Master Richard Nelson, aged two. The verse read—

"She's the Lily of the valley
The Bright and Morning Star
She's the fairest of Ten Thousand to my Soul."

This verse was credited to Wallace, leading man of "The Newly Weds."

In behalf of the guests Councilman John R. Nelson in a few well chosen remarks in which he spoke of the great popularity and high esteem in which the bride is held by all her Squantum friends, presented the happy couple with a handsome coffee urn and tray. Mr. Wallace responded in happy vein.

A social hour followed during which dainty refreshments were served and there were musical selections and recitations by Mrs. Louise Holt and her daughter, Miss Thelma Holt, Mrs. S. H. Adams and Joseph Uppling.

The affair was a most enjoyable one and Mrs. McGowan proved herself a charming hostess. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Holt, Mrs. Stuart Knight and Mrs. Ethel Bostwick.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. John R. Nelson and son, Richard Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Uppling and son, Joseph Uppling, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Callahan, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew McGrain, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram A. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. John Jepson, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Bostwick, Misses Anne Margaret and Francis Allen, Miss Ethel Morse, Miss Mildred Hersey, James Lougan, Perley Bostwick, Miss Thelma Holt, Mrs. Louise Holt, George Hersey, Mrs. E. H. Kokerda, Mrs. S. H. Adams, S. A. Bostwick, Thomas Whiting and Gene Rounds.

MRS. WILLIAM L. BUCKLEY.

The Atlantic Memorial church was crowded at 2 P. M. Sunday to pay the last respects to Mrs. Elizabeth J. Buckley, wife of William L. Buckley of 56 Walnut street who passed away suddenly in Boston. Rev. Thomas W. Davison, the pastor, officiated, and paid a worthy tribute to the deceased.

A quartet including Miss Jordine Davison, Miss Margaret Read, Miss Maud Read and Mrs. A. H. Hall sang two selections, "Lead Kindly Light," and "Beautiful isle of somewhere." Seldom has Atlantic seen such a beautiful display of floral offerings. John Hall of Quincy was the funeral director. Burial was at Mount Wollaston cemetery.

SCOUT WEEK ALL OVER COUNTRY

All Members Will Repeat the Scout Pledge Wednesday Night

Boy Scouts all over the country are this week observing the fourth anniversary of their organization. The exercises in connection with the observance by Quincy troop will take place daily in Keatings' hall on Washington street and the general public are invited to lend their encouragement to the movement which has spread to all parts of the country by attending.

The duty of a Boy Scout primarily is to do a good turn every day and this week the members expect to be able to triple and quadruple the favors and good turns extended usually by the real scout.

General assembly is sounded today and all the members will troop to the hall where they will report to Scout Master B. F. Hodgkinson, Jr. Competition is the Tuesday program, and Wednesday in the evening at eight o'clock will be Scout night when the boys repeat their oath and renew their pledge to their organizations' purpose.

The annual competition, especially in the signal work will be held Thursday and Friday the regular meeting will take place. The week closes on Saturday with the general hike, the point to which the Boy Scouts will go not having been announced as yet.

Much interest is being taken in the observance by the families that have a Boy Scout living in their midst and many friends of the members of Troop 1 of this city have already promised their attendance.

It is expected that the renewal of the Scout pledge by all the Scouts of the country at 8 o'clock on Wednesday evening will be most impressive. The pledge is: "On my honor I promise to do my best: to do my duty to God and my country; to obey the Scout law; to help others at all times; to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight."

ANOTHER G. A. R. VETERAN

Albert A. Hayden Dies After A Long Illness

Albert A. Hayden, brother of Joseph W. Hayden, late chief of police, passed away Sunday night at his home on Hancock court after an illness of some duration.

M. Hayden during his younger days learned the granite cutters' trade which business he followed for many years, in fact he was employed in this line of business until a few years ago when he accepted a position with the Fore River Corp., as one of its watchmen. This position he held until failing health obliged him to give up active business.

He was a veteran of the Civil war having served in the 42nd and 60th Mass. regiments. At the close of the war he returned to Quincy and again engaged in the stone cutting business. He was a member of Paul Revere post 88, G. A. R. He leaves a widow and two sons, Albert L. Hayden of Quincy and Hiram A. Hayden who is a printer in Indiana.

BROOKLINE HEARING AT STATE HOUSE

Mayor Miller, City Solicitor Pinkham and Others Appear in Opposition

City Hall Notes of Interest to Voters of the City

Mayor Miller and City Solicitor Pinkham together with a special committee of the City Council are attending the hearing before the legislative committee on Metropolitan Affairs at the State House this morning on the bill to make the town of Brookline a part of Suffolk county. They will strenuously oppose the passage of the proposed bill.

Chief Engineer Billings, having in mind that many fires are caused by carelessness in allowing rubbish to accumulate, started in this morning to enforce the rules relative to keeping places clean. He visited every business place about City Square looking into the cellars to see what condition they are in. He will also tell the proprietors that hereafter all sawdust and old papers that accumulate on the floors must be cleaned up every night and that cellars must be cleaned of accumulated rubbish once each week. The Chief will visit all of the business places frequently to see that the rule is complied with.

It might be said that this rule will not apply to City Square alone but to every business place in the city, and will also be extended to back yards of private residences where rubbish is apt to accumulate. The Chief intends to follow up this matter constantly and believes that by so doing many fires may be prevented.

As the Mayor was obliged to leave for Boston early this morning to attend the legislative committee hearing he had but little time to accomplish some of the things which he had in mind. He said that he supposed that the letter of Assessor Bates published in Saturdays Daily Ledger would give people a chance to cry that the Mayor and Bates had a row. There was no row about it, he said as the talk he had with him Friday was pleasant. The Mayor however seemed a little surprised to see the statements made in Mr. Bates letter, although the latter had told him that he intended to follow him in the matter to the end.

This morning the two gentlemen met in a friendly manner and the Mayor began to joss his chief assessor telling him that he might write a letter striking out from the shoulder that would put his, Bates, letter in the shade. He said, however, that at present he had no intention to make any public reply. He believed that all things considered the city had got the best bargain that it was possible to get.

It is probable that before the week is out active work will have been commenced at City Hall, to provide the Mayor with a better office. As previously stated he will take the office now occupied by the City Engineer. It is possible that a room may be provided for part of the City Engineers force in the Council chamber.

NOTICE

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

By some unexpected hitch in the proceedings, none of the loop-the-loop aviators has yet been turned into a human pancake.

The Suffragists went away dissatisfied from the White House, though the President would have frankly given them his ideas about the best way to make bread.

Under the circumstances, Mr. Bryan might as well give up expecting any valentine Feb. 14 from Champ Clark.

Some cities persist in selling their bonds over the counter, ignoring the fact that this leaves the brokers without any commissions.

No, Gladys, the Navajo Indians have not located in this town. It is merely the smart set trying to learn the tango.

The lack of respect for high dignitaries in this country has gone so far that they have fined a former Congressman for smuggling.

In response to the feeling that prisoners should learn valuable trades the convicts at the Illinois state penitentiary have been making counterfeit five cent pieces.

All the Mexican war correspondents have to do to keep out of jail is to write what the generals tell them to.

Not merely was "Butch" McDevitt forbidden to speak from the Capitol steps, but they wouldn't even give him leave to print in the Congressional Record.

THE LIBRARY POST.

Formerly public libraries were centers of seclusion and gloom, where drowsy librarians sought to guard their books from the dog earing multitude. The less the books went out, the better they were preserved. The old librarian liked a full shelf. It prevented complaint when people consulted his treasures.

Nowadays the librarian likes the empty shelf. It is a sign that the books are circulating, and performing their mission of instruction.

Recognizing the difficulty of getting the books out into the outlying rural country, Representative Gillett has just introduced a bill in Congress permitting public libraries to send books through the mails for a cent a pound. This would connect many a lonely farm house with the wide world.

There has been of late a great growth in the scope of library work. Massachusetts has a library for every town. An energetic worker at Hagertown, Md., delivered the past year 28,000 books about that hilly country by automobile. But in spite of the library extension work carried on in many states, it still remains true that the isolated farm home makes but little use of the library.

The ideal thing would be an automobile library wagon for every country, supplying books from a town or county library into the loneliest homes. But Miss Titcomb's plan at Hagerstown cost the county $2500. In the long run, the popular diffusion of education thus obtained would be cheap at the price. But perhaps the county authorities would not believe it.

In the meantime, the cheap distribution of library books through the post office would fill many gaps. The boys and girls would not feel quite the hankering for city glitter, if the rural delivery man had left the latest books for young folks. The farmer and his wife might not drowse off to sleep at 8 P. M., if there were fresh science, fiction, and travel about the evening lamp.

SENATE ADOPTS RESOLUTION

Inquires Where Funds Went, Who Got Them, and Whether Those Receiving Benefit Are Liable to Punishment—State Authorities Who Failed to Prosecute Offenders Scored

Washington, Feb. 9.—After another lively debate, the senate amended and then adopted without a rollcall the Norris resolution requesting further information from the interstate commerce commission regarding the financial transactions of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. The resolution leaves it to the commission's discretion whether or not the investigation of the road's affairs shall be reopened.

The debate brought out sharp criticism of Speyer & Co. of New York and of the state authorities that had failed to bring criminal suits against the men alleged to have profited by the New Haven's disastrous transactions.

Chairman Newlands of the committee on interstate commerce told the senate that Attorney General McReynolds had convinced him there was no federal statute under which criminal prosecutions would lie.

"The inertia of the local authorities," said Newlands, "has some time resulted in an extension of the federal government's field of activity. But in this case it is believed the local authorities will do something."

"The New Haven tangle and the Frisco receivership," said Mr. Kenyon of Connecticut, a radical Republican, "are of the same complexion, and the proposed inquiry into the New Haven's past affairs is preliminary to a more thorough investigation. These genteel plunderers are not only robbing their stockholders at home, but they are robbing the country's credit abroad."

"Yes," said Mr. Lodge, "the flotation of the San Francisco securities in France was the worst blow American securities had ever received."

"Speyer & Co. of New York," said Mr. Oliver of Pennsylvania, "were instrumental in putting out those securities. It is interesting to know that Speyer Bros. of London are the fiscal agents of the navy department."

The resolution, as agreed to, reads as follows:

"Resolved, that the interstate commerce commission be requested to make public the facts in its possession concerning the financial transactions of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, and, as far as it may be necessary, to get additional information to thoroughly cover the subject, to reopen its examination of the affairs of that company and make a further investigation of its financial transactions with a view of ascertaining:

"First—What became of the funds of said company invested in the various enterprises and corporations mentioned in the opinion of the interstate commerce commission, numbered 2384, case numbered 4845, entitled 'The New England Investigation in the Matter of Rates, Classifications, Regulations and Practices of Carriers,' submitted May 20, 1913, and decided June 20, 1913.

"Second—Whether the person or persons authorizing such investment of the funds of said company and the person or persons receiving the benefit thereof are liable to punishment under existing laws.

"Third—Whether, under existing law, such funds so invested can be recovered on behalf of the stockholders of said company.

"Fourth—What legislation, if any, is necessary to prevent the recurrence of similar transactions."

Ingold started at Mulhauser, Alsace, and flew far to the north. He then proceeded southward to Munich, landing in a suburb.

The previous record of fourteen hours and seven minutes was made by Brunclanger.

LARGE JUNIOR C. E. RALLY

Endeavorers from Several Churches at Bethany

Saturday being Junior Day of Christian Endeavor week, it was observed at Bethany church by a Junior rally, under the auspices of the East Norfolk Christian Endeavor Union under the general direction of Miss Ida Laverna Thomas, junior superintendent of the union.

Notwithstanding the very unfavorable weather, a large number of Juniors assembled in the chapel at 2.30 the following churches being represented, Atlantic Memorial, Wollaston Baptist, Wollaston Congregational, Park and Downs, Bethany, First Presbyterian, United Presbyterian and Braintree Baptist.

The children marched to their seats singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," each society being led by its president carrying their banner. Mrs. Charles Sampson, the musical director of the Bethany society presided at the piano.

The program which followed was carried out almost entirely by the children themselves and was full of interest. Mrs. Trumper of Wollaston a former Junior superintendent of the Ohio State Union gave a most helpful and earnest address to the children, using various carpenters' tools to make clear and emphasize her very delightful talk.

Carle R. Hayward, an officer of the Massachusetts State C. E. Union, spoke a few owrds of appreciation and in commendation of the work being done by the Junior societies.

The award for the society having the largest per cent of its members present went to the Braintree Baptist a society that has been organized but a few weeks. he Bethany society had the largest number present, sixty out of a membership of one hundred and six.

SENATOR HOAR AND CHURCH GOING.

Massachusett's Grand Old Man, as he was called, the late U. S. Senator George Frisbie Hoar, in a bi-centennial address on "Church-Going" at Framingham, said:

"There is, in my judgment, no more commanding public duty than attendance at church on a Sunday. Does any man doubt that it is desirable to maintain the public worship of God? But if these Christian institutions are to abide, the men who believe in them must maintain them. I believe we best maintain the country we love, and the state of which we are a part, and of whose government we have our share of personal responsibility by a constant attendance on the public and social worship of God. I believe it to be to the interest of the country, of the town and of the individual that the habit be not abandoned. I suppose there are very few persons among those who do not go to church themselves who would not regard it as a grievous public calamity if all churches were closed, and the public worship of God and the preaching of the gospel were discontinued. It would, in my judgment, if that were to happen, be impossible to maintain liberty, self-government, or any form of Republic, which depends for its success on the character of its citizenship. The public worship of God in this country is to be continued or maintained only by attendance upon it."

THE CHILDREN'S PLAYERS.

The Chilren's Players who are to give "The Merry Fiddle" at Shuberts theatre, Boston, Friday afternoon and Saturday morning for children, are not children as some people think, the youngest in the cast being sixteen years old. This youngest member is Harmon Craig, son of John Craig, and his part in "The Merry Fiddle" as lord high herald is his first stage appearance. James Seymour, another member of the Children's Players company, is still in Harvard; Harold Whitney, who has the part of Playful, the jester, in "The Merry Fiddle" is a Technology student; Miss Louise Burleigh, formerly of Braintree who plays the wicked scamp, and Miss Esther Sidelinger of Quincy who will be the Princess Marylily, are just one year out of Radcliffe, and Miss Margaret Tapley, who will play Robin, is not long out of Wellesley.

PRESIDENT HUERTA

Head of Mexican Republic Appears to Gain In Favor

IS FIRMLY ENTRENCHED

Huerta Wins Sympathy by Lifting of Embargo on Arms

Mexico City, Feb. 9.—Today is the first anniversary of the beginning of the military uprising which ended ten days later in the overthrow of the Madero government.

Lifting the arms embargo by the United States has increased Huerta's popularity in this part of Mexico and generally throughout the country, except in the states wholly or partly controlled by the rebels.

Conversely, the disfavor with which General Carranza is regarded has been intensified. He would, say impartial observers, be regarded as the protege of the Americans and as a sort of gringo president.

Peace reigns in this city, despite the recurrent rumors of plots and conspiracies. The people go about their business and pleasures unmolested.

Christabel Pankhurst Denies That Sylvia Has Seceded

Paris, Feb. 9.—Christabel Pankhurst denounced the report that her sister, Sylvia Pankhurst, had seceded from the Women's Social and Political union, as a lie, the calumny of foes of the cause of suffrage.

"It is absolutely untrue," she said. "My sister and myself are in perfect accord. There is no enmity between us. And the cause shall triumph in spite of all such discreditable efforts as this to embarrass us."

The secession of Sylvia was reported in dispatches which stated that as the result of a conflict of authority and of opinion between Sylvia and Christabel, Sylvia had seceded, taking with her her federation in the East End of London.

RED LIGHT BILL SIGNED

Resort Keepers of Washington Preparing to Fight the Measure

Washington, Feb. 9.—President Wilson signed the Kenyon bill, legislating Washington's red light district out of existence, and policemen were dispatched to the segregated districts with orders to put on the lid.

Attorney General McReynolds is said to have advised President Wilson to veto the measure, on the grounds that it was unconstitutional.

Most of the denizens of the segregated area have left the city, but those who remain have retained expensive counsel in anticipation of carrying the law to the highest court.

George Eaton of East Milton aspires to a second term on the board and Jacob Turner a former member has commenced his campaign. W. B. WHAT IS VINOL?

About Which We Hear so Much? Our Druggist Tells You.

After twenty years of study two eminent French chemists discovered a method by which the alkaloids or medicinal curative elements of the cod's liver could be separated from the useless oil or grease. The oil which has no medicinal value is thrown away, but the healing curative properties are blended with tonic iron and a mild medicinal wine which makes Vinol, thus combining in one medicine the two most world famed tonics.

Vinol is not a secret medicine as its ingredients are printed on every bottle, and in all cases where the healing, curative influence of cod liver oil, or the blood building, strengthening influence of tonic iron is needed, Vinol gives immediate benefit, for it is easily assimilated and acceptable to the weakest stomach.

For all run-down, weakened conditions, and to cure chronic coughs, colds and bronchial troubles, Vinol is unexcelled. We will return your money if it fails. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

BOY HORSEWHIPPED BY COURT'S ORDER

Punishment of a Little Fellow For a Petty Offense

Grafton, Mass., Feb. 9.—The body of 12-year-old Alfred Chapdelaine, who was taken into the basement of the town hall here and lashed with a horsewhip by order of Judge William E. Fowler, is covered with welts from the stinging cuts administered by his father under the court's direction.

The eastern section of Worcester county is aroused over the incident and investigations will be started at once. The matter is to be thoroughly probed.

Alfred was brought into court and found guilty of jumping on the fender of a street car and pulling the trolley from the wire. The case against him was prosecuted by Shelley D. Vincent, attorney for the Milford and Upton railway, while the child appeared without counsel.

"GO-TO-CHURCH" SUNDAY

Large Congregations Respond to Movement In Graater Boston

Boston, Feb. 9.—More than 100,000 persons gathered at the Protestant churches of Greater Boston yesterday. The result of the state-wide observance of "Go-to-Church Sunday" was a remarkable success, and far exceeded the expectations of even the most sanguine.

It is estimated that throughout the city the attendance was practically doubled, the crowds exceeding even those of Easter time.

The outpouring was all the more remarkable, as in no instance was there any special musical programs arranged, every pastor leaving it to a real Christian awakening to bring the people within the churches.

Gross Carelessness.

STOCKWELL IS PARDONED

Manchester Patrolman Served Nineteen Years of His Sentence

Concord, N. H., Feb. 9.—Fred A. Stockwell, who has served nineteen years of a thirty-year sentence for killing Henry McAllister, a police sergeant at Manchester, was pardoned. Stockwell, who was a patrolman at Manchester, had been drinking heavily before the shooting and believed McAllister was persecuting him.

Mayor French, cousin of Stockwell and the leader in the pardon movement, took Stockwell to the home of Stockwell's daughter, Mrs. Fred Welcome. She was born after Stockwell began his prison term. A few years later Mrs. Stockwell secured a divorce.

The daughter eventually married and has a child, so Stockwell has become a father and a grandfather since he was in prison.

The efforts to get a pardon for Stockwell dragged along for three years and formed a notable struggle, just as the original case was one of the most sensational in the state.

FIFTH IN FIVE WEEKS

Death Thins Out Family In Remarkably Short Time

Webster, Mass., Feb. 9.—Mrs. Marie Crotteau Martel fell downstairs at her home in North Grosvenordale, crushing her skull, breaking her neck and dying instantly.

An extraordinary fate has pursued the Crotteau family from the time that one brother, Henry, died here early in January. Recently Mrs. Martel and her brother, Joseph, went to Granby, Que., where their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Crotteau, were sick and died shortly after they arrived.

They were waiting on the Granby station platform to return here after the funeral when a telegram was handed them telling that another brother, Euclid, was dying at St. John's. They had got back here Saturday from his funeral.

Not a Pleasant Surprise.

A man told his daughter that if she learned to cook he would give her a surprise. She learned the art, and he surprised her by discharging the servant girl.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

Only by seating several on the platform was it possible to accommodate all who attended Bethany church Sunday evening. The evening gathering numbered over 700 and in the morning there were over 500.

Sunday evening the pastor spoke on "Protestant unity." He said in part:

Religion is greater than the church. Religion existed before there was any church, and the church came into being as an attempt to express the religion of Jesus to the world. The church is an instrument and not an end in itself.

It is the danger of churches and governments alike to think the people exist for them, instead of both existing for the people. When the church has persisted in this un-christian attitude there has been reformations, which has forced the church back to the original and primitive idea, that the church is not to be a burden on the people but to serve them in the spirit of Jesus. When governments have persisted in this error, we have seen revolutions, and the original idea of a government for the people and by the people is re-established. Luther, was not, even in his thinking, free from the mistaken additions to the simplicity of the message of Christ, so, since that day, the Protestant church has been generation after generation throwing off the acretions of centuries and today we are in spirit and purpose nearer the primitive church established at Jerusalem than at any time since the reformation. For immediately after the reformation had commenced, the various bodies of believers commenced to dispute and to divide.

It has taken centuries for the Spirit of God to teach us that we are one in Him, though there may be diversities of gifts and callings. The world cares little for our creeds.

The justice of the modern world judges the church according to the standard that Jesus used "By their fruits ye shall know them." And if the spirit of hate, bickering, backbiting dwells in the church, the world judges that church lacks the spirit of Christ, and will have none of it. So the Protestant church has come to the conclusion that the making of men and not the making of creeds is our supreme business. Not to make them good Congregationalists; but good Christians; not to have them believe our doctrines but to believe and follow the Christ.

Referring to his sermon of the previous Sunday in reply to Cardinal O'Connell, Rev. Mr. Willmott said no a Boston daily dared to publish the abstract which he gave them. He deplored such a condition. He also answered many of the points raised by Mr. Parker in his letter to the Daily Ledger.

FIRST PARISH CHURCH.

Another record congregation in the First Parish church yesterday morning led some of the older members to recall the days, of a generation ago, when the large auditorium and gallery were completely filled and it was freely predicted that with a continuance of the present substantial growth in numbers and interest it will not be long before the loyal activity of those days will be restored.

Mr. Hudson, speaking of the period of protest in Unitarianism, said that no gospel could be more vital than that preached by Jesus of Nazareth. And yet, to the Orthodox Jews of his time, it seemed to be nothing but a protest against all that they held sacred. So they called him a blasphemer and tried to kill Him. In fact His teachings revived all that was noblest in the utterances of the ancient prophets of Israel from whom He so often quoted. But at the beginning of our era these prophetic teachings had been overlaid by the rigid formalism and ceremonialism which Jesus so fervently denounced.

In like manner the plain and vital gospel of Jesus became in time overlaid by the formalism of the Church of Rome, which was even more rigid and arbitrary than that sustained by the Jewish hierarchy in the time of Jesus.

Then came the protest of Luther and his followers, which rejected the tyranny of an infallible church and sought to restore the simplicity of the early Christian gospel. Unfortunately the possibilities of the Reformation in this line were hampered by the activity of the creed-makers, each of whom undertook to impose on Chrisendom his own theological opinions as final and absolute. This introduced an element of discord, which, for nearly four centuries, has divided Protestantism into more or less antagonistic groups, and has thereby hindered the real progress of Christianity.

It was against the tyranny of these man-made creeds that the Unitarian protest became more general and aggressive about a century ago. Then followed a long and bitter controversy in which Unitarians were denounced as infidels and blasphemers. Fortunately the period of controversy has for most Protestant churches been passed. The emphasis now is laid, not on the sectarian creeds which divide, but on those deeper religious principles which unite. Protestant churches are learning now to work together for the upbuilding of individual character and a nobler social order; to fight together against wrong, injustice and sin. And as this spirit grows it will strengthen the power and influence of all the Protestant churches, while those who for some time past have been indifferent to organized religion will take hold with renewed energy to help in a work which is so full of promise of human betterment.

Continuing the same general theme Mr. Hudson announced that he would preach next Sunday upon "The New Era of Constructive Faith."

In the afternoon there was held in the chapel a business meeting of the Young Peoples Religious Union. Among other things plans were laid for the holding of a delightful "College Night Entertainment" early in March.

SWEDISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The Sunday school convention of the Swedish Congregational churches for the first district which has been in session at the Swedish Congregational church in Quincy came to an end Sunday. At there morning service delegates were present from about 20 different Sunday Schools of the district, and brief addresses were made to the Sunday School pupils by the delegates, and there was also an address by the pastor; who spoke on "How may we increase the efficiency of the Sunday School." At the afternoon session at 3 o'clock there was a general discussion on Sunday School work. The delegates were entertained by the members of the Sunday School during their visit in this city.

The mid week meeting at the church will be held on Wednesday evening this week instead of Thursday.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

Rev. Fr. McCoy was the speaker at the monthly meeting of the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's Church in the church on Sunday afternoon. The attendance numbered 435 members.

CALVARY BAPTIST.

Rev. Mr. Tilley, gave a very interesting discourse on prejudices, pointing out the wrongs that result from a too hasty or pre-judgment.

There will be memorial exercises to commemmorate the life of Abraham Lincoln under the auspices of the Ladies' Sewing circle on Feb. 25. All are invited.

Tuesday evening Bible study will be held at the home of Joseph Prairo.

Wednesday the pastor will attend the second annual convention of Sabbath School Teachers of the Boston South Baptist Association to be held at the Clarendon street Baptist church, Boston.

Thursday, regular prayer meeting in the church.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

At the Universalist church on Sunday a large audience was present to enjoy the services. Rev. Merrill C. Ward took for his subject, "What the spirit saith to the churches." Mr. Ward brought forth clearly the points of sermon and all found it a pleasure to listen to him. The music for the day was especially enjoyed and included solos by Mr. McCurdy and Mr. Greene and a duet by Miss Hyland and Mr. Greene.

On Sunday, Feb. 15, Mr. Ward has invited the Grand Army, Woman's Relief Corps, and all Allied patriotic associations, to attend afternoon services at the church in commemoration of Lincoln's birthday.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

There was a large attendance upon all the services Sunday. In the kindergarten class, which meets in the vestry during the morning worship, twenty-nine little boys and girls listened most attentively to Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, who had charge of the morning lesson. The musical portions of the service were rendered by the Girls' choir and Mrs. Royal L. Turner, the soloist.

Rev. Carl G. Horst preached a stirring sermon from the text "Work out your own salvation," Philippians 2, 12. He said "Jesus Christ came to save men from their sins, not from the consequences of their sins. If we sin, we must bear the consequences, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. Salvation is not a commercial transaction, but the enrichment of life; it is not an escape from punishment, but a growth toward perfection.

"Heaven and hell are conditions of the soul. If hell is in our heart, then we are in hell no matter where our feet may be standing. And if heaven is in our heart, then we are in heaven even though we are on an errand of mercy in hell. Salvation means education in its broadest sense. Real satisfaction and joy and peace can come to us only by walking the straight and narrow path that leadeth unto life, by bringing our wills into harmony with God's will, and by making the doing of God's will our greatest desire. To live in harmony with God, to be in 'tune with the infinite' is salvation."

Another large congregation gathered at the vesper service and enjoyed an excellent musical program by the Standish male quartet of Boston. Rev. Mr. Horst preached upon the "Sin against the Holy Spirit," from the text Matthew 12, 31-32.

The Wollaston Unitarian Club, which is now in its fourteenth year, meets Tuesday. Dinner at 6.30 P. M. The after dinner speaker is Hon. John A. Sullivan, former chairman of the finance commission of the city of Boston.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid Alliance will be held in the vestry next Wednesday, Feb. 11. Luncheon will be served at one o'clock. After the business meeting at two o'clock Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney will give a lecture on "The modern drama in relation to life." Members are requested to bring their membership tickets with them.

Rev. Carl G. Horst will give an address before the members of the Women's Alliance in Dedham tomorrow afternoon.

The preparatory class will meet with the minister at the close of the morning service next Sunday morning.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

"Go-to-church" Sunday was certainly taken advantage of at the Wollaston Baptist. The morning's sermon had rather a unique subject: "Fools: Are you One?" According to Webster there are three kinds of fools, i. e., court jesters, those mentally irresponsible, and those who wilfully go on contrary to all the laws of wisdom, in spite of all that is said and done to prevent. The latter was the kind considered by the pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther. He quoted many scriptural illustrations especially from Proverbs. "The fool shall be a servant to the wise of heart." "A fool despiseth his father's instruction," "A fool utereth all his mind."

E. W. Cambell gave his talk, "Sundays in European Cathedrals," postponed from last week, before the men's classes at the Sunday school session. There were over seventy out to meet him.

The Christian Endeavor meetings of both Junior and Senior societies were well attended. The Junior membership contest is nearing completion, and an average attendance of sixty shows the keen interest. Mertie L. Roach had charge of the consecration meeting of the seniors at 6.

At the song service, the pastor preached the third of a series of sermons upon baptism, "What should come after baptism?" Seven persons were baptized.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

The grand missionary campaign which began on Saturday evening is arousing considerable interest and enthusiasm among members and attendants of the church. Rev. M. E. King is a missionary and evangelist and having traveled around the world several times, is thoroughly acquainted with the subjects upon which he so earnestly and enthusiastically speaks.

The beautiful hand colored views used to illustrate his lectures add a touch of real life as seen by Mr. King among the beauties of tropical lands, and also show vividly the superstition and degradation of heathen people who need and long for the Christian religion.

The first address was upon "Visions of Jerusalem."

At the Sunday morning service, Rev. King preached a most stirring missionary sermon upon the theme, "Great crisis in the world's transition."

During the Sunday school hour the children as well as older members were held in rapt attention by the exhibition of heathen idols, and the manner of worship among the Hindu people of whom Mr. King told many thrilling stories.

The address to the young people at six o'clock was upon "Missionary sunshine," and the lecture following was upon "Ceylon or Marvels of the Orient" with one hundred and twenty views. There has been an increased attendance upon these services as they have continued and a full house is expected at the Monday night lecture which promises to be the most interesting of the series. "The origin, supremacy and mission of the Anglo-Saxon race," is the subject to be illustrated with one hundred views. Prophecy and history will be blended rendering truth impregnable. Admission will be free and every one is cordially invited to enjoy this lecture which will begin at 7.45 sharp.

Rev. M. E. King will speak upon "Our Moslem sisters" at the meeting of the Missionary Society on Monday afternoon. The meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Fownes on Pine street, and all women are invited.

The Queen Esther circle of young ladies will have a book social in the vestry of the church in Wednesday evening with an entertainment consisting of vocal and instrumental music and readings.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

At the morning service a large company of worshippers listened to an appeal on the part of the pastor, Dr. Sneath, for an open confession of Christ. The day was observed as Decision Day and at the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting in the evening a number of decisions were made for the Christian life and service.

Wednesday at 2.30, the Ladies' Benevolent Society will meet at the parsonage and listen to an interesting address by Mrs. Hankemeyer.

Wednesday evening at 7.30, Miss Rubina Madeline Bates will be united in marriage to Mr. Albert David Healey, both of Wollaston. A reception will follow immediately after the ceremony in the vestry of the church.

Thursday evening, Dr. Sneath will give a stereopticon lecture on the "Life of Abraham Lincoln." Persons interested are cordially invited to the lecture.

Rev. John Howland, D. D., president of the Collegio International at Guadalajara, Mexico, will speak next Sunday morning and will bring some important information upon Mexico in its present struggle.

PARK AND DOWNS.

A bright crisp Sabbath morning brought many people out to the worship and nowhere was this more noticeable than at the Park and Downs Congregational church, where the house was filled with worshippers and who were treated to some very fine singing by the vested choir, while the sermon was most eloquently delivered by the pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers, who took for his text, Matthew 23-8.

"One is your Master, even Christ and all ye are brethren." There is a great deal said these days about a common humanity and a common brotherhood. We can never have a brotherhood in humanity until we have a brotherhood in Christianity. A heavenly earth necessitates a perfect heaven: a redeemed humanity necessitates a consistent christianity. We cannot get men to acknowledge their brotherhood to us, till we have acknowledged our common fatherhood in God. If Christ is to save mankind it must be through a power made manifest to the world by those who are themselves influenced by it.

If the walls of race prejudice and language are to be broken down it must be first by the removal of all those points of bitterness and self asserting superiority between churches and Christians. Men will only bow to our God when they see that our God is working in us characters of sympathy, understanding and honor. The bulk of men do not philosophize, they simply judge by results.

At the evening service the pastor delighted his hearers with an unusually interesting sermon being a continuation of last Sunday on a "Just God." If the Christian Church is being disintegrated it is being accomplished at the hands of its friends, by a liberal pulpit. Not many, generations ago Jonathan Edwards read his sermon on "Sinners in the hands of an angry God," and half his hearers were frightened into penitence. We have travelled a long way since that day and we have made God over so completely that to many of us He is but enthroned desire, enthroned self. We are about due to some kind of return to the real God with emphasis upon His justice. The overwhelming inequalities of our world and its colossal iniquities and injustices compel it.

HALL PLACE M. E.

Conforming with the State-wide movement, "Everybody-go-to-Church" Sunday was observed at the Hall Place M. E. church and although the attendance at the morning and evening services was not as large as that of January 11, a good increase was noticeable at both services.

The pastor spoke on the subject of the "Christian's treatment of the Heretic," taking his text from St. Luke 9:55 and 56. "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the son of man is not come to destroy men's lives but to save them."

The high water mark was reached in the attendance at the Sunday School. The interest in the roll of honor is increasing each week and all the classes show a marked improvement.

The attendance at the Epworth ILeague devotional service was nearly double that of last Sunday, a fact worth noticing in view of the fact that the attendance at this service during the past two months has been exceptionally good, and on the increase each week. The League has outgrown the small vestry and will hold its services in the large vestry hereafter. Julius Fuller led the service on "John: Gentleness with vehemence."

At the evening service the Rev. Mr. Hudson of the First Unitarian church delivered a splendid address on "Washington and Lincoln—Two types of American citizenship."

The regular meeting of the Sunday School board will be held at the home of Alex Stewart 186 Franklin street, Tuesday evening.

Sunday morning, Feb. 15. the Rev. W. J. King, the only colored preacher in the New England Methodist Conference will present the Freedmen's Aid Cause.

Thursday evening, the Ladies Aid will furnish a supper in the vestry, followed by an entertainment by the Epworth League.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

Large congregations gathered at both services on Sunday when the pastor Rev. James A. Matheson preached interesting sermons. The regular choir rendered good music and Miss Helen

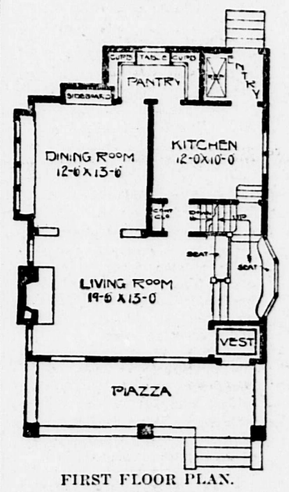
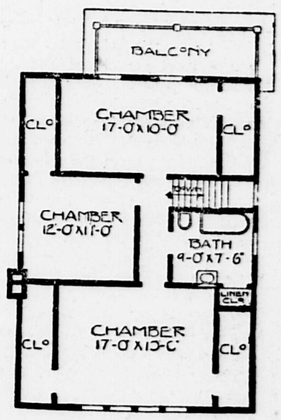
UNIQUE EXTERIOR IN WHITE CEMENT

Design 603, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN.



SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

This design represents years of study given to developing a perfect, modest dwelling. The piazza is sashed in in the winter time, making a sun room, the one large window from the living room to piazza being a French door. A sleeping porch across the rear of the second story part may be built if desired. The sun room and sleeping porch, if regularly used, will be the only M. D. needed in the family. There are two ways of getting back to the simple life—living in sunshine and sleeping in open air. The three chambers are all full height and have an abundance of closet space. For $25 additional there may be installed an automatic switch for electric lighting in each closet, so that the opening and closing of the closet door will automatically turn on and off the light. In addition to the piping for the stationary vacuum cleaner in the basement, there is a cupboard door under the counter shelf in the pantry, with galvanized iron chute to the receptacle in the basement to receive all waste from the dust pan. With this and the vacuum cleaner a house can be kept spick and span with little effort. The size of this house is 26 feet wide and 28 feet deep over the main part. Full basement. First story, 9 feet; second story, 8 feet. Washington fir or red oak throughout first story, red gum in second story, stained to represent Circassian walnut. Floors throughout first story of oak except in the kitchen. Kitchen and second story white oak or birch, 1½ inch face. Exterior covered with white standard cement. Window and door frames and cornice of Washington fir stained a rich tobacco brown. Window box for red geraniums under the second story battery of windows. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $3,200.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will furnish a copy of Saxton's book of plans, "American Dwellings." It contains about 250 up to date designs of cottages, bungalows and residences costing from $1,000 to $5,000.

LEAGUE GAME FORFEITED

Quincy Protests at Ruling of the Referee at Brockton

With the score 23 to 16 in Quincy's favor at Brockton Saturday night, Referee Davis of Everett made a decision on the famous "jump and catch the ball" play which made it impossible for the local boys to continue the game, and it was accordingly forfeited to Brockton 2 to 0.

Before the game was started it was decided by the referee and the two captains that Mr. Hepbron's ruling of the "jump" play should be enforced throughout the game. However, the very first ball thrown up at center was caught by Carlson of Brockton and the referee, instead of fouling him threw the ball up again with a word of caution. The same play happened later on in the game with no attention being paid to Capt. Trask's protest.

The boys played out the first half and finished with a lead of 17 to 15. The second period found Quincy in fine form for Trask and Price scored 6 points in rapid succession while Brockton could score but one on a foul. Carlson again caught the ball and this time Trask insisted that a decision be made by Referee Davis. Time was taken out and a spirited argument began. Mr. Davis refused to change his ruling, and Trask finally agreed to give up the point at issue if Davis would call the foul on future plays. This the referee refused to do and after the Quincy players had given three cheers for Brockton they left the floor. The game was declared forfeited to Brockton after two minutes had elapsed and Mr. LaRose immediately decided to protest the ruling.

The game itself was one of the best ever seen at Brockton being fast and clean. The players of the Brockton team all outweighed Quincy, but were much slower in their foot-work and passing. The much heralded Friedman, who generally scores 6 or 7 goals was put out of the playing entirely by the fine work of Price, while Reardon was the only one of the other men besides Carlson who could even get a shot occasionally. Every man on the Quincy team scored at least once while Trask and Rich were outplaying their men at all stages of the game.

The second team were outweighed by over 20 pounds to a man, and did very well to hold their opponents to the score made. It was a continuous "rough-house" from whistle to whistle and our local players were extremely fortunate to come out of the game with only minor hurts.

Brockton won 40 to 24. As the Brockton second team is not in the league this game does not affect Quincy's standing.

Olindy and Ross, who met defeat last week at the hands of the Smith brothers of Weymouth are dissatisfied with their showing and want a return match. It can be arranged, but in the meantime what about that challenge issued to the winners by Costa and Burke? Will the Cough Drops roll the four men on the same evening? I should say not.

But few weeks remain for the bowling leagues and the teams holding the second division places are now out of the running. All they can strive for is the prizes offered for high singles, team totals and team singles, and it has happened in all sport that the poorest performers during a season often close in a blaze of glory. The fans want to see the match struck so they can witness that burning up of not too glorious a season.

The worlds single string record of 604 at candlepins held by Revere, was smashed Friday night by Chelsea who swept the record off the map and put a total of 641 in its place. Carr, holder of the single three string record was on the team and got 339. The team total was 1695, a few shy of the record of 1712. Some class, say we.

The Y. M. C. A. Gym. on certain evenings harbors the business and professional men of the city. Basket ball teams have been organized and the game is played with more interest than last season. Some have not reached the best of condition yet and it is said that in a recent game all the men were so exhausted, with one exception, that no one had the strength to get the ball as it lay in the center of the floor.

The MacGregor and McPhails are tied in the Scottish Clans league with 52 wins and 12 points lost. MacGregors lead on pinfall, their figures being 21,467 against 21,720 for the McPhails. Morton of the Quincy team has an average of 93.

In the Littlefield All Star league the following averages attract attention: Poehler 108, Christopher 106, Howard 104 Taylor 104, Holmes 103, Griffin 103.

Michael Finn of Memphis, Tenn., a native of Natick, Mass., a town that homed many good athletes and promoters of sport, spent the greater part of last week in Boston and when he departed he carried the contract of Patsy Duggan of Atlantic with him. Mr. Finn who is owner of the Memphis team of the Southern league renewed his friendships with several Quincy men while here. Patsy Duggan he considers a valuable acquisition to the Southern league makeup. Duggan will leave this city March 5.

Paul Poehler made a new world's candlepin record at Manchester, N. H. Saturday against Claird and Cullen. He scored 1215 to their 942. Poehler's 10 strings were 131, 111, 125, 119, 118, 121, 111, 134, 129, 116, a total of 1215.

In the News and Out of the Ordinary

Thomas J. Nero, tired of being called a tyrant by his neighbors at Harrison, N. Y., changed his name to Thomas J. Nicoll.

Mrs. Rebecca Purcell of Brooklyn, N. Y., is advertising for her missing husband because she wants to get a divorce and remarry.

BURIED AS HE WISHED ON MOUNTAIN'S ROCKY CREST.

Grave Blasted In Solid Rock Holds Body of Frank William Jones.

His last wishes complied with to the letter, Frank William Jones, seventy-one years of age, was buried in solid rock at the topmost point of Bare Spot mountain, which towers 1,500 feet skyward on his estate at New Hartford, Conn. No clergyman consigned his body to its rocky grave. There was no ceremony of any sort. Only his son, his housekeeper and the half dozen employees on his estate composed the mourners at this strange funeral.

It was Mr. Jones' expressed desire to be buried, as he had lived, far from the gaze and access of the public. In selecting the apex of Bare Spot mountain he chose a spot to which he often climbed when a boy and which commands a view of the Catskills on the west and the Berkshires on the north. The tip of the mountain is a conical granite crag, which Mr. Jones variously likened to Sinai, Pisgah, Thermopylae and Bunker Hill.

He left minute directions that a grave seven feet long and four feet deep be hewn out of the rock; that into this be placed a steel vault, that into the vault be deposited a mahogany coffin containing his body, that the vault be hermetically sealed and that the grave be filled with concrete. It took workmen three days to blast out the grave, their work having been hampered by the arduous ascent to the summit and the necessity of descending a considerable distance each time a blast was fired.

It was a very difficult feat to haul the steel vault and the coffin to the lofty place of sepulchre. Promptly at the hour Mr. Jones had set the little party left the house, which is halfway up the mountain side, and began the hazardous climb. It was two hours before the last detail had been completed.

SAYS IT CURES SEASICKNESS.

German Doctor Asserts That Atropin Effects Desired Purpose.

Practically all known drugs have been tried to offset seasickness, and now Dr. Joseph Fischer, a heart specialist of Nauheim, Germany, announces in a Munich medical paper that as the result of extensive experiments with seasick passengers he has found that an injection of atropin completely cured the worse cases.

Atropin is an antidote for physostigma and is usually administered to enlarge the pupils of the eye. It is also an antidote for morphine and is usually given with that drug.

During a trip to New York Dr Fischer made experiments on the way across the ocean to endeavor if possible to determine what seasickness is and what causes it. He found that an injection of physostigma produced the exact clinical symptoms of seasickness and that this was caused by an irritation of the nervus vagus. He then discovered that an injection of atropin paralyzed this artificial mal de mer. He immediately began experimenting with atropin in real seasickness.

Queer New Relationships Result From Two Marriages.

An East St. Louis (Ill.) family has a relationship puzzle to figure out. Phil L. Kramer, nineteen, is wondering whether he is his mother's brother-in-law or is this brother-in-law's stepson. It happened like this:

Kramer married Miss Grace Kinney, seventeen, daughter of Joseph C. Kinney, former lieutenant of police in East St. Louis. Previously Joseph Kinney, Jr., a brother of the bride, had married Mrs. Ella Kramer, mother of the bridegroom.

Now the two families are trying to figure out just what their new relationship is.

SLAIN WOMAN'S HUSBAND HELD

Authorities Are Seeking Inspiration For Crime

VICTIM'S SLAYER CONFESSES

Dies From Poison After Having Been Arrested and Released—Committed Deed For Love of Husband of Another, Who Was Also Father of Her Child Eighteen Months Old

Newark, N. J., Feb. 9.—With the mystery of the murder of Mrs. Charles I. Manning in her home here solved by the confession and suicide with poison of Miss Hazel Herdman, the veiled woman who fired the fatal shots, the authorities are detaining Manning, the husband of the slain woman, while conferences are being held to determine whether there was any inspiration for the murder beyond that of jealousy and a desire to "get Mrs. Manning out of the way," as confessed by Miss Herdman on her death bed.

The sensational slaying of Mrs. Manning, and the even more sensational confession and suicide of her assailant, coming a few hours after she had been questioned and freed by the Newark police, has caused a wave of excitement which has not been quieted by the solution of the main points of the sensational mystery.

Though there is no doubt expressed that Miss Herdman killed Mrs. Manning through jealousy and took her own life in a sudden moment of realization of the enormity of her crime, the police can hardly believe that the dual tragedy has been entirely explained in such a brief and startling manner. For this reason they are going carefully over the case in an effort to assure themselves that the tragedy of life and love and jealousy and death has no more mystery concealed.

Inculpating no one, Miss Herdman confessed she had committed the murder because of her love for Mrs. Manning's husband and because Mrs. Manning was the only one that stood between them. Repeatedly she declared Mrs. Manning had refused to obtain a divorce from her husband, and realizing that she and her 18-months-old baby never could have their proper home without the father she had determined to slay her rival.

In her dress was found her farewell message, the last line of a note written to Manning. It read: "Take good care of baby."

"We had suspected this woman from the first," said Chief of Police Long, "because of what we had found concerning her relations with Manning. At our investigation Saturday night we had Mrs. Manning's mother and her sister present, but they couldn't identify her. They couldn't say positively that she was the woman who had done the shooting.

"I asked Miss Herdman where she got the revolver with which the shooting was done. She said it belonged to a chauffeur in the employ of Manning.

"The girl said she alone did the shooting. She said she made up her mind two weeks ago and had been awaiting the opportunity ever since.

"We knew of the relations of this girl and Manning, knew that she was infatuated with him and knew that she had a child about a year and a half ago. We released her early Sunday morning but we set men to trail her so we would know where she was all the time. We did not intend to let her or Manning get far out of our sight. She remained at her aunt's for the night. We shall hold Manning until we have made a complete investigation of his connection with the entire case."

ASSAILANTS SURRENDER

Identified as Men Who Held Up Clerk In Boston Pawn Shop

Boston, Feb. 9.—John Gately, clerk for the Roxbury Loan company, who was shot by one of three men in an attempted robbery of the loan office, identified William P. Gainey as the man who did the shooting and Daniel Judson as another of the robbery trio.

Gainey and Judson were brought back to Boston from Worcester, where they had surrendered to the police after being starved into giving themselves up.

Gainey, the police say, finally admitted Gately's charge. He is 23 years old. Gately is still on the "dangerous" list at City hospital.

Postoffice Orders Now Good No Matter Where Drawn On

Washington, Feb. 9.—By President Wilson's signature, the bill to regulate the payment of postal money orders has become a law of the land. The new statute will not become effective, however, until rules and regulations for its operation are promulgated by the postmaster general.

The bill provides for the issuance of postal money orders payable at any money order office, even though drawn on a specified office.

A Story of the Russian Revolution

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

When I was a young man I was sent to St. Petersburg by my employers to establish a depot for the sale of the chemical goods they manufactured. I had letters to the American ambassador and, desiring to see something of Russian society, accepted such invitations as he secured for me. Society in Europe is different from ours in America in this—that the sovereign is its recognized head as well as the head of the government. In order to see society in St. Petersburg I must see the Count Circlis. The ambassador was very good to me and put me on his list for an invitation whenever there was a function of importance coming off.

One evening at a ball at the Winter palace I was in the refreshment room partaking of the delicate viands there when I saw a girl whom I had noticed for her beauty of form and face, her vivacity and general attractiveness. I had asked for an introduction to her and had been promised one later in the evening.

We were all standing in the supper room, some eating, some drinking, and since it was crowded I was pushed very near the object of my admiration. She stood with her back to me pledging an elderly man whose many decorations marked him for an important personage. Each held a glass containing wine. Feeling something touch me, I looked down and saw the girl's left hand. In her right she held her glass, while her left hung beside her. In the crush it had been pressed against me. The man emptied his glass and turned to a table near him to replenish it. While he was doing so the girl turned her head, gave me an appealing glance and lowered her eyes to her hand. Partly catching her meaning, I looked down and saw something between her thumb and finger. I dropped my hand against hers, and she placed a tiny phial within my fingers. This had scarcely been accomplished when the gentleman turned toward her with a bottle of champagne in his hand, filled her glass, then filled his own.

I have narrated bare fact; my astonishment I have not attempted to depict. The girl sipped her wine, the man tossed his off, then set down both glasses, offered her his arm, and, she resting her fingers lightly upon it, they went to another apartment.

Instinctively I slipped the phial into my pocket, concealing so far as possible what I did, for I knew that the girl must have passed it to me to get rid of it, and I surmised that she might be watched. With a view to getting an explanation from her I went to the person who had promised me an introduction and asked him to introduce me at once. He went off to look for her and returned saying that she was in company with a minister of state and he would not think of intruding upon her at such a time. Unfortunately very soon after this she left the palace.

Before leaving myself I inquired who she was and learned that she was the daughter of a colonel in the Russian army, one of the nobles who in Russia stand between the imperial family and the common people, a class that have no voice in public affairs and that are as much opposed to the autocracy of the czar as those who are beneath them. Her name was Vera Nicholaevna.

I went to my lodgings, and as soon as I had entered and locked the door of my bedroom I took out the phial I had received to have a look at it. It contained a colorless liquid. I was tempted to touch my tongue to the contents, but dare not. Being a chemist, I resolved to analyze the liquid and the next day did so. It was lucky that I had refrained from touching my tongue to it, for it was a deadly poison.

I was for some time a prey to conflicting emotions. Had it not been for the personality of the girl and its effect upon me I would not for a moment have been tempted to meet her with the likely result of being drawn into a dangerous position. Visions of dungeons, of Siberia, of the scaffold haunted me. On the other hand, I could not banish her from my mind. I was horror stricken that one so young, so beautiful, should be implicated and longed to prevent her going a step further and becoming an assassin. I thought of her working in the mines at Kara or dragged to the scaffold, and while doing so I considered making her acquaintance and using the secret I possessed to compel her to desist from political crime.

Nevertheless I did nothing at the time and would have done nothing had not fate thrown a second and a much greater temptation in my way. Months passed, and, having finished my work in St. Petersburg, I applied for my passport and started for America. At the railway station I climbed into a compartment of a car, taking a seat by the window on the opposite side from which I had entered. There was but one other person in the compartment, and the light was insufficient for me to see him or her distinctly, for I could not make out whether I was looking at a man or a woman. A long ulster reaching from the chin to the ankles concealed the figure, but I thought I saw a slight adornment to the felt hat indicating that the wearer was a woman.

The passenger was looking out of the window, apparently watching for some one. Presently the guard shut the door, but my fellow traveler did not cease to watch. The train was moving out of the station when I heard a gasp more like that of a woman than a man, and, looking out, I saw a man running to catch the train. The train gathered speed, but from my position I could not see the man chasing it. The passenger put her head out the window, but soon withdrew it and fell back on the cushion.

"Did he catch it?" I asked.

There was no reply for a few moments; then suddenly the other person starting up, threw open the ulster and revealed the figure of a woman.

Great heavens! She was the girl who had handed me the phial at the Winter palace.

"He is on the footboard. When the train stops he will come to arrest me. That means for me the mines. Death is far preferable. I am going to die."

She made a spring for the window, but I caught her.

Sacrifice—very great sacrifice—rarely comes when we are in our sober senses. It takes us by impulse. Looking backward, I wonder how I could have done what I did then, and I shudder. I defied the czar of all the Russias. I persuaded the girl to give me her ulster and her hat, while I transferred to her my fur overcoat, my traveling cap and a steamer rug for a lap robe. With these articles, the cap drawn down over her eyes, she was well covered and, sitting in a far corner, could not be told from a man. I put on her ulster and her hat and when the train stopped was sitting by the door, while Vera Nicholaevna sat where I had been, pretending to sleep. When the train stopped I knew a search was being made, and presently the door of our compartment opened, and an officer of police looked in.

"I am lost!" I cried in a falsetto voice.

The officer wanted no better evidence that I was his quarry. I was ordered to get out of the car, the door was closed, and my captor told the guard that the train could go on.

My object was to deceive the officer as to my identity as long as possible, and this was not an easy matter, since I was a man and he was looking for a woman. I wrapped my ulster about me and kept my hat well down over my face. It was night, and this helped me. Luckily I wore no beard. I was taken to the jail of the town in which I was captured and locked up. As soon as the key was turned on me I muttered:

"Thank heaven, she may be saved!"

The next morning the mistake was discovered. I was sent to St. Petersburg charged with assisting a political prisoner to escape. I wrote to the American ambassador to help me, but had little expectation that my letter would be given him. It was not, and I languished in a dungeon.

I wrote again to the ambassador, but my letter was not permitted to reach him. Some unknown person informed him of my condition, whereupon he worked hard for me. He would have failed had he not made personal application to the czar. The emperor was at the time asking for a concession on the part of the United States in a matter pending between the two governments, and a bargain was finally struck by which the concession was made on the one side, while I was granted a pardon on the other. After several months spent in captivity I was released, given my passport and told to leave Russia by the first train.

From my parting with Vera Nicholaevna, when I was arrested, till the present I have never seen her nor heard of her except indirectly. One day long after I reached America a Russian came to see me and told me that for the sacrifice I had made to the cause of freedom in Russia, if I had any favor to ask of him, it would be granted so far as possible. I told him that I desired no recompense except to know where Vera Nicholaevna was. To this he replied that it was the only impossible favor I could ask, for Vera Nicholaevna was lost to the world; her identity had been buried.

EIGHTEEN LAID IN ONE GRAVE

Burial of the Arcadia's Unidentified Dead at Boston

ELKS DEFRAY ALL EXPENSES

Service in City Hospital Chapel Precedes Cortege to Cemetery, Where Funeral Address Is Delivered by Mayor Curley—Says He Hopes Spectacle May Never Be Repeated

Boston, Feb. 9.—On the eastern slope of a wooded knoll in Mt. Hope cemetery the eighteen nameless, unclaimed victims of the Arcadia fire were buried yesterday afternoon with fitting ceremony by the Boston lodge of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks.

Mayor Curley, as a member of the order, delivered a funeral address over the common grave of the unidentified dead. More than 1000 persons witnessed the services.

Officers of the lodge and Curley gathered in the chapel of the city hospital, where a short funeral service was held by Rev. William O'Connor with Edward Mahoney at the organ. Following the chapel services a funeral cortege was formed with eighteen hearses, which proceeded to the cemetery.

There a large grave was ready in the midst of a clump of maple trees. By the time the Elks arrived a large crowd had gathered. It was necessary for the police to make a path for the men bearing the flower-laden caskets from the hearses as they arrived to the grave. As the bodies were taken from the hearses the morgue numbers of the victims were called off to be checked up.

While the committee in charge of the funeral arrangements waited at attention beside the grave, eighteen numbers were called off and as many caskets were lowered into the last resting place of the city's nameless dead.

The Bay State quartet volunteered to assist at the services at the grave. After the singing the mayor was introduced as the one to pay the last tribute to the departed unfortunates. He said:

"In the history of our beloved city never has there been such a spectacle as was presented to the people today. The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks has prepared this last resting place for these nameless men. We are in truth a brotherhood of men, regardless of the positions the members of it may occupy.

"The grave of these men, into which we now cast sweet flowers, should remind us of the uncertainty of our futures. These men, who, it is not unreasonable to suppose, once gladdened the hearts of some household, were the victims of circumstances. It is to be hoped that the manner in which they met their deaths will bring about the impossibility of a repetition of such circumstances.

"If these men by dying have taught us the lesson of how to live better lives and have promoted the growth of charity and kind words and deeds to our fallen brothers in life itself, then they have not died in vain."

After a short prayer by Lodge Chaplain Hibbard, "taps" were sounded and the earth was thrown in upon the caskets.

The entire expense of the funeral was borne by the Boston lodge of Elks. The special plot in Mount Hope cemetery where the Arcadia victims were buried will probably be marked by a suitable memorial.

Illinois Convicts Return After Long Period of Road Building

Joliet, Ills., Feb. 9.—Only one of the fifty-two convicts sent to the "honor camp" at Grand Detour, Ills., to build a road was false to the trust reposed in him, it was made known when the men returned to the state penitentiary here.

This man attempted to smuggle a flask of whiskey into his tent. He was at once reported by his tent mates and sent back to the prison.

Warden Allen stated that order in the camp was excellent and incidentally that the men built an excellent stretch of road. The convicts returned bronzed and cheerful, all having gained weight.

Allen said the men were not "hand picked," but had been chosen at random and included several convicted of desperate crimes.

WAR AGAINST GUNMEN

"Clean Up" Squad Shows It Is on the Job In New York

New York, Feb. 9.—Revelations of the great number of gunmen and desperate characters that infest New York city were made to Magistrate McQuade in police court by the "clean up" squad, which has been waging war against gangs.

The "clean up" began as a result of the recent gun fights among gangmen on the streets of the lower East Side, in which several persons were shot and one man killed. In the last twenty-one days, 326 revolvers and 27 blackjacks have been confiscated.

Besides this, the squad has raided eighteen alleged gambling places, made three arrests for larceny, captured one outfit of burglar's tools, and recovered thousands of dollars' worth of stolen property.

TWO CAPTURED IN BLACK HAND TRAP

Get Box of Cartridges Instead of $10,000 They Demanded

Webster, Mass., Feb. 9.—John Angelo of North Grosvenordale and James Nichols of Webster were arrested in Thompson, Conn., on complaint of Antonio Viego, a contractor.

Viego says he has received many letters from black handers threatening him with death if he did not leave $10,000 near a signpost, about one mile from his home.

At midnight, Viego, acting on directions from the police, buried a box filled with blank cartridges under the signpost and when the men came to dig up the box they were arrested by Sheriff Fox and Deputy Sheriff Smith.

They were arraigned in the Webster district court and held in $10,000 each for the superior court. Both Nichols and Angelo are reputed to be wealthy.

SHOE STORE ROBBERIES

Alleged Perpetrator of Many Thefts Is Captured In Vermont

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 9.—Mysterious shoe store robberies in many New England towns are explained, in the opinion of Captain Proctor of the state police, through the seizure here of 210 pairs of shoes from the shop of Samuel and James Tarallo and the alleged confession of Charles E. Green, who was arrested at Windsor, Vt., after a burglary there.

Vermont officials said Green mentioned in his confession burglaries in Milford, Northbridge, Norfolk, East Brookfield, South Deerfield, Essex, Upton, Northfield, and Uxbridge, and also in towns in Connecticut, New Hampshire and Maine.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL HALL

Is Not So Much Needed as Another Schoolhouse

Editor Daily Ledger:

It was with great satisfaction I read the remarks of Mr. Ford on the school situation in Ward Two in your columns last Monday. Isn't it about time the people of our section awoke to their rights?

I entirely agree with his contention that a new school in the north-western part of the ward is the only sane remedy for the overcrowded Coddington and Washington schools. Put the school where the children are and if there is any doubt as to where they are let the School Committee take a stroll through our district some fine Saturday and I think they will be convinced as to place of location for a school.

I have been informed that families living at Union and Main streets have been ordered to send their children to the new Adams. The children from this section have attended the Coddington for a generation. Children at the end of Spring lane have been notified to attend the Adams over a mile away. Children on South street in the Washington school district must attend the Adams, and in order to reach it they must pass the contagious tuberculosis hospital. Is that right? I should say not.

Why this present day agitation for an assembly hall at the Point school? When the school was built it was satisfactory to all. It is a fact that the model of that school took a prize at the St. Louis exposition for being a typical model for a grammar school. Now because the schools lately built have halls some people want the city to spend $40,000 to satisfy their whim.

Did the school that Abe Lincoln attended have a school hall?

Did the school brilliant Jim Blaine attended have a school hall?

Did Daniel Webster's school have a hall?

Did Johnnie Fitz have a school with a hall in the old "Dear?"

Isn't it wonderful how the intellect of these men developed without the aid of a school hall.

Did such grand old teachers as Miss Marden of the Washington, Miss Underwood of the Coddington, and Miss Sheahan of the Adams, need an assembly hall to impart the knowledge into the heads of the pupils? It is to be hoped that the School Committee and City Council will look into the future wants of the district, before they decide to waste $40,000.

Wm. H. Flynn.

The members hope to make this affair the most successful in parish history.

UNNAMED HEROES BRAVELY IN FACED DEATH MONROE DISASTER

Share Glory With Kuehn, the Gallant Young Wireless Operator.

All Bowed to Rule of the Sea, "Women and Children First!"

SHOCKING as was the tragedy, the gallantry of the officers and crew of the coast steamship Monroe and of the Nantucket, which struck the fatal blow, must furnish a brilliant page for the annals of the American merchant marine.

"Women and children first!" the words that made men strong at the time of the sinking of the Titanic, were shouted in this tragedy by black men as well as white.

Of the thrilling tales told, tales worthy of writers of sea stories, none surpasses in splendid heroism the story of Ferdinand Joseph Kuehn, the young senior wireless operator of the Monroe.

When the Monroe was struck Kuehn found that the ship's wireless had been put out of commission. He stepped out on the boat deck and assisted the officers in loading passengers into the boats. The vessel was sinking rapidly beneath him, and he seized a lifebelt from the deck and strapped it about him as a matter of precaution. Then he continued his task of aiding the officers.

Rescue Near, Chose Death.

A boat was ready to launch, and Kuehn was about to step in when a woman appeared out of the gloom. She was frantic with fear.

Then Kuehn without an instant's hesitation bowed to the unwritten law of the sea that says women and children shall be the first to leave a distressed ship. Quieting the woman, he removed the lifebelt from his body and strapped it about her waist. He assisted her into the boat. A few moments later the wireless operator was floundering in the icy water which claimed his life.

The death of Kuehn marked the passing of the first operator of the American Marconi service to lose his life on a ship.

Since Kuehn was ten years old he had been interested in electric devices. On top of his home in New York there is still a wireless apparatus which he set up eleven years ago.

It was with this homemade apparatus that he learned telegraphy. His experience was sufficient to induce the Marconi company to accept his application for a place about three years ago.

Mother Was Apprehensive.

A few days before the Monroe disaster Kuehn talked to his mother over the telephone. She seemed to have a premonition of her son's impending fate, for she tried to influence him in getting a leave of absence owing to her fear of the thick fog.

"Don't be afraid, mamma," was his reassuring answer; "duty comes first. I must take this assignment."

Kuehn's regular ship was the Jefferson, also of the Old Dominion, which was laid up after its last trip. He was then assigned to the Monroe.

When they brought the sad news to the youth's mother she showed much fortitude. "So long as he couldn't be saved," she said simply, "I am glad he died doing his duty."

Dreamed Husband Drowned.

Mrs. Augusta Johnson, wife of Edward E. Johnson, captain of the Monroe, also had a premonition of the disaster. When told of it she said:

"All night I walked the floor praying that Ed might be guided to safety. Early in the evening, as the fog gathered, I and my children, Alice, nine, and William, five, knelt at the window and prayed.

"I dreamed that the Monroe was in trouble. I stretched out my hands to my husband. I thought that he had been drowned. When I awakened the doorbell rang. It was all over. I heard my husband was saved.

"When he left home he had a feeling that he was going on a fatal trip."

Held Wife, Hair In Teeth.

One of the greatest heroes of all during the awful happenings the night the Nantucket rammed the Monroe was Thomas R. Harrington of Bridgeport, Conn. He rescued his wife from the icy waters into which she and scores of others were plunged and was swimming with his wife's hair in his teeth when picked up by a boat from the Nantucket. Harrington was overcome when lifted aboard the Nantucket. When he revived he found his wife was dead.

Mrs. Harrington's right arm had been broken before she and her husband were washed overboard. Harrington tore off his outer clothes and those of his wife. Describing his awful swim he said:

"I twisted my wife's hair into a tight rope as close to her head as could and then took it in my teeth and tried to keep her head above water by keeping it on my chest while I swam on my back. That must have hurt her, too, but she didn't say anything except 'That's better, Tom.'"

A touching story of the devotion to duty of old Pete Davis, the colored head waiter of the sunken ship, is told. Davis, wearing a life preserver, worked his way carefully along the upturned side of the ship to where a couple of middle aged women were standing, hardly able to hold their footing on the slippery side of the vessel. One of the women wore no life preserver. Davis, taking off his own, patiently adjusted it on the woman. Then he came away.

Humble Heroes.

Somebody who had observed this shouted to Pete to get another preserver. But Pete only shook his head.

"Can't be done now, sir," he answered. "Never mind me. I'm only looking after the ladies."

Clarence H. Davids of New York told a graphic story. He said:

"I have seen a lot of brave men in my days—my people were seafaring men—but never have I seen such stoical courage as the black men of the Monroe showed.

"In a few minutes a great light began to shine above us. It broke through the fog that surrounded us and showed a magnificent heaven of stars twinkling down upon our strange little raft of humanity.

"The black bodies of my companions glistened in the strong light as they sat there mutely wondering and asking each other, 'Where are all the ladies and the children?'

"After a little I saw a lifeboat and began to shout to those in charge of her to come our way. She evidently feared that she would be sucked in by the ship because she veered away from us.

"Then I decided that if I were going to be saved I would have to leave the ship altogether. As the waves washed into me I took one long stroke and went away from her. My leaving was the signal for a general exodus from the ill fated ship. All the black men followed my lead.

"I got near the boat, but a man on board yelled, 'You fellows with life preservers stay away for awhile until we pick up some of those that are drowning.'

"I floated around for what seemed like ages. Then I saw a lifeboat ahead of me. Finally I got hold of an oar on the boat and hung on till taken in."

"In all the dreadful commotion," said Mrs. Charles Rollin of Bridgehampton, N. Y., "there was no roughness. I shall never forget the manner in which those colored boys acted. Right on the threshold of death they stood and smiled like soldiers rushing into the mouths of belching cannon."

THE CHURCHES

Cumming and Louis Mirini sang solos.

The Sunday school and various classes were well attended as was also the Junior Endeavor.

At 6.30 the Senior Endeavor held their regular meeting. At the roll call it was found that all but three of the members were present, which testified to the efficient work of the Lookout Committee. The meeting was in charg of Miss Edith Elrick and Miss Isabelle McIntosh.

At the evening service the sermon by the pastor was inspiring and the solo by Everett Clark was much enjoyed.

CHURCH REPORTS.

If your church is not well represented in this department, it is because your church has not appointed a good press correspondent.

FUNERAL OF THOMAS GURNEY

Largely Attended by People of Atlantic and G. A. R.

The Memorial church at Atlantic was filled at 3.30 Sunday afternoon at the funeral services for Thomas Gurney, one of the pioneers of this section of the city. Besides the neighbors friends and relatives, there were many of the business men of Atlantic, and delegations from Paul Revere Post, 88, G. A. R., and the Sons of Veterans. There was a profusion of beautiful floral tributes, including a set piece from the employees at his store.

Rev. T. W. Davison, the pastor, referred to Civil war record of Mr. Gurney and the impulse which led him to volunteer, but spoke mainly of his leadership in the early days of Atlantic, of his success in business, of his help in all church endeavors and local improvements; a man of dignity and honor. He closed by reading the poem "Crossing the bar."

A male quartet assisted in the service, singing by request, Beautiful isle of somewhere" and "Lead kindly light."

The service of the Grand Army was also performed at the church by Commander Marstin and the officers of the post. Burial was at Mount Wollaston cemetery, in charge of A. W. Fay.

MRS. CLARENCE L. CLEAVES

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Elsie Cleaves, wife of Clarence L. Cleaves, who died suddenly at the Quincy City Hospital, was held Saturday afternoon at her home at 41 Bromfield street. Rev. J. A. Matheson of the First Resolutions of sympathy were drafted in Mt. Wollaston cemetery. Resolutionh of sympathy were drafted Friday by the members of the executive committee of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union of which John Tobin, father of the deceased is president, and several of the committee attended the services.

WILL MOVE TELEPHONE.

The Central station auto chemical was sent on what proved to be a useless call to Houghs Neck at 11.25 this morning. A telephone call was received stating as the Chief understood it that there was a fire at the corner of Sea street and Sea avenue, Houghs Neck. There was so much noise, however, that the full purport of the message was not understood and that auto was started for Houghs Neck. It seems, however, that what the party who telephoned wanted, was to make inquiry about fire insurance. This afternoon the telephone at the Central station is to be moved to a part of the building where it will be quieter, and an extension instrument will be carried up stairs to the office of the Chief.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 29 No. 35 QUINCY MASS. TUESDAY EVENING FEBRUARY 10 1914 PRICE TWO CENTS

NEW CLUBHOUSE IS NOW ASSURED

Work on the Sachem Clubhouse for Wollaston to Begin About April 1

Over $2000 Bond Subscriptions Since Last Meeting

The new directorate of the Sachem Club of Wollaston held its regular meeting at the club headquarters on Newport avenue Monday evening.

In spite of the doubts expressed by some Wollaston residents, reports showed the club to be on a firm financial footing in regard to the projected clubhouse.

It is now an assured fact that work will actually be started on the site by April first, only a month later than originally planned.

Since the last meeting over $2000 in additional bond subscriptions has been raised, and with certain pledges soon to be secured, it will only be a matter of ten days or two weeks before enough bonds will have been floated to allow building operations to start.

To round up the bond subscriptions and bring them up to the proper figure, a committee has been appointed consisting of Charles M. Bryant, Edward E. Jameson, Eric H. Ewertz, Eugene F. DeNormandie and Matthew Ott.

A joint meeting of the executive committee of the Wollaston Women's Club and the Sachem club directors will be held some evening this week at which the question of rates, privileges and accommodations will be thoroughly discussed.

While no definite information can be secured at the present time it is understood that the Wollaston Woman's club will take kindly to the idea of quarters in the projected clubhouse if the rooms are made desirable and the price is right.

At the meeting Monday evening President Bryant stated that he would announce his appointments for the standing committees for the year at the next meeting of the board of directors.

FUNERAL OF W. H. FAY

The funeral of William H. Fay, for many years prominently identified with the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., was held Monday afternoon from his late home on Saville avenue. Services were largely attended and were of a simple nature. They were conducted by Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, pastor of the Bethany church, where Mr. Fay for so many years worshipped. Rev. Mr. Willmott spoke of his long connection with the church and Bible school and of his christian fortitude.

During the services, Arthur Burgess of Dorchester sang, "Looking this way" and "Safe in the arms of Jesus" The burial was in the family lot at Randolph.

THOMAS FALLON.

Thomas Fallon, aged 70, grand trustee of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, for two years commander of Gen. Sylvanus Thayer Post, 87, G. A. R. of Braintree, died suddenly Monday afternoon while calling at the home of a friend. He was one of the best known of the fraternity in and about Boston and lived at 17 Dewolf street, Dorchester.

STUBBORN BLAZE SOUTH QUINCY

Two Tenement House of Reuben Grossman Damaged

The alarm from Box 332, at 7.37 Monday night, called the fire department to a stubborn blaze in the house of Reuben Grossman on Independence avenue, occupied by Mr. Grossman and Reo Albonetti, and gave Faxon Billings, the new chief, his first real fire in that capacity.

The fire evidently started from an overheated furnace in the basement, the flames working up through the partition to the upper story, making it necessary for the firemen to do considerable cutting in order to get at the seat of the fire. These are the most difficult fires to fight, for the fire must be followed foot by foot until extinguished. For this reason it was an hour before the all out sounded. Chief Billings estimates the loss at $1,000.

MME. MOREY DIRECTOR.

Several of our Quincy singers were noticed among the chorus in Ford hall, Boston, Sunday evening. The music was under the direction of Madame Beale Morey, identified for several years with music in our city, as director and organist at Bethany church. The audience, which not only taxed the seating capacity of the hall but overflowed into the aisles and corridors, was enthusiastic, demanding of Miss Eva Steeves (who has been heard in Quincy) a triple encore.

TRUSTEES OF CITY HOSPITAL

Elect Officers and Receive Report from Superintendent

The quarterly meeting of the trustees of the Quincy City Hospital, and also the first meeting since the annual meeting of the City Hospital corporation, was held Monday afternoon at the Hospital and these officers elected:

President—Fred B. Rice.

Vice President—Charles P. Hutchins.

Treasurer—Nathan G. Nickerson.

Secretary—J. Perry Lawton.

Executive Committee,—the president and secretary ex-officio, Henry M. Faxon, Dr. John F. Welch, Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting.

Finance Committee,—the president and treasurer, ex-officiis, Harry L. Rice, Fred H. Smith and Henry M. Faxon.

Auditors—Henry R. Holden, and George E. Pfaffmann.

Dr. John A. Gordon, who has been the chairman of the executive committee since the opening of the hospital in 1890, feeling that he could properly be asked to be relieved from the arduous duties after so long a service, declined re-election, although still retaining his membership as a member of the trustees.

A committee was appointed to draft suitable resolutions in recognition of his long and faithful service.

The report of the superintendent, Miss Caroline Hill, showed the hospital to be in a good condition and doing a splendid work. During the three months ending Jan. 31, 198 patients were admitted of which number 98 were males and 100 females. She also spoke of the need of additional beds for men, as at all times there are men waiting to enter the hospital who cannot now be accommodated.

The laundry machinery is now being installed, the laundry building having been entirely renovated.

Through the generosity of a number of the trustees and members of the staff each person in the hospital had been given a Christmas present. She also said that a Victoria graphophone with records has been given the Nurses Home.

Mention was made of the staff organization known as the City Hospital club of Quincy who meet at the home the last Saturday of each month. Also that meetings of the Alumnae association of the training school are held at the home which are proving of value to the hospital. At the present time there are 14 pupils and one probationer at the hospital.

Arrangements had been made with the Boston dispensary whereby each member of the graduating class had three months training at the dispensary in care of children in the maternity ward so that the nurses were able to get training equal to any in the state.

"The Promised Land" by Mary Antin is being so widely read and discussed just now, that the meeting tomorrow of Bethany Women's Union promises to be of special interest, as there is to be a discussion of the book conducted by Mrs. William E. Alden.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS MARRIED

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Johnson Surprised by Club Members

Fifty or more of the Granite City club, friends of John H. Johnson of 241 Belmont street, Wollaston, called upon him Monday evening and assisted him and Mrs. Johnson in celebrating their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. The first intimation John had of the coming of his club friends was when a dozen automobiles drew up to the walk and the members, headed by President MacQuarrie, advanced to the door, where they were received by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, who were assisted in receiving by their daughters.

The uninvited, yet always welcome guests, were bidden to make themselves at home, and informed that the house was theirs as long as they desired to stay.

During the first part of the evening there was instrumental music and vocal selections by the club quartette, led by Messers, Lalley, Milne and Saunders, the party later separating into groups of four for whist.

Shortly after 10 o'clock there was a brief halt in the evenings diversion during which refreshments were served. It was at this time that President MacQuarrie, after a few brief words of congratulation, presented Mr. and Mrs. Johnson with a handsome silver tray. In accepting the gift Mr. Johnson expressed his many thanks for their gift and assured them that the latch string was always out and that they would always be welcome. Whist was again in order until midnight.

Although married in Boston, Mr. Mrs. Johnson have been residents of Quincy for the past fifteen years. They have one son and three charming daughters. Mr. Johnson is the well known cigar manufacturer of Boston.

CLAN MacGREGOR TO MAKE VISIT

A largely attended meeting of Clan McGregor, No. 5, was held Monday evening.

An invitation was received from Clan Lindsay of Cambridge to pay that clan a fraternal visit on Wednesday, February 18

It was voted that the invitation be accepted and that the members meet at Quincy Adams station at 7.15 P. M. in time to leave on the 7.19 train for Boston. A large number of applications for membership were acted on at the meeting.

BOTH PLEAD GUILTY.

Daniel H. Judson, wanted by the Quincy police in connection with a burglary at Wollaston station, pleaded guilty in the Roxbury court Monday to charges of assault with intent to kill John J. Gatley. Bail was set at $6000. His pal, William H. Gainey, pleaded guilty also and the same bail was set.

PETITIONER HAD NO SUPPORTERS

All Norfolk County Towns Against Annexation of Brookline to Suffolk

Mayor and Others from Quincy in Opposition

That there is no strong sentiment in favor of making the town of Brookline a part of Suffolk county, was evident at the hearing held Monday before the committee on Metropolitan Affairs at the State House, for while the large committee room was packed to suffocation, there was but one person who appeared in favor of the proposed plan. This one person was Daniel J. Daley of Brookline, the petitioner. His principal argument was that no part of Brookline touched Norfolk county, and that the town was looked upon as a kind of Christmas tree by the other towns in the county. The scheme was in no way an entering wedge to be annexed to Boston.

When it came to the opposition, it was overwhelming. Senators, Representatives, selectmen, town counsel, and many others being recorded in opposition including Mayor Miller, City Solicitor Pinkham and a special committee from the Quincy City Council.

Chairman Parker of the Brookline selectmen, said that Brookline was satisfied to remain in Norfolk county. The expenses would be more he said if it should have a part in the government of Suffolk County. An article would be in the warrant for the town meeting in opposition to the scheme.

Senator Langelier spoke in opposition for the City of Quincy and the Board of Trade. A Christmas tree is no good unless it is trimmed and that is what the other towns in Norfolk County do for Brookline.

Chairman Merrill said that Norfolk county seemed to be the foraging ground for the City of Boston and he hoped a halt would be called.

Albert P. Worthin, representing the town of Weymouth, said the question was a much broader one than appeared on the surface, and it should be shown that the whole state would be benefitted.

Former Senator Pearson of Brookline said that if made a part of Suffolk county the burden of Norfolk county would be thrown upon some 25 or 30 small towns which had contracted obligations knowing that Brookline was a part of the county.

W. E. Ulmer of Brookline said if made a part of Suffolk county every body of importance would move to the Newtons. Everybody who goes to sleep in Brookline may rest assured he will wake up in the morning for there are no fire traps there.

There was a long list of others who desired to speak in opposition but as it was accumulative testimony the chairman asked those in opposition to rise and nearly 100 stood up, while in the call for a show in favor but one stood up.

The opposition was so strong that leave to withdraw will be promptly reported.

Owing to the shortness of time Mayor Miller and other representatives from Quincy had no opportunity to speak, the chairman of the committee believing that a show of hands was sufficient.

Immediately after the hearing closed however, City Solicitor Pinkham went to the clerk of the committee and registered the protest of the Mayor, himself and the City Council committee present, and also filed with the committee an attested copy of the resolution passed by the City Council in opposition to the proposed bill.

CIVILIZED WARFARE.

The dispatches from Mexico have a very gory sound, as the execution of prisoners proceeds. They read much like warfare in Europe in the days of Gustavus Adolphus 300 years ago. Nothing like the summary execution of Francisco Guzman, just killed without any hearing by Gen. Villa, as a conspirator against President Madero, could have happened even as far back in American history as the colonial wars.

The proceedings in Mexico after a battle sound very much like a butcher's shop. Still, if the prisoners were paroled, according to modern fashion, they would soon be back with a stolen gun popping away again for the same old cause.

Going back two or three centuries in Europe, the refusal to extend quarter in the more desperate fighting was seriously defended. When men declined to surrender to superior force, it was held they prolonged slaughter. The sooner such last ditch men were cleaned out, the fewer widows and orphans would be created.

The formal codes of war and the daily practice of soldier life have lost much of personal vindictiveness. Outposts swap coffee and tobacco, and strict rules have to be made to prevent their eating, drinking, and playing cards together. Prisoners of war must be treated as well as your own troops. They can be made to work, but their wages must be computed at the rates that would be paid home soldiers. When released, such prisoners must receive these wages, minus fair charge for maintenance.

But many horrible barbarities, quite equal to the offhand slaughter of Mexico, still persist. Japan incurred criticism in the war with Russia, because high explosives were used in grenades, which caused the most hideous injuries, blowing off wholesale men's limbs, parts of the body or face. Today the English army has practically adopted the same equipment.

FIRE MENACES FLOTILLA

Heroic Work by Firemen and Sailors Checks Blaze on Submarine

Newport, R. I., Feb. 10.—Fire which menaced the gasolene tanks and torpedoes on the submarine boat G1 threatened with destruction the entire torpedo flotilla at the Newport torpedo station last night.

Had the flames reached the gasolene tank the resulting explosion would have detonated the torpedoes on board the submarine, and would thereby have led to the destruction of all the vessels in the slip, six new torpedo boat destroyers and several other submarines.

Heroic work on the part of the firemen saved the flotilla, which represents a value of more than $1,000,000 to the government.

Members of the crew of the G1 narrowly escaped severe burns when the blaze broke out, so suddenly did the flames spread to all parts of their quarters. They lost all their possessions.

REED HELD IN $3000

Bay State Man Arrested in Maine on White Slave Charge

Bangor, Me., Feb. 10.—Herbert E. Reed, who left a wife and family in Plympton, Mass., to come to Maine with 19-year-old Ruth Gordon of that town, and who was arrested at Foxcroft, where he and the girl had been living in a camp, was arraigned before Commissioner Reid here, charged with violating the Mann white slave act in bringing Miss Gordon into the state.

He pleaded not guilty, but probable cause was found and he was bound over to the April term of the United States district court at Portland in $3000 bail. He was committed to jail here in default of bonds.

Reed is broken-hearted because Miss Gordon said she never wished to see him again. She left with her parents for Plympton yesterday afternoon.

DIGGS IN ANOTHER SCRAPE OVER GIRL

Unable to Furnish Heavy Bail When Held In Court

San Francisco, Feb. 10.—Maury I. Diggs, former state architect, who, with F. D. Caminetti, was convicted of violating the Mann white slave act, was held in police court to answer in the superior court to a charge of criminal assault preferred by Ida Pearrin, who swore she was only 17 years old.

Walter Gilligan, Diggs' companion when the alleged offense took place, was also held. Bonds were placed at $10,000 each or $5000 cash bail, which neither Diggs nor Gilligan has been able to furnish.

Diggs' case in the United States district court is up on appeal, he having been sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

AFTER THIRTY-NINE YEARS

Mother Meets Long-Lost Son, but Shock May Result Fatally

Grafton, Mass., Feb. 10.—William Houle, a traveling salesman, who "made" this town yesterday, found here his mother, from whose presence he was driven thirty-nine years ago by his irate father, and for whom he had been searching for years.

But this meeting of mother and son by happy chance may end in tragedy, for Mrs. Houle was so overcome with joy at seeing her long-lost son again that she suffered a nervous shock and it is declared her life is endangered.

After the paternal door in New London, Conn., was barred to him, Houle entered the navy. His father died soon after and his mother moved to New York, and then came here.

Baltimore, Feb. 10.—John J. Maxwell, a science research student, declares that the recent varying weather was caused by the completion of the Panama canal.

Vanderbilt's Yacht Abandoned

Panama, via Galveston, Tex., Feb. 9.—A wireless message says that efforts to float the Vanderbilt yacht Warrior have proved futile. The yacht has been abandoned as a total loss.

The Catskill Aqueduct Greater Engineering Feat Than the Panama Canal

WHEN New York city's mayor, standing in the sump at the foot of a 440 foot shaft the other day, threw an electric switch and set off the dynamite charge which demolished the last heading in the longest tunnel in the world it may be truly said that he made history. Immediately it became possible to walk beneath ground from the Catskills to the heart of Brooklyn. The assurance of that fact brings home, as nothing else could, how near to completion is the titanic project of the Catskill aqueduct, by which more than 500,000,000 gallons daily of soft, cool water are to be led down from the mountains to thirsty New York city. The entire aqueduct is about 120 miles in length, and from the great Ashokan reservoir, a marvel of engineering skill in itself, a distance of ninety-two miles, it has been practically completed. From the confines of the Ashokan reservoir the water will be led through the Catskill aqueduct, skirting hills, boring through mountains, dipping under deep valleys, brooking no obstacles in the superhuman endeavor to reach the city at as high an elevation as possible, so that the water will rise of its own accord to the top of a twenty story building.

Under construction concurrently with the Panama canal and the New York subway system, each of which monuments to human industry would lend distinction to any age, the Catskill aqueduct—so say engineers—is by long odds the most noteworthy feat.

The cost to New York city of the completed water supply system will fall a trifle short of $180,000,000, considerably less than what the nation will have expended to connect the two oceans at the south. But the problems which have arisen here have taxed engineering ingenuity as even the difficulties met on the isthmus have not. The amount of exploratory and pioneer work in the two great tasks was not comparable. Every variety of ticklish, puzzling obstacle has cropped up on the nearer work. Mountains have been burrowed under, and the fifteen foot bore tunnel led far beneath five rivers. Apart from the actual construction the preliminary work was enormous.

The new water system may be thus briefly outlined: Four watersheds, comprising altogether nearly 900 square miles, lying in the Catskill mountains, between 75 and 135 miles from Brooklyn bridge, are to be drawn on. In the beginning only one of these drainage areas, that of Esopus creek—which in dry years will provide at least 250,000,000 gallons daily—is being utilized. When the need arises the other three watersheds, Rondout, Schoharie and Catskill creeks, will be made use of and an aggregate of 770,000,000 gallons thus secured.

For the Esopus drainage area the mammoth Ashokan reservoir will impound the water, and thence it will be led by aqueduct a little east of south some forty-five miles to the Hudson river. In this distance the four chief types of construction are used—the so called cut and cover, in which the concrete aqueduct is laid in a shallow trench to half its depth and then buried beneath a fill; the grade tunnel, concrete lined and designed to convey water at no greater pressure than that of gravity; the pressure tunnel, circular and also concrete lined, but cut in solid rock, able to resist high pressures, and the steel pipe siphons, so called, used where extra pressure is to be withstood and solid rock is not at hand.

It is not the reservoirs, however, notable as they are, that the engineers regard as the most striking feature of their work. It is to the pressure tunnels they feel able to point with most pride. There are five of these, each running through solid rock and several miles in length, the longest being 18.2 miles.

The tunnel under the Hudson was the most spectacular achievement. Flowing along quietly on the three day journey from the Ashokan reservoir to consumers in the five boroughs, the imprisoned water will drop suddenly some 400 feet almost perpendicularly to pass under Moodna creek. After a very slight grade for nearly five miles it will plunge again, this time almost 1,000 feet, into the tunnel 1,100 feet beneath the surface of the Hudson.

MILITANTS ARE NOT BADLY OFF

Show No Ill Effects of Forcible Feeding in Jail

BISHOP OF LONDON REPORTS

Result of Interviews With Misses Marion and Brady in Holloway Not Calculated to Arouse Much Sympathy For Prisoners—Both Refuse to Refrain From Militancy

London, Feb. 10.—Another surprise visit to Holloway jail to investigate the conditions under which two militant suffragettes, Miss Kitty Marion and Miss Phyllis Brady, are incarcerated there was made by the bishop of London in response to a request from the Women's Social and Political union, the militant organization.

Miss Marion is serving a sentence of three years penal servitude for arson, and Miss Brady is awaiting trial on a similar charge. The bishop in his report says Miss Marion feels much aggrieved at being forcibly fed, instead of being released under the "cat and mouse" act.

As a protest against her continued imprisonment, the bishop says, she always gave four or five shouts or screams when subjected to the operation, but she did not look ill as a result.

When the bishop asked her what message he should give to her friends, Miss Marion replied: "Tell them I am very well, considering." She added, however, that forcible feeding always made her sick, and she thought she was gradually growing weaker; but she made no complaint of harshness on the part of those who administer food forcibly.

Miss Brady told the bishop she hated forcible feeding, but that it did not make her sick. She thought, however, it gave her indigestion.

Both women refused to promise to refrain from militancy in case they were released.

"I cannot conclude," writes the bishop, "without telling you that in my opinion you are pursuing a wrong policy if you wish to win educated and thinking men and women to your cause."

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the suffragette leader, who had been sojourning in Switzerland, returned to London yesterday. She announces that she will resume her propaganda.

BANK IS $800,000 SHORT

Doors Closed and President of Institution Placed Under Arrest

Memphis, Feb. 10.—Alleging that almost $800,000 has been lost through speculation of C. H. Raine, president of the Mercantile bank, ten directors of that institution ordered that the bank doors remain closed. The bank was considered one of the strongest here.

In a petition for a receiver filed in chancery court here, the directors allege that, with liabilities of approximately $2,196,894, but $1,408,089 can be found. They charge that Raine secured the money "by a system of handling drafts, property and exchange in such a manner as to deceive the directors and conceal his manipulations."

Raine was arrested, charged with embezzlement.

TRAPPED FOR THREE DAYS

Maine Farmer Imprisoned In Windmill of Own Invention

Harmony, Me., Feb. 10.—Imprisoned for three days and nights in a windmill tower of his own invention, because he had neglected to invent a method of stopping the machinery, Edwin Pike, a Wellington farmer, was rescued, at the point of exhaustion, when the wind stopped blowing.

Pike's neighbors gathered about the tower, and their voices, drowned by the noise of the mill, prayed for their fellow townsman, whose agonized face could be seen at frequent intervals through openings in the structure.

The man suffered terribly from his experience, and as a result Mrs. Pike intends to have the mill destroyed.

QUINCY'S NEW COUNCILLOR

Charles W. Guy Has Established Hours at State House

(Special to the Daily Ledger)

Hon. David I. Walsh has "got nothing" on Hon. Charles W. Guy. The dignified young man who is chief executive of this great commonwealth may have an executive headquarters on the third floor of the State House but so has the veteran who represents the second councillor district.

Hon. David I. Walsh may be in the more constant use of his headquarters but Hon. Charles W. Guy is around often enough to suit himself.

Councillor Guy has established the custom of meeting his constituents in the executive chamber every Monday morning. He is here from 10 o'clock until 12 o'clock. His constituents arrive, register their objections, complaints or suggestions with the councillor and take their departure.

He is said to be the first councillor in the history of the commonwealth to inaugurate this plan. His conception is to administer the wants of his constituents. "The Council chamber is the councillors' headquarters," said Mr. Guy and he continued, "there is absolutely no reason why we cannot meet our people in our own offices."

When Mr. Guy is not embarassed by pressure of business, he escorts the visitors to see the points of interest in the State House, introduces them to His Excellency and sends them on their way rejoicing.

S. S. SUPERINTENDENTS.

A rare treat is open to all those that are fortunate in attending the Sunday School Superintendents Union monthly meetings. At the February meeting Monday evening some 300 people sat down to an enjoyable supper at Ford hall, Boston including several from Quincy.

A short business meeting followed. Among new members admitted was James E. Myers, Jr., superintendent of the First Congregational church, Braintree. Mrs. Gladys Shields Folsom of Braintree rendered two pleasing solos. George L. Cady, D. D., of Dorchester spoke on the "Relation of the Church to the Sunday School." He said the churches realize more strongly than ever, the great field for future workers, to successfully carry on the churches; they depend on the Sunday Schools.

Arthur H. Merritt, superintendent of Pilgrim Congregational Sunday school Dorchester spoke of the "Schools' relation to the Church." How much depended on the interest and co-operation of the church officers, and committees and obedience only to the pastor as a final resort.

The young people have no better exponent or advisor of their needs and what benefits they can actually derive from a Sunday School than Mrs. Willena Browne Reed, who gave an extremely interesting and instructive address on the "Elementary pupil."

These meetings are held monthly and are well worth the short time required by actual attention and should interest all workers in Sunday schools in Quincy. Arthur W. Hoe of Braintree is secretary of the organization. The subject of the March meeting is "Social life in the Sunday School." At the April meeting Supt. Dyer of the Boston public school has a message for Sunday School workers.

Sick-Room Light.

If there are electric lights in the sick room they will generally be found too brilliant, hurting the eyes of the patient, and not every sick room has the electric lights that can be turned up or down. Make a little green silk bag and fasten it over the incandescent bulb and it will give a good but subdued and harmless light.

Equipment On Rivadavia to be Tested This Week

It is expected that the Argentine Battleship Rivadavia will leave Boston Harbor today to resume her trial tests. Her wireless equipment will also be given their first official test at sea and new records may be established.

The most powerful equipment ever set aboard a ship is believed to be on the Rivadavia. Three operators are carried, one being a highly skilled Argentine Naval man.

Wireless experts are of the opinion that they will experience not the least difficulty in sending messages a distance of 2500 or 3000 miles. Efforts will be made to communicate with Buenos Ayres, but this, the operators fear will be impossible since the harbor is over 5000 miles away.

AGREE TO PIECEWORK.

The crafts employed at the Boston navy yard have written Secretary Daniel of the navy that they are willing to work in the construction of a supply ship upon the same system that prevails at the Brooklyn Navy yard. The signatures represented all the craftsmen. The adoption of the contract and piecework system in vogue at Brooklyn disposes of the controversy which may have nullified all of Boston's chance to build the ship.

How to Build Up or Tear Down This Community

By J. O. LEWIS

The Menace of the Mail Order Houses.

THAT the mail order houses in the large cities have BECOME A MENACE to the smaller cities, towns and communities is proved by the large patronage they enjoy from all over the entire country and further substantiated by the number of packages carried by transportation companies, which under the law must bear the name or some mark of identification by which the shipper is known.

This mail order business got its inception from men who made a habit of buying up secondhand goods, stocks from bankrupt firms and fire damaged or salvage goods from fire losses. To these were added goods that were culled by manufacturers and graded seconds and thirds, etc.

These were shrewd business men, men who believed in advertising, and, realizing the possibilities of advertising, commenced their business entirely along these lines, and to PROVE THE SUCCESS OF ADVERTISING no better evidence could possibly be offered than the fact that every weekly paper—farm, industrial, social or religious—carries their advertisements and also that they send out catalogues of enormous sizes, beautifully illustrated and embellished, costing hundreds of thousands of dollars to publish.

Today they have grown to such enormous size that they own and control factories, while they contract to sell the entire output of other factories.

However, the plants they control and operate manufacture what is termed in commercial parlance as competitive goods—something that every merchant can sell at a low price to meet the demands for cheap merchandise.

BUT AS TO STANDARD AND HIGH CLASS GOODS MADE BY LARGE AND RELIABLE FIRMS YOU NEVER SEE THESE GOODS ADVERTISED BY MAIL ORDER HOUSES, OR IF YOU DO THE PRICE IS JUST THE SAME AS FIXED BY THE MANUFACTURERS FOR ALL DEALERS.

Therefore when one orders articles of the low priced and cheaper kinds HE IS SURE TO GET JUST WHAT HE BUYS—cheaply made goods and seconds and no cheaper than he can buy right at home when freight charges, money order fees and postage are added.

Thousands of dollars annually are being sent to these mail order houses from this vicinity, thus DEPRIVING THE HOME MERCHANT OF HIS RIGHTFUL PATRONAGE. And yet, no matter how much the merchant may be dependent on the patronage of members of his community, he is supposed to give and to aid in every work undertaken for the material betterment of his town, and he does, being often coerced into giving by the demands of his customers, fearing to offend them because of the fear of loss of patronage.

THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION BUT THAT ALL OF OUR PEOPLE ARE IN DUTY BOUND TO PATRONIZE HOME MERCHANTS. TO THEM YOU OWE ALLEGIANCE AND SUPPORT, AND I NOW ASK YOU CANDIDLY, ARE YOU GIVING IT TO THEM?

If you are buying goods out of your home town—more particularly from mail order houses and merchants in other cities—I say to you that you are UNDERMINING THE HOME MERCHANT and likewise the very foundation of your own well being. Every dime that you send to a mail order house makes that much harder the success of your home merchant and likewise retards the growth of your town. The money you send to mail order houses is taken entirely out of local circulation—is gone forever.

WHEREAS, IF YOU SPEND IT WITH A HOME MERCHANT HE IN TURN WILL SPEND IT WITH SOME ONE ELSE—PERHAPS PAY IT BACK TO YOUR FATHER, YOUR SON OR BROTHER, SISTER OR DAUGHTER AS SALARY, AND THUS IT COMES BACK INTO THE FAMILY, DOING A UNIVERSAL GOOD.

That many of our home people are ordering goods from mail order houses is a well known fact. One has but to visit the depots and express office to find therein daily many packages addressed to them and likewise bearing the name or address of certain mail order houses. These people are known to our merchants, and that's a fact. These packages consist of clothing, dry goods, groceries, drugs, toilet articles, furniture, hardware, carpenters' tools, farm implements and what not, ALL OF WHICH COULD BE PURCHASED FROM OUR OWN HOME MERCHANTS, QUALITY CONSIDERED, FREIGHT CHARGES ADDED AND TIME IN TRANSPORTATION, JUST AS CHEAPLY AS FROM ANY MAIL ORDER HOUSE IN THE COUNTRY

Supposing the merchants should band themselves together and refuse credit to those who patronize these mail order houses and further refuse to employ members of families who do this or refuse to buy the wares of these people? Wouldn't they find living mighty hard?

To be continued under the title, "THE HOME MERCHANT HAS EARNED SUPPORT."

For the Children

Miss Louise Icelin
Walking In the Park.

February is usually the coldest month of the year in the northern portion of our land. Then the north wind blows its fiercest blasts, and Jack Frost gets busy making ice for young folks. Nobody else seems to appreciate his efforts in this line, but what good are a pair of skates and nowhere to use them? So it has happened this year that Mr. Frost has won a great many friends in New York city. He has provided good skating in Central park, and the roller skates so often seen on its concrete walks have been banished, and ice skates are the thing. Crowds of children have made the old trees shiver with their merry shouts, and of course King Winter is pleased. The little girl in the picture was on the way to the ice when the photographer snapped her the other day. She is Miss Louise Iselin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Iselin.

A Queer Expression.

As most of you know, wild geese when they fly away in the fall of the year form themselves into lines shaped much like the letter V, the leader flying at the point and the others following the two lines. In this way they sail far above the danger line, the danger line being the hunter's gun. In olden times, when the country folk realized the happiness of these birds in their safety (for their chorus of "honk, honk, honk" floated down to the cottagers and sounded joyous), they would look up and say, "Everything is lovely and the goose honks high." By and by it became natural, when two persons met each other under peculiarly favorable circumstances for this or that enterprise, for them to say, "Everything is lovely and the goose honks high," and the expression is still used. Now when you hear it you can tell your friends its origin.

Hopscotch In India.

In the bazaars and public places of all the big cities from Simla to Ceylon, the youthful Hindu and Mohammedan enter enthusiastically into the excitements of hop scotch. They call it "ekaria dukaria," which is certainly a more imposing title. The court is marked out into seven squares, each of which has a name, as follows: Ekaria, dukaria, tikaria, kachkolan, sustanawa, chotka and barka. A round piece of tile (khapolio) is thrown successively into each of these squares and kicked out by a player hopping on one foot. In passing the fifth and sixth squares (sustanawa and chotka), the player has to jump straight in and then straight out again from the chalkline without treading on any of the intervening squares. When the tile has been kicked out of the last square (barka) without any rules having been broken, the player scores a point.

The Clock Tower of Berne.

A tower in the city of Berne, Switzerland, is famous for its mechanical clock, which, at the striking hours, presents an interesting display. Three minutes before the hour a cock crows and flaps its wings, and several bears march round a seated figure of Time, which thereupon reverses an hour-glass, raises its scepter and opens its mouth as often as the clock strikes, while the bear on the right bows its head. The cock once more crows and the pantomime is at an end. This famous clock tower was once a watch-tower and stood at the extreme eastern end of the town. Now, however, it is in the center of the town.

I'd love to know my letters well,
That I might learn to read and spell.
I'd find them on my pretty card
If they were not so very hard.

Now, S is crooked, don't you see?
And G is making mouths at me.
And O is something like a ball—
It hasn't any end at all.

And all the rest are, my, so queer!
They look like crooked sticks. Oh, dear!
Ma counted six and twenty more.
What do they have so many for?

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Petition from Houghs Neck Expected by City Council

Houghs Neck which has about as many schemes as the law allows, is now circulating a petition to present to the City Council asking that Houghs Neck be made a separate ward of the city, in order that it may have a better representation in the City Council.

Should the City Council decide to set off Houghs Neck as a separate ward it means that the ward would be entitled to three councilmen from the ward and that an additional councilman-at-large would have to be elected which would increase the City Council to 27 members instead of 23 as at present.

There is a provision in the City Charter for setting off an additional ward, one of the requirements of the provisions being that it must be passed by a majority of the City Council for two successive years.

That is if the Council should act favorably on the petition this year it would have to come up again next year for similar action.

It has been suggested by some that Houghs Neck be set off as a precinct of Ward One. At best it would be but a small ward and if it is given three members of the City Council, it would have a larger representation, when compared to its size than any other ward of the city. Wards of a city should be about equal in population and voters, and Houghs Neck cannot claim one-seventh of the population of the city which would be 3,500.

The City Engineer is busy making plans for the changes proposed at City Hall which will give the Mayor a better office and at the same time provide adequate room for the engineering force. One of the suggestions for additional room has been to put up a partition in the Council Chamber adjoining the office of the Clerk of Council making a room for the engineers force. It may also be arranged so that the partition between the Clerks office and this new proposed room may be taken down so that there will be a larger room for the committee meetings, the present room often proving most too small to accommodate the committee especially when a hearing is given.

The selection of an assessor to fill the vacancy caused by the declination of Thomas Swithin to accept the appointment is still in the air, although it is probable that the man selected for the position will be announced at an early date.

SOCIAL OF PHILATHEA CLASS

The Philathea Class of Bethany church held a very pleasant social and entertainment Monday evening in the church parlor. About fifty young ladies were present and a fine program had been arranged, which consisted of the Philathea hymn, a piano solo by Mrs. Goddard, piano duet, Mrs. Goddard and Miss Annie Birnie, solo by Miss Matson, duets by Miss Murray and Miss Matson, reading by Annie Mitchell, banjo numbers by Mrs. Goddard, recitation by Mabel Lovejoy. John Willmott was the pianist of the evening.

Edward Southworth gave a brief account of some of the scenes during the Civil war in which he took part, and gave a very interesting account of several scrimmages, of the marches and some of the bright side as well. He was heartily applauded. An animal drawing contest was next on the program and a prize was given for the one guessing the names of the animals drawn. Then came the marshmellow contest and a prize was given for this. At the close dainty refreshments were served.

PARTY FROCKS.

White and Pale Colorings for Evening Wear Vie With Vivid Tones of Red and Yellow—Indications of Coming Modes.

Looking round the glittering horseshoe formed by the boxes at the Metropolitan Opera House, one is impressed with the fact that notwithstanding all that is proclaimed as to the modishness of vivid colorings the majority of the fashionable crowd prefer pale pastel tones, relieved by touches of dark fur, or velvet, and set off with the contrast afforded by a striking jewel, or corsage ornament. Black and white hold their place, but are not mingled in the old time way. The dress is usually of black with a touch of white in its trimmings, or of white with a bit of black and with usually a touch of contrasting color in girdle or corsage ornament.

THE SILHOULETTE.

There is no great change in the general fashionable outline though there are many modifications of it. The Spindle type prevails, small at head and foot and loose and full above the knee. There is however a decided tendency to increase the flare which made its appearance first in the lampshade tunic, introduced by Paul Poiret. One sees coats taking on similar lines and securing the flare, by means of Godet pleats—which in English means single boxpleats. Also many of the fashionable skirts cut in straight lengths, are adjusted at the waist with these same pleats. Everything as we have stated has a loose, almost slouchy look, and is saved from clumsiness, only because the figure is kept slim or corseted to produce a slender effect. The underpinning is more than ever important but if this is correct in line, almost any amateur with a good pattern can turn out successful attire. The combinations that continue popular are also all on the side of clever economy affording great possibilities for remodelling a worn frock or using short lengths in the construction of a new one.

BLOUSES AND TRIMMINGS.

Blouses are thin, and are usually made up over net foundations, and while many appear very elaborate because of their trimmings their construction is of the simplest in the very smartest models worn here. Taffeta is again to the fore for loose, shirts to be worn with skirt and coat costumes. Peau-de-crepe is especially favored for white waists since it washes better than most cottons yet is handsom in texture and quality.

Very elaborate washable waists of cotto voile and shadow lace are fashionably worn, and are perfectly comfortable with the protection afforded by garments of fur, or fur lined and trimmed.

A FADDISH COMBINATION.

People who drive or use an automobile are making a fad of having their fur driving coat and robe made up in matching fur and the up-to-date furriers here are catering to this demand and carrying these sets in stock, so that people do not have to wait for them. I was surprised to see at C. C. Shayne & Co's. recently the smartest kind of durable sets made of Siberian dog, Raccoon, muskrat and the silver gray of the Australian Bush Cat, at prices that would have been impossible before the present mark downs. Many of the automobile coats are in excellent style for general wear, even though one is in the class that escapes tire troubles by riding only occasionally, in some one else's car.

Leopard and Civet cat fur are leading favorites for the contrasting collar and cuffs that smarten coats built for hard and continuous wear, and both these furs and mink are an excellent choice for the muff and neck piece sets, which have lost none of their prestige, spite of the popularity of the fur coat. With the thin waists that everyone wears cozy warm outer warps are a necessity.

THE MEXICAN NOTE.

Fashion designers are beginning to exploit "Mexican" ideas and the black and gold worn so effectively by the bull fighters in Spain and Mexico, was repeated in a costume worn in a box the other night at the Metropolitan Opera. Black satin and velvet were combined to make this, and a deep sash of gold tinsel brocade was wound around the waist and knotted at one side, the ends fringed in gold.

There is a decided liking for odd combinations of color, but these are successful only when exactly the right shades are employed. There is a tendency to combine purple and blue, both in rather dull smoky tones. A frock of purple velvet, has a short tunic of blue tulle, the bodice is of the tulle and around the neck is a string of jade green beads.

Indian beads are quite important items in the coloring of fashionable toilets, especially the sort that display the colored string ending with a tassel which has several beads at its top.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

There's a mighty good show on at Kincaide Theatre this week. The pictures are all very interesting and an extra reel is being shown. The vaudeville attractions are right up to the usual high standard of the house.

O'Brien & Brooks, in their Italian impersonation were warmly received. They made lots of laughter with their comic make-up and line of patter and close their act with a musical duo decidedly good. Elnora Dane did some splendid playing of the violin and her costume changes were very pleasing.

Coming Thursday is Hap Ward's big comedy company in a brilliant blend of melody, comedy and dance called "The trouble Makers." This is a screamingly funny musical show in three acts.

TWO RECORDS SMASHED

High Scores in the Fore River Bowling League

Two records were smashed at the regular Fore River league matches at the Coliseum alleys Monday night. Bergfors of the Blacksmiths with 140 broke the high single record of 135 held by George Westland of the Hull Draftsmen. Moran of the Machine Gallery netted 338 in three pretty strings and jumped the record of 332 for the best three string team total held jointly by Bergfors of the Blacksmiths and Fromme of the Hull Draftsmen.

The other records were not endangered although the Machine Gallery got a team total of 1470. The closest they came to breaking their team single record of 529 was 503.

Moran's performance was very consistent and from the time his first ball rolled down the alley the total mark was imperilled. Bergfors had been rolling 84 and 95 and realizing Moran has sent his half of the prize money on the three string total record to smithereens he loosened up, was successful in buying up all kinds of spares and succeeded in passing Westland by five pins In the string he got three strikes and three spares.

The Machine Gallery. leaders of the league added four more points by beating the Blacksmiths. Tirrell of the winners got 115 in his second string.

SPORT NEWS

The Lincoln A. C. lost to the Marston Five at the Kidder Gymnasium, Milton, Monday night, 28 to 5. Greenburg, left forward for the Marston tossed seven baskets. The game was free from fouls.

The runners wearing the Quincy High school track letters are in daily training at the Y. M. C. A. gym and Captain Anderson expects to have the boys rounded into shape for the spring athletic meets, which will be held with Arlington and Melrose if arrangements are completed. But little glory has been added to the High school record the past two years by its track representation although there are plenty of men able to perform with much merit. The men hope to complete a change in favor of the school.

Quincy A. A. and the St. Mary's of Cambridge will struggle for basket ball honors at the Y. M. C. A. gym Thursday night. The Quincy team, up to Monday night was crippled through the illness of several of the players but their recovery indicates that the champion fives will be on the floor when the whistle blows.

The single of 139 rolled at the Coliseum alleys Monday by George White was one of the best rolled afternoons this season, outside of competition and secured the daily prize.

The Massachusetts Police Base ball league will be divided into two divisions this year if Haverhill and Nashua, N. H., can be prevailed upon to enter teams. All of last years teams will continue according to the assurances received from the departments of Newton, Cambridge, Somerville, Everett, Revere, Chelsea, Station 13 of Boston, Lowell, Lawrence, Quincy and Metropolitan police.

The bowling tournament which opens on Dewey square alleys Feb. 16, will have several Quincy men among the entrants. Behind the line will be Bernard Burke who hopes to finish in the leaders division. Prizes valued at $100 are being offered as well as cups valued at $100.

Can high scores be made oftener with cold than with warm pins is being discussed at the alleys. Veterans claim the only difference is that cold pins split quicker. A similar question is raised by billiard players at the Coliseum alleys. The leaders in both games differ in their opinions. The next question—How old is Ann?

THINKS CANAL TOLL NOT WISE

President Declares Question Involves a Point of Honor

A CHANGE OF CIRCUMSTANCES

Foreign Policy Should Not Be Hampered by Democratic Platform—Believes Congress Will Repeal Exemption—Case Might Apply to Japanese Question and Russian Treaty

Washington, Feb. 10.—That a platform pledge cannot interfere with the settlement of an international question involving a point of honor was the declaration made by President Wilson, in making clear his attitude regarding Panama canal tolls and the Democratic platform plank which declared in favor of the exemption of American coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls. His position is firmly fixed against the exemption.

The president told his callers that a change of circumstances over which the United States had no control had changed the situation since the Baltimore platform was adopted. This declaration is interpreted to mean that the British protest has assumed a new phase.

President Wilson said, however, that he had not discussed the Panama tolls question with the British ambassador, Mr. Rice, and had not taken up the question with the British government since James Bryce left Washington.

The president stated that he had no present plans of sending a message to congress on the subject, believing that the announcement of his attitude would be sufficient to get action repealing the exemption at the present session of congress.

There is no question that President Wilson regards the Panama tolls question as interrelated with the various foreign entanglements in which the United States now finds itself, and that he is anxious to clear up the question before pressing the others for final solution.

This new doctrine would apply with equal force to such subjects as the Japanese question, the Russian treaty, and security for life at sea, all of which are treated in the Baltimore document.

The platform commends the abrogation of the Russian treaty and specifically declares that "no treaty should receive the sanction of our government which does not recognize the equality of all of our citizens, irrespective of race or creed, and which does not expressly guarantee the fundamental right of its expatriation."

It is pointed out here that if the president should carry his construction to a logical conclusion, the Baltimore platform need not stand in the way of a new treaty with Russia which would restore the historic relations of the two countries while leaving the relatively unimportant question of the treatment of Jews where it is now.

COAST TO THEIR DEATH

Bodies of Two Little Brothers Are Found In a Boston Pond

Boston, Feb. 10.—A little red tam-o-shanter frozen in the ice of Muddy pond, Forest Hills, led to the discovery of the bodies of Robert and Herbert Coleman. Their mother, Mrs. Margaret Colemn, had anxiously awaited their return from coasting since Sunday afternoon.

Robert, 8, and Herbert, 6, asked Mrs. Coleman, who is housekeeper for Congressman Peters, if they might go coasting on the hills nearby. She gave them permission after warning them against the dangers of sliding near Muddy pond. They promised to be careful and trudged off. That was the last seen of them alive. They had coasted into an airhole.

STATEROOM DOORS SEALED BY CRASH

Explosives Must Be Used to Free Dead on the Monroe

Norfolk, Feb. 10.—Expert divers who have thoroughly examined the wreck of the Old Dominion steamer Monroe, sunk in collision with the Nantucket, express the belief that while the bodies of victims, as well as the cargo, can be recovered, the vessel itself will be a total loss.

They declare the reason none of the bodies of the dead has come to the surface or been recovered is due to the terrific force of the collision, which jammed the timbers and doors of the starboard saloons and staterooms, practically sealing them from the action of the sea. Divers have found it impossible to open these doors, and say explosives must be used to liberate the dead.

NURSES PREVENT PANIC

Fight Flames In Lawrence Hospital Until Firemen Arrive

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 10.—Three young women attached to the Lawrence general hospital last night held in check until the arrival of the fire department a blaze that threatened to destroy the building, and inspired other nurses by their example to calm the fears of the patients and to remove those who were in wards near the scene of the fire to less dangerous localities.

As the result of the cool action of the nurses all danger of a panic was averted and the patients were kept from the injurious effects of undue excitement. The fire raged for nearly two hours before the firemen finally got it under control.

SCOOTS OF PIE ALLEY

— BY —

Anna B. Bryant

In the Congregationalist

A Story of the Boy Scouts

"Ye can come in," she said sourly, holding the door open a grudging crack "But I warn ye! If it's a meenisteerial call I'm receiving, then I'm highly honored and you're heartily welcome. But if it's for your Boy Scoots you've come a-begging, Why, then I'm a very busy woman! I've no money to waste on them, and I think ye might be in better business!"

"I think it's a ministerial call," said the minister, laughing. He came in and went straight to business, well knowing his rough-tongued, soft-hearted parishioner, and determined to be as straightforward as she was.

"You don't know the chance you're missing, Miss McCormick," he told her, decidedly. "These boys are going straight to ruin unless somebody takes hold and helps them. Somebody is taking hold. You ought to be in it. You wouldn't find them so bad, either, if—"

"Who mixed up old man Perkins' seed potatoes?" she demanded. "And he over 80 and blind as a bat, and only sprouting them by feeling. They needed a hosswhup!"

"That's one of the things we've talked over," said the minister calmly. "It came up in last night's meeting. Before anybody can be a full-blooded scout he's got to quit his meanness, and—"

"Huh!" said Miss McCormick. "Who set the brush heap afire that burnt out poor Willum Handy, so that he couldn't end his days in peace in his old tumble-down house, but must go to the poor-house?"

"They didn't mean to do that, Miss McCormick. And here—what do you think they've done to make up for it? They're building him a new house 10 times better than he had before, and I've just been over to help them pick out the lumber. They're earning the money to pay for a carpenter to boss it, and doing a good share of the work themselves under his direction."

"It sounds good," said the old lady with withering sarcasm. "I'm reminding ye of my pear orchard. Who—"

"I believe you said you were busy, Miss McCormick," said the minister, rising suddenly, and speaking with a cold tone of severity that instantly impressed her. "I said I was giving you a chance. If you don't want it, I shall turn to those who do. But you are not going to say that it wasn't offered you. These boys are going to be good men some day; they are going to be grand men. It is going to take some money to make them so. If these beginnings I have been telling you about don't impress you, I don't know what will. But something will. I know that. I only thought you might like to be remembered in connection with such a work as this is, and have a hand in it. But—I will say a very good morning, Miss McCormick."

She watched him move slowly to the door before she spoke at all or made any movement to stop him.

"Wait!" she said, and he turned around obediently at the sharp summons.

"Ye said 'chance.' I think 'chance'—a chance in a million that anything will come of it. Chance! It's a clean lott'ry in boys. I'm no' conceiting myself there's any good in it. But I'll take a chance! An' ye'll step into the kitchen and keep your eyes oot the window and not turn round till ye're teelt. I'll maybe gie ye something."

"Take your time, Miss McCormick. I'm interested in looking at this fine old pear tree."

It amused him to notice that the tall old "grandfather's clock" stopped suddenly, but he did not turn around.

"There are just about five or six pears left on that tree," she fretted, "and they're good pears, too; the higher they grow, the better they grow. I don't know how I'll get 'em. It was some of your Scoots carried off the rest o' them," she added maliciously, her voice suddenly growing thick and muffled as if she were speaking out of a box or chest, and then as suddenly ringing clear again. The same instant the monotonous tick-tock of the pendulum resumed business.

The minister was smiling to himself when a movement in the pear tree focussed his attention. The leaves were thick, and he could see no one, but no wind ever shook a pear tree in just that way. He was conscious of a sudden shamed fear as to what might be happening in those branhces.

"The oncoltivated heathen," the old lady ejaculated, her gray mop of a head appearing at the window in place of the minister's. He had quickly dodged aside when he became aware of what was going on. He was heartsick and discouraged, but he did not wish to seem to be spying on anyone. When the boys looked up—or looked down, according to their positions in the tree or under it—they saw only Miss McCormick, whose suspicious exclamation had startled them.

In a momentt hey had scuttled out of sight. Two seconds later the old-fashioned knocker waked the echoes in the big square rooms, and she was scurrying to answer it.

"You!" was her inhospitable greeting, not unmixed with perplexity, for why should boys who had just stolen your last pear of summer come fetching it round to the front door in their hat, like fruit peddlars bringing in samples to show what they had in their fruit cart. Miss McCormick being a little amazed, was resentful. The boys themselves were blushing.

"Yes'm, they're for you," stammered the foremost of the six finding his tongue at last and shoving his hat at her, filled to the tattered rim with luscious, pale yellow pears. "We—we—th-thought maybe you couldn't climb up so easy as we could, 'n' so we got 'em for you!"

"You—oncoltivated—" she began, using her favorite phrase of objurgation, which always tickled them mightily. But this time she hesitated at "heathen" and substituted "pie allies." "You always have been stealing pears ever since you was born, and I always expected you would steal 'em! What ails you, anyway?"

"'Cos we're Scoots now, and we help folks—Scoots does—the minister says so! We don't steal nuthin'—the Scoot laws don't 'low of it. If yer did, ye wouldn't be let to stay Scoots—don't yer see?"

She didn't see, and only stood staring at them in a dazed manner. The next moment she leaned feebly against the doorway, the spirit all gone out of her, as if she had been a modern queen of Sheba. Seeing she had nothing to say to them, the boys left abruptly.

"What is it, Miss McCormick?" asked the voice of the minister, who came cautiously to the door as the last barefooted scout disappeared around the corner. "You're not feeling badly? You look—here, let me get you some watter."

"I'm no' needin' water, young man!" replied the old lady with dignity. "It's a wee bit upsettin'. I'm no denying it. Ye was saying that ye wanted money for your Scoot-plenishing. Here's what I planned for ye, and if it's furniture that is wanted, the garret is piled to the ridge-pole. Tables and chairs and settles a hunder year old, and sea chests that would be handy lockers for their clothes and their playthings. Ye can have 'em! Ye can have 'em! I'll no' be holding on to a stick of 'em! Oh! Oh!

"Miss McCormick!" cried the half-frightened minister, but she only threw her checked apron over her head and burst into a long wail, rocking back and forth in a broken-hearted manner that alarmed him.

"Oh! oh!" she cried, sobbing and strangling in most approved hysterical fashion. "Oh, that I should have lived to see this day!"

"What makes you feel so bad?" insisted the minister, at his wits' end. "Because they brought back the pears? That was nice of them, and nobody put them up to it, either, except in a general way, as I told you. They won't steal any more of your pears."

"Pears," cried the old lady, taking one wet blue eye out of her apron to glare indignantly at him. "Bringing back the pears! As if it was pears I was caring aboot!"

"Well, what was it, then?" asked the minister helplessly. Sympathetic as he was, he was totally unable to get the feminine viewpoint.

"Man!" she answered tragically, both eyes now appearing as the apron dropped and her right hand waved illustratively. "I tell ye, young man, as thea yoong rapscallions left my doorstep—the whole sax o' them—they pit up their right hands and liftit their caps to me!"—Anna B. Bryant, in the Congregationalist.

—The forthcoming report of the general superintendent of the life-saving service at Washington will contain the information that of the 9000 lives endangered during the past year more than 5000 were assisted to safety by the crews of the lifesaving service alone, and more than 3000 others were assisted by the service working in conjunction with other agencies.—Lynn Item.

Milady's Mirror

A Red Nose Is Mortifying.

The red nose is a true danger signal. A simple diet should be indulged in, the feet and ankles rubbed well every day. To keep the ankles warm it is well to wear woolen bands under the stockings. Rubbing the body from chin to toes with a hair mitten dipped in alcohol will improve the circulation and prevent a chill when going out on a cold day after a bath. In the open air always breathe deeply through the nostrils, and in this way many colds will be prevented. If these rules are followed the red nose will eventually disappear.

Make deep breathing a habit. It will improve the health as well as the appearance. Men seem to be ashamed to complain of cold and, as a rule, face the winter blasts bravely. They eat a good breakfast, take long strides and long, deep breaths, walk erect with feet and body comfortably clad. Of course they do not feel the cold as a shrinking little woman in low shoes, thin stockings and diaphanous waist would feel it.

Care of the Hair.

The hair often becomes unruly in windy weather. Curly hair when affected by wind or dampness can be coaxed back to its natural state. Wet the hair with hot water, push it up into loose waves and stick a little fine side comb into each wave, tie a soft veil over the head and allow it to dry. Never use hot irons on hair that is naturally curly.

If the hair looks dull and lifeless it requires oil and massage. The hair must be kept scrupulously clean to be either healthy or good looking. There is no danger of cold after shampooing if the hair is dried at once with hot towels, followed by a tonic and massage, as there is usually more or less alcohol in the tonic, and the massage causes good circulation, thus preventing a cold.

To give luster to the hair use five drams of castor oil, four drams sweet almond oil, six ounces of alcohol and three of any extract preferred. Drop a little in the palm of the hand and on the brush, then brush the hair.

Homemade Nail Paste.

A good paste to use where the nails are dry is made of sixteen grains each of powdered resin, table salt and powdered alum. Add a quarter ounce sweet almond oil, forty grains white wax and a grain of carmine. A little of this should be well rubbed into the nails every night and soon relieves the dry condition which causes them to break easily. As the manicuring should only be done once a week, this paste may be applied every night the week previous, and effects will be very apparent in a short while.

After the process as given is finished the nails are ready for the polishing process, and this requires care also, as if the buffer is used too long or too hard the nails will soon get very tender and too thin.

The Face In Windy Weather.

The face must often be exposed to the spring blasts protected only by a thin veil, which many times serves to make the lips and nose chap more than if it had not been worn. It is a very excellent plan to use a little good massage cream before facing the cold winds, rubbing it in gently for only five minutes, then wiping it off and using a good face powder. Literally rub both in, for the powder and cream will afford great protection to the skin and not injure it, as so many claim. But, of course, the face must be thoroughly cleansed with a cream before retiring.

Dry the Hands Carefully.

Always dry the hands carefully after washing them. A very healing, softening lotion is composed of glycerin and one ounce of witch hazel. A few drops rubbed into the hands every time they are bathed before retiring will usually keep them soft and white. Soft, white cotton gloves two sizes larger than the hands require can be worn at night if the hands should be badly chapped, but if the lotion is rubbed in while the hands are warm and moist after bathing it will be absorbed and gloves will not be necessary.

The Best Skin Tonic.

Exercise is a splendid skin tonic. A brisk walk, no matter if in the rain, will freshen the complexion, even as it freshens the flowers, and a simple aperient will do wonders for a muddy skin. It remains for all women to preserve such beauty as they have and to cure the defects which are peculiar to them or that time has wrought. Every skin is different and must be treated accordingly, and it takes a reasoning woman to experiment carefully and find out the proper method of treatment for her skin.

Spice Sachets.

Egyptian spice flower bags are the newest of the sachets. The bags are made of ribbon decked bolting cloth and are filled with fragrant flower petals and oriental spices. Old fashioned lavender flowers, which many housekeepers contend are absolutely necessary to give the required freshness and delicacy of odor to household linen, may be put up in this way. Dried rose and violet leaves also serve the same dainty purpose.

FARMING AND HIGH SCHOOLS.

Innovation In Public School Work Started In Douglas County, Wash.

Douglas county, Wash., is combining scientific farming with the regular course in its high school. A. L. Rogers of Waterville, in that state, who is responsible for this innovation in public school work, is a firm believer in utilizing the schoolhouse and public utilities to the fullest extent all the time. He combats the custom only to allow use of schoolhouses and grounds for the specific purposes for which they were originally intended, which, he argues, does not give the greatest possible benefit of such investment.

Mr. Rogers contends that the schools are turning out young men with education that is not practical to fit them for the life work they must take up. So Douglas county has taken advantage of a recently enacted state law which permits counties of Washington to accept the United States government's appropriation of $100 per month toward hiring of farm directors for schools. Douglas county will stand the rest of the necessary expense of a farm director's salary.

C. V. OGEE, WINNER IN POTATO CONTEST.

An eighty acre tract adjoining the new high school has been leased for ninety-nine years, and last summer the boys got their primer lesson in agriculture. Considerable grain was raised and some vegetables and fruit. The schoolboys of Douglas county will be given every incentive to become proficient in farming. Each boy receives an acre of land to cultivate, and the most proficient boys of the entire class have full supervision over ten acre tracts. In this way competition is keen, and cash prizes add to their interest in the work. Douglas already has a notable county fair, but with these high school boys contributing to the exhibits this fair is destined to attract national attention. The schoolboys are made to keep books and charge all debits and credits so they know what results they are achieving. One of the results is shown in the illustration—monster potatoes raised by C. V. Ogee, one of the high school pupils and a prize winner.

MR. AND MRS. SAYRE AT HOME.

After a Trip Abroad They Begin Their Real Housekeeping.

The national bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, have returned from their honeymoon trip abroad and from much feting. They stopped for a few days at the White House and then went to Williamstown, Mass., to the house which had been made ready for their coming and which is to be their permanent home. Mr Sayre has taken up his new duties as assistant to President Harry Garfield of Williams college.

HOME OF THE NEWLYWEDS, MR. AND MRS. FRANCIS B. SAYRE.

The only affair at which social Washington had opportunity to catch a glimpse of the White House bride and bridegroom was at the president's reception to the judiciary. There Mr. and Mrs. Sayre were surrounded by members of the diplomatic corps and public officials and their wives who wished to extend felicitations and inquire about the bridal tour.

AROUND WORLD BY AEROPLANE

Planned Crowning Triumph of Flying For 1915.

PRIZES MAY TOTAL $300,000

Flight Across Atlantic Ocean Is Conceded to Be Most Difficult Part of Panama-Pacific Exposition Race, but Garros Has Demonstrated That Even This Feat Can Be Accomplished.

The Panama-Pacific exposition has invited the aviators of the world to circumnavigate the globe. Ninety days will be permitted them in which to make the flight, and the man who wins will get $100,000 for his pains.

There will be $50,000 additional for other prizes, according to present plans, although it is expected that when the time comes for the start $150,000 more will be added to the prize money. It is said to be the largest prize fund ever offered for a single sporting event.

The race is to start early in May, 1915. The course lies east from San Francisco. The route as now outlined runs from San Francisco through Reno, Nev.; Cheyenne, Wyo.; from there to Kansas City, St. Louis or Chicago and on to New York.

Across Water Flight of 670 Miles.

The race around the world in the air presents some startling possibilities. The Atlantic ocean is conceded to be the most formidable stretch in the race. It will be essayed from Belle Isle, a small point between Newfoundland and Labrador.

That it is possible to cross over water from continent to continent many men who have made a study of aerial navigation for years agree. Those who have laid out the course for the world race have planned it carefully, and in the entire trip the longest across water flight is 670 miles. This is not prohibitive, for only recently Garros, the French aviator, flew 600 miles over the Mediterranean from Cannes to Tunis.

Another Jump of 570 Miles.

Cape Farewell, Greenland, the next stop, barring a drop into the water, is 610 miles away, from Cape Farewell to Reykjavik, Iceland, is 670 miles further. One more jump to Stornaway, in the Hebrides, is 570 miles—and the Atlantic has been crossed.

From the Hebrides to Edinburgh, London, Paris, Berlin, Warsaw, St Petersburg, Moscow and along the Transsiberian railway down into Manchuria and Corea, and across into Japan, runs the line of flight. From northern Japan to Kamchatka, with carrying routes across the little gap which separates Asia from North America, no obstacle likely to be met is insurmountable, it is claimed.

Vancouver, B. C., Seattle and Tacoma, Portland, Ore., and San Francisco again—and the world is belted.

THE NEW STYLE INDIAN GIRL.

She Has All the Airs and Graces of a Maid of Fashion.

Something of the vast change in recent years of the western Indian can be noted in an experience of Louis Beindorff, city passenger agent of the Union Pacific railroad at Omaha. Beindorff was notified to see that Marie Lesleur, an Indian from Ross Fork Ida., made her change of trains properly.

Beindorff looked for a girl wrapped in a blanket, with a feather in her hair and two long braids. But he didn't find one. He appealed to the conductor.

"Not an Indian aboard," answered that official. "There's a ticket to Ross Fork, Ida. It comes from the Pull man."

"No Injuns," said the Pullman conductor. "There was a girl with a Ross Fork ticket, though. She's in the depot. I'll show her to you."

A black haired young woman stood at the ticket window.

"Beg pardon, miss. I believe you are the young woman I am looking for," said the railroader.

"Oh, you railroad men just bother one to death," was the petulant reply in smart English. "Do I look as if I cannot take care of myself? I'm going shopping, and I want to go alone too. Don't you dare follow me."

She turned on the low heel of her "baby doll" shoes, displaying, as she did so, a slit in an up to date dress and made her way to the elevator. Beindorff and the other railroaders stood with mouths agape with astonishment.

WOMEN MUST TELL AGES.

Statement of Exact Number of Years Required to Vote In Illinois.

Women who desire to register on Feb. 3, in order to be able to vote at the Chicago aldermanic primaries, must comply with these instructions issued by the election commissioners:

"Each woman must state her age in years. This was not necessary in the case of applying for the position of judge or clerk of election. There it sufficed to say 'legal age,' but the law is positive in the case of registration that all must give their exact age.

"A woman's voting age, like a man, is twenty-one, not eighteen years, as some suppose."

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL

Committee Will Report Large Sum Next Week

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9. Should the Committee on Rivers and Harbors of the House, decide to incorporate in the appropriation bill for waterways, certain new projects which have the endorsement of the chief of engineers of the U. S. Army, there is every reason to believe that the River and Harbor supply bill will carry between forty and fifty millions of dollars for the fiscal year 1915.

In addition to hearings upon a number of small projects, the committee has given serious consideration to the big projects for which there is a deep-seated demand, notably to the purchase of the Chesapeake and Delaware canal, a needed link in the chain of inside waterways from New England to the Florida Keys.

PARK WANTED AT WEYMOUTH

Senator Louis F. R. Langelier of Quincy and A. C. Gerstley of Weymouth went before the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs of the Legislature on Monday in the interest of the petition of Kenneth L. Nash to direct the Metropolitan Park Commission to investigate the cost of acquiring land around Weymouth Great Pond in the town of Weymouth.

The ultimate purpose of the petitioners is to have the State acquire the land and establish a metropolitan park. The bill provided an appropriation of $500 to investigate the cost of acquiring the land.

In executive session the committee voted to report the bill favorably with the exception that the appropriation is eliminated. This is in view of the committee's decision to strike out appropriations wherever possible.

Among those who appeared before the committee in favor of the bill in addition to Senator Langelier and Mr. Gerstley are J. D. Robertson, president of the Pond Plain Improvement Society; W. L. Bates, president of the South Weymouth Improvement Society, E. N. Hunt, chairman of the Weymouth Board of Selectmen, Town Counsel A. P. Worthen, D. M. Easton, R. C. Burrill, A. F. Barnes, Rev. H. C. CURED BY A DREAM

Complete Recovery of Girl Who Was Paralyzed For Two Years

New York, Feb. 10.—Helen R. Scott, 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Scott of Jamaica, joins her schoolgirl chums today as spry and nimble as any of them, although for two years she had been paralyzed from the waist down and had lost hope of ever walking again.

Christmas eve a party of schoolgirls called to cheer her. In the middle of the night Helen's mother heard a shrill scream and found her daughter walking about the room.

Helen told her mother that in a dream she seemed to see a dim figure that commanded her to rise from her bed and walk. She woke with a start and, with the dream still vivid, unconsciously did as bidden. To her surprise she was able to take a few steps.

Since that time the girl's recovery has been continuous until complete.

BROKER STEDMAN'S DEATH

Doctor Who Attended "Suicide" Asks Coroner to Investigate

Bridgeport, Conn., Feb. 10.—Whether it would be possible for a man to strike himself in the head with the blunt end of a hatchet, crushing the skull and then drive a penknife into the wound, is the question Coroner Phelan must solve in taking up the investigation into the death of William A. Stedman, a cotton broker, who was found dying in his home at Greenwich.

The coroner received a report of the death of Stedman from Dr. Clarke, in which the physician said he was satisfied the broker had committed suicide.

Owing to the peculiar circumstances surrounding the finding of the dying man in a coal bin in his home, however, Clarke suggested that it might be well for Phelan to make an official investigation and report.

This was made known by ex-Senator John Fox, who made public a letter from Croker, in which the latter says:

"The result of the election did not surprise me, as I felt sure Mitchel would have a very large majority. Murphy was a big handicap on McCall. The Hall will never win under Murphy's management. I hope some good man will get in and drive out all the grafting contractors."

CHARGED WITH WIFE MURDER

Manning Held as Accessory to Hazel Herdman

STILL PROTESTS INNOCENCE

Denies Knowing Death Plans of Girl Who Killed Herself, But Police Suspect Suicide Pact—New Facts Are Learned by Authorities—Funerals of the Two Women

Newark, N. J., Feb. 10.—Accused as an accessory to Miss Hazel Herdman, the mother of his 18-months-old boy, who on Friday shot and killed his wife and then ended her own life the following day after confessing her crime, Charles I. Manning, who has a prosperous garage in Verona, N. J., was held in custody.

The police detained Mrs. Sadie E. Garrabrants, sister of Manning, with whom he has lived since his separation from his wife. She is held as a material witness.

The charge of murder against Manning, the police said, was decided upon after the accused man had been questioned off and on since late Saturday. Statements made by two women and a young man, who were also brought to police headquarters, influenced the police to make the charge of murder against Manning. One of these witnessess was Mrs. Garrabrants. The identity of the other two witnesses was kept a secret by the police.

Though subjected to the "third degree" by the police, Manning maintained his declaration of innocence. "I knew nothing of Hazel's plans," he asserted. "I loved her, but if I had known that she intended to kill my wife I certainly would have prevented the deed."

Despite his protestations, Captain Tuite, chief of detectives, and Chief of Police Long declared their belief that Manning knew of the girl's plans, and worked on the theory that Manning had agreed to commit suicide with the girl, but weakened at the last minute.

Chief Long said he had learned these facts:

A man accompanied Hazel Herdman to Newark, when she came here to commit the crime.

A man waited for her some distance from Mrs. Manning's home and helped her to escape.

Manning was with the woman before dawn the next day.

The revolver with which Mrs. Manning was shot to death belonged in Manning's garage.

Manning, by his wife's death, becomes heir to $2000 which was paid to Mrs. Manning last week on the settlement of her father's estate.

Two funerals marked the end of one chapter of this remarkable tragedy of love, hatred and jealousy. Mrs. Manning was buried from Trinity Methodist church in this city, while a few miles away rites were conducted in an Orange morgue over the body of Hazel Herdman.

New York, Feb. 10.—The former wife of Henry M. Flagler, the Florida multi-millionaire, Ida A. Flagler, an incompetent, whom Flagler divorced after she became insane, will receive from his estate $65,233 in cash.

The supreme court authorized this arrangement upon the recommendation of counsel who has charge of Mrs. Flagler's property. The payment was calculated to equal 5 percent a year on one-third of the value of the Flagler estate during the period that Mrs. Flagler, according to the life insurance tables, may expect to live.

LIKE PADRONE SYSTEM

Unscrupulous Contractors Said to Be Defrauding City of Boston

Boston, Feb. 10.—Charges that the city is being defrauded by unscrupulous contractors were made at a meeting of the sanitary and street cleaning department Teamsters and Helpers' union.

It was claimed that while the city pays contractors $2.50 a day for men, the contractors in turn pay as low as 75 cents a day, diverting the balance of $1.75 to their own pockets. Conditions, it was declared, had become almost as deplorable as under the padrone system.

REV. A. L. HUDSON ASKS LOYALTY TO CITY

At Annual Banquet of Board of Trade Which Was Largely Attended

Representative White Upholds Constitution of Country

Rev. A. L. Hudson struck the keynote at the thirteenth annual banquet of the Quincy Board of Trade on Tuesday evening in his address on "Loyalty." It was an address which should be repeated in all parts of the city and read and reread again and again. What he said of Quincy is true, but many do not seem to realize it. Speak well of Quincy at all times. An extended abstract of the address is reported below.

The banquet was held at Alpha hall and attended by nearly 200 ladies and gentlemen. All parts of the city were represented. The only decorations were large American flags over the platform, but the tables were attractive. Upon arrival each lady was presented with a white pink and each guest and each member of the committee a red pink.

The blesing was asked by Rev. William B. Ayers of the Park and Downs Congregational church, and was a model for such an occasion.

Burleigh & Martin, the caterers provided bountifully, the menu being as follows:

Grape Fruit
Lobster Newburg
Roast Stuffed Turkey, Cranberry sauce
Celery Potato au Gratin
Chicken Salad Fruit Fritters
Assorted Light and Fancy Cakes
Vanilla Ice Cream, with crushed strawberry sauce
Rolls Coffee

While the menu was being served, Provost's orchestra furnished music which was liberally applauded.

PRESIDENT'S WELCOME.

President John L. Hamilton welcomed all. He hoped they had been well served and that there were no ill effects because this is the 13th banquet. The Board of Trade works always for Quincy and the caterer, musicians and printers were Quincy people. We are interested in all parts of the city, and one has got to go some to put it over the Quincy Board of Trade.

He first introduced

MAYOR MILLER

Mayor Miller said it was a good thing to get together at a gathering like this. It meant much to Quincy, and was an incentive to daily happiness. He was glad to learn that the Board of Trade had grown and become a power. It should always be exerted for the good of the city. Mayor Miller then spoke of the grade crossing decree. It had been before three commissioners, and it was up to the Public Service Commission to accept it or reject it. If rejected there would be uncertainty for years. I felt it my duty to accept the report. It is important that a decision should be reached, as improvements along the railroad have long been held up. The Mayor then explained in detail the changes to be made under the plans adopted. The cost would be one-half what it would be under the City plan.

ORIGINAL MONOLOGUES.

Erastus Osgood followed each speaker with original monologues of a local character which were greatly enjoyed.

REV. A. L. HUDSON.

After expressing his appreciation of the invitation to speak before a body whose main purpose is to promote the growth and prosperity of Quincy, Mr. Hudson drew some pointed lessons from his observation of city building in the middle West during the decade of rapid growth which preceded the panic of 1893.

He cited specific instances to show that the substantial growth of any city is dependent on the loyalty and unity of its citizens. The grasping selfishness which seeks for personal gain at the expense of others, kills a city and thus in the long run defeats its own ends.

On the other hand the man who most fully identifies his own interests with the prosperity of the city, not only wins success himself, but at the same time contributes to the good of all.

Loyalty may also be shown in saying good things about the city and thus helping to foster a spirit of unity and civic pride. While constant faultfinding is deadening to city growth, reasonable criticism frankly expressed to those who are responsible is always wholesome; but the chronic "knocker," who goes about airing his vanity or prejudice by finding fault with everything in sight is a most serious drawback to the building of a city. For, so far as he has any influence, he foments discord and discontent, hinders the workers and drives away new comers.

One direction in which loyalty is of especial importance in any city is in the support given by citizens to their administrative officers in their efforts to serve the city's interests. There is a wise and growing tendency in democratic governments to give more power to the executive head and and hold him responsible for results. It is not an easy task for the Mayor of a city to adjust wisely his dual responsibility: First to promote the city's growth; and second to guard against extravagance and waste. Waste de-

EDUCATION THE SOLUTION

Foes of Cities are Ignorance, Indifference and Selfishness

Speaking on "City Government" at the February meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club on Tuesday evening John A. Sullivan, the new Corporation Counsel of Boston said in part:

"Foreign critics charge that the government of our large American cities is the worst feature in our experiment with democracy. It has failed to give the kind of government it should and is possible to give.

"Although details vary the problems are the same in essentials everywhere. As a rule failure has resulted from the misconceptions of the citizens themselves of their true relations to the city, and the proper functions of the city itself.

"It is safe to say that we cannot expect any permanent reform in state or national affairs until we have achieved reform in our cities.

"There is something in their growth that makes us pause. Its effect can be understood when we consider the growth of our cities in comparison with the rural population.

"Thus the sceptre of political power passes from the rural to the urban centres. It means the need for better city government than we have been having, for bad city government is bound to react and hurt the state and nation.

"The need for municipal reform is evidenced in the rising rates of taxation, the growing expenditures, and the constant increase of the public debt.

"What is the remedy? When a community finds itself tax ridden it institutes reforms. Temporary relief is all right as far as it goes.

"The common spasm of virtue, however, is short lived, and after the first revolution the citizens settle back and the sinners get to work again.

"The politician is on the job 24 hours a day. He has a keen sense. He knows how soon he may start work again, and is soon in power. We need something more than machinery.

"Education is our only hope. Education outside the schools. Education in our homes, churches, factories and workshops.

"We well know that the foes of good city government are ignorance, indifference and selfishness.

"We must teach the poor man that the city is not a charitable corporation. We must teach the rich man that the city is not a corporation which the rich have a right to work.

"People must come to realize that although a city is not run for profit it can pay large dividends in service."

ELKS BALL.

The seventh annual charity ball of the Quincy lodge of Elks will be held tonight at Music hall, and promises to be one of the leading social events of the season. There will be a promenade concert from 8 to 9 o'clock to be followed by dancing until 2 o'clock at which hour special cars will leave in front of the hall for all parts of the city. The committee of arrangements will be busy all day today decorating the hall for the occasion and something out of the usual run is promised

SQUANTUM IMPROVEMENT

Fine Prospects Ahead for Annexation to Boston

Annexation to Boston and a schoolhouse for Squantum were the principal topics of discussion at the regular meeting of the Squantum Improvement Association Tuesday night in the Vacation House. There was a fair-sized attendance and Dr. George Bruce, a member of the Quincy School committee, was the special guest of the evening. He spoke at length on Squantum's needs, particularly in reference to a school house and declared that "Quincy was pursuing a very shortsighted policy when it did not see the need of giving Squantum good streets for the development of that part of Quincy."

Chairman William Harvey of the Annexation to Boston committee reported fine progress for the bill which has been introduced in the Legislature. He said he saw fine prospects of the bill going through successfully.

VALENTINE PARTY OF THE GUILD

The sixth annual Valentine party of St. Margaret's Guild in the Christ church parish house on Tuesday evening closed with dancing, after a program which included a supper and entertainment. It was one of the largest attended affairs held by the guild in the years the observance has been held and many of the members entertained their friends as guests.

The supper which commenced at 6.30, after Rev. Richard E. Armstrong said grace, was served by the members and consisted of cold turkey, cranberry jelly, creamed potatoes, rolls, Waldorf salad, cake-pies and coffee. The decorative scheme was pink and green, and there was a generous use of paper roses, fashioned in "good luck" shapes and banked with strings of greenery.

The entertainment was by a kitchen orchestra of young ladies, the Misses Mildred Smith, Annie McLean, Elizabeth Ross, Lydia Djerf, Louise Moyle, Lucy Moyle, Ardelle MacDonald, Bertha Wallace, Violette Smith and Margaret Hogan. Miss Edna Wright was pianist and their program included popular songs, choruses with Cora Barnicoat, soloist, given in two divisions, between the rendering of which Mrs. Katherine McDonald, a well-known reader, gave several well-known selections.

Miss Gertrude Jones was chairman of the general committee. She was assisted by the Misses Olive Smith, Violette Spargo, Bertha Wallace, Elizabeth Curtis, Violette Smith and Emily Moyle on the supper committee. Miss Cora Barnicoat had the entertainment committee in charge and the decorative committee was headed by Miss Ethel Schools.

SEEK JOBS AT NAVY YARD

Many employees at the Fore River shipyard filed application papers at the Charlestown Navy yard today on the strength of information received by Mayor Curley of Boston that the construction of the new supply ship for the Navy will be awarded to the Navy yard. The ship will cost about 1,300,000 and will be the first large ship to be constructed at Charlestown since 1870. Work should be under way inside of three months.

QUINCY WOMENS CLUB DRAMATICS

Music Hall Crowded With Fair Sex; All Men Being Rigidly Excluded

Local Club Women Take Male Parts And Make Hit

A popular afternoon in club life is the annual dramatics of the Quincy Women's club and at one o'clock Tuesday afternoon Quincy Music hall began to fill with women from all parts of the city and neighboring towns and before the hour of the performance eevry seat was taken, about 800 being in attendance.

It proved an all star performance and applause and curtain calls were numerous throughout the three acts.

The comedy "Our Boys" was the play selected for this year's dramatics. The intention of the Program committee to present a play that would be entertaining was fully verified as the performance proceeded for laugh followed laugh. The cast was as follows:

Sir Geoffrey Champneys, a county magnate — Miss Annie Deane
Talbot Champneys, his son — Mrs. Wilson Marsh
Perkyn Middlewick of Devonshire House, a retired Butterman — Miss Edith Randall
Charles Middlewick, his son — Mrs. Edward L. Mitchell, Jr.

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

This newspaper cheerfully admits that George Goethals can get a job all right without spending a quarter for a want "ad" in the newspapers.

Prices for seats on the stock exchanges of the country are going up with the rise in the market, but you can still get a free ticket for admission to Monte Carlo.

Opposition to permitting college fellows to play "summer ball" for money is expressed by the "amateurs" who might be defined as athletes whose fathers give them plenty of money.

Some of these second hand men who pass themselves off at par value in the marriage market, think the plain speaking play "Damaged Goods" is immoral.

One reason why winter is the most popular season with the children is that it furnishes such excellent facilities for getting wet feet.

Not merely does the groundhog make some weather observations Feb. 2, but no doubt he secures information about the probable location of the garden patch next summer.

CENSORING THE THEATRE.

When they tried in New York to stop "Mrs. Warren's profession," alleged to be immoral, a mob of would-be spectators blocked Broadway. Prices as high as $60.00 each were paid for rear balcony seats.

Condemnation of unclean plays frequently produces a result precisely opposite to that which was desired. A certain company was closed up at Trenton, N. J. It then advertised the play as "The show that made Trenton famous." No doubt it did a big business.

A Roman Catholic movement has been working over this difficult problem for a year, indorsed by Cardinal Farley. It is now announcing from the pulpits of New York a list of plays called worthy of the patronage of church people. This should give these plays a financial backing that is sometimes missing. It avoids the mistake of advertising what is unclean.

A problem of much difficulty is presented by a group of dramas which speak openly of vice and its sordid horror, apparently from frank desire to warn the public against danger. But the audience may not see the performance from this view-point. It may be the same crowd that gloats over the so-called "spicy salad with very little dressing." Quite likely they snicker and cackle over what the author intended for purifying tragedy.

Some people think a spade should never be called a spade, but rather an implement used in agriculture. Yet if you suggest that even a chorus girl should recognize that the custom of wearing clothes is sustained by good reasons, the retort will be made that next piano legs will have to be draped.

One may well hope that a day of cleaner living is to come, when sickly indecency will lose its interest for healthy minded people. Meanwhile it is pleasant to note that the companies that play around the circuits never descend to the degradation of which so much is seen in the great cities.

CARNEGIE GIFT OF $2,000,000

Fund Devoted to Organization of Church Peace Union

IN ANNUAL "PEACE SUNDAY"

Conferences of America and Europe Will Be Called to Discuss Promotion of International Peace—Income Will Be Expended by Board of Trustees Headed by Bishop Greer

New York, Feb. 11.—Andrew Carnegie gave $2,000,000 to be used through the churches for the promotion of international peace. The income of the fund, about $100,000 a year, will be expended by a board of twenty-six trustees, representing all the leading religious denominations in the United States.

This gift is in addition to the $10,000,000 foundation established by Carnegie Dec. 4, 1910, "to hasten the abolition of international war." The announcement was made at the close of a luncheon at Carnegie's home, attended by the trustees of the new foundation. The trustees organized "The Church Peace Union," which will be incorporated under the laws of New York state.

The income of the fund will be used to organize the moral power of the churches on critical international questions, to circulate peace literature among the clergy, and to bring about the annual observance of a "Peace Sunday."

Conferences of America and Europe will be called to discuss the promotion of peace. When the leading nations abolish war and the fund has fulfilled its purpose the trustees may devote the income to other philanthropic uses.

Bishop Greer was elected president of the union; Dr. William P. Merrill of New York, vice president; Dr. Frederick Lynch, secretary, and George A. Plimpton, treasurer.

The trustees adopted a resolution which appealed to the rulers and statesmen of all civilized lands to abolish war. It pointed out that the combined debt of the world, mostly borrowed and used for war purposes, was nearly $37,000,000,000, that the amount expended annually for standing armies and navies was $2,500,000,000, and that 6,244,600 men are kept idle in military service.

"The second sad and distressful crime of our day," the resolution declared, "was the destruction of private property in naval warfare." The Teutonic nations, Great Britain and the United States were called upon to "meet and agree to inform the world in a friendly manner that they could not look with favor upon war on the high seas."

Washington, Feb. 11.—The federal trade commission plan was verbally riddled by James E. Bennett, a New York corporation organizer, who told the house interstate commerce committee it "would open up the loveliest graft of a century."

Bennett followed this with another fusillade in which he declared its inquisitorial powers to be "more tremendous than anything Russia ever had." He tacitly declared private business s none of the nation's business.

He backed up his attack with the declaration that the bill is a "sword of Damocles," and an unconstitutional measure violating the inhibition against unreasonable seizures and searches.

Boston, Feb. 11.—Both state and city officers have started an investigation to ascertain the cause of the fire that nearly destroyed the Second Universalist church, at the corner of Columbus avenue and Clarendon street.

Silas W. Lang, sexton of the church, insists that the fire was of incendiary origin, although no proof of this has been found.

MANNING HELD ON NEW CHARGE

Police Say He Failed to Reveal Identity of Murderess

LAWYER FORCES "SHOW DOWN"

Accusation of Accessory to Crime Against Husband of Slain Woman Is Not Pressed—His Sister Admits Slayer's Hair Was Cut Just Previous to Killing of Woman

Newark, N. J., Feb. 11.—Charles I. Manning of Verona, whose wife was murdered in her Newark home by his 20-year-old affinity, Miss Hazel Herdman, was held on an affidavit charging him with having failed to tell the police authorities of the murderess' identity. Mrs. Sadie Garrabrant, his sister, was held on a similar charge. Bail was fixed at $5000.

Chief of Police Long said he would charge Manning with being an accessory before and after the fact. After he made this statement Frank McDermit, a lawyer, announced that unless a charge was at once made he would get a writ of habeas corpus for Manning.

James Manning, brother of Charles, authorized McDermit to take any action necessary to force a "showdown" by the police. Then, instead of bringing the serious charge he had promised to make, Long delegated Captain of Detectives Tuite to draw up an affidavit stating that the police had "information that Manning and his sister had not communicated the identity of his wife's murderess to a justice of the peace."

Such neglect, under the New Jersey law, is a misdemeanor, punishable by three years in prison and a fine of $1000.

The trap the detectives relied upon in framing their charge against Manning was sprung on Mrs. Garrabrant. Detectives who viewed the body of Miss Herdman noticed that her hair had been cut short. They were told at the Mountainside hospital, where she died a suicide, that her hair had been trimmed before she entered the institution.

Mrs. Garrabrant readily admitted she had found the girl's hair in the room she occupied in her home. Miss Herdman roomed there occasionally, while Manning made his permanent home with his sister. Mrs. Garrabrant said she believed Hazel wanted to disguise herself as a man.

Manning told the detectives his sister had mentioned to him that Hazel had confessed "having done a terrible act."

afternoon because she detected the odor of liquor when I came home for lunch," Manning told his lawyer, "and when my sister said Hazel told her she had done 'something dreadful' I naturally supposed she meant the slapping, so I laughed at her."

Manning was released on $5000 bail. The police do not allege that he had prior knowledge of the crime. The Herdman girl's motive in killing Mrs. Manning was the latter's refusal to divorce her husband, whom the girl wished to marry.

GLYNN QUITS MURPHY

Won't Follow One-Man Sentiment In Making Appointments

Albany, Feb. 11.—Fresh from his conference with President Wilson, Governor Glynn declared his independence of Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall.

Appointments hereafter in New York county and every other county in the state, the governor declared, will have to meet the approval of the Democratic sentiment rather than that of any one man.

That President Wilson and the governor are in perfect accord over the plans for the reorganization of the party was vouchsafed by the governor. Further than that Glynn refused to discuss his meeting with the president.

It is said Comiskey was near death, but that heroic treatment by Professor Bastianelli and Dr. Jones saved his life.

Sweet Simplification

No wonder that we tango now
In gay and graceful pride
While care forsakes the human brow,
Since life is simplified.

Of great reforms we love to tell
In tones of joy profound.
We do not have to learn to spell;
We make words up by sound.

We write no letters to a friend;
The toil is much too hard.
It is sufficient if we send
A pretty picture card.

We really do not care to walk;
It's easier far to ride.
It's merely tango, tea and talk
Since life is simplified.

THE ROOSEVELT SMILE IN ANCIENT SCULPTURE.

Found In Ruins of Vanished City, Center of Maya Civilization.

The original of the "Roosevelt smile" has been discovered in the ruins of Quirigua, in the republic of Guatemala, fifty-seven miles from the Caribbean sea, writes Sylvanus Griswold Morley to the National Geographic society at Washington. Quirigua, he says, was one of the older centers of the great Maya civilization.

"Judging from the dated monuments which were erected in its several courts and plazas, this ancient American metropolis was abandoned during the first half of the sixth century A. D.," he says. "Toward the close of the sixth century the Mayas moved out from the older centers of their civilization and migrated into Yucatan. Here in the stress of colonizing a new and unfamiliar land the remembrance of their former homes gradually faded until Quirigua became only a memory.

"The exterior of one of the buildings recently unearthed was decorated with a curious sculptural mosaic. This design, a variation of the humorous head motive found throughout the Maya area, occurs at each of the four corners and in the middle of the back and side walls.

"In this particular example the incisor teeth are as prominent as Colonel Roosevelt's, and the first visitors who saw the head immediately called it the original Roosevelt smile."

A corporation interested in fruit cultivation purchased land in this vicinity, and through an arrangement with the School of American Archaeology the systematic study of the ruins was undertaken. A dense tropical vegetation had overgrown the city, overthrowing its temples and palaces and reducing them to shapeless mounds. Public squares, once teeming with the life of a populous community, had become the haunt of the tiger, peccary, monkey, anteater and the infinite host of the tropical forest. As the work of excavation proceeded there gradually developed the ground plan of what had originally been an imposing temple.

More than 200 hieroglyphics have been discovered, but of these only about fifty have been deciphered. All deal with some phase of the calendar.

MOON AS LIGHT SUBSTITUTE.

Unique Economy Is Proposed For United States Army Posts.

Many interesting items are contained in the report of the quartermaster corps of the army for 1913. One is a plan which, if borne out by actual practice, will decrease Uncle Sam's light bill by $25,000 for the fiscal year 1914.

Moonlight is to be the economizer, and if the present plans be carried out the thousands of electric lights at the army posts scattered throughout the country will be extinguished on the nights the moon is shining. Exceptions will be made in regard to the lights within the quarters where business requiring light is being carried on, but all lights illuminating the neighborhood and exterior of the posts will be extinguished.

The report also offers a suggestion that, if carried out, will insure the soldiers enough to eat in case in time of war the regular army cooks should be found missing from the ranks. The suggestion calls for a school to be located at Fort Sam Houston which will accommodate thirty-six pupils in the study of cooking, and these men, when prepared, are to be called upon in emergency cases.

Canal Could Float a Big Ship Now.

The Panama canal has reached such a condition of completion that a large ocean steamer could now pass through, according to Colonel Goethals. There is thirty-five feet depth of water through the Culebra cut and the Cucaracha slide, and it is Colonel Goethals' intention to send a Panama railroad steamer through the canal in April.

NINE CENTS A DAY FOR TWO.

Marcus M. Wood, a philosopher who believed that he had solved the problem of economical living, is dead at Webster, Mass., aged seventy-four.

Mr. Wood and his wife, who survives him, spent an average of 9 cents a day for meals. A typical three cent meal of this couple consisted of shredded salt codfish prepared with milk, potatoes, bread made of Indian meal mixed with raisins, boiled barley and crabapple jelly.

BILL CURING LOBBY EVILS IS PASSED

Measure Penalizing Over-Activity Endorsed by Senate

Washington, Feb. 11.—Senator Cummins' bill, designed to cure some of the evils disclosed by the lobby investigation last summer, was passed by the senate without debate.

It would provide heavy penalties for impersonators of members of congress or other federal officials and for over-active lobbyists.

When the bill was called up for passage, Senator Overman, who was chairman of the lobby committee, said perhaps most of the senators would recognize the bill as arising out of the testimony of David H. Lamar. There was no further discussion.

SENTENCE IS REVOKED

Kaufman Repudiates "Confession" Made to Boston Police Sergeant

Boston, Feb. 11.—August Kaufman, sentenced to a term of from four to seven years in state prison for breaking into the Rhodes Bros.' store, swore to Judge Chase in the superior court that he had made no confession to Police Sergeant Anderson after he had been sentenced.

On account of the alleged confession, in which, Anderson claimed, Kaufman admitted his guilt in ten to a dozen burglaries, Kaufman was brought into court again and Chase revoked the sentence previously imposed and withheld his decision for two weeks to allow an investigation.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham the able first vice president of the Quincy Women's club presided Tuesday afternoon at the regular meeting of the club held at Quincy Music hall. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith president was present but unable to preside as she was to take part in the dramatics which followed the business meeting.

Reports were given by the clerk and treasurer. Among the business presented was the change of bylaws regarding the guest privilege for the annual dramatics and musicale and it was voted to extend unlimited guest privilege to the capacity of the hall at the discretion of executive board. It was also voted to do away with the Woman's Exchange at the end of the year because of lack of interest. For the balance of the season the useful articles would be on sale by the committee.

Owing to the death of Mrs. Charles L. Seavey chairman of the Art and Arts and Crafts committee, Mrs. Edward S. Tenney was elected subchairman of the committee, and Mrs. Frank J. At the close of the business Mrs. Pinkham extended greetings to club members and guests after which there was a brief intermission before the play during which Miss Agnes R. Ruggles rendered several piano solos and also played between the acts. A report of the play will be found in another column.

.MASSACHUSETTS FEDERATION..

About a thousand women were in attendance Feb. 6 at the midwinter meeting of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's clubs in the Second church, Dorchester. The Dorchester Woman's club was the hostess club and greetings were extended by their president Mrs. Arthur H. Merritt.

Mrs. George Winslow Perkins responded for the Federation, Miss Georgie A. Bacon of Worcester, ex-president of the Federation, spoke of the plans for the biennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held in Chicago next June. The Massachusetts delegation will have headquarters in Hotel Congress. Miss Bacon is a director in the General Federation.

New clubs were presented as follows: Brewster Woman's Club, Mrs. Eliza M. Foster, president; Squantum Woman's Club, Mrs. Jessie Parker Reed, president, Boston Publicity club, Mrs. George B. Gallup, president.

Announcement was made of a large educational enterprise to be held in Mechanic's Building, Boston, next fall, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the permanent fund to carry on Federation work. It is to take the form of a domestic science and pure food exposition, Oct. 5 to 31.

An effort will be made to interest all the women's clubs in Massachusetts in pure food; to show the power of the women's clubs in the community and to show what they are trying to do with a permanent fund. The sponsor of this exposition is the Boston Retail Grocers' Association. The policy is in the hands of the Massachusetts State Federation. "This enterprise," said Miss Bacon, "is in advance of the law, and I think it is opportune, for there is a National movement for uniform pure food laws. All exhibits will have to measure up to the Westfield standard. We will have pure food, not legal food. The arrangements are in the hands of a governing board, Mrs. George W. Perkins of Roxbury, chairman: Miss Bacon of Worcester, vice chairman and Mrs. Henry W. Breed of Lynn, treasurer.

Mrs. George B. Gallup, president of the Boston Publicity Club, spoke of a movement to promote truthful advertising, and asked that each club in the Federation appoint a committee on publicity to cooperate in this movement.

Mrs. Esther M. Andrews, chairman of the Legislative department, presented legislative measures of especial interest to clubwomen, and which were recommended by the executive board.

The address of the morning session was by Hon. W. Cameron Forbes, who spoke on "The Responsibility of the United States in the Philippine Islands." Following the intermission an organ recital by Charles P. Scott, opened the afternoon session. Miss Angela Morgan read from her own poems, "God's Whip," "Today," and "The Housewife's Hymn." An address by Norman Hapgood on "The Social Significance of Contemporary Fiction and Drama" brought the programme to an end.

Considerable interest was created in the endowment fund for the National Federation and an effort made to raise the $10,000 asked for from Massachusetts. Mrs. Dennison of Framingham reported the fund to date to be $7,166.15. Pledges and a collection during the afternoon raised over $1,250 so that the $10,000 goal is now very near.

THE BIENNIAL.

The Auditorium theatre, which seats four thousand, has been engaged for the Chicago biennial meetings to which the thoughts of a million club women are turning. The second floor of the Auditorium Hotel in the same building will be used by the committees. Several halls have also been engaged for smaller meetings.

There is a wealth of good things being prepared by the General Federation programme committee, of which Mrs. Samuel B. Sneath is chairman. That there will be a correlation of interests in the afternoon sessions with the inspirational addresses of the morning will be of immense value to the delegates, enabling each to select what she is most interested in and hear the discussion of the topic in the afternoon ere the freshness of memory is somewhat dimmed by the lapse of time.

The conservation department, Mrs. Emmons Crocker of Fitchburg, chairman, promises an address by Gifford Pinchot, and Mrs. Crocker has invited each State president to speak for two minutes upon some special point of conservation work or upon the needs of her State.

The subject of civil service reform will be handled by Mrs. Imogene B. Oakley of Philadelphia, who is national chairman of that department and who will conduct the afternoon conference, which will have as its general topic, "How best to increase the interest in efficient local government." Several members of the General Federation civil service reform department wil speak briefly on this subject and the discussion will be general.

The music department, of which Mrs. Maxwell of Ohio, is chairman, will have in charge the music to be rendered in connection with the memorial services to Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, to be held on Sunday afternoon.

On President's night the different State presidents are asked to speak on their State's greatest need.

D. A. R. OF WOLLASTON.

Mrs. Charles J. O'Malley of Atlantic was the hostess of the Abigail Phillips Quincy chapter D. A. R. of Wollaston at its February meeting, the regent Mrs. E. E. Jameson presiding. The corresponding secretary Mrs. C. A. Pinkham read a letter from Mrs. Titus of the D. R. regarding Mrs. Caroline Torrey Couchier in whom the chapter was much interested, in which Mrs. Titus told of the plan for removing her to a Home in Roxbury. Her death occurred before this was possible. The regent and the corresponding secretary represented our chapter at the laying away of Mrs. Couchier.

Letters were also read from two members of the chapter, Mrs. Warner now residing in New York, and Mrs. William M. Chase who had reached Japan in her tour abroad.

Mrs. G. B. Damon of the entertainment committee called attention to the exhibit of antiques to be held at the home of Mrs. E. O. Woodward 34 Elm avenue the afternoon and evening of Feb. 20, open to the public.

The chapter is to have its "Bylaws" printed so that each member may have a copy. Mesdames Jones, Sayward and Sargent have the matter in charge. The proceeds of the concert held in November was added to the building fund. This fund is growing a little each year.

Mrs. O'Malley gave a pleasant surprise when her little daughter brought to each one a badge with the name of the chapter and the D. A. R. seal upon it, as a souvenir of the occasion.

The paper of the afternoon—one of the reciprocity papers entitled "A Group of Mass. Heroines" was read by Mrs. Charles Chase.

Lunch was served by the hostess at small tables scattered about the rooms and the small son of the family furnished music during the repast.

NERVOUS WOMEN

Made Strong by Vinol.

A case has just come to our attention from St. Augustine, Fla. Mrs. W. B. Mamocy had suffered for two years from nervous prostration and indigestion. She had no appetite and was miserable. After trying different medicines and doctors without benefit she saw Vinol advertised and tried it. Her appetite returned, nervousness disappeared and she was soon strong and well as ever.

Weakness may be caused by a run-down condition, mal-assimilation of food, lack of iron in the blood or a result of sickness.

Whatever the cause, we want to say to every person who needs strength, you need Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, as it is the most efficient strength creator we have in our store.

It is the medicinal elements of the cods' livers contained in Vinol aided by the blood making and strengthening properties of tonic iron which makes it so successful and we will return your money if it does not help you. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

ENGAGEMENT PARTY.

The engagement of Miss Lillian Sutherburg of Rawson road and Prof. Henry W. Lawrence, Jr. of New York was announced Tuesday evening at a party given at the bride's home to fourteen of her young lady friends composing the members of the Delta Sigma club, and a few close friends. Miss Sutherburg, being the fourth member of the club to announce her engagement.

The tables were very prettily decorated with hearts and cupids the centrepiece being a basket of violets sent by the groom to the lady friends each bunch containing a heart which concealed cards with the two names. The groom also sent a telegram of greeting to the young ladies.

A ring was presented to the prospective bride by a small boy representing cupid.

Miss Sutherburg is a graduate of the Quincy High school in the class of '09 and the groom is a graduate of Yale in the class of '06 and of the University of Paris '09, and is now one of the professors at Dartmouth college.

No date has been set for the wedding but it will probably be the coming fall.

SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Parents of school children should be careful these cold days not to allow them to leave home too early. The schoolhouses are not open until fifteen minutes before the session begins. The janitors are instructed to be on the lookout for children who arrive ahead of time in cold weather and admit them into the basement, but the responsibility ought not to be left to the janitors, faithful and vigilant though they are. If you see little children standing outside the school on a cold day waiting for the doors to open charge it up to the mothers for not keeping them at home until the right time arrives for letting them go. The school authorities cannot do everything. The homes must retain some responsibility.

MRS. DANIEL O'CONNELL.

Many long time friends attended the funeral of Nora O'Connell, widow of Daniel O'Connell, and mother of Patrolman John O'Connell of Milton, which was held from her late home at 6 O'Connell avenue this morning. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. Marys church of which Rev. Fr. Thomas R. McCoy was celebrant, Rev. Fr. J. Cuddahy, deacon and Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy sub deacon. Music was the Gregorian chant by the regular choir under the direction of Miss Frances Cronin, organist. There was a profusion of floral tributes. The bearers were Cornelius Crowley, William Duane, Jeremiah Leary, Cornelius Collins, Jeremiah Corcoran and Michael Gearey. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

DENIES RESPONSIBILITY

Merchants and Miners Says Nantucket's Bow Gives Evidence

Norfolk, Feb. 11.—The Merchants and Miners' Transportation company filed in the United States court here its petition for a limitation of liability following the $1,000,000 libel brought against its steamer Nantucket, which is alleged to have rammed and sunk the Old Dominion liner Monroe with the loss of forty-one lives, the Monroe and her cargo.

The Merchants and Miners' emphasizes its contention that the fast speed of the Monroe is conclusively shown by the violent manner in which the bow of the Nantucket is wrenched to starboard, which can only be explained, it says, by the rapid progress of the Monroe in that direction at the time of the crash.

Belinda, a lodging-house slavey
Mrs. Frank A. Emery

Act I.—Drawing-room at Middlewick's country house in England; Act II.—The Terrace at Sir Geoffrey's country house; Act III.—Mrs. Patchem's third-floor back, London.

All the parts were taken by club members except that of Sir Champney. Owing to the death of Mrs. Seavey, and also to Miss Mary Perkins being unable to continue rehearsals, Miss Annie Deane of Weymouth who coached the play consented to take the role at ten days notice and added much to the success of the performance.

As the arrogant county magnate in make-up and acting Miss Deane was capital. Her familiarity with amateur theatricals makes her almost a professional when it comes to acting and hers was a well rounded performance.

Mrs. Wilson Marsh as Talbot, Sir Champney's son, interpreted the part most cleverly in make-up and mannerisms. The slow drawl and vacant stare called for continuous acting.

As Perkyn Middlewick a retired butterman Miss Randall made a decided hit and was perhaps the favorite with the audience if one can pick out a particular star in such galaxy of stars. Her make-up was fine as was also her interpretation of the good hearted country butterman who had made lots of money and was making a gentleman of his son.

As the son, Charles Middlewick, Mrs. Mitchell, was a handsome young man, very alert, and a contrast to his sleepy looking friend Talbot Champneys. The part was well taken by Mrs. Mitchell, but gave little opportunity for special acting which perhaps made it one of the more difficult roles to enact.

Mrs. Edward B. Marsh as Kempster, Sir Geoffrey's man servant, did not have a lengthy part in the play but carried the part well as did Mrs. Litchfield as the butler.

Mrs. Fenner and Mrs. Ryder as Violet Melrose the heiress and Mary Melrose the poor cousin gave good interpretations of the young ladies with whom the young men fell in love. They were charming to look upon and carried their parts well.

Mrs. Smith as Clarissa Champneys gave a fine interpretation of the part. She looked and acted the part, and was always a pleasant contrast to her arrogant brother, with a kindly thought for the butterman and "our boys."

Last, but by no means least was Belinda the lodging house slavey interpreted by Mrs. Emery. Poorly clothed, smooched of face, and hard worked, yet happy and kindly disposed toward "our boys" who occupied the attic of the lodging house. The part was exceedingly well done, not overdrawn but with a clever understanding of the part.

The play "Our Boys" had to do with two fathers, one titled, the other rich and uneducated, each with one son who were given every advantage. The play opens with the return of the boys from foreign travel. The boys fall in love with the wrong girls, that is in their fathers' opinion, and leave home to carve out their own fortunes. They do not succeed very well financially and live in an attic chamber of a London lodging house where their fathers and sweethearts finally find them. All is forgiven and happiness reigns.

It's an old plot but the story as told by our local actors made it an entertaining and one of the most pleasing afternoons ever given by the Quincy Women's Club. Nothing is quite so attractive as a play given by home talent for to see how ones friends dress and act the part is always a source of entertainment. "Our Boys" called for six men's parts being taken by women and it is needless to say they were all well dressed for the cast. Several changes were necessary in the different scenes but whether costumed for day or evening they were fine looking men. And the ladies too, were charming.

A bread of superlative excellence, carefully baked and wrapped in waxed tissue for your protection.

THE K. OF C. MATCHES

Avery and Fallon Teams Were Victorious

Captain Paul Averys quintette boosted the record team total of 1298, held by Captain Al Thompsons team, by one pin in theregular Knights of Columbus league matches at the City Square alleys Tuesday night, defeated the bowlers captained by Russell Sullivan who were pressing them for first place and strengthened their claim to the championship. The evening rolloff resulted further in Captain Thomas Fallons boys settling in second place through four points taken from the Captain Coyle hitters which left the latter comfortably situated in the cellar position.

With but two more matches to roll there still exists the possibility of Captain Avery's team being ousted from first place, and it rests with the Fallons, their opponents Thursday night. The Averys are displaying fine form and will apparently win the title.

The standing is:

	Won	Lost
Averys	25	15
Fallons	20	20
Sullivans	19	21
Coyles	16	24

In the match between the leaders, the Sullivans took the first string by one pin but lost out on the remaining two and total. Avery, rolling at anchor got 101 in his second which was high single of the evening.

QUINCY HIGH 26 REVERE HIGH 14

Quincy defeated Revere 26 to 14 in an interscholastic league basket ball game in the High school gymnasium Tuesday afternoon, and the Juniors beat the Freshmen 37 to 7. The games were witnessed by an enthusiastic gallery of students.

The feature of the league game was the playing of Earl Bates who secured six baskets from all kinds of positions. Paige was out of the game because of the mumps, and Hamlin through an injury to his left arm.

Revere was dangerous for a few minutes during the second period, but the flashy work by Bates put their team on the defensive. Revere were very poor on shooting.

The Juniors through the work of Roache, Morrison and Davis were able to run away with the Freshmen. The feature of the game was the throwing of a bakset by Midget LeCain while he was covered by Giraffe Safford.

The Y. M. C. A. first team will endeavor to reverse the decision tonight when the North Carolina players line up for second game of the season. In December the sailors defeated the Y. M. C. A. team in a great game the final score being 24 to 22.

Norfolk county probate court was held in Quincy today and will be reported in the Daily Ledger tomorrow.

SHOCKS STIR NEW ENGLAND

Earthquake From Southern Connecticut to Canada

PEOPLE THROWN INTO TERROR

Eight-Minute Record Shown by Seismograph at Harvard University—New York State and Canada Also Feel Tremors Which Rock Buildings and Move Furniture

Boston, Feb. 11.—Buildings were rocked, furniture was moved, windows were broken and thousands of people were thrown into terror by earthquake shocks which vibrated New England in places ranging from southern Connecticut to the Canadian line and as near Boston as Cambridge and Holyoke. The disturbance was also felt in New York state.

The tremors extended to Montreal, where a thirty-second vibration was felt.

Not only was the shock recorded very distinctly by the seismograph in the basement of the Agassiz museum of Harvard college, but the museum building itself was shaken.

Professor Woodworth said it was the severest shock recorded by the Harvard instrument since the seismograph station was set up in 1908. The vibrations lasted a total of eight minutes and thirty-seven seconds.

At Burlington, Vt., the shock lasted thirty seconds. The taller buildings in the city swayed to such a marked degree that a guest at the Sherwood hotel was thrown from a couch to the floor.

At Holyoke there was a distinct quiver of the earth. Buildings shook, but no damage was reported.

At Hartford the shock was distinctly felt in the outlying sections of the city. No damage was done there.

Buildings at Winsted, Conn., rocked perceptibly and furniture and chairs were moved by the shocks. The first shock was followed immediately by two others. All were pronounced.

At the United States weather bureau in New Haven two distinct shocks were felt. In all the tall office buildings of the city shocks were felt. Many reports from the outskirts of the city indicated that the shock was felt in all sections.

A distinct shock was felt in all parts of Bridgeport, Conn. In some sections dishes were shaken down by the vibration of houses.

Distinct earthquake shocks were felt at Utica, N. Y. In some sections of the city houses were rocked.

The shock was plainly felt in New York city, but was at first supposed to be from the concussion of an explosion.

The shocks were felt in several quarters of Albany and in the capitol the desk of Speaker Sweet of the assembly was moved an inch. In other departments of the state buildings the shocks were distinctly felt. Water coolers were overturned and chairs were upset.

At Schenectay, less than twenty miles from Albany, the ground rocked with such intensity that persons in office buildings reported they had nearly been thrown from their chairs.

The shocks were felt as far west as Pennsylvania. Scranton buildings were shaken both in the city and in the surrounding country.

Dispatches from Canadian points show that the shock was general and severe in that section. In Verdue, a suburb of Montreal, hundreds of persons rushed from their homes in panic.

The seismograph in McGill university at Montreal was violently agitated by the shock, which lasted a minute and a half by the instrument.

At Ottawa severe tremors were felt. In parliament building pictures were shaken from the walls, tables and desks were overturned, and buildings rocked upon their foundations. Telephone poles were shaken down on the outskirts of the city, and telephone communication to some districts was interrupted. Residents of the outskirts were panic stricken and fled from their homes into the open fields. Members of parliament left their desks and ran bareheaded into the streets.

Dispatches from Montreal say the shock was distinct in that territory.

Scientists say the quake was probably originated in the famous "Logan fault" in the St. Lawrence valley, a fracture of the earth's surface that has long been known to geologists, and from which smaller fractures are believed to extend down the Connecticut valley and into New York.

The only fatality known to have been caused by this far-reaching earth-disturbance was in Binghamton, N. Y., where the quake caused a trench to cave in, crushing a laborer to death.

SERIOUS RIOTS IN TOKIO

Refusal to Push Naval Investigation Causes Demonstrations

Tokio, Feb. 11.—Rioting in the streets of Tokio, collisions between the police and the populace, numbers hurt and many arrests were the climax to a turbulent day both inside and outside the Japanese parliament.

The diet rejected, by 205 votes against 164, a resolution of want of confidence in the government, introduced as a protest against the attitude of the cabinet in connection with the alleged receipt of illicit commissions by Japanese naval officers for influencing the allotment of admiralty contracts in favor of a German firm.

While the session was in progress great crowds packed the neighboring streets. The people, declaring the cabinet should be impeached, marched toward the house of parliament, overturning jinrickshas and attacking several government officials on their way.

At the entrance to the diet they came into collision with the police and in the course of the struggle the gate was broken down and many people were injured. The leaders were arrested.

TRICKS LONDON POLICE

Mrs. Pankhurst Beguiles Them Into Arresting a "Dummy"

London, Feb. 11.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst beguiled the police last night into a false arrest. She addressed a crowd from the window of her temporary residence. She taunted the government with cowardice and announced that she was coming into the street and challenged the police to rearrest her.

Forthwith a woman emerged from the house; the crowd surged around to protect her, and a lively scuffle ensued. The woman was arrested and with seven others was taken to a police station. There the police discovered the woman was attired to represent Mrs. Pankhurst.

All those arrested were armed with clubs. They will be charged with obstruction and assault.

TWO AIDES ADMIT $500,000 SWINDLE

Former New York Merchant on Trial on Fraud Charge

New York, Feb. 11.—William H. Cooper, formerly a merchant of note in this city, was denounced as a swindler in the United States district court. It was alleged that he made more than $500,000 in the sale of fake mortgage bonds which netted about $1000 at a receiver's sale.

Cooper was the only one of four defendants brought to trial on the charge of using the mails to defraud. Claude J. Van Slyke, who acted as Cooper's representative, pleaded guilty to the charge and so did James A. Robinson, an advertising agent. Ernest Sharp was the fourth man indicted.

CITY OFFICIALS AT ODDS

Public Works Head Orders Laborers to Disobey Mayor

Portsmouth, N. H., Feb. 11.—James W. Barrett, superintendent of public works, caused a stir in municipal circles when he informed the workmen in the street, sewer and water divisions he would discharge every one who obeyed an order from Mayor Yeaton or any other city official than himself and his assistants and posted orders to that effect. This was the result of the mayor picking out a job for some street laborers.

The mayor and superintendent have been at odds since the mayor took office on Jan. 1. The mayor has asked the court to declare Barrett's place vacant on the commission.

HOME RULE QUESTION

King Says It Must Be Handled In Spirit of Mutual Concession

London, Feb. 11.—Two subjects—those relating to the recent conference on safety of life at sea and to home rule for Ireland—stood out in King George's speech from the throne at the opening of parliament.

In regard to home rule for Ireland, which for the moment is the subject of paramount imperial importance, the king by the emphasis of his words and his manner indicated his personal realization of the gravity of the situation. He said:

"I regret that the efforts which have been made to arrive at a solution by agreement of the problems connected with the government of Ireland have so far not succeeded.

"In a matter in which the hopes and fears of so many of my subjects are keenly concerned, and which, unless handled now with foresight and judgment and in a spirit of mutual concession, threatens grave future difficulties, it is my most earnest wish that the good will and co-operation of men of all parties and creeds may heal the dissension and lay the foundations of a lasting settlement."

The Poorhouse Girl

A Victim of Aphasia

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"Selina Dustin's taken a girl from the poorhouse," remarked Elsie Sayles to the assembled Ladies' Aid society.

Fourteen needles were suspended in midair, and twenty-eight eyes sought Elsie's countenance.

"Not the girl that was found sitting by Willow pond last month, the one who couldn't remember her name?" questioned Mrs. Deacon Oliver.

"I guess it's the same one—poor, michin' looking critter," replied Mrs. Sayles briskly. "Looks like she had consumption."

"I saw her the day we went up to the poorhouse to entertain the paupers," broke in Angeline Petty. "I thought she was real pretty. She had nice blue eyes."

"Angeline's always looking at people's eyes," remarked Fanny Lawson. "What do you think, girls—somebody told me something one of the old men at the poorhouse said after we'd gone away that day!"

"What did he say?" asked Mrs. Deacon Oliver. "I knew they was real pleased at our taking the trouble to entertain them."

Fanny laughed maliciously.

"He said they felt sorry for us—the Ladies' Aid, mind you, girls—and that they were coming down to entertain us some day."

"Why is he sorry for us?" asked Angeline curiously.

"He says we're 'pauper minded.'" Fanny exploded this bombshell and folded up her work preparatory to going home.

"Pauper minded!" they shrieked in chorus. "What does he mean?"

"Give it up. Goodby, all!" said Miss Lawson, with an airy wave of her hand.

"Do you suppose she made it up?" asked Elsie Sayles after Fanny's trim figure had passed through the front gate.

"She ain't smart enough. She don't know the meaning of pauper minded," snapped Mrs. Oliver crossly. She had been the one to inaugurate a monthly day of entertainment for the benefit of the inmates of the county almshouse, and she had a real grievance not only against the aged man who had voiced the unhappy opinion, but against the institution and all its inmates.

"If that's all the gratitude them paupers have got I guess I won't take no notice of Selina Dustin's poorhouse girl," she added severely.

Angeline Petty moved indolently in her chair.

"I'm going to call on her and ask her to come to Sunday school," she remarked.

"Anybody want to come with me to call on the poorhouse girl?" she asked, tucking her work into the ample black bag in her lap and rising to go.

Mrs. Petty sniffed audibly.

"Angeline, you'll go on your own responsibility," she protested.

"I'm not afraid," retorted Angeline quietly. "None of my relations died in the almshouse. I ain't a bit sensitive about calling on that girl. She's young, and she's nice, even if she is poor and not exactly right in her head. It ain't her fault that she can't remember her name, is it?"

"What do they call her?" asked Mrs. Oliver stiffly.

"Mary Jones. Well, I've got to go all alone, I see. Ma, don't look so sick over it. 'Tain't as if I was going to elope." Angeline waved a plump hand at her faintly smiling parent and waddled comfortably out of the room and down the path to the gate.

At the gate she paused for a few moments and looked uncertainly up and down the road, and then, as if suddenly coming to a decision, Angeline crossed the road and plunged into the footpath that led through the oak woods to the crossroads where Selina Dustin lived in a long white house half hidden among locust trees and lilac bushes.

In Selina Dustin's front yard Mary Jones was sitting on the circular bench under the largest locust tree. She was delicately fair, with deep blue eyes and little white hands that looked as if they had never done a day's hard work. The hands were idly folded on the lap of her blue cotton dress.

"She's fleshing up and growing prettier every day," said Angeline to Selina Dustin, who was sitting on the side porch.

"I ain't the only one who thinks so," murmured Selina, with a satisfied smile at the graceful form under the tree.

"What do you mean?" asked Angelina, sinking into a chair.

"I mean that Raymond Ellis is sweet on her. Don't tell any one, Angeline," pleaded Selina softly. "If you do, sure as fate some of them old tabby cats will talk about her."

"Raymond Ellis!" repeated Angeline dazedly. "Why, Selina, he's never taken notice of a Little River girl before. He's so lofty and proud."

"He's been here a dozen times, spang up to the front door, and asked for her like a gentleman. Nothing sneaking and underhanded about Judge Ellis' boy," said Selina warmly. "I 'lowed her to entertain him in the parlor, and she played on the old pianner and sang to him in the sweetest voice you ever heard. Sung in some furrin langwidge too!

"Before he went home Raymond came out into the sitting room where I was and he ses to me: 'Miss Dustin, we got to find out about Miss Jones; she's refined and educated, and it's evident that she comes from nice people. Can't you help her remember her name?'

"And I faced him and I says sharply, 'What business is it of yours, Raymond Ellis?'"

"What did he say?" whispered Angeline eagerly.

"He flushed up and looked handsomer than ever, but he spoke firm. 'It's my business, because I'm going to marry her if she'll have me, but I want to give her all the chance there is to find out about her folks if she can remember.' So he told me he was going to bring down a great specialist from the city who would examine her. I told him to go along and do it, but I don't know, Angeline, I hope I'm doing right."

"He's a noble fellow," said Angeline, wiping away a tear. "I came to call on her and ask her to come to Sunday school," she went on.

"She'll be glad to go, Angeline. It's made me real mad to see how the village girls are acting about Mary. It ain't Christian-like."

"They'll get over it as soon as they know her better," said Angeline leniently. "I'm going down to talk to her."

The next Sunday Mary Jones went to Sunday school with Angeline Petty. She wore a plain white lawn dress, and her hat was a cheap white straw trimmed with pink roses. The village choir flushed resentfully when the stranger's trained soprano rose high and sweet above their untutored voices.

This fact, together with the marked attentions of Raymond Ellis to the "poorhouse girl," was the cause of bitter jealousy among the Little River girls, and after she had been snubbed several times Mary Jones remained away from church and Sunday school, much to the indignation of Angeline Petty and her mother, who brought the matter before the members of the Ladies' Aid society.

"There's only one thing you can do to wipe out the sign of pride and jealousy that's at the bottom of your treating Mary so meanly," cried Angeline, stirred out of her wonted calmness, "and that is to gather your daughters and come and call upon Mary Jones. There ain't no other way!"

"If we don't do it I guess we'll be pauper minded," added Mrs. Petty grimly, for she had asked the minister the meaning of the term.

Late that afternoon a company of twenty women and girls trailed along the narrow path through the oak wood and came to Selina Dustin's house on the crossroad. Just as the last one had passed through the gate and the head of the delegation reached the steps of the porch the front door opened and four people came out.

Miss Selina Dustin, Mary Jones, Raymond Ellis and an elderly man of dignified appearance stood on the porch and stared in surprise at the women and girls gathered on the lawn.

"We came to call on Mary Jones," said Angeline rather weakly.

Mary Jones flashed down the steps and threw her arms around Angeline's neck.

"You dear, dear thing!" she cried warmly. "You have been so kind to me, the little poorhouse girl!" She lifted her head and looked tearfully around the softened faces of the women. "I know you will all be glad to hear my good news. I can remember who I am!"

Angeline kissed her. "I guess it don't matter much who you are, dear," she said tenderly. "It's what you are that has suited me right along."

The poorhouse girl kissed Angeline again and then drew that flustered lady up to the piazza, where she stood with an arm around Selina and Angeline. Her fair face was radiant with joy, and it seemed reflected in Raymond Ellis' face and in the countenance of the great brain specialist.

"I want to tell you all how I happened to come here," began Mary Jones. "Dr. Wainwright says I am the victim of aphasia, caused by pressure on the brain from a fall I received some time ago. You see, I was motoring through here with a party of friends. I was riding in the rumble seat, and in some way or other I fell off and was not missed until they were miles away. I must have wandered away at once, for I walked and walked until my shoes were almost worn out, and I had spent most of my money for food and night's lodging at an inn. I couldn't remember what had happened to me. I couldn't remember my name or where I lived. Then I came to Little River, somebody found me, and I was committed to your almshouse. Then dear Miss Selina Dustin found me and brought me here, not so much because I could help her, but because she was sorry for me.

"Dr. Wainwright has broken the spell of silence that has oppressed my mind. I have remembered my name and my people, and tomorrow I am going home." She clasped her hands joyously.

"But she is coming back some day as my wife," said Raymond Ellis, who had wooed a poorhouse girl and found a wife in the person of Marjorie Dale, the daughter of a New York merchant, who had sought far and wide for his missing child.

And Angeline Petty and Selina Dustin fell on each other's neck and wept for joy, while the Ladies' Aid society filed past Marjorie Dale and tendered awkward congratulations on her restoration to health and name.

And now not one of them begrudges Angeline or Selina her intimacy and friendship with Raymond Ellis' beautiful young wife.

WIRELESS SYSTEM OF TELEGRAPHY INSTALLED ON MOVING TRAINS

Will Make Railroad Travel Safer In Future.

Experiments In Sending of Messages Very Successful.

WIRELESS telegraphy for the moving train promises to make railroad travel safer in the future. The beginning of this service was started but the other day on the Buffalo limited of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad.

There are plenty of examples of what the wireless has done for ocean going shipping in the way of spreading news, in giving helpful warnings and in calling succor from afar to injured ships. Its application to railroading will be for a somewhat different purpose.

The block-signal system now commonly adopted in combination with track contacts has done wonders in reducing the risk of accidents. The towermen are stationed every few miles, and unless something goes wrong inside the block the train must clear each zone within a certain time. When it does not do so the watcher at the far end of the block knows that something is amiss. But what? The answer may be one of a score of things, and the towermen are necessarily in ignorance until some one from the halted train brings the news. Then, and only then, the railroad people at distant points can be reached by telegraph and the proper steps taken to meet the emergency.

The trainman carrying the message to the block tower may have to cover a distance of a couple of miles. This is not so bad in daylight and in good weather, but what of the situation when there is a driving snowstorm or ice covers the ground? To reach the tower to call for assistance then becomes a desperately long struggle and the cause of delay that may imperil many lives.

Again, it happens every now and then that an engineer fails to see cautionary signals which should make him slacken speed or bring his train to a standstill. The result may be a collision, with loss of life.

It will therefore be seen how desirable it is that each train should have its own means of creating about it a cautionary zone quite independently of the fixed track and block signals, this zone to be communicable to other trains directly, in this fashion producing a safety system within a safety system and one that would be immediately available at every point along the line.

This is not in theory a novelty, but practical accomplishment has had to contend with many obstacles. Something akin to this was evolved years ago in the form of a signal telegraph which made use of track contacts at frequent points or of magnetic impulses aroused at stated intervals, but the arch enemy was the weather and especially snow and ice. The apparatus worked well experimentally until these foes to efficiency intervened, and then the whole technically beautiful installation failed to operate. Wireless telegraphy promises to do the needed work.

Wireless telegraphy, as every one knows, usually calls for tall masts or towers from which the aerials or antennae can be spread, and this element of height and length of dispatching and intercepting filaments influences directly the efficiency of the apparatus, both in creating Hertzian waves and in being sensitive to the ether vibrations having their source elsewhere. How, then, were these requirements to be met upon a swiftly moving train?

As a matter of fact, the clearance between the roofs of the coaches and the tops of the bridges and tunnels is a matter of only a few inches. Would aerials as low as this answer? Only experimenting would solve the question, and the electrical experts set about doing it in this way:

A single line of wire arranged like a rectangle is strung from four low stanchions placed at each corner of the car ends, actually below the crest of the roof. By doing this upon four cars, giving a total length of aerials of something like 550 feet, an arrangement has been reached which works admirably and incidentally subscribes to the physical limitations of height imposed by structures along the roadway.

But, while this placing of the wires sufficed when running over open country, there was still a doubt about what would happen when the train skirted along winding rivers, with mountains hemming in the view and seemingly offering an obstacle to the sending and the receiving of wireless impulses. It is along parts of the road of this character that the wireless telegraph would be of the greatest service, because the sinuous path of the track makes it impossible for the towerman to see trains for more than a short distance, and block signals worked by track contacts are similarly obscured by bends in the route. Would the wireless waves rise out of the depth of the valleys and get beyond to receiving stations, or would the vibrations started from distant points get over the mountains and down into the winding passes?

In anticipation of probable difficulties in this department of the work the Lackawanna railroad erected at Scranton and at Binghamton tall wireless towers, and these were expected to offset the lowness of the aerials upon the train. Whether these tall towers are actually necessary for the immediate work cut out for them is not of present concern; they may be a necessary part of the system when ultimately elaborated. But an interesting fact has developed. The messages leaving the moving train are unquestionably able to get past intervening mountains and to climb from the meandering valleys and find their way to the antennae of the towers at Scranton and Binghamton.

According to the experts, the Hertzian waves don't do this by climbing the hills, but by actually going through them. This is because the earth is a great magnet, and the wireless waves virtually wade along, partly through the ground and partly through the air.

The Marconi outfit has been especially developed for railroad service. Space and weight had to be drawn upon economically, and the whole system is just about one-quarter the size of an ordinary installation. This naturally has imposed refinements and made it necessary to take great care in offsetting the jarring vibrations of a speeding train. Again the electrical engineers have done well, because even upon the first run the apparatus functioned encouragingly.

Of course there are yet obstacles to be surmounted, because there are refinements of adjustment that radically affect perfect working. The principal one of these has been that of regulating the wave lengths and in getting the installation upon the moving train tuned to the distant stations.

The wave lengths generated by the train equipment are about 800 meters long, or in the neighborhood of half a mile, and these have permitted of the maintenance of wireless communication for a distance just short of thirty-five miles. So far the operator aboard the train has been more successful in dispatching than in receiving messages, and the immediate efforts will be directed toward putting him upon an equality with his fellows at the fixed stations.

Upon the trial run the conductor of the Buffalo limited was taken ill, and when thirty odd miles from Scranton a wireless call was dispatched for a relief conductor. The substitute was on hand when the train pulled into that station.

Again, there were more passengers than seats, and in the same way an extra coach was ordered and made ready by the time the limited pulled into Binghamton. Upon a later run news items were received aboard the train and bulletins posted from time to time for the edification of the passengers. In time it will be possible, it is believed, for passengers to send and receive messages at any moment of the day or night while the trains are speeding along at their highest rate.

Important News In Advertisements

By HOLLAND.

THE valuable news of the day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements. Of course it is important to know what President Wilson is doing, what the latest developments are in China or what baseball club leads the league. But it is also important to know where a bargain in boys' waists, garden hose, breakfast food or straw hats may be found.

These bits of commercial news are among the advertisements. Wise persons look for them and take advantage of them when they are doing their buying. The leading merchants are continually telling you news of their stores, news that is important because it often means a real saving and always means something new and worth while.

Read the advertisements if you seek important news. Read them regularly and always with the thought that back of each advertisement are the reputation and business standing of the merchant. He could not afford to deceive you even if he were so inclined.

CONSERVATION OF CHILDHOOD

Subject Before the School Association at Atlantic

A meeting of the Parents' and Teachers Association of the Quincy school at Atlantic was held in the Assembly hall Tuesday evening. The meeting was called to order by President, William F. Cummings, who after the reading of the minutes by the secretary, Miss Tolman, introduced the speaker of the evening, Rev. Mr. Willmott of Bethany Congregational church, Quincy, who gave a very true and interesting talk, taking for his subject—"Conservation of childhood." Mr. Willmott brought out the value of the Parents' and Teachers Association in a community, and emphasized the position Massachusetts holds when the products of schools are considered, this position being first.

Mrs. Rowe of Wollaston was then introduced. She represented the National Congress of Mothers, and stated that the views expressed by Mr. Willmott were in entire accord with what the Congress of Mothers is trying to accomplish through the Parents' and Teachers Associations throughout the country. She explained the aim and purpose of the Congress of Mothers, also its origin and work and advised this Association either as a body or individually to affiliate with them.

Music was furnished by pupils from grades 7 and 8 led by the master, Charles Sampson. Several selections were very well rendered.

The meeting adjourned until March 17.

NEW RULE FOR CAPE CAT BOATS

The annual meeting of the Cape Catboat association was held Tuesday evening at the office of Frank F. Crane on Temple street and these officers elected:

President,—W. W. Arnold.

Vice President,—Herbert W. Robbins.

Secretary and Treasurer, — Dr. Frank E. Dawes.

Measurer.—Ralph E. Winslow.

Executive Committee,—Edgar W. Emery, Ira W. Whittemore, S. H. Hardwick and John Kitson.

It was voted, as last year, to confine the coming seasons racing to Marblehead on the North shore, and to Hingham and Hull on the South Shore. It was also voted that every boat in the association should fly the catboat flag.

The most important action taken, was the adoption of a new rule relative to measurement which was that the overhall figures shall be seven seconds per foot, per mile.

The secretary was instructed to communicate with the members to get the sentiment of the members relative to an interbay series of races the coming season.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

JOHN R. DUGGAN APPOINTED AS AN ASSESSOR

The vacancy in the Board of Assessors caused by the declination of Thomas Swithin who was appointed to the position two weeks ago was filled by the Mayor this noon when he announced the appointment of ex-Assessor John A. Duggan of Atlantic. The position is not a new one for Mr. Duggan, and he will bring to the Board an experience of three years gained under the administration of Mayor William T. Shea during which time he served on the board. He is a lawyer by profession.

The various typewriter concerns of Boston are camping at City Hall, at the present time, or rather agents of the different firms. Each claims that their particular machine possesses superior qualities to the others. The need of new typewriters was made necessary by the ruling of the Auditor that hereafter pay rolls must be made out by the typewriter on fourteen-inch sheets.

Chief Engineer Faxon Billings has moved his family from Atlantic to a house at 25 Dysart street. His home will be connected by telephone.

PATROL NIGHT BOY SCOUTS

Quincy troop of Boy Scouts, who are observing the fourth anniversary of the movement by meeting every night in Keatings hall, held patrol competition Tuesday night. Henry Ericson was the leader of the Cranch Hill patrol which included Eric Nelson, Gunner Carlson, Henry Nelson, Richard Ericson and Richard De Coste. Homer Melville was leader of the Quincy Point patrol which included Arthur Smith, Fred Spencer, Fred Gibb, James Mullen and Richard Weixler.

Cranch Hill was the winner in patrol pull, leg wrestling, hand wrestling, pulling lazy stick, and Quincy Point won the wrestling and knights contests. Henry Ericson and Eric Nelson did good work for the former, and Homer Melville and Fred Cibb for the latter.

The troop learns with pleasure-of the honor given them through the appointment of Eric Nelson, its secretary, to the position of district recorder of the ninth district which extends from Quincy to Hyde Park.

At eight o'clock tonight, the members of the Boy Scouts all over the country will renew their oath to the principles on which the movement was founded. Quincy Troop will meet in Keatings hall for this purpose.

NAVY YARD TO GET CONTRACT

According to a statement from Mayor Curley of Boston, the contract for the new $1,425,000 supply ship for the United States navy will be awarded to the Charlestown Navy Yard, which was the lowest bidder for the ship. It will mean the employment of a large number of men at the yard, and as there are a hundred or more Quincy residents employed at the Navy yard, the contract becomes of local interest. It will be the first large ship constructed at the Navy yard since 1870. According to the Mayor work laying the keel ought to be under way in sixty days.

With 21 houses under quarantine because of scarlet fever, the Board of Health is of the opinion that the decrease in the cases mark the passing of the epidemic the city has experienced the past two months. The cases of five of these houses are at contagious hospitals. Several weeks ago there were 311 houses under quarantine.

frauds the taxpayer no less than graft and extravagance is only another form of larceny.

In city building, as in everything else, one important element is applied common sense. But when the electorate of any city have chosen a man to act as its official head, the only wise and honorable course is for all the citizens to give him such support as will make it possible for him to carry out his honest and well intentioned policies. If the results show his judgment or his fitness unequal to the task, the remedy is in their own hands. He takes the responsibility, and in all fairness is entitled to an unhampered opportunity. The speaker proposed a pledge of hearty loyalty to His Honor, the Mayor of Quincy.

Another field for loyalty is found in our support of local industries, operated by our own citizens, giving occupation to our people, adding to the city's revenues, and serving its many needs. Great care should always be exercised in the granting of franchises, and to the encouragement of untried schemes; but where an industry has proved its worth it is surely entitled to encouragement and co-operation.

Every city has its own peculiar advantages and charms; and Quincy is first of all a city of homes. In this respect it meets a need which is growing every year, in response to a wide spread movement in American life. Up to about the middle of the 19th century the population of the United States were chiefly living in the country. Then began a rapid drift toward the commercial centres until in our larger cities the population became so congested and so mixed that city homes no longer seemed desirable to the more prosperous of our native population.

This condition led to a second stage in city building—a fresh migration from the crowded and uncomfortable centers to the freer air and sunshine of suburban life. Of all the cities of the country Boston stands easily the first in the beauty and variety of its many suburbs; and among them all none has so many attractions to offer to the home seeker as our own Quincy. Its diversified area, sloping from wooded hill tops with their ocean view over rolling parks and level downs, to the sweeping shore line of the bay, gives ample scope for each man, according to his taste, to possess the one most desirable building site in all the world. The dignity of its traditions, and its wealth of historic incidents and places adds a charm which "age cannot wither nor custom stale," and now its transportation facilities which in the past have been a drawback, are being much improved and promise soon to meet all reasonable demands. But here again is need of widespread loyalty on the part of all our citizens to work together in making this, "The City Beautiful." This may easily be done if each one will take a personal pride in the appearance of his own home, and all co-operate in bringing about the adoption of a city policy which shall insure the beauty of our streets and parks.

But the material side of city building is after all the smaller part. Now, no less than in olden times, it remains true that "unless the Lord build the city, they labor in vain that build it." The most important possessions of any city are its men and women. If these are lacking in the sterling virtues, if they prefer ease and sloth to the firm grasp of duty and responsibility, if their chief desire is the pursuit of excitement and the indulgence of the senses, then the city is doomed to swift decay. No other advantages, however great, can take the place of a high average of personal character among the men and women who make up the population of the city. If this is true then it must follow, "as the night the day," that the dearest interests of the city demand the universal loyalty of all good citizens to those institutions whatever they may be which tend to the building up of strong and noble character. "Where there is no vision the people perish." But righteousness exalteth not only a nation but a city.

REPRESENTATIVE WHITE

said in part:

Let me express my appreciation of the opportunity to be present with you tonight upon an occasion of this character, a guest of the Quincy Board of Trade, an organization which offers to you such a fruitful field for the advancement of civic ideals and the producing of practical results not only to the city but to each individual within her borders will they but grasp the opportunity.

During the past few years the state of Massachusetts has been the field of operations for a certain amiable board of spellbinders who have travelled from the coast on the East to the hills in the West, fooling us with their mystic utterances and telling the people of their Commonwealth how the adoption of various vote-catching issues will transport us from our present terrible conditions to some theoretical land of milk and honey where the politicians cease to exist, where office-seekers never bother and where the, at times, well-beloved common people defy the demagogue, destroy the trusts, and perfect political purity is always with us.

Debate upon these issues carries us back to the Constitution of the United States. Up to within a few years, the citizens of this nation were united in praise of the wonderful document our forbears in their wisdom had brought forth. It had made a nation from 13 jarring states. It had proven flexible enough to meet all new conditions. It had withstood the greatest war in history and under it liberty had been perpetuated and law and order maintained.

All agreed with Gladstone's declaration—"That the Constitution of the U. S. was the greatest political document ever struck off by the minds of men on a single occasion." Yet there has come over some of the people a spirit of unrest and we hear the harsh voice of criticism and abuse directed against this instrument by some persons because they believe it is the present popular passion to assail the Constitution and their government, but it appeals strongly to me that "the pendulum has swung its furthest radical stroke and is slowly returning to the safe and sane habit.

If popular government has not existed in these United States for the past 125 years, how can it ever be restored? What never happened, can never be replaced. In Lincoln's Gettysburg address, he declared he was trying to save government by the people.

The framers of our Constitution knew full well that it was their purpose to found a pure democracy to be a popular government in the broadest sense. They may have been wrong or they may have been right in their principles. but history has proven that they knew exactly what they wanted to do and they did it.

Movement and improvement are not synonymous, and while I have no fear of fatal results in Massachusetts, it always recalls to my mind the first axiom taught to a medical student—"What the heart lacks in strength, it makes up in frequency." What is everybody's business is nobody's business. It is the old question between idealism and reality.

Serious mistakes are made under the stress of temper and political brainstorm. This nation pauses today, preparing to commemorate on Thursday next the anniversary of Lincoln's birthday. At this time, let all estrangements be forgotten, let all bitterness pass like an uneasy dream. Let us reincarnate this Nation and rededicate it to those high purposes for which it was intended; the right of man to liberty, the sovereignty of reason, the holiness of labor, the beneficence of peace and a square deal to every man, remembering always that a house divided against itself can never stand.

MICHAEL SHEA'S OFFICE IS ABOLISHED

Mayor Miller Sends Letter to the Commissioner of Public Works

Favors an Automobile for Inspector of Buildings

Michael E. Shea, sometimes known a superintendent or general foreman of the Street department, will cease to be a member of the official family of the city after 5 o'clock Saturday, Feb. 14, for Mayor Miller has got around the seeming difficulty relative to the civil service rules by abolishing the office.

In fact the office of superintendent or general foreman of streets was never legally established. Way back during the first year of the administration of Randolph Bainbridge as Commissioner of Public Works he established the office and appointed Mr. Shea. He took the civil service examination at that time, and his appointment under the civil service rules stated that he should be employed part of the time in the Street department and part of the time in the Water department at a salary of $5 a day.

One of the first acts of Mayor Miller on assuming office was to request Mr. Shea's resignation the first Monday in February. Mr. Shea paid no attention to the letter, however, which practically meant that he did not intend to resign, and it was up to the Mayor to make the next move. Had the Mayor preferred charges there would doubtless have been a fight that would have ended by the charges being heard before Judge Avery whose finding would have been final.

Mayor Miller, however has found an easier way of getting rid of Mr. Shea, and as noted above it was done by abolishing the office. Wednesday afternoon the following letter was sent to Commissioner Brown.

Mayor's Office, Feb. 11, 1914.

Moses L. Brown, Commissioner of Public Works:

Dear Sir,—I have this day abolished the office of Superintendent or foreman of streets, to take effect Feb. 14, at 5 o'clock, and you will please see that no further money is expended in that direction.

Yours truly,

(signed)

John L. Miller, Mayor.

As the office was never legally established the Mayor believes that he can readily abolish it, which he has done and he says the book is closed as far as the Shea matter is concerned.

When asked what would be done relative to a similar position the Mayor said that probably the Commissioner would later have an assistant.

The Mayor said this morning that he believed it would be economy for the city to furnish the Inspector of Buildings with an automobile. There is considerable building in Quincy all of the time and it is one of the duties of the Inspector to visit the buildings in process of construction several times to see that the building ordinance is being lived up to, and an ordinance was no good unless it was enforced.

As it is now, the Inspector has to do this work using the street cars but that is a slow process and requires too much valuable time. While the Mayor did not say so, the chances are that the Inspector of Buildings will be provided with an automobile at an early date.

The Mayor further stated that just as soon as he found time he intended to take up several matters with the street railway. One of these things was relatives to the paving along the tracks on Franklin street, and another was the matter of a comfort room in City Square. He believed that by getting together and going over the matter in a friendly spirit much could be accomplished that had not been in the past.

STILL ALARM THIS MORNING

It was a cold morning for a fire, yet the Central station auto chemical was called out twice on still alarms. The first call came shortly after 7 o'clock and summoned the apparatus to the rooms occupied by Madam Sarkin on Hancock street, near Kincaide's annex. It seems that a steam pipe burst and the escaping steam was taken for smoke. The second still call came shortly before 9 o'clock and was for a slight chimney fire on Merrymount road. The high wind crossed some of the wires this morning which was the cause of the striking of the fire alarm bells at 8 o'clock.

NEW MANAGEMENT.

A. I. Dixon and Newman Savage, both of South Quincy, have opened a market and grocery business at 1690 Hancock street, in the store formerly known as the Otis Market. Mr. Dixon has been for six years, manager of the Currier Market, formerly Berry Bros., which is closing out, and Mrs. Savage is the proprietor of the Boston Branch Grocery on Water street. Messrs. Dixon and Savage have many friends in the city, both business and social, who wish them success in the partnership.

CO-OPERATIVE BANKS.

The bill permitting matured shares in Co-operative banks being kept at interest was discussed before the legislative committee on Banks and Banking at the State House on Wednesday. H. T. Whitman of the Wollaston Co-operative banks pointed out that if the Co-operative banks have to be in a position to pay off matured shares left at interest then they cannot make so many loans on real estate.

The Dorcas society of the Universalist church is holding an all day meeting today at the home of Miss Hanson on Hancock street.

8 TO 16 BELOW THIS MORNING

It is a little remarkable that the record cold days for the past eighteen years have all fallen on Feb. 12. The temperature at noon today was 8 above zero and it was thought to be a record breaker, but the Daily Ledger's record shows that there have been colder days in February at noon during the past eighteen years. The noon record during this period is 5 above, and as noted above these days occurred on Feb. 12, the first being in 1898 and the next in 1899.

Other cold February days during this period have been Feb. 19, 1903, when it was 10 above at noon, Feb. 26, 1900, when it was 12 above at noon, and Feb. 10, 1912 when it was 12 above.

Glasses in the various parts of the city varied early this morning at sunrise in some places it being 10 below and at others 8 below. On one cold corner in City Square where the themomteor was exposed to the northwest wind the glass at that hour registered 16 below.

C. E. SUPPER AT ATLANTIC

Pleesing Musical Program Followed the Supper

The roast beef supper, given by the Christian Endeavor society of the Atlantic Memorial church, Wednesday night, in the church vestry, was a huge success. The supper, which consisted of roast beef, mashed potatoes, cranberry sauce, rolls cocoa, pie, and cake, was served at 6.30. The waitresses were dressed in white and wore white aprons.

After the supper an excellent entertainment was given. The program included:

Piano duet—Miss Helen Damon and Miss Marion Letteney; reading by Miss Phyllis Smith; Cornet solo, Miss Edith L. Abbot, accompanied by Miss Davison; selections, Alexander Cameron, Scotch comedian; duet by Miss Nellie Damon and Gorham Damon. Also selections by a quartet composed of Miss Nellie Damon, Miss Maud Read, W. Norton Stetson and Gorham Damon.

Miss Nellie Damon of Boston, appeared for the first time to an Atlantic audience, however there is no doubt but that her clear, rich voice will make her a favorite there. Alexander Cameron, the only other out-of-town talent, also won his audience by his pleasing personality. He came from Scotland, less than a year ago, and since then has become a favorite in greater Boston. He came, with more than twenty-five other young people, from the Phillips Congregational church of South Boston. All his selections were generously applauded.

Much of the success of the whole affair was due to Frank Damon, general chairman, and to Miss Jean Arthur, chairman of the social committee and her committee.

CITY HALL MARRIAGE.

Guisseppi Baldassini of 104 Cross street, a West Quincy stone cutter and Miss Agata Baldassini, of 184 Common street, were married at City Hall this morning by Emery L. Crane City Clerk. The bridal party left after the cermony for the home of the bride on Common street where a reception was held. They will live in West Quincy.

WRITES HE AIN'T MARRIED

Took Out a License at City Hall Last July

The axiom "marry in haste and repent at leisure," does not apply to one man to whom a license was issued last July, for this morning a letter received at the office of the City Clerk answered an inquiry relatives to the marriage of the parties conecrned in so explicit a manner that it has no duplicate in the book of documents connected with the license bureau.

Unreturned marriage licenses are traced, usually by addressing a set of questions to the parties named in the intention and no reply has ever been received that is so convincing as the following, the signature to same being withheld.

City Clerk, Quincy, Mass.

"Sir:—I have received it, your letter, this morning. I let you know I ain't married at all. I made a mistake that time. Very truly yours."

BATTLESHIP FIVE WINS

The boys from thebattleship, North Carolina beat the Quincy Y. M. C. A. team in the local gym Wednesday, 42 to 29 and the Quincy second team beat the Old Timers 30 to 28.

The star of the senior game was Lombard of the visitors who tossed four goals and four fouls. Trask excelled for Quincy, getting five goals and five fouds. The Old Timers were defeated in the last few minutes of play after a game in which inside basket ball knowledge figured to a great extent.

PASTIME CLUB DANCE.

An invitation dancing party was given in New Colonial hall Wednesday evening by the Pastime Club, a well known social organization of the city. There were 50 couples present, among them being guests from Dorchester, Roxbury and Boston. Several novelty features, introduced during the evening, proved to be most attractive. Refreshments were served. Music was furnished by Childs orchestra. The committee included Lloyd Lewis, Daniel DiBona and Frank Smith.

HEALEY-BATES WEDDING

Wollaston Congregational Church the Scene

A large gathering of friends assembled Wednesday evening in the Wollaston Congregational church for the wedding of Miss Rubina Madeline Bates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Chester Bates of 228 Belmont street, and Albert David Healey, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Edward Healey of 24 Winthrop avenue.

William Ellis Weston at the organ played while the guests were assembling, and at half past seven to the strains of the wedding march the bridal party, entered the church and proceeded to the altar where they were met by the groom and his best man, Fred L. Ortla of Dorchester, and the officiating minister, Dr. Isaiah Sneath pastor of the church.

Miss Ethel G. Hersey of Quincy Point was maid of honor and there were two bridesmaids, Miss Mildred L. Lincoln of Hingham, and Miss Dorothy R. Sayward of Wollaston. The ushers were Eugene Sanders and Max O. Pinkham of Wollaston, Phineas W. Whiting of Roslindale and Prescott W. Lentell of Canton. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held in the church vestry, the parents of the bride and groom and the maid of honor and bridesmaids assisting in receiving.

GOOD WISHES OF HER FRIENDS

Miss Nora Flanagan, of 40 Field street, has been given two delightful surprises within a week. Saturday evening on returning to her home, she was surprised to find it decorated with several pieces of tin and glass-ware which her neighbors had left.

Tuesday evening Miss Flanagan was again taken by surprise, when about forty of her young friends called and presented her with a shirt waist box which upon being opened contained several pretty pieces of linen each containing a verse. The box was delivered by Miss Rose Meade who acted as expressman and took her part well. During the evening Miss Gertrude Meade rendered several solos which were greatly enjoyed. Miss Eva Frazier presided at the piano. Games were enjoyed and ices served.

Miss Flanagan's engagement was recently announced and on Monday evening she will become the bride of Edward Dillon a popular young man of West Quincy.

SURPRISE PARTY.

Sixty five of the younger people of the city tendered Miss Margaret Dennehy of London avenue a surprise party in the Montclair bungalow Wednesday night. Games, dancing and refreshments were enjoyed during the evening. Piano music was furnished by Frank Flynn and John Pitts was the violinist. SCENE OF SPLENDOR AT ELKS' GRAND BALL

Decorations of the Hall More Elaborate Than Any Ever Seen in the City

Colored Electric Lights Used With Good Effect

Music hall presented a scene of splendor Wednesday evening, on the occasion of the seventh annual charity ball of Quincy lodge of Elks, whose many charitable acts are hidden from the eyes of the world. The affair this year eclipsed any of the events held in previous years, both in point of decorations of the hall and in attendance.

The hall itself presented a sort of fairy scene, and there were many beautiful gowns worn by the ladies. Colored electric lights only served to heighten the effect as well as to set off the beautiful decorations.

The walls of the two sides of the hall were hidden behind massive paintings representing river, mountain and landscape scenes, while at the base was a row of lattice work intertwined with artificial flowers and ferns. Beneath the small side lights of the hall was also a scheme of artificial flowers and ferns which were lit up by tiny electric light globes hidden in the flowers. On one side of the hall these side lights were red, while on the opposite side they were green.

Along the front of the platform the same scheme was carried out baskets of artificial flowers being placed at intervals, and in these flowers were hidden small electric lights which made the flowers shine forth in brightness. Below these were fan shaped ferns which served to take off the usual bareness. Extending up and down on either side of the platform was lattice work entwined with artificial flowers.

From each of the four smaller chandeliers was suspended a lattice work of greenery in which were colored electric lights, while suspended from the centre chandelier was the five pointed illuminated Elks star.

The same general scheme of decoration was also arranged along the front of the balcony.

In addition to this pink, white and blue bunting was festooned along the sides of the hall, and streamers of the same ran from the sides and corners to the centre chandelier.

On the walls on either side of the stage were draper large American flags, which always hold a prominent place in the lodge room and at all functions in which Elks participate. Directly over the centre of the stage opening was a large basket of red flowers in the petals of which were hidden red electric light globes. To these decorations might be added the beautiful creations worn by the ladies which were of varied colors, the whole forming a scheme of beauty enchanting to look upon.

Wilson's orchestra furnished the music for the dancing, and from 8 to 9 o'clock while the participants were arriving, they gave a promenade concert, their program being as follows:

March, "Guests of Honor" Ganne
Overture, "Morning, Noon and Night" Suppe
Concert Waltz, "Artists' Life" Strauss
Cornet Solo, "Memories of Liberati" Roy Whitehouse Casey

Plans are being drawn for a big addition to the Congressional library building, to make room for the works now being written explaining the income tax law.

New York appears to be the only state where they keep a "pie book" of those who have received patronage, which shows how unsystematically the politicians elsewhere are doing business.

There is a movement for individual drinking cups at the Capitol at Washington, in spite of the fact that the Congressmen always chew clean tobacco.

No matter how a citizen fills out his income tax blank, he can be sure that he has violated the law.

THE TIME TO BUY CHEAPLY.

There are some people who complain bitterly about the high cost of living, while they pay too little attention to the opportunities for reducing expenses announced by advertisers.

The great majority of the public is by this time thoroughly educated up to the idea of watching the store news in the papers, and buying from the bargains there reported. But while nearly every one reads this advertising, yet some people are too procrastinating to plan their purchases in advance. They persist in buying at the top of the market.

People who feel motives of thrift, however, must realize that February is a fine time to buy goods. There are few merchants who do not cut prices to reduce stocks. People who consistently plan to take advantage of these reductions can carry the burden of household expenses much more easily.

RUNS ON SAVINGS BANKS.

Strong savings banks in New York and Boston are now recovering from senseless runs started as the result of idle and unfounded rumors. Here is a peril that menaces not merely any solvent institution, but all bank depositors as well.

Any solvent bank could be made insolvent, if the depositors in some moment of madness storm its doors and demand their cash in an instant. Conditions are like those in a public hall, where people are killed and injured merely because some fool jumps up and yells "Fire."

The presence in this country of vast bodies of non-English speaking people aggravates this danger. These immigrants are industrious and most of them have savings deposits. But in their ignorance of business, they blow up like a powder magazine.

Fortunately business men realize pretty thoroughly that to stop these wild alarms, all banking institutions must stand together. An attack on one sound bank is an attack at all investment. Neighboring institutions must protect it, or suffer from the general loss of confidence.

DURING WEEK OF MARCH 23

Murderer Schmidt to Be Electrocuted at Sing Sing

GIVES TWO LINES OF POETRY

Response to Newspaper Men's Question as to Whether He Wishes to Make Statement—Takes Sentence With No Show of Emotion—Motions of Counsel Denied

New York, Feb. 12.—Hans Schmidt, a priest, convicted of murdering Anna Aumuller, a domestic at St. Boniface Catholic church, was sentenced to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing some time during the week beginning March 23.

Justice Davis, in the criminal branch of the supreme court, pronounced sentence after Schmidt, through his counsel, T. J. McManus, announced he had nothing to say.

Just before Schmidt was called into court, the newspaper men sent him a message asking him if he wished to make a statement. He sent back a carefully penned note as follows:

"Beyond this vale of tears there is a life above,
Unmeasured by the flight of years, and all that life is love."

Schmidt took his sentence with absolutely no show of emotion. He stood erect before Davis and looked straight at him, taking no notice whatever of any one else around him.

When Davis put the question: "Have you anything to say before sentence is passed upon you?" he merely leaned slightly forward. There was a pause, and McManus moved for a new trial and a stay of sentence. Both motions were denied.

Immediately sentence was pronounced, Deputy Sheriff Bowers stepped to the priest-murderer's side with a pair of handcuffs. Schmidt turned to Bowers and coolly held out his hands.

The prisoner wore a fur overcoat with a white muffler about his neck. His beard, grown since he was arrested, was tucked into the collar of the overcoat. His whole appearance was vastly improved since he was last in court.

Unionists Meet Defeat In the First Test on Home Rule

London, Feb. 12.—The first test vote on Irish home rule in the present session of parliament came at the end of a debate marked by fierce and passionate utterances on the side of the Unionists, and resulted in a victory for the Irish cause.

The vote was 333 to 255, a majority of seventy-eight for the government, and it came directly on the amendment to the reply to the speech from the throne which was moved by a Unionist leader. The amendment was to the effect that before proceeding any further with the home rule bill it should be submitted to "the judgment of the country"—in other words, that there should be a general election, with home rule as the issue.

SPEYER CALLS ON LODGE

Said to Have Explained Firm's Transactions In Frisco Bonds

Washington, Feb. 12.—James Speyer of Speyer & Co. of New York, the firm so sharply criticised in debate the other day by Senator Lodge, came to Washington and had a talk with Lodge. The conference was held as Speyer's suggestion and Lodge declined to discuss the details.

It is understood, however, that the purpose of Speyer's visit was to assure the senator of the correctness of the action of his firm in connection with the sale of the Frisco bonds in France, but no request was made for an investigation, as far as can be learned.

GET FOUR DAYS EACH

Seven Women Sentenced For Participating In London Riot

London, Feb. 12.—Seven militant suffragettes were sentenced in police court to four days' imprisonment each on their refusal to give sureties to keep the peace for six months, after they had been charged with obstruction and assault in connection with Tuesday night's demonstrations.

The women said their demonstration was a protest against the exclusion of the question of votes for women from the king's speech at the opening of parliament.

In the meantime the officers of the ball and reception committee were busy looking after the pleasure of the guests, the chairman of each of the committees being distinguished by a colored sash across the shirt front, in the centre of which was an Elks head. The color of the chief marshal was purple, the marshals wore red, the aids blue, the director of the march orange, and the reception committee blue. Each member of the lodge also wore a small bow of purple and white on the coat lapel.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide headed the reception committee and his assistants were Philip H. Sullivan, E. R., Daniel J. Deasey, P. E. R., Hon. Eugene R. Stone, William Cashman, Hon. Charles M. Bryant, Dr. John H. Ash, Dr. F. Ramon Burke, Dr. James P. Murphy, Dr. Decourcey J. Driscoll Capt. A. A. Galiano, Alfred H. Remick, Thomas M. Butler, George T. Magee, Charles H. Among the special guests of the evening noticed were District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler, Dr. Fred L. Hayes; former District Deputy, Peter McCann; Senator L. F. R. Langelier; Representative Edward J. Hammond; Tax Collector John J. O'Hara, Assessor John A. Duggan, and City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell.

Promptly at 9 o'clock, the signal for the grand march which was to open the dancing, was given, and this proved an interesting feature, over one hundred couples participating. The march was led by Exalted Ruler Philip J. Sullivan and Mrs. Sullivan, followed by Esteemed Leading Knight John Hilderbrand and Mrs. Hilderbrand, Deputy and Mrs. Hayes, Past Deputy and Mrs. McCann. Trustee and Mrs. John W. Sweeney, Marshal and Mrs. Robert J. Williams, Jr., and Floor Director and Mrs. James W. Sweeney. Leo J. McMaster was director of the march, and owing to the large number of participants no attempt was made to execute any but simple marching. The march closed with a waltz and the ball was in motion. The dance card contained twenty numbers but encores added several others. There was no attempt made by the participants to dance the much discussed tango, and a notice printed on the dance program announced that it would not be permitted.

From 9.30 until 1 o'clock a buffet lunch was served in the annex.

One of the fundamental laws among Elks is that wherever Elks meet at 11 o'clock a toast shall be given to "Our absent brothers," and this feature was carried out as usual at that hour. The brothers of the lodge gathered in a circle about the centre of the floor with crossed hands. The lights were dimmed, only the illuminated star in the centre of the hall remaining lighted. Eleven o'clock was sounded on a cathedral gong, and as the last note died away Past District Deputy Peter McCann of Chelsea gave the Elks toast to absent brothers, while the orchestra softly played, "Should auld acquaintance be forgot." As he completed his toast a clock dial supported between the antlers of an Elk's head, at the back of the stage, was illuminated showing the hands pointing to the mystic hour of eleven.

This ceremony over, dancing was again in order until 2 o'clock, at which time special cars were in waiting at the door for all parts of the city and for Hingham.

The committee of arrangements was headed by James W. Sweeney as chairman, William S. George as secretary, and Charles R. O'Connor as treasurer, and they were assisted by a large committee.

John W. Sweeney was the floor director and Exalted Ruler Philip H. Sulivan chief marshal. The assistant marshals were George A. Wardwell, John W. Sweeney, Lewis J. White, George A. Jordan, Robert J. Williams, Jr., Dr. J. H. Maloney and Harry H. Moseley.

FIRST PARISH CLUB.

The meeting of the First Parish club next Tuesday evening should be an interesting one, especially to Grand Army men, for the speaker of the evening will be Col. Edward Anderson, one of the club members, who will give an address on "The battle of Pea Ridge." Col. Anderson was in command of the 12th Indiana calvary during the war, and is an orator of remarkable ability. As usual the members will meet in the lower room at 6 o'clock for a half hour's social meeting and a roast beef dinner will be served promptly at 6.30, to be followed by the address.

PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA—ELMAN.

One of the great orchestras of America, the Symphony of Philadelphia, will make its first appearance in ten years in Symphony hall, Boston Sunday afternoon, Feb. 15, at 3.30 o'clock. The orchestra will have as its conductor that most distinguished and talented musician, Leopold Stokowski and Mischa Elman, the great Russian violinist, will be the soloist. The programme comprises Brahm's First Symphony in C Minor, Erich Korngold's "Schauspiel" Overture (Korngold being the remarkable boy composer of Vienna,) Saint-Saen's Concerto for Violin in B Minor, No. 3 and Richard Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser."

☞For beauty, charm and refinement of idea it would be hard to surpass George Kleine's photo drama production of the "Last Days of Pompeii" adapted from Lord Bulwer Lytton's famous novel. Produced in Italy, these pictures bear the masterly artistic stamp that characterizes the foreign productions and are revelations in photographic beauty and skill. Mr. Kleine has practically avoided the sensational melodramatic note and has emphasized the idyllic qualities. The pathetic and hopeless love story of the blind flower girl Nydia, is nevertheless related with the utmost fidelity and holds the rapt attention of the spectator from beginning to end. "The Last Days of Pompeii" will be the attraction at Quincy Music hall, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday afternoon.

THOMAS A. EDISON

Sixty-Seventh Birthday Finds Him In Excellent Health

HAS NEW DIET RULE

Edison Credits It With Giving Him Good Health and Strength

New York, Feb. 12.—On his 67th birthday Thomas A. Edison, who is in excellent health, revealed a new rule of diet which he has followed for two years and which he credits with giving him health and strength. It is simply this:

Reduce your food from eighteen to twenty ounces—what the normal healthy person consumes in a day—to nine or ten ounces of plain, nutritious food.

The world's greatest inventor refused to take a day off to celebrate his birthday, but worked as usual in his laboratory.

AGED PICKPOCKET CAUGHT ON A CAR

Says He Has Been In the Business For Forty Years

New York, Feb. 12.—New York's oldest pickpocket, 70 years of age, scarcely able to walk but still active in petty crime, added another arrest to his long record.

His name is John Hanley; the police call him "The Ghost of the Past." He was caught stealing a purse from a girl in a crowd boarding a trolley car.

"I have been in the business for forty years," said Hanley, "and in all most of the time. My father tried to make me a stone cutter, but I was too delicate to work. What chance is there now for an old man like me?"

ALDERMEN HAVE TO ACT

Young Smallpox Patient Finally Lands In Providence Hospital

Providence, Feb. 12.—A special meeting of the board of aldermen had to be called before Charles Barsxczgki, the 5-year-old son of a shoemaker, could be removed from his home because he was found to be suffering from smallpox.

Two trips were made to the house by the ambulance, but the parents of the boy stoutly refused to allow him to be taken away.

Mayor Gainer than called a special meeting of the board of aldermen, who passed a resolution directing the superintendent of health to remove the child to the hospital. With the aid of two policemen the boy was finally removed.

GIRL IN MALE ATTIRE

Posed as Brother of Man With Whom She Is Arrested

Pittsburg, Feb. 12.—Charged with knowing something about a series of burglaries in Homestead's exclusive section, pretty Rosie Church, resplendent in male clothing of the latest fashion, and carrying a glass revolver loaded with ammonia, was arrested. With her was a youth who gave his name as Harry Carr. He was heavily armed.

Miss Church admitted that she and Carr had been implicated in several hold-ups and robberies. She had posed as Carr's brother.

ANSWERS WITH ONE WORD

Dr. Evans Says "No" to Thirty-Minute Hypothetical Question

Morristown, N. J., Feb. 12.—Dr. Britton D. Evans of the state hospital at Morris Plains required but one word, "No," to answer a hypothetical question which contained 3500 words and took thirty minutes to ask.

The question was put by Elmer King, counsel for the caveators in their suit against the will of Lavinia Pittinger of Jefferson township.

Somewhat boiled down it was a request for Evans' opinion as to the testamentary capacity of Lavinia Pittinger.

How to Build Up or Tear Down This Community

By J. O. LEWIS

The Home Merchant Has Earned Support.

WHY are communities, towns and cities? Have you ever asked yourself this question? Did you think they just happened, or had you ever thought that there was a special need for them? In the beginning of time—as far back as history takes us—we find that MEN HAVE BANDED THEMSELVES TOGETHER FOR MANY AND OBVIOUS REASONS, chief among which are the benefits to be gained from organized society as a social, intellectual, spiritual and commercial center.

Collectively we are strong, forceful and aggressive and possess power and means to attain a growth which will give to us and our progeny opportunities for better living—to develop our moral, spiritual and intellectual life, the things for which we were created.

THEREFORE THE SUCCESS AND HAPPINESS OF EVERY CITIZEN OF ANY COMMUNITY LIES IN THE INTEREST HE TAKES IN THAT COMMUNITY AND THE GOOD WORK HE CAN DO TO ASSIST IN ITS UPBUILDING.

Now, then, if we are to succeed as individuals and as a community we must not only strive for our own personal success and welfare, BUT MUST GIVE OF OUR WORK AND SUBSTANCE UNSELFISHLY TO HELP THE OTHERS.

Everything we do to help in the upbuilding and advancement of our city we do just that much toward our own personal success. No man can live and prosper unto himself alone, FOR WE ARE INTERDEPENDENT, and, realizing this, if we as citizens will all unite and pull together for the common good we will prosper as a city and consequently as individuals.

Well paved streets and sidewalks, good sewerage system, thoroughly enforced sanitary laws, well regulated and energetic police force, competent fire fighting equipment and rigid building regulations are economic necessities and therefore they more largely affect us as a community than as individuals. But beyond this and underlying it all and upon which rests the foundation of the whole is THE SUCCESS OF THE BUSINESS MAN. This man makes an investment, goes into some kind of business—to manufacture or sell goods—puts his money at stake, employs labor and begins his work to build better. THIS MAN IS THE CORNERSTONE OF THE COMMUNITY—the man you should rally around and support.

THE SUCCESS OF A TOWN DEPENDS ON THE SUCCESS OF ITS BUSINESS MEN, WHILE THE SUCCESS OF THE BUSINESS MEN DEPENDS ON SUPPORT THEY RECEIVE FROM THE PEOPLE AT LARGE, EACH BEING, HOWEVER, DEPENDENT ONE ON THE OTHER.

No merchant can succeed without the patronage of the public. He is absolutely and entirely dependent on the custom of each and every individual who has a penny to spend, the little mite of each, taken in the aggregate, making the volume on which he runs his business. The merchant, having plenty of competition, must, in order to get the people's patronage, figure his prices close and offer to them the very best inducements possible.

The merchant pays large rentals, taxes, privilege licenses, insurance, besides employing many clerks and assistants, in order to maintain and conduct his business in such a manner as to meet your approval, and to succeed let me emphasize it again—HE MUST HAVE YOUR PATRONAGE TO MAKE HIS BUSINESS PAY.

This community has some as fine stores—every kind—and conducted by as fine a set of men as you will find anywhere on the face of the globe—liberal, big hearted, progressive men. No better retail stores, no better wholesale or jobbing houses, no better banks, no better mills, no better schools, no better churches, no better municipal or public utilities, can be found anywhere than right here in your home town, all—absolutely all—made possible only by and through the co-operation and generous giving of the business men.

But, my good friends, with all of these extraordinary accomplishments, there are some things being done today which are STUMBLING BLOCKS IN THE PATH OF OUR GREATER GROWTH and further development—differences, if you please, which we must reconcile and overcome if we are to continue to grow and prosper.

To be continued under the title, "HELP YOURSELF BY HELPING YOUR TOWN."

SCHOOL BUDGET.

The School Committee will hold a special meeting next Tuesday evening for the purpose of considering the school budget to be prepared by its Finance committee which meets tonight. The severe weather of the present winter may cause the committee to revise its usual estimates for fuel consumption, Very few people realize how a week like the present week with extremely cold weather affects the consumption of coal in the school houses, especially those that are exposed to the full sweep of the wind because of their location.

RABBI WISE.

No doubt Wollaston school hall will be packed to the limit allowed by its license, next Monday evening, when Rabbi Wise of New York speaks there. The speaker is too well and widely known by all kinds of audiences, especially those interested in social reform, to require any extended comment. His reputation as a keen thinker and brilliant orator will attract citizens from all parts of the city.

HOME CERTIFICATES.

It is not yet fully understood that children may not leave school for good before the age of 16, even though they plan to remain at home and assist in the household, without first securing a certificate from the Superintendent of Schools. Until the passage of the recent child labor law, it was legal for a girl of 14 to stop school and stay at home without any formality. At present, she must satisfy the School department that she is going to be engaged in some useful employment even though all that employment is to be in the household. So far this school year, there have been fewer pupils between the ages of 14 and 16 leave school than in previous years. It has become far more difficult for children of that age to secure employment and the time is not far distant when unquestionably, the compulsory school age will be extended.

VOCATIONAL BUREAU.

The Philadelphia Public Education Society publishes the following: "Society suffers, particularly in the economic world, by reason of the fact that in America, the transition from school life to a wage earning relation to society is sudden, sharp and abrupt. Whatever the school has done for the child, it suddenly ceases to do, and the next day he must begin the struggle for bread.

We have endeavored for some time to find means of establishing a vocational bureau as a part of our public school obligation to society. The purpose of this bureau would be to know

(1) The capabilities and aptitudes of the pupils at the time they leave school.

(2) The form of training they have had in school, and

(3) The types of industrial occupations promising the largest returns for good to the individual.

This latter phase of equipment would carry with it a knowledge of the several employers of labor, to the end that only those who endeavor to deal fairly and helpfully by their employees should be allowed to receive the assistance of the bureau."

CODDINGTON SCHOOL.

The next meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association of the Coddington school will be held in the assembly hall of the school on Wednesday evening, Feb. 18, at 7.45 o'clock. Stacy B. This is to be an interesting meeting, and a large attendance of parents and friends is desired.

FIRESIDE TALKS.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Quincy has arranged a series of fireside talks for its members and their friends. These talks deal with a variety of subjects and ought to attract a large number of men. The first will take place Friday evening. It will be a patriotic celebration of Lincoln's birthday. The speaker will be Colonel Edward Anderson of this city.

Before the talk there will be a short musical program on the Edison disk phonograph. A special invitation is extended to the members of Paul Revere post and to Col. Abner Packard camp to attend this talk. Tickets for admission will be furnished them at the Association.

ALBERT A. HAYDEN.

The funeral of Albert A. Hayden was held Wednesday afternoon from his late home on Hancock court and was largely attended, among those present being a delegation from Paul Revere Post, G. A. ALL SOULS' MEN'S CLUBS

A Talk on Some Political Tendencies of Today

In spite of the extreme cold and of other attractions, there was the usual large attendance at the monthly meeting of the Men's club of All Soul's church held in the parish hall, Braintree, Wednesday evening. After a social session before the open fire, supper was served at 6.30, the menu comprising hot roast beef, baked potatoes, cabbage salad, baked macaroni, rolls, coffee, apple and pumpkin pie with cheese.

Cigars were passed and President Rhoades of the club introduced the speaker of the evening, James T. Williams, Jr., editor-in-chief of the Boston Evening Transcript, whose subject was "A talk on some political tendencies of today."

Mr. Williams remarks were clean cut and to the point, and carried conviction with them. At the start, he said he really thought it the duty of all the members to attend the caucus (held on the same evening) and should they wish to go he was perfectly willing to forego the pleasure of addressing them and to come again. Several left after supper for the caucus but a goodly number remained, and accorded the speaker careful attention.

Mr. Willims thought it wise for all young men to affiliate themselves with one party or another and to declare their allegiance. He defined politics as the business of being a citizen and branded as false the idea that politics was a game interesting only to office holders or candidates for office.

He spoke in favor of direct nominations, the primary and party enrollment, and thought that by this means the short ballot would be assured. Although opposed to the recall of judges and of judicial decisions, he said the public must not be blind to the faults of our courts and the laws delay.

He predicted that the day would soon come when, as advocated by the American Bar Associations, the poor man would have equal rights with the rich man as to his "day in court." As things are now, the poor man who can not afford to engage counsel must go undefended unless accused of a capital crime, in which case a lawyer is appointed by the court.

To the alien, ignorant of our language and customs this is of distinct disadvantage and Mr. Williams thought that the law should be changed so that we could make real our declaration that every man shall be held innocent until he has been proven guilty.

He touched on Gobernor Walch's recommendation for a constitutional convention to carefully consider revision or amendments to the constitution, and thought that it would come to pass in two or three years and would be the means of bringing about the short ballot.

Mr. Williams spoke of that great American, Araham Lincoln and of his true prophecy that this government was by parties and must always be so.

At the close of his remarks, he answered at length many questions put to him by interested listeners.

After mentioning the forthcoming fair at which the men's club has a table and urging all to contribute articles and to patronize it, President Rhoades appointed a committee to bring in nominations for the coming election of officers. The next meeting of the club will be the annual ladies' night, an event which is always anticipated with much pleasure. The meeting closed shortly after 9 o'clock.

The Alaskan Railway, Development Project Of Vast Possibilities

THE bill providing for a government railway in Alaska, which has passed the senate, authorizes the president to raise a sum not exceeding $40,000,000 by the sale of bonds to purchase or construct 1,000 miles of railroad through the territory. There are already about 500 miles of railroad, owned mostly by large mining interests.

The bill places upon the president responsibility for the selection of the route from tidewater to the interior of Alaska and the construction, equipment and operation or leasing of such lines as he may construct or buy to constitute this route. The broadest powers are conferred upon the president.

The bill provides for a redemption fund, into which shall be paid 75 per cent of all moneys derived from the sale of public lands in Alaska or of the coal or mineral contents thereof. Machinery utilized in the construction of the Panama canal is made available for the construction work.

Secretary of the Interior Lane is a warm believer in the Alaskan railway project and declared after the passing of the bill by the senate that it was the greatest encouragement the west had received in many years. Secretary Lane was formerly a member of the interstate commerce commission, and in a recent official memorandum on the ownership and operation of the world's railways prepared by him, he says:

"If we are to open up Alaska we must do so either by subsidizing railroads with land and money grants or by government construction. No other method has been devised in this or any other country.

"The United States has subsidized private construction, Canada has given unprecedented amounts in land and cash and built some lines of its own. England has opened India with government railroads and Africa likewise.

"Nearly all lines of railroad in the Australian colonies have been built by the government. So, too, in the South

SECRETARY LANE AND SECTION OF COPPER RIVER RAILWAY IN ALASKA.

American republics and Mexico, either the government has built the line outright or given a large bonus for its construction.

"One of the greatest railroad undertakings of the age was the building of the Transsiberian railway by Russia. Its building was carried out both as a brilliant move in military strategy and statesmanship to strengthen Russia's power in Asia and as a means of encouraging settlement in the great Asiatic territory and developing its resources.

"The Siberian road, which was constructed entirely by the government, is 4,272 miles long, and its construction cost $180,019,000, or at the rate of a little less than $28,000 per mile. The Russian government has built in Asia a total of about 7,000 miles of railroads."

James Dietrick, a railroad contractor, familiar with Alaska and recently returned from Siberia, where he completed extensive work for the Russian government, has written a letter to President Wilson, in which he institutes a comparison between Siberia and Alaska and points out the benefits which will accrue to Alaska by the building of the proposed railway as follows:

"Alaska, with a railroad starting from some good harbor and built across the country to the Bering strait, will serve to open it up and develop that vast domain, just like the railroads have been the means of peopling and developing Canada and Siberia.

"Alaska's wheat and other farm products will within a year after the railroad is in operation bring in more revenue to the farmers who will follow the construction of the railroad than the cost of the railroad. The crops will increase, mining and other business proceed with rapid strides, and there is no doubt that the revenues will meet operating, upkeep costs and fixed charges and furnish profits which can be devoted to branch line construction. Many parts of this vast domain will soon require rail connection with the main line."

FOR CHECKER CHAMPIONSHIP

Michael Kiley and Napoleon Grignon Will Meet Soon

At. St. Marys hall on Feb. 26, the first of a series of 20 checker matches between Michael Kiley, representing St. Marys C. T. A., and Napoleon Grignon, representing Ave Maria council, will be played. Mr. Kiley who has a fine record on the diamond is one of the strongest checker players in New England. He is a member of the Boston Checker club and finished third in its recent winter tournament. Morall, former champion of England who won the tournament, and Edward Waterhouse of Boston the second place man, will coach Mr. Kiley during the series. Mr. Grignon up to a year ago was thought to have retired from the game. In past years he was one of the strongest in the state and was in great demand for exhibition games. He has specialized on the end play game and because of his deep knowledge of the squares will be a hard man for Mr. Kiley to defeat.

It is the general impression that most of the games will be draws. Messrs. Kiley and Grignon are both entered in the coming tournament at the American House, Boston. The Melville Brown trophies offered to the winner of a bunch of players which will include the pick of the eastern Atlantic players. The local games will be played alternately at St. Mary's hall and Ave Maria council club rooms and are by far the biggest sporting event in West Quincy this season. The two new restriction will govern the matches.

It was the seventh league and the thirteenth straight victory of the season The remaining game out their schedule is with Revere on Saturday and their prospect for going through the season without a defeat is particularly bright. The league includes Winthrop, Quincy, Revere, Reading and Wellesley. Quincy has one more league game, Reading High which will be played here on Feb. 17.

Frank Hoyt of Atlantic, who was with Brockton, will probably go to Sydney, N. S., where he finished up last season. Hoyt is a strong first base man, has a good whip and is a hitter.

Stan Bates, son of Principal Assessor G. B. Bates, will play with Worcester this year. He had one of the best records of all pitchers in the New England league at the season's close although it was his first session.

Link Elcock it is understood will play next summer with the Newburg. N. Y., team where he and Wes Ganzel played last year. Wes sustained a fractured arm several weeks ago at the Fore River shipyard but is steadily improving. He does not expect to play away from home this summer.

Referee Coady who has had a basket ball experience that taught him to know good materail remarked Tuesday that Earl aBtes was the makings of a brilliant player. He said his fine eye, self possession and good spirit is commendable, and that a noticeable feature is that he never becomes excited at critical stages.

A burn on the right arm, received three weeks ago will keep Hamlin out of the game for a week or more.His absence makes quite a hole in the Quincy High first team.

Paige of high school has recovered from the mumps and will be able to play, it is expected in the Dummer Academy game at South Byfield on Saturday.

Two changes have been announced in the Quincy basket ball schedule. The game Friday with Mansfield has been cancelled and Salem will play here on Feb. 23 instead of East Bridgewater.

Rumor has it that the Smith Bros. of Weymouth will give Olindy and Ross a return match at the Coliseum alleys tonight and also that the Cough Drops will not accept the challenge of Costa and Burke. It is understood that Herb Smith and Connell will meet the challengers if arrangements can be made.

St. Marks beat Milton Academy in a fast hockey game at the Cunningham rink Wednesday afternoon, 8 to 4.

The Greater Boston basket ball league games in the Y. M. C. A., tonight between the first and second teams of the Quincy A. A. and the St. Marys of Cambridge should be fast contests. The Quincy team, crippled through the sickness of players earlier in the week will take the floor intact. A win for the champs tonight places them in the lead.

GLADSTONE TO RESIGN IN JUNE

House of Commons Formally Notified to That Effect

NO CONNECTION WITH STRIKE

At Least That Is What Colonial Secretary Harcourt Says—Recent Labor Troubles and Deportations In South Africa Caused Great Turmoil —Buxton For Governor General

London, Feb. 12.—Lewis Harcourt, secretary of state for the colonies, formally notified the house of commons that Viscount Gladstone would cease to be governor General of the Union of South Africa in June.

The reason for the governor general's resignation, Harcourt added, was purely domestic and had no connection with the events arising out of the recent general strike in South Africa and the deportation of the strike leaders. Sydney Buxton was officially announced to succeed Gladstone.

South Africa recently passed through a period of great industrial, social and economic unrest, which culminated in a series of strikes on the Witwatersrand, in Natal, and among the railway workers of the union. Gladstone explained to the parliament that:

"With the final extension of the movement to the gold mines and other industries on the Witwatersrand and in other parts of the union the nature and extent of the danger of these strikes rendered it necessary to call out a portion of the citizen forces and reserves to preserve order, and to prevent the recurrence of the regrettable state of lawlessness which prevailed in Johannesburg on the fourth and fifth days of July.

"The extension of the strike movement to all industrial trades and occupations throughout the country on Jan. 13 finally convinced my ministers that the safety and well-being of the whole union made the declaration of martial law imperative.

"On Jan. 14 the necessary proclamation was issued. The readiness of the response to the call made on Jan. 9 and 10, and the rapidity with which the forces were mobilized and concentrated, were most gratifying, and the thanks of the country are due to those men who at the call of duty left their ordinary avocations at a moment's notice to obey the summons.

"The measures taken and the effective display of force by the citizens of the union happily succeeded in preventing any serious disturbances and in restoring order without bloodshed."

Thereafter ten of the leaders of the strike were deported to England and a storm of protest immediately arose. Meetings in Great Britain called for the recall of Gladstone.

Buxton is fitted to be governor general in South Africa by successful experience in several public posts. As a chairman of arbitration bodies he has qualified as a successful handler of labor disputes.

A cablegram received by Chief McGarr at Boston police headquarters confirmed the report.

Miss Galliano was given in charge of the American consul at Gibraltar. Her father, Gateano Galliano, a retired barber, is now on his way to that port on a steamer that sailed from New York.

TAMMANY IS NEUTRAL

Will Not Oppose New York Organization Plan, Says Murphy

Murphy appeared at Tammany Hall yesterday afternoon for the first time since the president, the governor and William F. McCombs, Democratic national chairman, held their conference in Washington.

ORIGIN STILL A MYSTERY

No Cause Found For $100,000 Fire In a Boston Church

Boston, Feb. 12.—Final investigation of the fire ruins of the Second Universalist church on Columbus avenue, before wreckers tackled the walls and braces, made the origin of the $100,000 fire a mystery.

The electric wire theory was set aside when it was found that the only electrical equipment in the church was a dry battery for sparking gas jets. The organ was pumped by water motor. No motive for an incendiary has been found.

Earthquake In Cuba

Havana, Feb. 12.—An earthquake shock was felt at Santiago de Cuba. The people were panic-stricken, but no serious damage is reported.

DIES IN SICKLES' HOME

Miss Wilmerding Was Soldier's Companion For Years

New York, Feb. 12.—Miss Eleanor E. Wilmerding, for fifteen years housekeeper and companion to General Daniel E. Sickles, died in the general's home at 23 Fifth avenue.

Blamed by the general's wife and her son for the family wrangling which finally left her the sole inmate of the Fifth avenue home, except for the general and his negro servants, Miss Wilmerding died in the house in which she had never in the strict sense of the word lived.

Her own home was at 77 Twelfth street, where she boarded with her sisters, and thither it was her custom to go each night. About three weeks ago Miss Wilmerding was taken ill with a kidney complaint. Her body was carried out of the general's house soon after her death.

At the general's home a servant said Sickles, more than 88 years old, had withstood the shock of losing his companion well.

SWATHED IN BANDAGES

Bride, Groom and Rabbi In Unusual Wedding Ceremony

Cincinnati, Feb. 12.—Not even seeing his bride because she and he were swathed in antiseptic wrappings, as was the officiating rabbi, Milton Newman was married here to Miss Theresa Payser. Both are residents of Baltimore.

The wedding date had been set to be held at the home of a friend in this city, but last week Miss Peyser became ill with scarlet fever and was quarantined. Newan insisted that the wedding be carried out as planned and was given permission by the board of health.

A health officer and a nurse were the only witnesses. Rabbi Morgenstern, the bride and groom and the witnesses were swathed from head to foot in antiseptic wrapping, and immediately after the ceremony the bride was taken to a hospital.

SUED FOR ALLEGED ASSAULT ATTEMPT

Gore Declares He Will Reveal a Political Frame-Up

Oklahoma City, Feb. 12.—With both sides insisting that a complete hearing before a jury was desired, the case of Mrs. Minnie E. Bond of Oklahoma City against United States Senator T. P. Gore of Oklahoma was called before District Judge Clark.

Mrs. Bond is suing Gore for $50,000 for an alleged attempt at assault in Washington, in March, 1913, and for defamation of character.

"Let down the bars," said the senator just before the trial began. "I'm ready for them. They say they can prove damaging things against my character, but before they get through I will have proved this suit a frame-up to ruin my future political career."

The senator was bitter in his denunciation of the suit.

HEAD BATTERED IN

Police Say Two Men Confessed to Killing Chinese Merchant

St. Albans, Vt., Feb. 12.—A confession by Elmer Rushlow and William Dennis that they were the slayers of Chin Kim, a Chinese storekeeper, was announced by the police.

Kim was found dead in his store, his head having been battered in. A glove left in the place is said by the police to have furnished the clew which led to the arrest of Rushlow and Dennis.

According to the police, the men said they went to Kim's second-hand goods shop and asked to look at a fur coat. As the Chinaman turned to get the garment, Rushlow struck him over the head with a coupling pin. The two men stole some watches, burying their plunder in the railroad yards.

Alleged Counterfeiters Held

New Haven, Feb. 12.—Casimir Pulaswiski and Philias Phaneuf, the latter a Yale dining hall cook, were held in bonds of $2000 each by Commissioner Wright on a charge of counterfeiting. A complete counterfeiting plant was discovered in Pulaswiski's room.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES

Another cold wave struck northern New York. The thermometer at Malone registered 30 degrees below zero.

A bill authorizing the secretary of the interior to set aside twenty-acre tracts in reclamation projects in Montana, for playgrounds and public park purposes was passed by the senate.

Fire destroyed the cottonseed house of the Farmers and Millers' Cottonseed Oil company at Birmingham, Ala. The loss is $140,000.

Thomas Fallon, 70, grand trustee of the grand lodge, Knights of Pythias, a veteran of the Civil war and a well known fraternity man of Boston, dropped dead.

Barge Elmer D. Walling is ashore at Groton, Conn., where she was driven after breaking adrift from a tug. She has a cargo of phosphate on board.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is barred from the stage at Richmond by Mayor Ainslee, who said her appearance would "outrage the sense of public decency."

ANNUAL REPORT.

The statement of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company showing the results of its operations during 1913 is not merely an imposing financial exhibit. It is more; it marks the fulfillment of a promise of the management of the Company in its advertisement last year "to begin plans for a material increase in the scale of surplus return (dividends) to policyholders which will still further decrease insurance net costs and which it is expected will become operative next year."

The finances of a great institution which carries the protection of thousands are naturally complex to the uninitiated. But the results are readily understood, and when it is stated that the saving in expense of conducting business of the John Hancock Mutual for the past six years amounted to 5.48 per cent, or four and three-quarter million dollars, it will be seen that there is one indispensable commodity in the cost of living which has been steadily reduced. This saving means increase in the returns to policyholders, and accordingly substantial increases have been made in the dividends.

One of the problems confronting a great financial institution is to provide a remunerative, yet absolutely safe investment for the funds intrusted to it. Over seventeen and one-half million dollars were invested during 1913, the average earning power of its mean ledger assets during the past year being 4.88 per cent—all earned on gilt-edge investments which may be scrutinized in the detailed report of the Company which will be forwarded on request.

For over fifty years the John Hancock Mutual Life has been for its policyholders the protector and the barrier against want in tens of thousands of homes. Its beneficent work increases year by year; the insurance of the wage-earner figured in cents and of the capitalist in dollars, receive consideration alike for both are component units in an institution which is mutual in fact as well as in name.

THOMAS GANNON, Superintendent

The Girl With Titian Hair

And How I Secured an Introduction to Her

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Before settling down to my profession I concluded to spend some time abroad. I reached Naples in January and stayed there long enough to visit Pompeii, climb Vesuvius and pass a great deal of time in the National museum, containing the exhumed treasures of the buried cities.

During my stay in Naples I met on several occasions a family consisting of a father, a mother, a daughter about nineteen and a boy of twelve. I often heard them talk together. They spoke English, and I knew by their accent that they were Americans. I would have liked to make their acquaintance. Indeed, I endeavored to do so one day when I was near the father in the National museum by addressing him a remark. But he did not respond very cordially, and I refrained from another attempt.

My object in making this family's acquaintance was that I wished for companionship with my own countrymen, especially the young lady, about whom there was something to me very attractive. While her complexion had little color, the combination of eyes, hair and skin made up a peculiar style of beauty, the eyes being a dark brown and the hair what is usually called Titian from the fact that the artist used it so often in his pictures.

Having seen the sights at Naples, I took my departure for Rome, where I occupied rooms on the Via Nazionale, opposite the Piazza Venetia. I had been there but a few days when I saw at dinner the American family I have mentioned. If I had been very near them I think I should have made another attempt to form their acquaintance, but as soon as dinner was over they retired to their rooms and the next morning went sightseeing in one direction, while I went on a like errand in another.

My bed at the hotel was uncomfortable, and after tossing on small hummocks one night on arising in the morning I thought I would have a look at the mattresses to see what was the matter. Throwing back the top mattress, there on the one beneath it was a brooch set with valuable gems.

There were many supposable reasons for the brooch to be where it was. First, some guest of the hotel might have put it there temporarily for safe keeping and forgotten it. But this was not probable, for I had occupied the room for a week, and the maid who made the bed would surely have discovered it. The most likely cause for its being there was that some one had stolen it and placed it there temporarily till he or she could remove it.

I took it up and, the morning being dark, carried it to a window to have a better look at it. Feeling something I could not see tickle the back of my hand, I felt for it with the other hand and clasped a hair between my fingers. It was clinging to the brooch, and, disengaging it, I held it up between me and the window. It seemed to be yellow or golden, and, lighting a gas jet, I saw that there was a tinge of red about it. Further examination showed me that it was very like the hair of the young lady whose acquaintance I was desirous of making.

Could the brooch have been stolen from her? If so I might come to know her in either a favorable or an unfavorable light. If I could restore her property I would have an advantage; if I should stand in the position of the thief I might be landed in jail. It would seem that there was not the slightest risk of my reporting my find to the office of the hotel. But while studying my profession—the law—I had attended a number of criminal trials whereby I had learned that it might be a very easy matter for one perfectly innocent to be placed in the position of a thief. I was in possession of a valuable piece of jewelry, and I was the only person, except the thief, who knew that I had not stolen it.

Quite probably the chambermaid was the thief. She would make up the bed during the morning and, if my supposition was correct, would look for the property she had placed between the mattresses. If she did not find it there she would suppose I had taken it. What would she do? What might she do? One of the things she might do was to direct the person who had lost the brooch to me as the probable thief. I must keep her from making the bed till I had determined what course to pursue.

I detached the hair from the brooch and put it in an envelope. Then I put the brooch back between the mattresses where I had found it and got into bed again. After an hour had passed and I had come to no decision what to do in the matter I rang for a waiter and told him to bring up my breakfast. So long as the stolen property was where it had been placed by the thief he or she would not be likely to take any action involving me.

Of course there was but one thing for me to do—to ring for the landlord and show him the brooch between the mattresses. But my judgment was warped by finding the hair that made me suspect the property belonged to the American girl I have referred to. I wished to return the brooch to her myself since this would give me the acquaintance I desired and put her under some obligation to me. By such a course I was liable to get into trouble, but given a young man and a pretty girl the result is risk when there is anything to be gained or lost by risk.

I lay in bed on the treasure till noon trying to form a plan which would gain me what I desired. I came to no conclusion as to any definite action with regard to the disposition of the property I had found, but decided to change my room. I called for the landlord and told him that I wished for a room where I would get more light. He gave me one facing the street. A porter came and transferred my baggage, and I betook myself with the brooch to my new quarters. I thought I saw some advantage in this removal in the fact that in case of my being accused I could claim that the stolen property had been taken away after I had left the room. I remained in my new quarters, but a few minutes, when, taking the brooch with me, I went out to my banker and asked him to deposit it with some other articles—I had made a bundle of all—in his safe.

I now felt better about the situation, for I could take my own time about the return of the brooch and could not see that there was any evidence against me that could be made available by the thief. At any rate, I was ready to take the risk of becoming involved, and since the property could not be found on me and I could establish my respectability I had not much to fear.

I did not return to my hotel till evening and went at once to bed. The next morning I lounged about the hotel, keeping my ears open for any word about stolen property, but I heard nothing and did not dare ask any questions lest my showing a knowledge of the loss should implicate me. While I was in the reading and writing room of the hotel I saw my American friends come downstairs ready to go out. The father had a long conference with the landlord, which, with other evidence I possessed, tended to the theory that the brooch in my possession belonged to the former's daughter. He left the landlord, saying loud enough for me to hear, "You may offer 10,000 francs."

This settled the matter with me. It occurred to me to make a confession then and there, but before I could bring myself to do so the four members of the family left the hotel, entered a cab, and, since I went out directly behind them, I heard the gentleman direct the driver to take them to the baths of Caracalla.

Turning into the Corso Umberto, I walked to the Piazza Colonna, and, taking a seat at one of the sidewalk restaurants to be found there, I called for a liter of wine and, sipping and smoking, bethought myself what next to do. After making up my mind I returned to the hotel, looked at the register and saw the names Edward R. Larned, Mrs. Larned, Miss Larned and Ned Larned. Going to my room, I wrote to Mr. Larned, stating that a valuable brooch had come into my possession which I believed had been stolen. A hair had clung to it of a peculiar shade. I had noticed the shade of hair of the young lady belonging to his party, and since the one clinging to the brooch appeared to be of the same hue I suspected that both might be hers. If he would inform me that my surmise was correct I should be happy to restore the lost article.

I flattered myself that I had the advantage of the gentleman in not asking him to prove property. I took my note down to the landlord for delivery, then left the hotel and did not return to it till after 11 o'clock the same night.

I found Mr. Larned up waiting for me. I had no sooner entered the hotel than the landlord pointed me out to him, and, approaching me, he told me that he had received my note and that my surmise was correct. His daughter had left the brooch in her room without locking it in her trunk, as was their custom with their valuables, and it had doubtless been stolen by a servant. I told him that I was very happy to be able to restore the lost property, but could not do so till the next day since I had taken it to my banker for safe keeping. He stammered something about having offered a reward, but I pretended not to hear him, and, telling him that I would meet him with the brooch in the reading room the next day at noon, we went up to our respective rooms in the same elevator.

When I delivered the brooch the next day Mr. Larned said that his daughter desired an opportunity to thank me for returning it, and he invited me to lunch with his family. It is needless to say that I accepted the invitation and received a charming smile from the young lady as well as her thanks.

"How lucky," she said, "that one of my hairs clung to the brooch! Had it not been so I presume I would not have recovered my property."

She evidently did not consider that it was my bounden duty on finding the brooch to turn it over to the landlord, and I did not enlighten her.

"I had remarked," I said, "the similarity of your hair to that in Titian's portraits, and since the single hair was the same I was sure the property was yours."

"Have you the hair with you?"

"I have not."

"I should like to see it."

"I shall be pleased to show it to you, but you must remember that a reward usually goes with restored property."

I knew that she understood, for she dropped her eyes, and when she spoke again she changed the subject.

That was how I secured an introduction to the American girl and how I found my wife, for after traveling several months in company we returned to America engaged.

RAN SHIP WITH POOR COMPASS

Admission of Monroe's Captain on Witness Stand

HEARD NANTUCKET'S WHISTLE

Only a Lapse of Two Minutes Before Collision With Nantucket Occurred —Stray Messages Unnoticed by Wireless Operators—Captain Berry Pleads Not Guilty at Trial

Philadelphia, Feb. 12.—Captain Berry, commander of the steamship Nantucket, charged with negligence in the recent collision with the steamship Monroe off the Virginia coast, in which forty-one lives were lost, heard Captain Johnson of the sunken Monroe give his version of that disaster before the local United States inspectors of steam vessels, who will determine who was responsible for the accident. Johnson was on the stand all day.

As in the Titanic disaster, it is expected that the inquiry will result in certain changes being made with relation to the navigation of vessels, at least in coastwise trade.

While primarily Berry is on trial, the board of inspectors has instructions from the department of commerce to make a thorough inquiry into every phase of the collision, with the view of the enactment of federal laws to assist in preventing a recurrence of similar disasters.

Berry pleaded not guilty. He is charged with failing to reduce the speed of his ship to avoid the collision; failing to ascertain whether the wireless operator was on duty, and with being careless in not ascertaining through the wireless operator whether any other vessels were close by in the fog.

One of the most important points brought out in the examination of Johnson was that he navigated the Monroe with a steering compass that deviated as much as two degrees from the standard magnet compass.

He said the instrument was sufficiently true to run the ship, and that it was the custom of masters in the coastwise trade to use such compasses. His steering compass, Johnson testified, had never been adjusted in the one year he was master of the Monroe.

The Monroe's captain told the story of the collision and was exhaustively examined by the inspectors. He said the night of the collision was alternately clear and foggy. The collision occurred during a fog.

The first knowledge he had that the Nantucket was near him was when he heard a whistle three points off the starboard bow. He was running at half speed at the time, and stopped the engine to locate the other ship and blow his whistle to let the vessel know he was steering to port. He judged the whistle was about 375 feet away.

Johnson's second knowledge of the proximity of a vessel was when he saw a faint light four points to starboard and about 340 feet away, he said. He believed the other vessel was going in the opposite direction on a parallel line, but a moment later the ship came out of the fog almost at right angles and struck the Monroe on the starboard side aft of the pilot house.

After he discovered the proximity of the Nantucket, Johnson said, he signalled full steam ahead and turned his vessel to port in the hope of receiving only a glancing blow, as he realized a collision could not be averted. Johnson said there was a lapse of only two minutes between the time he heard the Nantucket's first whistle and the collision.

Johnson told in detail the duties of each member of the crew from the first officer down to the stewards. At the time of the collision he had had no sleep for nineteen hours. A number of times, he testified, he had remained in the pilot house all the way from Norfolk to New York.

Questioned as to what action he took to find out through the wireless operator the proximity of other vessels Johnson said he had instructed the operator to ascertain the location of the steamer Hamilton, which he knew was coming down the coast. This vessel was located near the Delaware capes.

The Nantucket must have been between the Hamilton and the Monroe, Johnson said, but the operator on the Nantucket did not make his presence known.

Johnson, when asked his views on the efficiency of the wireless in locating vessels in fogs, said it was a great help.

He added, however, that wireless operators do not bother about messages they hear unless they are directed to the ship. Some operators, he said, do not answer questions about the location of their ships.

CURLEY SMASHES RECORD

Secures Over $44,000 in Few Minutes For Boston Boom Fund

Boston, Feb. 12.—The "Million Dollar a Year Boom Boston Fund" got a flying start yesterday.

Within twenty-five minutes yesterday afternoon Mayor Curley gathered in the old aldermanic chamber at city hall an assemblage of prominent business men, closed the doors to prevent escape and talked $44,250 out of their pockets into the coffers of the fund.

It was the quickest and most immediately successful financial campaign ever waged by a mayor of Boston, and is said to be the first instance in the history of this country of a city's going directly to the business men for money to finance public improvements looking toward industrial development.

Thirty-seven of those present, or their representatives, volunteered to contribute $1000 each. Others contributed $500, $250, $100 and $50, respectively, in rapid succession. In all sixty-eight persons contributed to the fund yesterday.

CONDEMNS HAYWOOD

Taft Declares Him to Be Type Led by the Red Flag

Amherst, Mass., Feb. 12.—William D. Haywood, one of the leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World, was discussed last night by former President Taft as representing a type of unionism led by the red flag and without God or country.

Taft was delivering the first of a series of lectures on political science before the students of Amherst college. He spoke on the topic, "The Signs of the Times."

The tendency of the present day toward universal brotherhood was commended, but the speaker deplored the extension of this tendency toward paternalism and socialism. Trade unions were to be praised for their benefit to the worker, but the "red flag" organizations were to be denounced, he said.

HOW HOLY ROLLERS DRIVE OUT DEVILS

Epileptic Boy Seriously Flogged and Trampled Upon

Duquoin, Ills., Feb. 12.—Noah Hickman is in a serious condition at his home in the Ozark hills as a result of a flogging administered by leaders of the Holy Roller sect, of which his father, Dolph Hickman, is a leader.

Young Hickman is an epileptic, and in an effort to drive out seven devils with which he was said to be possessed the Holy Rollers flogged and trampled upon his body until relatives interfered.

The boy sustained a broken arm, dislocated shoulder and several fractured ribs, which render his condition precarious. The leaders have been arrested, but declare they will pray the prison doors open.

TUG POTOMAC SAFE

Short of Supplies, but Crew of Thirty-Six Men Are Well

Carling, N. F., Feb. 12.—Several of the crew of the American naval tug Potomac, which is fast in the ice, came ashore and are at Lobster Head light station. They reported that all of the thirty-six men were well, but that the vessel was short of coal and provisions.

The Potomac was dispatched from the navy yard at Norfolk more than two weeks ago to release several American fishing schooners which had been caught in the ice at Bay of Islands.

The Potomac arrived on the scene last Thursday and was endeavoring to open a passage in the ice. Ice floes gripped the tug and had carried her helpless since then.

The strikers get no increase in wages, but working conditions will be so altered as to affect the payment schedule. More than 1400 hands were thrown out of work as a result of the strike, which lasted six weeks.

Pooles' orchestra will furnish the music for the dancing and Whittemore will cater at the annual concert ball of Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., to be held at Music hall, Thursday evening, March 12. These two features should in themselves assure the success of the affair.

The funeral of Grace E. Mahoney, wife of Dennis Mahoney of Roxbury, former Quincy residents, was held this morning. ISLANDS OF THE PACIFIC

Illustrated at Meeting of Bethany Brotherhood

Of the many enjoyable events of the Bethany church Brotherhood, that of Wednesday evening was the most entertaining and instructive, when an illustrated talk was given by William H. Bain of Boston, senior member of Bain Brothers Co., the wholesale grocers on Milk street, and a brother of B. H. Bain of Wollaston. Mr. Bain has travelled around the world and is interested in the Boston North End Mission, and other philanthrophic work. He came at the request of E. V. Fitts, and was introduced by President Frank W. Crane.

Mr. Bain does not pose as a public speaker, but is certainly an entertainer, and gave his large audience a clear idea of the Hawaiian, Samoa and New Zealand islands of the Pacific. His talk was illustrated by the stereopticon, the pictures being thrown by A. H. Gilson of this city.

Sailing from San Francisco Mr. Bain landed first at Honolulu. He told of the luxuriant vegetable growth, the crops, the even climate, the people and their habits, the love of flowers and music, and illustrated the sugar plantations, volcanoes, houses, and beautiful scenery.

Touching at Samoa he told of some beautiful drives and visits to volcanoes, which he illustrated. But the most interesting part related to New Zealand. He told of the wonderful scenery, the geysers, the hot pools and boiling lakes, etc; also the advanced laws of the country. The government controls the railroad, coal mines and other utilities while the cities control the street railways, and other services. No rich and no poor there, and he told why there were no tax dodgers. He corroborated the story relative to Pelorus Jack, the wonderful fish which as regularly as clock work escorts ships through a difficult channel.

A rising vote of thanks was given at the close, and prolonged applause.

Refreshments were served, including cocoa, crackers and cheese, and cake. The committee included William Stevens, Wesley Beckford and R. Hendry.

A complimentary concert by the Weber quartet and a reader is announced for Friday evening, March 13.

BRIEFS

A. H. Remick left Tuesday for a brief trip to the south for his health.

John Tytler of Trafford street is seriously ill at the Quincy City Hospital.

The flag is being displayed on City Hall today in honor of Lincolns birthday.

Alfred H. Bamford, pupil of the first grade new Adams school, is confined to his home with measles.

This is the kind of a day that makes the coal bin look sick, for in order to keep warm one must be constantly shoveling coal into the furnace.

A few days of weather like today and the ice men will be able to harvest their second crop, and there can be no good excuse for jacking up the price next summer.

Plans are being formulated for the celebration of the 30th anniversary of Mt. Wollaston Lodge, I. O. O. F. on March 10. An elaborate program will be given and the guests of the evening will be men high up in the councils of the order.

Mark L. Read, Jr. and John Curtis secured the two highest scores at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club Wednesday evening. At the conclusion of the tournament the entertainment committee served an oyster chowder.

A substantial increase in returns to policyholders was provided for during the year.

In the Weekly Premium Branch, to prepare for this increase a final extra sum of over TWO MILLION DOLLARS was added to the policy reserves, completing the change to a higher reserve basis as authorized by law.

There was also set aside in liabilities, in addition to the regular amount reserved for dividends on these policies, extra reserve to provide for a 25% increase in the cash dividends for 1914, and further:

An extra reserve to provide for mortuary additions, making the insurance benefits on the old policies which are expected to become death claims in 1914, equal to those of the present scale. This means that the Company expects and is prepared to pay to these policyholders in 1914, 600,000 more than their policies call for.

The Directors, in announcing these features in 1913, said:

"The complete realization of these plans will not only place the interests of the Weekly Premium Policies in the strongest position, but will also advance the Company squarely to the front with respect to soundness of basis and percentage of returns to the holders of such policies."

In the Ordinary Branch there was also reserved an extra sum to provide for an increase in the return, or dividend, to the policies equal to a 17 per cent average increase over the scale in use prior to 1914. This necessitated the laying aside in reserve of over two million dollars on December 31, 1913.

The Directors, in announcing this increase, said:

"The total abatement of premium, or as it is popularly termed, dividend, thus established for 1914 upon policies of the Ordinary Branch, will aggregate a sum estimated at over TWO MILLION DOLLARS, which will be reserved as a liability in the annual statement for 1913, and which is approximately 25 per cent greater than the dividend liability reserved in the 1912 statement for 1913. By this action the Company advances to a higher place in the ranks of the Companies having a record for low net cost."

NORFOLK DOWNS ACCIDENT FATAL

Mrs. Magaret Ross Struck by Train While Crossing the Tracks at Depot

Died at Quincy Hospital About an Hour Later

It was a particularly sad accident at the Norfolk Downs depot Thursday afternoon which resulted in the death an hour later of Mrs. Margaret L. Ross. Mrs. Ross whose home is in Presque Isle, Me., was in Quincy on a visit to her sons John A. L. Ross of Billings road and James W. Ross of Division street. She was going from the home of her son on Billings road to that of her son on Division street. Being bundled up with clothing she either failed to see the approaching outward express train, or seeing it thought that she had time to cross. She was almost across when the engine struck her throwing her some distance. She landed on the concrete platform.

The train came to a stop as soon as possible, and the train crew ran back to where the prostrate woman lay. Among the passengers on the train was Dr. Malcolm D. Miller of Norfolk Downs who realizing how serious the woman's condition was had her put aboard the train and taken to Quincy from which station she was taken to the City Hospital in the police ambulance, being accompanied by Dr. Miller.

At the hospital it was found that her right leg was badly crushed to the hip, and that the side of her head was crushed in such a manner as to have caused a fracture of the skull. She lived until shortly before 3 o'clock when she passed away.

The body was taken to Hall's undertaking rooms and later was taken to her home in Presque Isle, Me. Mrs. Ross who was in her 73d year was the wife of Alexander Ross.

BODY SENT TO WORCESTER.

The body of Patrick Kenney, a Fore River shipyard employee, who died at the Quincy City Hospital under the name of Patrick O'Dowd was today sent to Worcester where he formerly lived. The body was claimed by a sister. A high mass of requiem will be celebrated at St. John's church, that city, Saturday morning. Burial will be in the St. John cemetery.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Houghs Neck Ward Petition Is Not In Favor

It is probable that next week carpenters will be at work making the necessary alterations at City Hall to provide a new office for the Mayor. As already noted he will take the office now used by the City engineer whose office will be moved to room 11 in the basement. It is also probable that the committee room on the second floor will be enlarged so as to make room for a table at which some of the Engineer's force may work during the day.

It is more than likely when the petition of the residents of Houghs Neck comes before the City Council to be set apart as a separate ward, that there will be more or less opposition. The one great opposition is that it will increase the number of Councilmen from 23 to 27. Many are now finding fault because the City Council is too large and the tendency is to reduce the number of councilmen rather than increase it. This of course could not be done without an amendment to the City Charter. Should the present City Council act favorably on the Houghs Neck petition, a petition may be presented to the next Legislature providing for the election of all the Councilmen-at-large; or nine or ten at-large and one from each ward. On the whole the present ward lines are very satisfactory and the Houghs Neck petition meets with little favor.

The question has been asked what has become of the Timothy Golden case that was started during the last week of Mayor Stone's administration. It will be remembered that Mayor Stone preferred charges against Officer Golden, but as there was not sufficient time before Mayor Stone went out of office to give Mr. Golden a hearing the case came over to the present administration. Mayor Miller has set a date once for a hearing, but was obliged to postpone it on account of illness of Ralph W. Hobbs, the counsel for Officer Golden. In the meantime however an order was introduced in the City Council retiring Officer Golden on a pension. This was referred to the Finance Committee who have not reported upon it. As Mr. Hobbs is still seriously ill there is some question as to when the hearing before the Mayor will eventually be held. In the meantime the matter is being held in abeyance.

SAYS THERE WAS FRAME-UP

Attorney Russell Had Detectives Watch Detectives

Arthur P. Russell of Wollaston, for some time legislative counsel for the New Haven railroad threw a bomb at the New Haven inquiry Thursday when he declared that detectives in the employ of the Boston Journal, had dogged his footsteps, had put up frameups, etc.

This sensational testimony came out at the hearing before the Public Service Commission, when Mr. Russell was being examined by Caunsel Hill for the Journal as to personal expenses outside of his salary. Mr. Russell testified that his expense account averaged from $400 to $425 a month, and included auto hire, subscriptions to newspapers and periodicals, use of long distance telephone and dectective hire.

Mr. Russell then went on to explain that he had employed detectives, not in the interest of legislation, but as a matter of self protection to watch detectives in the employ of the Journal who had him under surveillance most of the time for the past two years.

Mr. Russell told how detectives employed by the Boston Journal had encroached upon his home and business and that he had hired detectives to find out what they were doing.

He knew, he said, of the Monahan frame-up three days before it came out. He also knew of the poker game frame up and another.

Attorney Hill of the Boston Journal in reply, said that at the beginning of this investigation detectives were hired by the Journal but that he knew nothing to justify the accusations made by Mr. Russell, as to frame ups. Nothing was done to his knowledge to place Mr. Russell in an unfair position, only to obtain facts.

Continiung, Mr. Russell said, that if the Journal detectibes had found anything that ought to be brought before the commission it ought to be brought now. "If you want any witnesses as to some of the underhanded methods used by you—and I am not qualified to state them—I will bring him."

Continuing Mr. Russell said that he did not intend to imply that Mr. Hill had anything to do with the frame-ups, and he thought that gentleman had already found that a great deal of the information brought to him was incorrect. "It is not a pleasant thing to have your home and your personal employees invaded. I was on to it and I employed people to tell me what you were doing."

Mr. Russell was examined at length regarding payments made on vouchers submitted.

ON FIRE SEVERAL WEEKS

Coal Supply of Street Railway Is Threatened

There has been a fire burning in the big pile of coal at the power plant of the street railway at Quincy Point for some weeks, as they have never been able to get at the seat of the fire so as to extinguish it. The only way it is possible to get the fire out is to shovel the coal all over or keep it in check until the pile of coal is exhausted.

The annual reunion of the Sacred Heart parish of Atlantic will be held at Alpha hall next Monday evening. The program includes an entertainment, refreshments and dancing.

JIG AND REEL A FEATURE

At Ladies' Night of Quincy Herd of Buffaloes

The first annual ladies night of Quincy herd, Benevolent Order of Buffaloes, took place Thursday evening in Hibernian hall. There was dancing from 8 to 9. From 9 to 10 a whist party was held, in which the winners were: Mrs. Thomas Cotter, ladies prize, and Charles H. Finn, gentlemen's prize, while the consolation went to Mrs. Alexander Emslie.

An excellent entertainment at which real talent was shown included: vocal solos by Philip Savard, George Davey, and Miss Elizabeth McVey, who was accompanied on the piano by Miss Dixon; and a whistling solo by Matthew Fay. The novelty of the evening was furnished when Mrs. Thomas Lewis challenged anyone in the hall to do a jig and reel with her. The challenge was accepted by President Charles H. Finn, who helped to furnish a good deal of excitement for a while. Refreshments were served and dancing was then in order until midnight. George Thompson furnished the music.

The following committee was in charge: Herbert Seldon, Albion Dixon, George Davey, Philip Savard, William A. Stone, William Porter, Michael Lyons, Joseph Griffin, Charles Eva, Thomas Lewis. Thomas Cotter, Charles Hersey, Michael Mahr, and John Kingdon.

The primary purpose of the gathering was to take steps for the formation of a ladies' auxiliary to the herd. An organization meeting will be held next week and membership will be open to any ladies in Quincy for sixty days. The auxiliary will be under the supervision of the Supreme herd of the Buffaloes. These auxiliaries are being formed all over the state and the enthusiasm shown indicates a successful organization in Quincy.

WILL EXPLAIN THE PLANS

City Engineer to Speak on Grade Crossing Decree

A meeting of the newly organized Ward Three Improvement Association will take place next Wednesday evening, in Clan MacGregor hall. The secretary has received word that City Engineer Sargent will be on hand to explain at length the plan for the abolition of the grade crossing at South Quincy. As this is a question of great importance to residents of Ward Three, an overflow meeting is expected. The meeting will begin at 7 o'clock so that plenty of time can be given to the City Engineer.

MRS. FRANK L. SCHAFER.

The body of Mrs. Frank L. Schafer of Winthrop will be brought here for burial at Mt. Wollaston cemetery on Sunday. Mrs. Schafer was born in Quincy 59 years ago. HIGH SCHOOL DEBATING

Society Organized by Young Men of School

The Quincy High School Debating Society was organized Thursday afternoon. The society has a membership of twenty-one young men selected from the senior and junior classes. It is the purpose of the organization to promote and maintain an interest in class and inter-scholastic debates in the High school.

The officers are: Leon White, class of 1914, president: Thomas Barstowe, class of 1915, vice-president; and Frederick Atwood, class of 1914, secretary. The society is under the advisorship of Mr. Fenner and Mr. Fuller of the faculty. The chairman will appoint a committee of five to draw up a constitution and by-laws for the government of the society. This committee will report at next meeting of the organization, which is to be held, Thursday afternoon, Feb. 19.

STEAM TRAWLER AS AN ICE SHIP

Staggering under the weight of fully 100 tons of ice the steam trawler Breaker, built at Quincy Capt. John Steele, pushed up the harbor to T Wharf Thursday afternoon. Covered with ice from end to end the fishing vessel resembled a moving iceberg. The hull, decks and fittings were buried under several inches of frozen spume. Rails and ratlines were swollen to four times their normal size. The ice covered the pilot house and froze up the windows. The skipper had to scrape off enough ice so that he could see to navigate the craft.

Noon Temperature the Same As Thursday

Although it seems a little milder today than it was Thursday, the fact remains that at noon the temperature was just the same as at that hour Thursday. This morning at sunrise the glass registered just zero which was ten degrees warmer than on Thursday morning. The high northwest wind which prevailed all day Thursday had gone down however so that makes it seems a little milder.

In many places in greater Boston Thursday it was necessary to close the school buildings on account of the inability to heat them, but Quincy was fortunate in not having to close any of its buildings on this account although it was necessary to burn considerable extra coal to keep the buildings at the right temperature.

The weather probabilities promise a slowly rising temperature and snow is indicated for Saturday or Sunday.

HEPTASOPHS INSTALLATION.

Milton Irving and the other officers of Granite conclave of Heptasophs will be installed in Electa hall Monday evening by District Deputy Supreme Archon Thomas M. Galvin of Hyde Park, who has been recently appointed to this district. The arrangements for the affair were made at the regular meeting in Protection hall Thursday night. Two applications for membership were received and one candidate was initiated.

TODAY'S COURT.

Business was unusually quiet at the district court this morning, there not being a single criminal or civil case to demand the court's attention so that the court did not come on the bench at all. It very seldom happens that a morning goes by without a case of some kind coming before the court.

COST OF DISTRIBUTION.

Social economists, in the effort to find the causes of high cost of living, are giving more and more attention to the expense of distribution. It is being realized that our machinery for delivering the products of the farm and the mill to the consumer is very crude and bungling. On a great many articles the price the consumer pays is multiplied two or three or more times from the value at the farm or at the factory.

This high cost of distribution is not largely in railroad rates. It is in handling over too many times, and still more in piecemeal handling in too small quantities.

It is probable that the system of distribution through a very large number of little retail stores is largely to blame. The small store, doing a little business, with overhead charges high for the total proceeds, has to charge up too large a sum as the cost of clerk hire, rent, insurance, etc.

Any retailer can meet the need of the times by enlarging his business, and reducing overhead charges, and sales expense, dividing up these charges into a bigger volume of sales. When a retailer doubles his business, it does not usually happen that he doubles his expense for salespeople, rent, etc. He can then afford to sell cheaper.

The retail business of the future will probably be more concentrated. Not into department stores in the large cities, but into enterprising, hustling stores serving the local community so well that they get a big business at home.

The way to get this larger business, and thus help the consumer meet the cost of living, is to conduct systematic campaigns if advertising. Any business can in this way grow to a size where it will become an efficient and economical distributing machine. Try it Mr. Merchant! Thereby you will go with the current of the times, instead of against it!

PERSONALITY OF PRINTERS.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat comments on a news item from the Illinois penitentiary at Joliet, to the effect that among the 1200 inmates, there is not one printer. The newspaper produced by the prisoners has therefore to be set up outside the institution. The Globe-Democrat remarks: "The printing craft is not supplying its quota to the penitentiaries of the country."

The Globe-Democrat notes that it was not always thus in the days before linotypes, when the tramp printer infested the land. Often he celebrated press day by going on a spree.

Printers as a whole do seem singularly free from the criminal taint. They are unpretentious, simple minded, living in modest houses in side streets. Few of them own "dress suits" and their names rarely appear in the select columns of high society.

A printer on newspaper work spends his time putting into type the history of the world. All forms of human activity pass through his brain and hands before the record is spread before the world. His mind is a storehouse of human experiences, and he looks at life with the maturity that grows out of this background of intelligence.

A man before whom his daily picture of crime and punishment is spread must be a fool indeed, if he did not acquire a pretty just estimate of the real value of life. From thousands of human stories that come to his attention, the value of law abiding conduct is to him axiomatic.

All callings have their faults. The printer sees too much human futility. The joy, the achievement, are commonly not dramatic enough to make good news stories. It is not strange that the average printer becomes somewhat cynical in this mental atmosphere. But it is the pessimism of a clear eyed, thinking man, who in a quiet way puts much folly out of the way by his perception of its uselessness.

GOTHAM GUNMEN IN BOLD HOLDUP

Seven, Heavily Armed, "Stick Up" Cafe at Midnight

RIVAL IS FATALLY WOUNDED

Gangsters Then Take $4000 in Cash and Jewels From Patrons and Flee, Closely Pursued by Police, Who Succeed in Landing Three of Them —"Gungirl" Is the Latest

New York, Feb. 13.—East Side gunmen broke into the holdup game in wild and woolly western style when seven of them, armed with revolvers, slungshots and knives, "stuck up" and looted patrons of the Tripoli restaurant of $4000 in cash and jewels and fatally stabbed Anthony Celentano as the result of a blood feud. In a hot street chase policemen captured three of the gunmen who fled when their victims screamed.

Celentano, his wife and the usual crowd of midnight diners were seated at tables at the Tripoli when seven gunmen walked in, ranged themselves about the walls of the little cafe and drew revolvers.

"There's that —— ——," said one, walking over to the table where Celentano, who recently shot a gunman to death in Chinatown, was sitting. As Celentano, white with fear, arose, the gunman plunged his knife several times into Celentano's side and abdomen and he crumpled up on the floor.

"That's all for that," said the gangsters' leader. "Now, you," turning to the horrified crowd, "hands up!"

Every person in the place was then robbed, Raymond Perrette, the proprietor, losing the contents of his cash register, and the bandits broke for the door. As they fled the women in the place screamed in chorus and three policemen ran in.

They understood in an instant and bolted for the Bowery, up which the gunmen, separated, were in full flight. Each policeman marked down his man and each captured him. At the police station they gave their names as Silvia Tagliagamba, Leo Ballanga and Antonio Santini.

Santini was identified as the man who stabbed Celentano, who, apparently dying, was rushed to St. Vincent's hospital while the gangsters were placed in cells. Only a small part of the booty captured was recovered, the four who escaped apparently having carried most of the loot.

Special details of police immediately started to scour the lower East Side dens in a determined search to round up and capture the remainder of the gang.

The gungirl is also here. The first of them is locked up here after a police raid in the Bronx. She is Edna Freund, pretty, vivacious and 18.

When the police heard of the Bachelors' club ball they attended and searched all the guests for firearms. Several guns were collected from the men. Then, on a tip, Edna was taken in. A pistol was found in her stocking.

CREDITORS REJECT OFFER

Siegel Banking Depositors Want More Than Thirty Percent Cash

New York, Feb. 13.—Counsel for one of the protective committees of Henry Siegel & Co's banking depositors has served notice upon counsel for Henry Siegel and counsel for the mercantile creditors of the Siegel enterprises that the proposed compromise by which depositors in the bank were to get 30 cents on the dollar in cash is not acceptable to his clients.

More cash, additional security for the balance due and the conservation for the depositors of the claims against the Siegel store is demanded.

DEMOCRATS REMAIN AWAY

Prevent Discussion of the Asiatic Exclusion Bills

Washington, Feb. 13.—Democrats of the house immigration committee again prevented discussion of Asiatic exclusion bills by remaining away from the meeting. Secretary Bryan had asked the committee not to agitate the question by discussion while diplomatic negotiations were pending.

After conferences, the senate immigration committee decided to report without delay the Burnett general immigration bill, already passed by the house.

Serious Fires at Brockton

Brockton, Mass., Feb. 13.—A 6-months-old child was burned to death, an adult daughter rescued her mother by carrying her from a burning dwelling, a husband, wife and their five children were saved from suffocation and fifty lodgers were driven into the streets by three bad fires that kept the department busy.

Washinton, Feb. 13.—Ground was broken here for the Lincoln memorial, a $2,000,000 structure, the purpose of whose designers is that it shall stand through time as an example of the best in architecture and sculpture that this age could produce.

A Peculiar Fatality

New York, Feb. 13.—Charles H. Lord, floorwalker in a Sixth avenue department store, fainted and pitched head first into a show case. The broken glass cut his throat and he bled to death.

HAMPERED BY COLD

Firemen of Greater Boston Have Hard Work In Subduing Flames

Boston, Feb. 13.—More than a score of fires in Greater Boston brought suffering, large property losses and death before fire fighting forces, braving the bitter cold which sent the mercury to its lowest point in eighteen years, could overcome the riot of the flames.

The greatest losses and hardest battles occurred at Somerville and Arlington, where houses fell prey to flames, necessating double alarms to cope with the situations.

Scores of people are homeless. In many places hot water had to be supplied by people in the neighborhood of the fires to thaw the hose and valves in order that the water might be obtained to check the blazes.

In Chelsea the department was called upon eight times to fight separate fires. In Malden there were five calls, while Newton, Medford and other places about Boston had many calls to their credit.

In Boston proper the fire apparatus answered many calls, although a majority of the fires were of small proportions. The property loss is upward of $90,000.

ROOSEVELT FOR GOVERNOR

Boom Is Launched at Meeting of New York Progressives

New York, Feb. 13.—An entire Progressive ticket will be placed in the field at the New York state election next fall. The state committee of the national Progressive party decided upon this at a meeting here. Theodore Roosevelt was suggested as the Progressive candidate for governor.

The former president was referred to by John S. Van Dusen of Elmira, who launched the boom for "the gentleman in South America."

Van Duser urged that the party work without taking Roosevelt into its confidence and give him a "surprise" upon his return home. In the interest of the party he would not refuse the nomination, the speaker thought, and his acceptance of it would mean a sweeping victory for the Progressives in this state this year and a national triumph in 1916.

PILOTS BURNING STEAMER TO SHORE

Former Pal of Twain's Loses His Life In Saving Others

New Orleans, Feb. 13.—Captain William Barry of the river steamboat Gem, which took fire in the Mississippi, ten miles above New Orleans, stuck to the wheel, clad only in his night clothes, and piloted the boat to shore, saving nineteen lives.

Five who perished besides himself died because they became panic stricken and leaped into the water.

Barry was a river pal of Mark Twain and is mentioned in several of his books. John Hays' "Jim Bludsoe" was Barry's favorite poem. It was framed in the pilot house where the captain lost his life. He was 65 years old.

TORY OPINION UNCHANGED

British House of Lords Still Opposed to Irish Home Rule

London, Feb. 13.—The house of lords adopted an amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne demanding a general election on the question of home rule for Ireland.

The majority in favor of the amendment was 188, the vote being: For the amendment, 243; against, 55.

The vote followed strict party lines, and showed that the discussion of home rule for Ireland, which has lasted thirty years, has not changed the opinion of the Tory majority in the upper chamber.

WATERFRONT BLEW OUT

W. L. Thompson Injured by Accident at His House

W. L. Thompson, of 837 Hancock street, had a narrow escape from serious injury Thursday morning when the waterfront of his stove blew out, the flying iron striking him in the head and scattering the red hot caols about the floor. The flying iron cut quite a gash in his forehead which required the services of Dr. Adams to sew up. A telephone call was sent to the Central fire station and the auto chemical responded and extinguished the blaze which did not do much damage.

This morning the central station was notified that a steam pipe had burst in the Durgin & Merrill block but no damage was done.

While many cities suffered considerable by fires due directly to the cold snap, Quincy fortunately escaped with those noted above.

VENUS AND MARS.

The Theory That Life Exists Upon Both of Those Planets.

We are bound to hold life to be a general phenomenon in nature, developing wherever the stars are shining on their attendant planets, and thus wherever a star twinkles in the depths of the firmament.

Now as for Mars and Venus, in our own system, it need hardly be said that they are surely inhabited by living beings of some kind. Observations show that Mars has a rare atmosphere, a day thirty-seven minutes longer than our own, seasons of the same type, but longer duration; and snow caps at the poles, and thus water vapor, though the amount is small. Mars is a desert planet, with a very rare air, about like that in the higher regions of the Himalaya mountains. But as life on the earth extends to the highest plateaus and mountains, except when perpetually frozen, it may also exist on the planet Mars, which has a moderate temperature, as shown by the formation of clouds in the twilight belt, after the sun has set for the Martians.

The probability of Venus being inhabited is much greater than that of Mars, for Venus rotates in 23 hours 21 minutes and in all respects so closely resembles the earth as to be called her twin sister. Venus has an abundance of air, clouds, water and also mountains and therefore seas, lakes and rivers. The seasons are like ours except they are shorter, the year being 225 days in length. Why should not such a planet be inhabited? If a man were transported to Venus and landed there without injury it seems certain that he could live and flourish physically under the air and temperature of this beautiful planet.—T. J. J. See in Leslie's.

"FAGGED OUT" WOMEN

Will Find Help in This Letter.

Overworked, run down, "fagged out" women who feel as though they could hardly drag about, should profit by Mrs. Brill's experience.

She says: "I was in a very weak, run-down condition. Life was not worth living. I could not sleep, was very nervous, stomach bad, and was not able to work.

"I consulted with one or two physicians, without benefit. I read of Vinol helping some one in a similar condition so I began to take it, and it simply did wonders for me. I gained in weight and I am now in better health and stronger than ever. I can not finds words enough to praise Vinol."—Mrs. W. H. Brill, Racine, Wis.

Thousands of women and men who were formerly weak and sickly owe their present rugged health to the wonderful strength-creating effects of Vinol. We guarantee Vinol to build you up and make you strong. If it does not we give back your money. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

There was a dedication at the state house, in the hall of flags, of the statuary group to the memory of the Massachusetts army nurses of the Civil war. The bronze group by Bela Pratt, which represents a nurse assisting a wounded soldier, was unveiled.

BLAME FOR WRECK LAID ON TRAINMEN

But Railroad Officials Should See Rules Are Enforced

Washington, Feb. 13.—It is not sufficient for a railroad to have good rules, but "it is the duty of the "officials to know whether or not the rules are observed."

This was declared in a report to the interstate commerce commission by H. W. Belnap, chief inspector of safety appliances, upon the accident on the Vermont Central railway near Georgia, Vt., on Nov. 16 last, when one fireman and one trespasser were killed and two employes were injured.

The wreck was due to the failure of Conductor Holland and Engineman Brown of the northbound train, No. 14, to comply with orders, according to Belnap.

WHISKEY DOES NOT KILL

Belief of Woman Whose Husband Took Forty Drinks a Day

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Mrs. Bessie Harlan Shaw, wife of Robert Shaw, a millionaire, telling of her domestic troubles in the circuit court, testified that her husband often drank eight or nine whiskies "in a row" before breakfast.

"For seven or eight years," she testified, "he has regularly drunk thirty to forty drinks of whiskey a day. I have heard whiskey kills people, but I can hardly believe it now. I made a settlement with him for $100,000, which he gave me."

Bowling Contests Athletic Leagues
Illustrated Lectures Banquets
Basket Ball Conferences

"Handicaps" is the topic which Rev. S. C. Lang has chosen for his talk to the boys at the meeting Saturday morning. The Wanderers have charge of the advertising of this meeting and Joseph Messier is ticket collector.

Col. Edward Anderson is to give the Lincoln Memorial address at the opening Fireside meeting this evening. The speaker has many personal reminiscences relating to our greatest President and may be depended upon to give a vitally interesting talk.

The chorus which is to sing at the Men's meetings will meet at the theatre Sunday at 3.15 entering by the stage door. The ushers are to meet in the lobby at 3.00 o'clock.

The ladies night for seniors and the older student members of the association will be held next Tuesday evening. The committee promise something new in the shape of an indoor athletic meet in which both fellows and girls may take part. There will be the usual bowling matches and refreshments.

The delegation of older boys from the Quincy association which is to attend the State Boys conference in Lawrence over Washington's Birthday comprises the following: Sturgis Hunt, Maynard Hatch, Harold Baker, Wiliam Welsford, Milton Moore, James Matheson, William Cumming, Gustaf von Colln, John McNeil, Frederick Tobbenboske and Louis Osberg.

There will be a meeting of the Mother and Son banquet committee in the Association building next Monday evening. The banquet is to be held on Wednesday, March 18, and H. W. Gibson, State secretary for Boys, is to speak on "A mother and her boy."

The Pilgrims apparently led the Puritans at the conclusion of their bowling match, but when the scores were corrected it proved to be the case of a tie, each team getting 295 pins. The Puritans will try to down the Wanderers in the match Saturday morning.

Drawings for the junior all-around games championship have been made, and play will commence Saturday morning. The entrants will each bowl one string, play one game of checkers, one set of ping pong, and one rack of pool. The students are holding a similar contest and are almost through with it. Baker and Matheson are leading so far.

Tufts holds the lead in the Employed Boys gym contest by a very slender margin, both Yale and Carlisle being within two points of the leader. Marvard is trailing at fourth place.

The Junior gym contest is still close enough to be interesting with the Pilgrims leading B. A. by 5 points, the Wanderers third and the Puritans fourth.

Makaria and the Rand class bowl tonight in the Sunday School bowling league match. In the opening match last week, the Davis class defeated the Clark class taking three of the four points.

The opening games in the Sunday School basketball league will be held on Saturday, Feb. 28. Practice is going on regularly and the average attendance on practice days is 25, showing considerable interest. There will be two classes this year, one for boys 15 and 16 years of age, and the other for boys under 15. In each class there will be two divisions and at the end of the season the winners in the divisions will meet to settle the championship of the class. The schedule of games will be announced next week.

Miss Mathilda Brown, home missionary of Boston, will give the address, and Mrs. Wilson Marsh will have charge of the devotional exercises, at the regular monthly meeting of the Women's Auxiliary this afternoon.

The first and second basketball teams go to Milton Saturday evening to meet the Cunningham gym teams. On the local floor there will be two games, the Silent Five playing the Red Men, and the Employed Boys taking on a team from Roxbury.

NEWS ITEMS FROM MILTON

Ernest P. Libby of Belcher circle left for a trip to Philadelphia last Sunday. He expects to remain there a week.

J. E. Smith of Reservation road left for a Canadian trip [illegible] which will require over a week's travelling.

A supper was given Wednesday evening at the East Congregational church by the women of the church.

The Men's Club of the East Congregational church will hold a lecture, dance and social hour in Ellsworth hall Wednesday evening.

The no-school signals were sounded Thursday for the first time for several years. The cold was very severe and the lowest point in temperature was 15 below zero. Many of the High school students that live in East Milton, following their regular custom, walked to school and failed to hear the signal. The cold truth was brought home when they found the building closed.

An Anti Suffrage rally will be held in Ellsworth hall Feb. 19, and the speaker will be Miss Lucy J. Price of Cleveland, Ohio.

Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Schrieber of the Palisi block are the parents of a daughter, born Monday. Mother and child are doing well.

Many attended the open dancing party at the Cunningham gym Wednesday night. The matrons were Mrs. J. Rowell of Huntington road and Mrs. J. Hutchinson of Bates road. Music was furnished by Browns orchestra and refreshments were served.

ANOTHER ICE CROP.

The Meadow Brook Ice Co., report that it has from six to seven inches of ice on their Wendall quarry pond and that work has been commenced marking off the pond preparatory to housing the crop. The company also has a new pond near the Wendall quarry, where there is about ten inches of ice, but it is doubtful if this pond is cut this year. At the present time the company is erecting a large ice house near the pond and machinery will be installed for housing the ice, but will not be ready for use this season. If it should become necessary to cut the pond this season it would be by horse power on the run which is a rather slow and laborious process. The water in the pond at South Quincy has been drawn off, so that no more ice will be cut there this season. The houses there are about half filled. It looks now as though there would be no scarcity of ice the coming summer in Quincy.

Real Heroism.

To live well in the quiet routine of life; to fill a little space because God wills it; to go on cheerfully with a petty round of of little duties, little avocations; to smile for the joys of others when the heart is aching—who does this, his works will follow him. He may not be a hero to the world, but he is one of God's heroes.—Dean Farrar.

THE PLAYHOUSE

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

The "Trouble Makers" which opened at the Kincaide Theatre last night is a sure cure for the blues. With a hearty greeting from nearly a thousand of the townspeople Hap Wards famous troupe of musical comedy stars was welcomed. The name and reputation of Hap Ward is too well known to need an introduction, it is sufficient to say that any show with his name and reputation attached behind it, is bound to deliver the goods and the "Trouble Makers" surely did deliver them last night.

Led by Raymond Finley and Lottie Burke, two of the funniest characters on the musical comedy stage, and supported by a cast that would be a credit to a Klaw & Erlanger production, "The Trouble Makers" literally swept the audience off their feet. Every line in the play was a laugh and the situation proved to be so ludicrous, that even the orchestra smiled and that is going some.

The show started promptly on time with a reel of pictures, followed by the musical comedy. No time was lost in shifting scenery of the different acts, the difficulties usually encountered in a house when putting on such a large production, being entirely missing.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The Glow Worm will be the Three-reel feature at Quincy Music Hall on Saturday. For sheer exciting drama, full of kaleidoscopic adventure and rapid romance, "The Glow Worm" heads the repertoire of new plays. The action turns on the pursuit of a wild young westerner, called Kip, who has a mania for gambling and for running away with other people's money. On Kip's account the films leap from remote prairie scenes to the heart of the New York underworld, and again to the Spanish Isle de Ora off South America.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

With "Stop Thief" at the Castle Square next week, John Craig shows his enterprise. It is one of the most successful of modern farces. Its story is highly exciting as well as amusing, it is told in three acts of continuous cleverness, both of action and of dialogue, and it appeals especially to the playgoer who wants his dramatic entertainment seasoned with hilarity. And of mirth and laughter in "Stop Thief" there is no end.

With Mr. Carleton, Mr. Meek, Mr. Walker, Mr. Roberts, Miss Olsson, Miss Colcord and Mr. Craig's entire company in "Stop Thief," next week's production at the Castle Square promises to be one of the hits of the season.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

If you would enjoy a delightful evening's entertainment don't fail to see "Under Cover," now on the eve of its eighth week at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston. As other plays has unquestionably assisted in the success the mouth to mouth commendation has done much more. "Under Cover" is an interesting, exciting and surprising story ingenuously, suspensively and engrossingly told. It firmly grasps the attention of the auditor from the beginning and does not cease until you are carried through four ripping, rapid-fire acts brimful of clever, snappy and breezy dialogues. Unlike most other plays "Under Cover" makes an emphatic appeal to all classes of theatregoers.

CORT THEATRE.

The tremendous popularity of "When Dreams Come True" the Philip Bartholomae-Silvio Hein musical comedy now at the Cort Theatre, Boston, has compelled the management to extend the engagement indefinitely. Attendance is taxing the capacity of this model and comfortable playhouse and there is every indication that the piece is in for a long and prosperous run. "When Dreams Come True" has for its star young Joseph Santley, the actor-singer-dancer, and his work has proved a refreshing change from the average musical comedy star. Mr. Santley knows how to act, how to sing pleasingly if not greatly, and when it comes to dancing is quite the most finished, refined and graceful artiste Boston has seen for many seasons. Naturally, as is the vogue this year, modern steps are Mr. Santley's hobby and he delights in them. His latest creation, "The Aviation Waltz," has attracted attention generally and is now vieing with his greatest achievement "The Santley Tango," for the honors of the performance.

Aided and abetted by May Vokes, a delightful comedienne, Mr. Santley has admirable support in the comedy scenes. Miss Vokes was last seen in Boston in "The Quaker Girl", and has many admirers that look upon her as one of the cleverest fun-makers. Her work is original and happily free from the usual coarseness that characterizes the work of some of our eccentric comediennes.

Throughout the engagement there will be matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays. Owing to the extension of the time seats are now on sale three weeks in advance, including those for special matinee Washington's Birthday.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

The coming week's attraction at the Shubert Theatre, Boston, will be Messrs. Shubert's latest New York Casino musical amusement, "The Wedding Night." The piece journeys to this city with the reputation of being celebrated no less for its hilarious comedy situations than for its elaborateness as a typical Shubert musical comedy. The New York reviewers measured the new offering in terms that allowed of its being the very funniest as well as one of the very prettiest productions ever seen in musical comedy form. The ordinary musical comedy rarely supports more than one or two well-known artists, but all of the main characters in "The Wedding Night" it appears, are interpreted by players of renown—Taylor Holmes, Walter Jones, Alice Yorke, Cecil Cunningham, Clara Palmer, Jeffreys Lewis, Joseph Herbert, Joseph Phillips, Richard Temple, Tyler Brooke, et al. There are about a hundred persons in both the cast and chorus. The story of "The Wedding Night" unfolds in a French province and Paris. Marcel Durand marries Suzanne Portal. The instant the ceremony is over an actress, Sidonie De Mornay, of whom Marcel has once been very fond, appears on the scene. Marcel does not tell her of his marriage and one humorous complication follows another in the young come and go "Under Cover" gains prestige and it is the one play that leaves a lasting memory of a story well told. Few plays seen in Boston have made their way more quickly into the attention and the interest of the public. The piece entered into its present engagement practically unheralded and in a short time had scored the biggest hit of any play seen in Boston in years. While the unanimous praise accorded the play husband's efforts to keep his bride and his former sweetheart apart.

The piece is the work of Sydney Blow and Douglas Hoare, who adapted it from a French farce and the English adaptation, "Oh, I Say!" is now in its second consecutive season in London. The American musical version is credited with being full of melody scores of the Gilbert and Sullivan strain.

GLOOMY CARLYLE.

His Pessimism and His Wonder at the Optimism of Emerson.

Thomas Carlyle's friendship with Ralph Waldo Emerson is a matter of history, but Charles Eliot Norton tells in his published letters that Carlyle marveled at the optimism of the American philosopher. Writing in 1873 Norton says: "As we were sitting together just after my coming in this afternoon, Carlyle spoke of Emerson. 'There's a great contrast between Emerson and myself. He seems verra content with life and takes much satisfaction in the world, especially in your country. One would suppose to hear him that ye had no troubles there and no share in the darkness that hangs over these old lands. It's a verra strikin' and curious spectacle to behold a man so confidently cheerful as Emerson in these days.

"'I agree with ye in thinkin' that the times that are comin' will be warse than ours, and that by and by men may through long pain and distress learn to obey the law eternal of order without which there can be neither justice nor real happiness in this warld or in any other. The last man in England who had real faith in it was Oliver Cromwell.

"'Well, it may be as you say. I'm not such a verra bloody minded old villain after all (here a cordial laugh) not quite so horrid an ogre as some good people imagine. But the warld is verra black to me, and I see nothin' to be content with in this brand new, patent society of ours. There's nothin' to hope for from it but confusion.'"

A Scoop.

John L. Toole, the famous English comedian and practical joker, and Mr. Justice Hawkins, who was afterward Lord Brampton, were great friends. They were at supper together one evening discussing the events of the day. The judge incidentally mentioned that he intended on the morrow giving the man he had been trying fifteen years because he deserved it.

As Toole was leaving he blandly inquired:

"Oh, would you mind calling at the newspaper offices and telling them about that fifteen years? It will be a tip for them—exclusive information, you know—and will do me no end of good with the press."

"Good gracious! No, sir!" exclaimed the judge, who took the precaution of accompanying Toole to his hotel and seeing him safely to bed.

How to Build Up or Tear Down This Community

By J. O. LEWIS

Help Yourself by Helping Your Town.

THE attitude you maintain toward your home town—its business men and its institutions—is reflected in the success or failure of the same.

The success and happiness of every citizen in any community lie in the interest he takes in that community and the good work he can do to assist in its upbuilding. EVERYTHING YOU DO TO HELP IN THE ADVANCEMENT OF YOUR OWN COMMUNITY YOU DO JUST THAT MUCH TOWARD YOUR OWN PERSONAL SUCCESS. No man can live and prosper unto himself alone, for you are interdependent, and, realizing this, as good citizens, you should unite and pull together for the common good, and, doing this, you will prosper as a community and as individuals.

NO TOWN CAN STAND STILL. IT MUST EITHER GO FORWARD OR DECLINE, AND IT IS UP TO YOU TO SAY WHICH IT WILL BE.

Some towns hustle and grow—that is, the people hustle and the town grows. They get the habit of boosting until every citizen becomes a booster, and pretty soon its reputation spreads and it becomes known far and wide as a good town, while others lapse into a state of innocuous desuetude—an easy rock along manner—that soon classes that particular place as a dead one.

If you are knocking and complaining stop it. Nothing hurts a town more. If you cannot say something good don't say anything, and, above all, don't knock. If you are not a booster become one.

The success of the retail merchant depends on the patronage of his home people, the home jobber is largely dependent on the patronage of his home retailer, the banks are dependent likewise on the success of all, while the success and happiness of the people depend on the success of the business men.

Now, one of the greatest injuries you can do your home town or community—to the business men who are dependent on your patronage—is to order your goods from mail order houses or patronize merchants in other towns. Every dime sent from your community to a mail order house is removed entirely from local circulation. Its principal and interest are both gone, whereas the money spent with the home merchant goes immediately into circulation and in due course comes back to you.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS ANNUALLY ARE BEING SENT TO MAIL ORDER HOUSES FROM THIS COMMUNITY, THUS DEPRIVING HOME MERCHANTS OF THEIR RIGHTFUL PATRONAGE.

And yet, no matter how much the home merchant is dependent on the patronage of his home people, he is supposed to give and to aid in every work undertaken for the material betterment of the town, and he does, being often coerced into giving by the demands of his customers, fearing to offend them because of the fear of loss of their patronage.

UNLIKE YOUR HOME MERCHANT, MAIL ORDER HOUSES PAY NO TAXES OR PRIVILEGE LICENSE TO DO BUSINESS IN YOUR COMMUNITY. NEITHER DO THEY CONTRIBUTE TO YOUR CHURCHES, SCHOOLS, PUBLIC ROADS, CHARITIES OR ANYTHING ELSE, AND, ABOVE ALL, THEY GIVE NO EMPLOYMENT TO ANY ONE IN YOUR FAMILY OR HOME TOWN.

You want your schools kept up, your churches supported, your streets kept in repair, your town properly policed and protected by a good fire fighting equipment, etc. In other words, you want your town to prosper, be well run and the people to be happy and contented. YET IF YOU ARE SENDING YOUR MONEY TO OTHER INSTITUTIONS IN OTHER CITIES AND TOWNS YOU ARE DEFEATING THE VERY OBJECT FOR WHICH YOU STRIVE.

Now, this town building is a serious matter—a great big proposition—and if you are not treating it—its business men fairly you are not treating yourself fairly. You are undermining the very foundation of your well being.

To be continued under the title, "THE FARMER AND THE MERCHANT."

SPORT NEWS

George Barry, considered one of the most promising catchers in New England, has signed with the Lowell New England league team, and will report about March 25 to James Gray the main factor of the organization. Mr. Barry is the son of Michael Barry of the Central fire station, who was a familiar figure on the base ball field during his youth. His son is one of the few young men of the city that possesses real base ball ability. He first attracted attention, while playing locally, and three years ago went to Westville, Nova Scotia, where he remained all the season. His next station was at Dominion, Cape Breton, and last summer he was the back stop of the Sidney, Nova Scotia team. He finished with a batting average of 338. Many managers wanted him but the proposition of Mr. Gray proved to be the most attractive. George weighs about 150 and is in the best condition. Lowell at present has two catchers and the addition of George gives them a backfield of three good men, two with the experience, and the third with the prospects of speedy development.

Two four-men teams of the Samoset club of Wollaston rolled at the Coliseum alleys Thursday evening, Messrs. Brown, Thayer, Armstrong and Tackton defeated Messrs. Ford, Campbell, Pinkham and Rhodes by four pins, 1030 to 1026, winning three points to one. Rhodes had singles of 116, 86 and 108, and a total of 310.

Two teams from the Quincy Point church bowled at the Coliseum on Thursday evening and divided the points. Messrs. Austin, Cook, A. Hayden H. Hayden and Everson scored 1191, while Messrs Long. Mead, Thayer, Waddell and Melville scored 1176. No one reached 100 on singles.

The Copeland and Franco American teams roll tonight in the St. Mary's league.

The bowling league at Cunningham gym, Milton, is enjoying a most successful season and the upsets in the positions of the teams is very frequent. One mark however that will stand out for some time to come is that made by Horace Woods, captain of team No. 7 of the league, which sets a record for the town far in excess of the performances of other bowlers. In competition recently he got a single of 147 breaking a record which stood for eight years, and he also jumped the three string total record to 344. Captain Woods is a very popular young man but all the men are earnestly striving to outdo his performance.

Cunningham gym lost to the Cambridge Y. M. C. A., at Milton Thursday night. 35 to 22, and the Library Bureau won the industrial championship of the town by beating the Riverside Press, 14 to 12, in a game which required four extra periods.

The Milton A. C. beat the Roxbury Evening Centre quintette in Boston on Thursday night 41 to 32.

Braintree beat the Malden Y. M. C. A. 35 to 29, and Malden 2d beat Braintree 2d 18 to 16, at Braintree Thursday night.

The hockey game between Milton Academy and Somerville High was not played Thursday on account of the extreme cold.

THE MEANING OF "STEALING"

Discussed by Senators In Hearing on the Owen Bill

HITCHCOCK'S PLAIN LANGUAGE

New York Stock Exchange Counsel Considers It Rather Too Blunt—Reference to New Haven Road Is Made—Nelson's Idea of Modern Gospel to Attain Wealth

Washington, Feb. 13.—New Haven affairs flamed out unexpectedly in the hearing on the Owen stock exchange bill when John G. Milburn, counsel for the New York stock exchange, was testifying.

Milburn had pointed out that stockholders too often neglected their duties, gave proxies and let others manage their properties and then, when things went wrong, turned to the federal government for remedy.

"Yes, we have a good illustration of that in the New Haven road," remarked Senator Hitchcock. "Here we find that we have no federal law and no state law to compel the return of that stolen money."

"Now don't use that word 'stolen,' interjected Mr. Milburn in a mild way. Now if—"

"Let's call things by their right names," thundered Senator Nelson. "That was just as much stealing as if they had broken into your house and stolen money."

"But that word 'stealing,'" persisted Milburn. "We don't know what is stealing until we know all the acts. I know of one case that has been characterized as stealing in which, when the facts are known, you would be the last man to say that there had been stealing."

"Yes," returned Nelson, "I know there are cases handled with such skill and intricacy, under the advice of good lawyers, that they violate the moral law and yet manage to escape the technicalities of the criminal law. The people are lacking in moral sense. That's the basis of our troubles. The modern gospel is to get wealth any way you can."

Milburn interested the committee by reading from a paper of President Hadley of Yale the story of an attempt to prevent speculation in 1864, when congress passed a law designed to protect gold. The price of gold went up 100 percent in fifteen days, he said, and congress was compelled to repeal the law.

Milburn predicted "as inevitable" that, if this bill should become law, the present membership of the New York stock exchange would disappear and their places would be taken by "two-dollar" men, whose work would be done and paid for every day when the exchange closed and who would keep no books.

The hearings ended last evening. Chairman Owen said it would be perhaps a month before a report could be made on the bill, since the committee has a mass of suggestions and statements to read and digest.

The committee thanked the representatives of the Boston chamber of commerce and the Boston stock exchange who appeared during the day for their avowed willingness to cooperate in framing a bill that would bring about the result sought, though they did not approve the Owen bill.

Owen said the committee had met with so much that was mere negation that it was pleased to hear some suggestion as to how the thing desired might be done.

PRINCE OF WALES' TOUR

It Includes a Visit to the United States and Canada

London, Feb. 13.—Preliminary plans have been drafted for the tour of the British empire to be made by the Prince of Wales in 1915 and which is to include a visit to the United States on the return journey. It is said to be possible that Prince Albert, the second son of King George, may accompany the Prince of Wales.

As at present arranged the prince will go first to Australasia and New Zealand, returning to England by way of Canada and the United States.

HEARD ROBBERS AT WORK

People Upstairs Thought Grocer Was Chopping Wood In Store

Paterson, N. J., Feb. 13.—While the family upstairs wondered why William Row, a grocer at 29 Park avenue, was chopping wood so late at night, thieves entered the rear door of the store and got away with $50. They were working on the safe, but were frightened away.

Investigation proved that instead of Row chopping wood it was the thieves chopping down the back door that the family upstairs heard.

MRS. BOND'S TESTIMONY

Glasses Broken and Face Scratched In Struggle With Gore

Oklahoma City, Feb 13.—Mrs. Minnie E. Bond told a jury, in the district court here of indignities which, she declared, she suffered at the hands of Senator Gore and described in detail an attack which she alleged occurred in a Washington hotel March 24 last, the basis for the suit on trial, in which Mrs. Bond asks $50,000 in damages.

A grilling cross examination failed to shake Mrs. Bond's testimony in any material feature. She said she met the senator in Oklahoma several years ago, and went to Washington last spring when her husband was a candidate for appointment as internal revenue collector here.

She visited Gore in the interest of her husband's candidacy several times at his office, where on two occasions, she charged, he seized her.

Because of the number of men about the senator's office she refused, she said, to make further visits there, and by mutual arrangement met him at her hotel March 24, when, she alleged, he grasped her and threw her across the bed.

In her efforts to free herself, she asserted, her eyeglasses were broken, her face scratched and her hand lacerated. She said her health had been impaired as the result of the alleged attack.

SENT TO STATE PRISON

Sentence of Two Gunmen Who Broke Out of Boston Prison Van

Boston, Feb. 13.—Charles Ronan, known as "Raffles," and George A. Ward, two of the three men who escaped from a prison van while being transported to the jail, were sentenced to from three to four years in the state prison after being convicted by a jury on charges of breaking and entering and larceny.

When the two men were arrested at their lodging house here police officers testified that each had a heavy loaded magazine revolver in bed with him and hanging over the head of the bed was another automatic revolver, ready for instant use.

SERIOUS ATTACKS ON OUR PRESIDENT

Editorials In Mexican Paper Are Considered Scurrilous

Mexico City, Feb. 13.—Foreign Minister Maheno has received a note from Nelson O'Shaughnessy, American charge of affairs, protesting against the "libelous and scurrilous attacks upon President Wilson," recently published editorially in El Imparcial.

The note calls the attention of Moheno to these attacks, adding that they are more serious when is is considered that El Imparcial is a government organ. It further says O'Shaughnessy assumes the articles were published without the knowledge or consent of the government, and expresses the hope that they may be discontinued.

These editorials have been extremely insulting in their references to President Wilson and calculated to incite anti-American sentiment here.

Boston, Feb. 13.—Twenty-seven hens were packed into a crate large enough to accommodate only thirteen hens, according to testimony given by President Rowley of the Massachusetts S. P. C. A., against Frederick G. Wilson, a poultry dealer, who was found guilty and fined $50 for subjecting the fowl to unnecessary suffering by overcrowding them in transportation.

Rowley noticed the crate as he passed through Postoffice square, and made an investigation, which resulted in the discovery that Wilson had packed the fowl.

A Shrewd Business Deal

Though Questionable, It Bespoke the Gentleman

By F. A. MITCHEL

Baron Gustavus Carl von Hemmerstein, said to be the handsomest man in Berlin, went to Nice to get rid of the winter and while there concluded to run over to Monte Carlo. He spent ten days over the gambling tables, at the end of which time, one evening, about 10 o'clock, he had gambled away the last pfennig of his fortune. The baron had excellent self control, and when he arose from the table not a person there suspected that he was ruined. He sauntered out into the brilliantly lighted gardens, where he did what an American would call a job of thinking.

The fact was evident that he must come down from his exalted position as an intimate associate of the emperor, a leader of fashion, a pet of the ladies and a general high flier. This is what stared him in the face. But for the present he was to the world the same handsome, rich, aristocratic Von Hemmerstein he had always been. He well understood the value of credit, and it occurred to him that there was a chance for him since the world did not yet know that he was ruined.

But how should he avail himself of this advantage? Marriage with a wealthy woman suggested itself as the easiest way out of the difficulty. There were a dozen rich spinsters in Berlin who would be glad to get him, if for nothing else, for his social position, and it was quite probable that a confession of the state of his affairs would not with some of them stand in the way. But this scheme was not to the baron's liking. He preferred independence to subservience to a rich wife. He turned it down at once and went on with his deliberations.

If Von Hemmerstein had been born a commoner and a business man he would have displayed a genius for making something out of nothing. Quite likely he would have distinguished himself as a promoter. He looked upon the financial part of one's life as ninety-nine hundredths of it, for, born aristocrat that he was, he realized that without means his blue blood would be as red as that of other people's. Whether or no he had heard the statement of certain resolute business men, "I will look for my money where I lost it," he certainly acted upon that principle. His ideas rapidly took shape in raising the wherewithal to take his place at the gambling tables and win back what he had lost.

But how do this? Borrow from a friend? No. Having never been obliged to borrow a pfennig, he knew that to do so he would injure that credit which was now his only financial possession. With the instinct of a true financier, he shunned a field that would weaken him. To whom, then, should he turn? The answer was simple—to those to whom credit is believed to be due.

Von Hemmerstein's problem was too difficult to be solved at once. He went back to Nice, and, acting on the principle that only a poor man can afford luxuries—on credit—he informed his landlord that he was dissatisfied with his rooms and removed to the most expensive suit at the hotel. He did this not only to keep up his credit, but he could think and act better under the influence of luxuries. With this in view, he ordered expensive wines and the most dainty foods. Under this exhilarating influence he formed a plan worthy of his genius.

It was not a scrupulous plan; but, while there is no intention here to advocate dishonesty, how many of the acts of ultimately successful speculators, at times when they are swamped with debt, are scrupulous? Some person or persons must be made to take a risk on them, and there are instances where a rich man has knowingly lent a poor man large sums with no other security than his confidence in his creditor's genius.

Without giving up his rooms—he would not have been able to pay his bill—Von Hemmerstein went to Paris. There he sought a jeweler named Cheseul, doing business on the Rue de la Paix, and asked to see some valuable gems. After looking over a number of stones he appeared to be much pleased with a ruby valued at 10,000 francs. The jeweler kept bringing out other stones, but failed to draw the baron from the ruby.

"Monsieur," said the baron at last, "I wish to purchase the ruby, but I do not wish to pay for it immediately. I refer you to the German embassy, which will give you a report on my social position and advise you as to my credit. Kindly attend to this matter tomorrow afternoon, for I will come in at that time for the gem."

Tossing his card on the counter, he left the shop. M. Cheseul following him to the door, rubbing his hands obsequiously.

The jeweler sent at once to the embassy for a report on Baron Gustavus Carl von Hemmerstein. The reply was that the baron's social position was the best, that he was known to be wealthy and that M. Cheseul would be justified in giving credit for the price of the gem. But the embassy would not be responsible for any one but Baron von Hemmerstein himself. Its representative would go to the shop with him to identify him.

This fact having been communicated by the embassy to the baron, one of the clerks of the legation called at his hotel and accompanied him to the jeweler's. Von Hemmerstein received the ruby in a leather box lined with velvet and, calling a cab, drove to the pawnshop of Jules Pombeau, where he pledged it for a loan of a thousand francs.

A few days later Von Hemmerstein called again at M. Cheseul's shop and confided to him that he was about to be married and it had occurred to him that two rubies, of the size and shape and hue of the one he had purchased, would make a pair of earrings suitable for a gentleman's wedding gift to his bride. Did the jeweler have such another ruby in stock?

M. Cheseul had only one or two other stones that would come near to matching the first, and in all there was some slight variation. The baron appeared disappointed, and the jeweler, bent on making a double profit, agreed to try to find a match for the ruby in the stock of some other jeweler. But he explained that to find a perfect mate would require considerable labor and the second gem would be worth a much larger sum than the first. Von Hemmerstein asked him to fix a price for the mate, and after some deliberation he named 30,000 francs.

Von Hemmerstein did not seem staggered at this figure, saying that he would give it provided a perfect match were obtained, and the jeweler called his attention to the fact that the two together would command a much higher price than separately. The baron gave the order, and M. Cheseul began a hunt all over Paris for the second ruby.

A great many valuable gems are to be found in the hands of pawnbrokers, and among others to whom the jeweler applied was M. Pombeau, one of the principal members of that trade in Paris. That he would do so was expected by Von Hemmerstein and was a part of his plan. A few days after ordering the second gem he called at M. Pombeau's shop and said he would redeem his pledge. He laid down the thousand francs borrowed on it, and the broker handed it back to him.

"By the bye, baron," said Pombeau, "would you like to sell that stone?"

"No, indeed. I value it very highly. It has been in my family hundreds of years."

"I have a brooch into which it would fit nicely. On this account, if you were willing to part with it, I would give you a good price for it."

"What do you call a good price?"

Pombeau would not mind giving 15,000 francs for it. Von Hemmerstein sneered at this and started to leave the shop. Pombeau called him back and said that the ruby to him would be worth 20,000 francs. This seemed to arrest the baron's attention. After some dickering he sold the stone for 21,000 francs and received the money for it on the spot.

Calling a cab, he drove at once to M. Cheseul's shop and asked if they had found a mate to the ruby. No; they had not had time. They had sent out a minute description of it and were expecting replies. The baron said that was fortunate. He had changed his mind. He had determined on a more magnificent present for his bride than the twin rubies. And, now that his mind was made up, he would pay for the stone he had bought. So he produced bank notes to the amount of 10,000 francs and took a receipt.

By this ingenious device he had realized 11,000 francs, or $2,200.

But that the baron was a gentleman of superior caliber is proved by the sequel. With the 11,000 francs that he had made he returned to Monte Carlo and by one of the most remarkable runs of luck ever known there won back all he had lost and 1000 per cent in addition. When he left Monte Carlo he went direct to Paris and on arriving there made straight for Pombeau's pawnshop. The pawnbroker met him as though nothing disagreeable had happened.

"I have been regretting parting with the ruby I sold you and would like to buy it back," said the baron.

"I do not wish to sell it."

"Not for a better price than you paid me?"

"I do not say that I will not sell anything I own at a price."

"Let me see; I think you paid me 21,000 francs. How would 24,000 francs suit you?"

The pawnbroker was perplexed. He had been done once, and now he feared to be done again. He balked at the offer.

"Well," said the baron, turning away, "if you conclude to sell the gem address me at the Circle Francais National. Good morning."

This was enough to decide the pawnbroker, who regarded a bird in the hand worth two in the bush. He called the baron back and sold him the stone, after all clearing 3,000 francs on the transaction.

From Paris Von Hemmerstein went to Berlin, where he was received with the usual eclat attending his return by the emperor, the nobility and the common people. He was as suave as ever, and no one dreamed that he had been ruined and had brought himself back to fortune by a clever bit of rascality. He had not only succeeded; he had covered his tracks.

Had he been unsuccessful the world in which he had been living would have known him no more except as one who had degenerated from a gentleman to a swindler. As it was, when in company with those who know the world he tells the story of his financial embarrassment, as he calls it, and how he extricated himself. Seldom does he tell it to one who considers his operation as without the pale of legitimate bargains and sale.

GOETHALS, CANAL GOVERNOR.

His Previous Experience Peculiarly Fits Him For This Position.

The selection of Colonel George W. Goethals, engineer in chief of the Panama canal, to be the first governor of the canal zone is a peculiarly fitting one. The present form of government of the zone by executive order is to be changed to a civil one on April 1 next. This is in accordance with an act of congress. The appointment of Colonel Goethals is for four years at a salary of $10,000 a year. When informed of his appointment Colonel Goethals expressed gratification at the honor conferred upon him and said that there would be no delay in the reorganization of the canal force.

Secretary of War Garrison has announced that Colonel Goethals has signified his intention of accepting the governorship. He intimated that Colonel Goethals' acceptance was unqualified.

COLONEL GEORGE W. GOETHALS.

"I am not able to give out the terms of Colonel Goethals' acceptance at the present time," said the secretary, "but it was whole and complete."

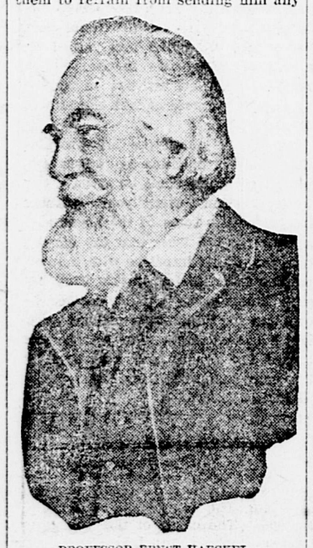
As chairman of the Isthmian canal commission, Colonel Goethals now is paid $15,000 a year. A bill has been introduced in congress to amend the law to make the salary of the governor $15,000 as long as Colonel Goethals holds the office.

The powers of the governor for the operation of the canal and the administration of the zone are very great. They could be intrusted to no man more worthy to exercise them. The great work that Colonel Goethals has achieved on the isthmus—for it is now so near to achievement that it can be spoken of as a completed work—is hardly more extraordinary than the organization by which it has been carried on, and of that organization Colonel Goethals has been the head and directing mind. His ability has been demonstrated under the severest tests. No man knows so much about the canal as he; no other man could be so well fitted as he to control its operation.

HAECKEL'S ANNIVERSARY.

Refuses Personal Gifts, but Asks Donations For Monists' Union.

Professor Ernst Haeckel, the celebrated German philosopher and naturalist, will be eighty years old on Feb. 16. His friends and disciples in all parts of the world had planned to present him with some fitting proof of their regard, but Herr Haeckel sent out an appeal to his friends requesting them to refrain from sending him any personal donations. He further asked them to devote any money intended as a gift to him to a special fund which he plans to place at the disposal of the German Monists' union, in order to make it international in scope.



PROFESSOR ERNST HAECKEL.

Professor Haeckel is the chief representative of radical naturalistic evolution in Germany and is a bold theorist. His best known works are "Natural History of Creation," "The Origin of the Human Race" and "The Riddle of the Universe."

Points for Mothers

Playing Outdoors.

This is the time of year when the children need a great deal of watching, for they are apt to be tempted by fine days to plays that were meant for the days when the earth was warmer and the ground less damp than at present. They come in chilled, and if the chill is neglected there may be more serious trouble. Remember that the mental condition of a child has a great deal to do with his susceptibility to disease, and to scold or perhaps anger him will only make matters worse. Don't send him to bed crying, and, on the other hand, do not take too seriously his little ailments. "Let mother kiss it and make it well," the mother says to the smallest child, and generally the cure is effected. If mothers would only continue this cure after the child is a little older it might be better. Don't hurt the child's feelings by ignoring his little troubles, but make him feel that they are certain to be cured, and sometimes a dose of sugar and water or a bread pill has been known to work wonders. In the meantime do everything to make the child warm and clean and comfortable, and then if he must be scolded for getting wet or dirty let it be tomorrow, when he is not wet and dirty and in a good condition to take cold, if his mother will insist on depressing his spirits, among other things.

Play Hours.

There are other hours besides those spent in a schoolroom, other times when a child must be busy in some way, playing or just romping in an ecstasy of pure joy of living. Of course when possible out of doors is so much the best, but if windows are thrown wide open, space made for pillow fights, games of all sorts, laughing races, shouts of delight—can anything on earth be so worth while for the mother of five girls and boys? While children are gregarious and love companionship they sometimes like to have some innate taste gratified. One may wish to copy the brilliant coloring of butterfly or blossom. Give him a box of paint and brush and he is happy. And so on through the list of likes and longings in the childish heart that every mother should study to gratify.

Cheerful Children.

Preach the gospel of cheerfulness early and late and don't encourage the morbid or emotional. Study your child and learn how to deal with him. It does no good to be unsympathetic with a child that is in a hysterical condition. Give him all your sympathy and let him feel safe and loved and cared for in your arms and then try to divert his attention from himself. Such a condition is generally a long time in approaching a crisis, and it is in the early stages that the mother can take charge with sweet cheerfulness. If treated sanely children so inclined will outgrow their morbidness, but if you attempt physical force with such a child you will probably make him sullen as well as morbid, and thrust in upon himself he will nurse his troubles and magnify your seeming indifference.

Lunches In Boxes.

There are many varieties among the lunch boxes sold in the shops. One is a flat, square box with a compartment containing a bottle of hot or cold liquids and a big compartment for sandwiches and other tidbits usual in the school lunch. Another is in the form of a camera, collapsible, so that it may be closed flat when it is not in use. There is a lunch box which looks like a music roll for small girls or larger ones. All these are covered with imitation or real leather. Then there are brown paper boxes of various sizes and shapes, strong and cheap, so that they can be replaced by new ones when they begin to look soiled or worn.

Use For Baby's "Pen."

After the baby has outgrown the use of the baby "pen" it can be used to keep a small portable heater out of reach of the baby or any older children. An oil stove that is set in the middle of one of these pens is comparatively safe. For a stationary coal stove that is close to a wall, cut one side of the pen away and then the other three sides can be put around the stove when needed. The children cannot then get at the fire.

Skipping Rope Exercises.

Skipping with a rope as young girls use it is essentially a form of dancing and lays a useful foundation for later developments which generally eventuate in the acquisition of an elegant ballroom style. Skipping rope days give the little girl her first steps in elasticity and favor the acquisition of a sinuosity and grace of movement that are by no means the least of her attractions in later life.

Convenient Pencil Sharpeners.

Provide each child with a pencil sharpener for school use. The best are the kind that screw firmly to the edge of a table. Many schools are equipped with these. The individual sharpeners that can be carried about in the pocket or bag are not always satisfactory. They have a way of becoming dulled in a very short time, and they are too cheap to be worth sharpening.

VALENTINE LUNCHEON.

The Willard School is justly proud of the achievements of the girls in the prevocational class. Under the direction of Miss Helena Dempsey, a Valentine luncheon was prepared and served to the teachers who remain during the noon hour.

A table was spread in the cooking room, tastefully adorned with heart favors. A menu consisting of soup, salad, breads, jelly, cake and cocoa was served. Each course was the product of the girls' work and displayed their skill in culinary lines. Such results from Grammar school pupils prove the worth of this newly organized department of school work.

Captain Johnson of the Monroe Again a Witness

CONDUCT THOROUGHLY PROBED

Says More Lives Would Have Been Lost Had He Remained Aboard the Sinking Ship—Corrects Previous Testimony and Says Nantucket Did Well In the Work of Rescue

Philadelphia, Feb. 13.—What means Captain Johnson of the steamship Monroe took to avoid the collision with the steamship Nantucket off the Virginia coast, in which forty-one persons were lost; what efforts he made to save the lives of passengers and crew, and his conduct from the time the ships struck to the time he went aboard the other vessel, were among the things inquired into at the trial of Captain Berry, commander of the Nantucket, who is charged with negligence.

The United States local steam vessel inspectors, who are conducting the proceedings, also went into the question of the construction of the Monroe and her life-saving appliances.

Under the questioning of R. A. Sargent, one of the local inspectors, Johnson retold almost every incident of the disaster he could remember.

He said that immediately after the collision he ordered the other officers of the ship to get all passengers on the boat deck, as the ship was sinking. Because of the heavy list to starboard only two boats could be launched. One was commanded by himself, Johnson said, and the other by the chief officer.

Johnson testified his boat cleared the Monroe a little before the other boat. He admitted he left the ship with knowledge that there were other persons on the vessel, but asserted he wanted to go around the stern to the port side, where he could save them. The starboard rail was under water. In his boat were James O'Connell, a negro woman, and several of his crew. He saw no one on the deck when he quit the ship.

On the way around to the port side of the sinking Monroe, Johnson said, he saw a raft with four men on it and took them off. Altogether his boat saved twenty-eight or twenty-nine persons, he said.

Asked if it would not have been better for him to go about the ship maintaining discipline and giving orders, Johnson said:

"If I had walked around the deck seeing what others were doing there would have been about thirty more people dead."

To many questions why he did not cut loose all the life rafts, the witness replied he was very busy trying to get the boats away. Every person he saw on the decks or in the water, Johnson said, had on a life preserver with the exception of himself.

In correcting part parts of the testimony he gave Wednesday, Johnson expressed the opinion that after the vessels sighted each other the collision could could not be avoided.

The Nantucket stood a quarter of a mile astern of the Monroe, the witness said, and did "remarkably well" in helping to save passengers and crew.

Captain Berry will testify probably after all other witnesses have been heard.

JENNINGS' PLATFORM

Promise of Former Bandit to the People of Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, Feb. 13.—Al J. Jennings, a former bandit, but now a candidate for governor of Oklahoma, gave out his platform. It contains only sixty-five words:

"My platform," said Jennings, "is fidelity to the people, real honesty in office and that the law shall be no respecter of persons. When these principles are truly and honestly carried into effect, all interests will be subserved and taxes will be reduced. In all my life I have never betrayed confidence. If the people confide in me, God being my judge, I'll not betray them."

LOVE OF A BONNET

One of Attractions at Epworth League Entertainment

In spite of the intense cold Thursday evening, a good crowd gathered in the vestry of the Hall Place M. E. church to partake of the bountiful supper served by the Ladies Aid Society. The menu consisted of baked beans, salads, rolls, pie, cake and coffee.

After the supped the Epworth eLague furnished an entertainment with a very pleasing program consisting of piano duet by Miss Mildred Crowley and Miss Clara Call; a short sketch entitled "A love of a bonnet:"

The parts were all well taken but "A love of a bonnet" failed to bring the joy and satisfaction that new bonnets usually do.

The entertainment was in charge of Mrs. J. M. Francis, fourth vice-president of the Epworth league. The supper was in charge of Mrs. F. L. Badger, Mrs. eGorge Hawes. Mrs. William McCormick, Mrs. Wentzel, Mrs. Newcomb, Mrs. McNeil, Mrs. Johnson, assisted by the other members of the Ladies Aid and proved that they can shine in other spheres beside that of the kitchen.

"A love of a bonnet" proved amusing and interesting, showing what can result from a simple mistake. The cast included:

Mrs. Clipper—A widow
Mrs. J. M. Francis

Kitty—her daughter
Miss Jessie Burke

Aunt Jemima Hopkins—a little inquisitive, Miss Florence Manhire

Mrs. Fastone—very genteel
Miss Edna Burke

Dora—her daughter
Miss Jennie Manhire

Katy Doolan—Irish help
Miss Hilda Francis

Reading by Leslie McCormick of "Lincoln's Gettysburg Speech."

Vocal and instrumental selections were given by the "Kitchen Orchestra comprised of the following young ladies: Miss Mildred Crowley, Miss Jessie Raymond, Miss Lydia Raymond, Mrs. James Forest, Miss Clara Call, Miss Myrtle Brundage and Miss Anna Brundage. Miss Mildred Crowley played a solo on her instrument. Miss Clara Call was pianist. The musicians gave a good exhibition of the skilful manipulation of these articles of kitchen ware,

PROFICIENT IN SIGNALING

Russell Johnson Wins in Boy Scout Contest

Nine members of Quincy troop of Boy Scouts were entered in the signal contest held in Keatings hall Thursday night. The contest was in connection with the weeks observance of the fourth anniversary of the Boy Scout movement.

The competition was strenuous and was conducted under the direction of Scout Master B. F. Hodgkinson, Jr., and consisted of wigwaging messages in the American Morse code The entrants were judged on form, speed and accuracy in sending and receiving.

Russell Johnson, winner of the contest, was perfect in sending and attained a mark of 99 per cent in receiving. Harold Kidder who won the contest last year finished second with a high percentage.

Four Scouts, Henry Ericson, Eric Nelson, Sidney McLaughlin and Homer Melville were tied for third place. They will compete again tonight at the annual business meeting.

VACATIONS FOR CITY LABORERS

House Has Voted In Favor of Granting Same

In the senate on Thursday, action was postponed a week at the request of Mayor Curley, on the bill providing that cities and towns of the Commonwealth shall give city laborers two weeks vacation each year without loss of pay.

This bill which is an important one as well as being one in which each city or town is vitally interested, was debated at length in the House earlier in the week and was passed by a vote of nearly two to one. It is reported that an attempt to amend by adding the referendum clause was defeated.

As briefly stated the bill provides that laborers in cities and towns employed regularly shall be given a two week vacation every year without loss of pay. Some of the arguments against the bill were that the legislature should not interfere with municipalities in a matter of this kind but each municipality should decide the question for themselves without making it compulsory. The bill is now before the senate and action on it has been postponed for a wek.

MEAT CUTTING DEMONSTRATION

James A. Daley, Government Inspector, at Electa Hall

The interior of Electa hall on Thursday night had the appearance of an up-to-date meat market on the occasion of the practical demonstration in meat cutting by James A. Daley, a government meat inspector. The affair was largely attended and was under the auspices of the Quincy circle of Lady Moose. It is estimated that 150 families will directly benefit as a result of the talk.

Mr. Daley has had a wide experience, having been connected with the government inspection department for many years. During his talk he advocated the more liberal use of oleomargerine in preference to the poorer quality of butter for table and cooking uses, not only because it is more economical but because better pastry can be made by its use.

To emphasize his point, Mr. Daley showed samples of the oil made from edible fat which go to make up a large percentage of oleomargerine, and stated that its manufacture was under a strict government supervision. He said that to his mind, many cases of tuberculosis, if they could be traced would show their origin to have been germs from butter, made from the cream of milk of an infected cow and manufactured in a dairy with entire freedom and practically under no restrictions.

In his demonstration Mr. Daley used a side of beef, furnished by R. E. Foy. He was assisted by Russell McQueen of the Foy Market. Refreshments were served at the close of the lecture.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 29 No. 39 | QUINCY MASS. SATURDAY EVENING FEBRUARY 14 1914 | PRICE TWO CENTS

OUR CITY OFFICIALS WERE FLIMFLAMMED

Says G. B. Bates in Protest Against Plan for Abolishing Grade Crossing

Calls on Mayor to Force His Petition in Legislature

Editor of Daily Ledger.

After nearly seven years of dilatory and exasperating activities on the part of the commissioners and a few others, our city officials have been flimflammed into accepting a plan that the citizens did not want and would never approve.

Throughout all this long delay the people of Quincy through its City Council, through its Board of Trade, through its mass meetings, through its many organizations and societies, and by a practically unanimous petition of the citizens, never wavered; but, like the Rock of Gibralter, stood firm and united for they knew what solution they wanted for this omnipotent question.

The real fight for the salvation of Quincy and its taxpayers against the schemes of selfish interests who seek to plunder and destroy the contour of our city is now on.

The taxpayers demand that His Honor, Mayor Miller, force his petition now pending before the Legislature. By this petition, the New York, New Haven, and Hartford Railroad is authorized to abolish the grade crossings in Quincy by the "City plan" of depression.

In forcing this petition to a conclusion, the victory for depression is won, for the Legislature is the highest tribunal from whom justice in this matter can be sought, and then and there only do I believe the people will get a square deal.

I would like to say that I will be pleased to meet at any time the City Engineer, Mr. Sargent, or any other advocate of the Chinese wall plan, before any organization, association, or mass meeting, and debate and explain the difference between the selfish interest plan of elevation known as the Chinese wall plan, and the plan of depression which saves every street in our city now crossing the railroad in its present locations with better conditions and with better grades than those that now exist. By this plan of depression, Beale street, Warren avenue, Furnace, Brook parkway, Adams street, Dimmock street, Saville street, Granite street, School street and Water street would all be saved.

Yours with a mission and without a muzzle.

G. P. Bates.

Members of the grade crossing committee for the city of Quincy.

The speaker of the afternoon is John Callahan, Superintendent of the Hadley Rescue Mission of New York city, and his subject is "From Barroom to Pulpit." Mr. Callahan is one of the strongest speakers to men in America. He talks straight from experience and he certainly knows life from the bottom up.

Left an orphan at the age of six in the slums of America's metropolis, he had a hard fight for life. For years he sold papers at Grand Central station. Then he went West by stealing a ride in a box car, and finally landed in Chicago. There he went wrong and was sent to Joliet penitentiary. When released he went to his brother's home in Minneapolis, who secured him a position as bar clerk in a saloon. One night when partially intoxicated he was passing a mission and was attracted by the singing. He went in and while there heard a pal of his at Joilet tell of his conversion. He followed suit, and from time on has been devoting his life to help men from the seamy to the sunny side of life.

Mr. Callahan considers it well worth while to come over from his busy life in New York city to talk to the men of Quincy. And it is hoped that men will pack Quincy's pretty playhouse to hear him.

SLIGHT FIRE SUMMER STREET

Chief Billings and His Man Handle It Alone

The alarm from Box 173 at 7.35 last night was for a slight fire in one of the sleeping rooms of a Syrian boarding house on Summer street. The room was occupied by Michael Kouri and the fire was caused by an overheated stove funel. The fire started where the funnel entered the chimney and set fire to the wood work When the department arrived in response to the alarm the occupants of the house were trying to extinguish the fire with buckets of water.

Chief Billings was the first to arrive on the scene and his chauffeur carried a line of chemical hose into the room, and while Chief Billings knocked a hole in the wall with an axe the chauffeur directed the chemical stream onto it, and in a few minutes the fire was out. The damage was very slight.

HAVE CHANGED THEIR MINDS

Another Couple Have Returned Marriage Certificate Unused

At this season of the year when the City Clerk is busy completing his vital statistics, it becomes necessary for him to communicate with parties to whom licenses for marriage have been issued who have made no returns. A few days ago the Ledger referred to a letter received from one couple who said that they had changed their minds.

Friday another similar letter was received. This letter returned the unused license with a note saying:

"The parties have changed their minds and do not want the certificate of marriage."

The certificate was issued Dec. 18, 1913, for which one dollar had been paid. The names of the parties at interest are withheld.

Mrs. Alexander Ross, of Presque Isle, Maine, was one of the active members and the news of her death will spread a shadow of sorrow over the greater part of New England where she was best known. Mrs. Ross was struck Thursday by an express train at the Norfolk Downs station, death resulting from her injuries.

DOUBLE AFFLICTION.

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Ganzel of Billings road have the sympathy of a very large circle of friends in the death Friday of their daughter Alice, at the Homeopathic hospital where she was taken Friday afternoon. Mr. Ganzel's daughter and younger son were taken ill with diphtheria this week and it was decided that the only hope of saving their lives was removal to the hospital which was done Friday. The little girl's case however, was too far advanced and she failed to rally. She was about 6 years of age. Mr. Ganzel continues in a serious condition.

CERTIFICATION TODAY ON GRADE CROSSINGS

Public Service Commission Issues Order Relative to Saville and Water Streets

Work Can Now Proceed Under the Decree

What is believed to be the final act in legislation relative to abolition of grade crossings in Quincy, came this morning, when the Public Service Commission of Massachusetts issued its order for the abolition of the grade crossings at Saville and Water streets as per the decree of the special commission published in the Daily Ledger of Friday, Feb. 6. It was in March, 1913, that the decree was made.

The order of the Public Service Commission reads as follows:

"After notice and hearing, and on examination of the proposed plans for the abolition of the grade crossings of the tracks of the Old Colony railroad (New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co. lessees) and the highways known as Saville and Water streets, in the City of Quincy, as set forth in the report of the special commission appointed by the Superior court, to consider the matter and after consideration of the expenditures therein authorized, it is—ORDERED, that the commission hereby certify that in its opinion the adoption of said plan and the naming of such expenditure are consistent with the public interest, and are reasonably required to secure a fair distribution between the different cities, towns and railroads of the Commonwealth, of the public money appropriated for the abolition of grade crossings, and that such expenditure would not in its judgment exceed the amount to be paid by the Commonwealth under the provision of law relating thereto."

The Daily Ledger of Monday will have an interesting review of the grade crossing movement written by an expert.

FIRESIDE TALK AT Y. M. C. A.

Col. Edward Anderson, the city's best known octogenarian, addressed a large number at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. Friday night in the first of a series of fireside talks. His topic was "With John Brown in Kansas" and was mostly in commemoration of President Lincoln.

Reminiscent to a degree of interest that is seldom surpassed, Colonel Anderson throughout his talk gave many instances where the geniality, gentleness of spirit and sincere belief in the secure adjustment of the civil strife nourished a memory and affectheme in his reference to "Honest Abe." Colonel Anderson was given a warm reception at the close of his talk.

All that Dusty Rhodes has to do to get free board now, is to go down to the Rio Grande and become a Mexican refugee.

As Bowdoin college has just been given $500,000, there will be great disappointment if its ball team does not make a high record this year.

Strange that the authors of the currency law didn't see that about 7500 instead of 12 regional banks would be needed to satisfy all localities.

As is invariably the case, trade is a good deal restricted by unseasonable weather.

DEATH IN THE FOG.

The frightful tragedy of the Monroe off the Maryland shore comes home with vivid realization to all who ever travel by sea. The more one has committed himself to the mysterious cruelty of the deep, the more ominous the peril of the fog becomes.

Few people, no matter how familiar with the ways of the sea, can lie down to quiet sleep with the sinister tones of the fog whistle booming over their heads.

The landlubber has no conception of the thickness of these sea mists. It is a common occurrence for them to be so dense, that when one stands on the deck of the vessel, he can see his own shadow in the fog, cast by the lights behind him.

Conflicting statements as to the way these ships were handled will be fought out in the courts. Whatever the verdict may be, this disaster should be a warning to the many ships that do not reduce their speeds sufficiently in fog.

It is a mistake for those who pursue travel by water to insist on the regularity of time table that they may expect by land. A steamship gives a far greater freedom of motion than a railroad train, and is the acme of comfort, except in rough weather. People should have a little more philosophical habit of mind, and some resources for self entertainment.

Then they would not fret like so many caged lions because a boat was held up a few hours by thick weather. Every appliance for comfort is at their service, all they need is self-control and good humor.

There would be much more happiness, comfort and safety in travel by water, if the public could adjust itself to the moods of the sea, and remain content with extremely low rates of speed on foggy nights.

WOMEN VOTE FOR PRESIDENT

Mrs. Thomas A. Addison of this city, and a life member of the New England, Historical and Genealogical Society reports the following:

The seventieth annual meeting of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society was held Wednesday, of this week in Wilder hall, 9 Ashburton place Boston. President Baxter, appointed as temporary chairman, Judge Blake of Montana and Boston.

Judge Blake remarked in his usual humorous vein that while he didn't know as the subject of woman suffrage, should be discussed at the meeting, yet right here, the opportunity presented itself, for the women to vote for a President. Among the business to be transacted, was voting for honorary members and as the name of Hon. Woodrow Wilson Ph. D., LL. D. of Washington, D. C. had been recommended, he could assure the women present of the chance for once, to vote for the President of the United States.

After the transaction of the business, George Francis Dow, Secretary of the Essex Institute, Salem, spoke on "The River Agawam. An Essex County Water Way," using stereopticon slides to illustrate the theme. The River Agawam, now the Ipswich river, taking its name from the town at its mouth, was thus described by Edward Johnson, that interesting chronicler of the settlement on the bay, in his "Wonder-Working Providence, of Zion's Saviour, in New England" (London 1654).

"This Towne (Ipswich) is fcituated on a faire and delightfull River, whofe firft rife or fpring begins about five and twenty Miles farther up in the Countrey iffuing forth a very pleafant pond. But foone after it betakes its courfe through a moft hideous fwamp of large extent, even for many Miles, being a great Harbour for Beares: after its coming forth this place, it groweth larger by the income of many fmall Rivers, and iffues forth in the Sea, due Eaft over againft the Iland of Sholes, a great place of fifhing for our Englifh Nation."

Not only were the physical features of this river valley shown, but stone arched bridges of wonderful workmanship, of generations ago, the quaintest, most delightful, most picturesque houses, in all New England, woodland scenes with the illimitable blue sky above and stories were told of men, who for generations had lived on its banks. "You that were once, an angel of light, aint you ashamed to appear in the shape of a swine?" So sternly spoke Parson Capen of Topsfield in witchcraft times, to the evil one that was obstructing a bridge. Whereupon the swine vanished and travel resumed its peaceful sway.

Among the old houses shown were those of Rebecca Nourse, Mary Nourse and Parson Capens, combining several features of mediaeval origin such as the overhang, drop and chamfered summer beams. Parson Capen's house dating from 1686, has now been restored, making it possible to see what were the furnishings and equipments of a home centuries ago.

Among those to receive special greetings was Miss Elizabeth French, recently returned from England. Miss French has been doing excellent work on English research for the society, as her contributions to the Register have shown, and her work is becoming more and more valuable.

At the close of the exercises a social hour was enjoyed, during which following the old fashioned custom, doughnuts and cider were served. The doughnuts were literally nuts, made of dough, as originally doughnuts were made.

PERU RECOGNIZED BY UNITED STATES

Situation Not Similar to That In Mexico and Hayti

Washington, Feb. 14.—Secretary Bryan directed American Minister McMillan at Lima to recognize the new provisional government of Peru on behalf of the United States. The Peruvian government was reorganized recently, the president being ousted and a governing junta composed of representatives from all political parties taking charge pending an election.

The situation there has not been regarded by the administration as similar to that existing in Mexico and Hayti.

ON TRAIL OF BAN JOHNSON

Chicago Club Head Charges Slander and Conspiracy

REFUSES TO GIVE DETAILS

Will Spend $200,000, He Says, to Punish Offenders and Will Retain His Club—Evers Signs Agreement to Play With Boston Braves For Next Four Years

Chicago, Feb. 14.—Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago club of the National league, who returned last night from New York, announced that his attorney had been directed to bring suit today against Ban Johnson, charging the American league president with slander and conspiracy.

Johnson had conspired to oust him from baseball, Murphy said. He refused to give any details of the proposed suit and would not say with whom Johnson had conspired. Neither would he disclose the basis for the slander suit.

Murphy also said the Chicago club was not for sale, and that he had no intention of putting his stock on the market. He said he would not sell either to any of the men at present in organized baseball or to any syndicate or business men who might organize for the purpose of taking over the club.

James A. Pugh, a wealthy Chicagoan, confirmed the report that several sportsmen and business men here had asked Murphy for his terms for his share of the Cub stock. Pugh said the men held a meeting yesterday and had written a letter submitting a proposal to buy the club. Charles A. McCulloch, one of those included in the offer, said their plan was to make Chicago baseball men a happy family.

"If we succeed in purchasing Murphy's interest in the Cubs, the first thing we will try to do will be to get Frank Chance back," he added. "We are prepared to give him the biggest offer in baseball history if we can get him away from New York."

Murphy started several times to talk about his baseball plans, but before any sentence was concluded his conversation would hark back to Johnson. "They can't drive me out of baseball," he said. "I'll spend $200,000 to punish those who have been slandering me, and I'll still have the Chicago club."

SIGNS UP WITH BRAVES

Evers to Receive Salary of $10,000 and Bonus of $20,000

New York, Feb. 14.—Johnny Evers, late manager of the Chicago Cubs, signed a four-year contract with the Boston Nationals at $10,000 a year and in consideration also of a bonus of $20,000.

And the National league decided that the Boston club need not turn Pitcher Perdue and Second Baseman Sweeney over to Chicago in exchange for Evers, and that Charles W. Murphy, the Chicago owner, had not only forfeited all title to Evers, but had, in addition, rendered himself liable to a fine equivalent to the bonus which will be paid to the famous second baseman.

The magnates have taken the position that Murphy violated Evers' contract by engaging Henry O'Day as manager of the Chicago club and that the Chicago club's right to profit by any trade or sale involving Evers has been automatically forfeited.

Behind the enforcement of baseball law as construed by the magnates lies an evident disposition on their part to punish Murphy for the aid and assistance which he has afforded the Federal league in Chicago.

"I will overlook it this time, as it was only my wife, but I would not if it had been any other than Lady Brunswick." The sentry had been trying to flirt with the kaiser's daughter.

END OF THE POTOMAC

Ice Fices Will Probably Make the Naval Tug Unseaworthy

Washington, Feb. 14.—No vessel will be sent to the relief of the naval tug Potomac, imprisoned by ice packs in the Bay of Islands, on the coast of Newfoundland. The navy department will wait until the forces of nature make the release of the tug possible.

It is the opinion of naval officers familiar with Arctic conditions that when the tug is freed the pressure of the ice floes by the spring thaws will have ended its career as a seaworthy vessel. In the meantime most of the members of the tug's crew probably will be brought back to the United States.

ON HUNGER STRIKE

Negro Convicts Refuse to Eat When Segregated From Whites

San Francisco, Feb. 14.—The 122 negro prisoners at San Quentin prison went on a hunger strike when the rule segregating them from whites in the dining halls went into effect.

There will be no forcible feeding or other coercive measures, according to Warden Johnson. "We believe that in time all will see the foolishness of their conduct," he said. "Those who don't want to go into the dining hall are not compelled to."

The rule was adopted because of friction between whites and negroes at meals.

UNION LABOR RULED OUT

Preference on Public Works Is Declared Unconstitutional

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 14.—The Nebraska supreme court decided the clause in the charter of South Omaha providing that only union labor could be employed on public works is unconstitutional.

The court held that the rule took private property of taxpayers without due process of law to support a privileged class at the expense of the taxpayers.

SQUANTUM NOT WANTED

Bostons Mayor Turns Down Local Committee

Mayor Curley dashed cold water on the proposition to annex Squantum to Boston when a delegation with that end in view called on him Friday. He told them that he would not permit for a year at least the annexation of any towns or villages.

Mayor Curley said that from a financial standpoint it would not be of much benefit to his city and that the finances of Boston were in such a condition at present, feverish, in fact, that he would have to give the petitioners the go by.

MRS. CLARENCE L. CLEAVES.

The funeral of Mrs. Clarence L. Cleaves who passed away after a brief illness was held at her late home 41 Bromfield street, Wollaston, Saturday afternoon. Services were conducted by Rev. J. A. Matheson pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Quincy. The great display of beautiful flowers showed the esteem in which she was held.

Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Mrs. Cleaves before her marriage a short time ago was Miss M. Elsie Tobin eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Tobin of Rawson road and had been a resident of Wollaston many years, and endeared herself to everyone who knew her by her sunny disposition. Besides her husband and parents, Mrs. Cleaves is survived by three sisters and two brothers who have the sympathy of many friends and neighbors in the sudden loss of a dear one.

Her death is doubly sad following so closely that of her youngest brother Clarence M. Tobin who was killed at the Norfolk Downs station a few years ago.

DR. WISE COMING.

There is great interest in the coming of Dr. Stephen S. Wise to our city on Monday evening when he lectures in Wollaston school hall under the auspices of the Parents-Teachers' Association.

In his home city he is almost worshipped by thousands of people, who recognize him as one of the most eloquent speakers and deepest thinkers in the country. His subject Monday night will be on "How to make life worth living."

BRIEFS

Mrs. Moses J. Keller of Billings street has improved so much in health that she is able to sit up a little each day.

John W. Abbott has been in New Hampshire this week where his mother passed away Tuesday, and was buried Friday.

Thursday afternoon members of the Women's Guild of Christ church meet to sew for Quincy benevolences, of which so much was learned at the last meeting of the Guild.

The Daniel C. Millers of Willett street and Rawson road have many friends who will be glad to know that Mr. Miller is convalescing favorably from an attack of pneumonia.

Epworth League of the Atlantic Methodist church is to give an unique entertainment along the line of foreign emigration in the near future. The entertainment will be given by the West Quincy League. It is missionary in its nature and about forty young people take part.

Mrs. John Murray who started her dry good's store in Music hall block, Atlantic, less than four years ago and later moved to Sagamore block for more space, has leased the store on the corner of Sagamore street and Newbury avenue in order to enlarge her floor space.

On Sunday, Feb. 15th Rev. T. C. Martin of the Hall Place M. E. church will exchange pulpits with Rev. W. J. King of the Fourth Methodist Episcopal church of Boston. Mr. King is the only colored preacher in the New England Conference. He is a graduate of Wiley University and Boston University school of Theology and comes highly recommended.

The penetrating cold weather this week has frozen several water pipes in Atlantic. The hot water front on a stove at the home of John Peacock on Billings street was frozen Thursday morning and when the fire was started exploded, blowing the stove almost to pieces, doing considerable damage to the walls and ceiling of the kitchen. Mr. Peacock also had a narrow escape from being hit with some of the pieces of iron that smashed a door close to where he was standing. The hot water boiler in John W. Abbott's house on Ocean street also burst Thursday morning.

RAND CLASS VICTORIOUS

Show the Makaria Class How to Hit the Pins

The Rand class of Wollaston surprised the Makaria class last night by taking 3 out of 4 points in the Sunday School bowling league. For a time it seemed certain that all four points would go to the Wollaston boys, but a spare by Harold England of the Makarias put new life into the Bethany boys and they finished out the last string by hitting the wood in good fashion. The scores were not anything to brag about although they were much better than those made by the Davis and Clarke classes last week.

The result of the match puts the Rand and Davis classes in first place with 3 points to each team's credit. The Makaria and Clarke classes have each won 1 point. The summary:

The ten high average men in the Knights of Columbus league as they now qualify for the many individual prizes are Avery 91, Driscoll 88, R. Sullivan 8[illegible]lon 85, Thompson 84, Walsh 83, LaCriox 83, McGee 82 and Mahon 82.

Matt Cummings of the Second Quincy A. A. is still confined to his home with a severe cold. Sid Duggan has entirely recovered and participated in the game against St. Marys of Cambridge on Thursday night.

The last Knights of Columbus matches will be rolled at the City Square alleys Tuesday night. They will be: Averys, the leaders against the Coyles, and the Fallons against the Sullivans. If the Averys drop four points and the Fallons win four the later will have the title. Otherwise the Averys will hold the place they clung to all season. The closing contests will be very exciting since a change of positions occured after every match, the final result depending on the last balls rolled. The standing now is:

	Won	Lost
Avery	26	18
Fallon	23	21
Coyles	20	24
Sullivans	19	25

The first and second teams of the Y. M. C. A. will make a trip to East Milton tonight to try conclusions with the crack Cunningham teams. Quincy will be crippled by the absence of Rich who is still out with the Rivadavia, but Flanders is expected to show much better than he did Wednesday night against the sailor boys.

The Redmen will try to get revenge on the Silent Five at the Y. M. C. A. while the Roxbury Boys will line up against the Roxbury Settlement House. Jack Melville is now employed as physical director at the Roxbury institution and naturally the Quincy lads will try to show up the visitors.

Quincy High school will not play against Roger Williams High at Newport, R. I. today. Manager Frederick M. Atwood of the basket ball team wired them to that effect this morning, giving as a reason the uncertainty of travel during the storm. A game will probably be arranged to be played at Newport on Feb. 27, which date is now assigned to Fall River Tech, which will be withdrawn because of additional demands made by that team.

FORE RIVER LEAGUE MATCHES

Two matches in the Fore River league were rolled at the Coliseum alleys Friday night. Kateon made the best string, 114 and Fromm had the best total. The team captained by McDermott gave the Yard five a bump, beating them 3 to 1.

STRUCK MONROE BROADSIDE ON

Johnson Says Nantucket Rebounded After First Shock

LOCKED ONLY TWO SECONDS

Ships Could Not Be Kept Together Long Enough to Rescue All Passengers and Crew—List of Ship Too Great to Launch Boats—Violation of Law Would Have Saved Lives

Philadelphia, Feb. 14.—Captain Johnson, commander of the Old Dominion line steamship Monroe, sunk in the collision with the Merchants and Miners' steamship Nantucket, off the Virginia coast, again took the witness stand in the trial of Captain Berry of the Nantucket, who is charged with negligence in connection with the disaster.

Much of the time of the inquiry, which is being conducted by the United States local steam vessel inspectors, is being taken up in an effort to draw lessons from the disaster with a view of avoiding similar occurrences.

Johnson said the two ships were locked together only about two seconds at the time of the collision. The Nantucket rebounded quickly and fell in alongside and struck the Monroe again broadside on. The second shock appeared to be greater than the first. When the vessels parted again after an interval of twenty seconds the Nantucket floated astern and the Monroe forward. Johnson said he believed it would have been impossible to keep the two ships together in order to rescue all passengers and crew had such an effort been made.

Johnson testified he did not signal the chief engineer to start the pumps, as he regarded it as useless.

One of the mysteries of the disaster, Johnson said, was why the Monroe sank by the stern when the hole was forward. The only way he could account for this, he said, was that the water probably ran to the stern and caused that part of the vessel to settle first.

Johnson, in concluding his direct examination, wanted to impress upon the board of inspectors that the list of the Monroe was so great it was impossible to walk on the deck to get to the port side of the vessel to launch boats.

Under cross examination by John F. Lewis, counsel for Berry, witness said he did not regard the Monroe as a "crank" ship. He admitted that when she was new she was "cranky," but after extensive alterations had been made this "crankiness" disappeared.

Johnson testified that if he had violated the international rule of the high seas he probably could have avoided the collision of the two ships.

The international rules provide that in case of fog a steam vessel hearing, apparently forward of her beam, the fog signal of a vessel the position of which is not ascertained, shall, so far as the circumstances of the case admit, stop her engines and then navigate with caution until danger of collision is over.

Johnson testified that when he heard the Nantucket's fog whistle off the Monroe's starboard bow, he stopped his engines and that a minute later when he saw the loom of the Nantucket's light he went ahead full speed to port.

"If I had put my helm hard a starboard and gone ahead full speed when I heard the fog whistle, I probably would have cleared the Nantucket. That is the only possible thing, I think, I could have done to avoid the collision, but I would have been violating the law."

Germany Says Mexico Must Fight Its Own Battles and Settle Later

Berlin, Feb. 14.—The Mexican situation came up for discussion in the imperial parliament when Alfred Zimmerman, under secretary of state for foreign affairs, answered an interpellation as to whether Provisional President Huerta had made representations to Germany in regard to the raising of the embargo on the exportation of arms from the United States to Mexico.

Zimmerman said the United States government, when it informed Germany of the raising of the embargo, had expressed the conviction that nobody outside of Mexico could enforce a settlement of that country's difficulties. The restoration of peace in Mexico, he said, could be hoped for only if the Mexican parties were allowed to fight out their quarrels without interference, and the raising of the embargo merely gave American citizens the same right of selling arms as was enjoyed by other nations.

Zimmerman informed the house that measures had been taken to protect Germans in Mexico and declared that Mexico would be held fully responsible for all their property losses, which had been considerable.

WOULD PULL GORE "FROM HIGH PERCH"

Witness Tells of Alleged Plot to "Get" Senator

Oklahoma City, Feb. 14.—Initial testimony was given in support of the contention of the defense that Senator Gore, who is being sued by Mrs. Minnie E. Bond for $50,000 damages, is the victim of a conspiracy engineered by disappointed officeseekers.

The senator will take the witness stand to deny in detail, his attorneys declare, Mrs. Bond's allegations of indignities offered her, and will make "startling revelations" as to the alleged plot.

Half a dozen witnesses for the defense testified in contradiction to testimony given by witnesses for the plaintiff, one of these, J. W. Laws, declared he was told by T. E. Robertson, an important witness for Mrs. Bond and an unsuccessful applicant for a federal position, that Gore was "drunk with power but we'll pull him from his high perch yet."

Laws admitted on cross examination that he "had hopes" of receiving an appointment in the civil service, but denied that he was "trying to get into Senator Gore's drinking cellar."

It was his 70th although no one would for a minute think that he had arrived at that age for he is as spry as a youth, and no one takes more delight in the discomforts of a gunning stand waiting for a shot at ducks or to sit by the hour in a boat dangling a fish line over the side than does Jim. There was no special celebration over the passing of the event Friday, although Jim received a number of congratulations from many of his griends including a telegram from a sister 78 years of age, who resides in New York.

Dolores, The Dancer

Little Mexican Girl Made Good Her Childish Boast

By SARGENT HANDY

Paul Galbraith yawned slightly as the curtains slowly arose and disclosed a garden scene. The spot light found the center of the stage and held it for the coming of Dolores.

She came, drifting along like some wind blown autumn leaf, her wonderful gown of cunningly mingled red and brown and orange chiffon clinging to her slender young figure.

There was a burst of applause, acknowledged by a rare smile and the flash of her beautiful black eyes; then Dolores danced while the audience held its breath. It was always that way when the mysterious dancer appeared.

Paul Galbraith breathed heavily, as a man spent at the end of a long race. His startled eyes never left the swaying form in its vivid gown.

When she had responded for the last time to the deafening applause with her graceful little foreign gesture of pleased surprise and they were staring once more at the painted curtain, Paul drew his hand across his dazed eyes.

"Dolores!" he muttered incredulously. "Surely it cannot be Dolores Lopez! I left her pounding clothes in the brook back of her father's house in a Mexican village. She was a ragged little urchin of twelve. But the face and the smile! I must find out."

He left the box and sought the manager of the theater. Paul's card and the magic spell of his name, which was known the country over, brought him a little information, but it was quite unsatisfactory.

"Senorita Lopez has never informed us concerning her early life. There is much mystery connected with it, but we believe that she comes of a prominent Mexican family and that her father is highly esteemed by the present government. I will endeavor to obtain an interview for you, Mr. Galbraith."

"Thank you," said Paul as he followed the manager to the back of the stage.

While he waited his thoughts were busy with the past. Ten years ago he had been in Mexico in the interest of a mining company, and he had made the acquaintance of Fernando Lopez, an educated gentleman, down at heels, indolent, depending upon the gaming table for his livelihood. There had been a motherless daughter, Dolores, a child giving promise of future beauty. The girl had shared for her father, whom she worshiped, and she had a certain fierce pride in her family, fallen though it was, which Paul could not but respect.

"Some day, Senor Galbraith, you will not smile," she had said shrewdly. "I shall be great; the world will bow down to me. I am the last of the name of Lopez, but I shall be the greatest of them all!"

Paul had sympathized with the child and when he went away he had given her a large gold piece to buy herself a present to remember him by. He knew the girl needed clothes, for her father selfishly spent his winnings for his own pleasure. So when Dolores' dark eyes had flashed boundless gratitude and she had bent swiftly and kissed his hand, he had smiled kindly upon her and gone his way.

He had forgotten all about her until tonight when she had flashed upon the stage and his memory made connection between the child of the adobe Mexican hut and the most popular dancer of the hour in New York.

The manager was returning with many apologies on his lips.

"I'm sorry, Galbraith, but Senorita Lopez begs to be excused. She has never met Mr. Galbraith—so she says. These artists are freakish, you know"—

"Pray don't apologize," said Paul hastily. "I am not entirely certain now that this is the daughter of the old Lopez I knew."

Later, on his homeward way, his thoughts still clung to those old Mexican days.

"Funny how I can't get that kid out of my mind," he chided himself as he sat down in his comfortable library.

He opened a drawer in his desk and pulled out a portfolio of photographs. He had taken most of these photographs during that Mexican trip, and with the spell of the bewitching dancer still upon him Paul turned them over, hoping that he could find a picture of the graceful child of Fernando Lopez.

Here it was—Dolores sweeping the doorstep with a primitive broom. She had detected him in the act of snapping her picture, and he had caught her startled upward glance, so like the glance she had shot at him this evening.

Why, it must be the same Dolores. Feature for feature they were alike, only the Dolores of this evening, the dancer, was older with all the beauty the child of twelve gave promise of.

If it was his Dolores—he was calling her that now, for his interest in the affair was absurdly deep—if it was his Dolores, Dolores of the broom, of the manifold household tasks he knew she accomplished, then why should she deny his acquaintance?

He was piqued. Surely there had not been so many American visitors in Santa Vados that she had forgotten him!

Paul was vexed because Dolores haunted his dreams that night, and in the morning he awoke with a headache and a resolve to see Dolores dance that evening.

So once more he sat and watched that blithe young form float out from the wings to weave a spell about his heart until he could close his eyes and dream that he was in Mexico again; the mandolins tinkled an accompaniment to her fairy feet, and the yellow roses at her breast drooped and gave out their dying fragrance.

Then, amid deafening applause, she came to the footlights to receive offerings of flowers.

Paul saw an usher hand up his basket heaped with trailing sprays of jasmine, and without a glance at the card the dancer cast a startled upward glance at Paul's box. Then, with a charming bow that included the whole theater from pit to gallery, she vanished, laden with flowers.

"She recognizes me! It is Dolores, my Dolores— What in thunder is the matter with me?" he muttered as he made his way back of the scenes.

But again Senorita Lopez denied her acquaintance with the handsome American, and again Paul went away, chagrined, but satisfied in his heart that the dancer was the daughter of Fernando Lopez.

Night after night Paul Galbraith sat in a box at the same theater, waiting only long enough to watch Dolores dance. When she vanished he went too. Every night he sent her a basket of jasmine flowers, but never after that first startled glance at him did Dolores acknowledge his nightly offering.

How to meet her became a question that haunted his waking hours.

"What's the matter, Galbraith?" questioned his closest friend, Tom Delanoy. "You're as moony and seedy as can be. If I didn't know you to be utterly heartless where women are concerned I should say that you were in love. Oh, don't frown at me like that! I know all the symptoms. I've been in and out of love dozens of times myself. But when you serious chaps take a notion you have a bad attack. Now, how about Dolores, the dancer?"

This was a random shot, but it found its mark.

Paul grew white about the lips, and his eyes flashed.

"It isn't such a joke as you might imagine, Tom," he said quietly.

"I beg pardon," said the other contritely. "I heard the fellows joshing around that you were there every night. Of course I didn't believe it, because"—

"You can believe it," interrupted Paul grimly. "It's true."

"What's true?" asked Tom craftily.

"That I've been attending every performance where Dolores Lopez has danced."

"The dickens you have! And you deny that you're in love?"

Paul smiled. "I don't deny it because I don't know myself. But she's a baffling mystery, and I rather believe that's the attraction for me. You know, Tom, I've always been attracted by anything that baffled my understanding, never rest until I unravel it. Well, it's the case with Dolores Lopez. She denies my acquaintance, but I used to know her when a child in Mexico."

Tom paced the floor, his round face comically perplexed.

"Well, you can't do a darned thing when a lady denies your acquaintance," he admitted at last. "I'll tell you what I'll do, Paul. Suppose I call upon her and tell her I am a friend of yours and that you're very anxious to meet her again and"—

Paul lifted a protesting hand.

"No, thanks, Tom—much obliged, old fellow, but it won't do. I'll make one more trial. I'll write her a letter first and"—

"That's the ticket—write a letter or telephone, eh?"

Paul hesitated. "That's taking a mean advantage of her, Tom. I'll write to her and remind her of the little Mexican lullaby she used to sing to her queer cornhusk dollies. It began 'Dormir—dormir.' By Jove, I've forgotten the rest, but it was a sweet little thing." Paul hummed a minor air under his breath, while Tom watched him with amused eyes.

The next day Paul wrote his letter to Dolores Lopez. He wrote many letters, for none of them suited him, and finally the one he did send was brusque almost to rudeness, so afraid was he of offending her by too great presumption. But he could not resist reminding her that the young American who had listened rapt to her sweet singing of the little lullaby, "Sleep—sleep," which she had sung to her cornhusk dollies in the shade of a tamarind tree, still remembered her and would deem it a privilege to renew his acquaintance. He thought perhaps that Senorita Lopez had forgotten her old friend.

That night he did not go to the theater. He sat alone in his library trying to read, but always the lovely dark face of Dolores, the dancer, came between him and the printed pages.

Tom Delanoy strolled in at 11 o'clock whistling a gay tune under his breath.

He pushed his hat on the back of his head and watched his friend with amused eyes.

"I've been to see Dolores," he said at last. "And, Paul, she's a wonder!"

Paul nodded and relighted his pipe.

"She can dance," he said tersely.

"They tell me that she never danced better than she did tonight," pursued Delanoy. "She wore a wonderful gown of black and cerise, and the way she flashed around the stage made me think of one of those birds you come across in the dark woods—tanager, scarlet tanager, you know.

"But she seemed uneasy. Every once in awhile she would glance up at the third box, left hand. It happened to be full of women tonight. And always after that her cheeks would grow pinker, and her glorious eyes would flash. Gee, whiz, man, if I had any right, the merest thread of an opportunity, to claim acquaintance with Dolores Lopez, I'd not miss it—no, siree!"

Paul's thoughtful face broke into a smile.

"You idiot!" he cried. "Run along home; you need rest."

"And," added Tom as he neared the door, "they say she was disappointed tonight because she didn't receive a certain basket of flowers; seems some Johnny sends her a basket of jasmine every night—everybody's on to it—and tonight it didn't come, and she looked as mad as a hornet, even though she smiled like an angel as she went off the stage. Wonder who the Johnny was, Paul—wonder if he stayed home, too, and tried to read Macaulay upside down"— The door slammed behind the witty Mr. Delanoy just in time for the volume of Macaulay to miss his broad back. It fell clattering to the polished floor as the telephone bell rang sharply.

Paul picked up the receiver, slightly curious as to who would be calling him at this late hour.

It was the voice of a maidservant asking if this was Mr. Paul Galbraith's apartment.

"Yes," replied Paul.

There was a little pause, a murmur of sound over the wire, the sound of a distantly closing door at that mysterious other end, and then a voice singing softly to him.

A rich contralto voice was singing the lullaby with which a little Mexican girl had hushed her cornhusk dollies to sleep in the long ago—a song that haunted him night and day now.

"Dormir—Dormir"— the words trailed softly through the simple song until it ended in a low, rich, quivering note.

"Dolores!" whispered Paul, afraid to break the magic spell of the moment. "It is you, little friend Dolores Lopez?"

"Yes, Mr. Galbraith, it is your little friend, but, oh, such a grand lady now!" she cried in almost childish triumph. "I told you I would make my family name great—great—and you are proud of me, Mr. Galbraith, my friend?" There was a wistfulness in her voice that set his heart to beating.

"I am proud of you, Dolores," he whispered. "You are wonderful, you are talented, beautiful, but I see you are the same Dolores Lopez, and I love you, Dolores, you understand?"

"Oh, Mr. Galbraith!" she sighed softly. "It is really true that you do—love me?"

"It is true," he said earnestly, "and you, Dolores?"

There was a hesitating moment, and then her voice came to him quaveringly sweet. "It was always so, my friend, even when I was a poor, ragged little girl, and I swore that some day I would go to your country and find you; I would be so great that you would be proud to know me. But when the time really came I was afraid, senor. Well, Senor Paul, if I must—I was afraid of you—of myself—and I denied your acquaintance, if you can forgive me. Ah, come tomorrow morning, then—I care not for the dancing as I do for my old friend. Well—more, impatient Paul, I will say tomorrow."

So the stage lost its beautiful dancer, Dolores Lopez, after one short triumphant season, and Paul Galbraith gained a wife.

CANADA GRAFT IS UNEARTHED

Money "Unnecessarily Spent" In Building Railway

IT AMOUNTS TO $40,000,000

Alleged Corruption on Contracts, Two Alone Yieldig a "Straight Rake-Off" of $750,000—Sum of $161,300,000 Already Spent on Work Estimated to Cost but $61,415,000

Ottawa, Feb. 14.—"We find that the Transcontinental Railway company, the Grand Trunk railway, and those having charge of the construction of the Pacific coast extension did not practice economy, and that, without including the money unnecessarily expended in building the railway east of the St. Lawrence river, $40,000,000 at least was needlessly expended."

This was the conclusion which F. P. Gutelius and J. L. Staunton, the commissioners appointed by the government to investigate the transcontinental railway, have reached. Their report, placed on the table of the commons, caused a sensation. They found that the estimate of the late government for the road was $61,415,000, whereas the cost to date was $161,300,000, and eventually would reach $237,651,521.

The commissioners found that a straight rake-off of $750,000 was obtained by M. P. and J. T. Davis on two contracts, that some work was paid for twice, that contracts were not let to the lowest tenderers, that profits of $8,800,000 were made by contractors who sublet their contracts, and that there were numerous other irregularities.

The commissioners said the Transcona shops at Winnipeg, which are to cost $4,500,000, are not authorized by law and are twice as large as required. In their opinion, large sums have been lost by the premature construction of the New Brunswick section, built, they assert, to placate the supporters of the government east of Quebec.

The National Transcontinental is being built by the Dominion government as the eastern section of the Grand Trunk Pacific and extends east from Winnipeg to Moncton, N. B., more than 1300 miles.

After its construction by the government the road, according to the terms of the agreement, which is embodied in the acts of parliament, is to be leased to the Grand Trunk Pacific, which is to operate it for fifty years for a rental of 3 percent of the cost of construction, the government remitting the interest for the rst seven years.

The commission says that until the appointment of Major Leonard, the present chief of the transcontinental railway commission, "no member of the commission had any experience or knowledge of railway building or operation," and that the road's standard "was decided on without any knowledge as to whether or not it was suitable for the country and on assumptions as to business expected which were unwarranted."

NARROW ESCAPE.

Mr. and Mrs. William McDunna of Braintree while skating on Sunset lake yesterday afternoon near the ice houses where the water is very deep had a narrow escape from death. A stretch of open water had skimmed over with ice the night before and broke under their weight as they skated upon it from the solid ice. Hearing the cries, a number of boys who were near rushed to the aid of the unlucky couple and effected a rescue. Henry Fisher of Stedman avenue, a High school boy grasped Mrs. McDunna but was unable to drag her from the water. Harry Nickerson held out his hockey stick and she held on while three other boys, Herbert D. Hollis, John Kelley and John Mealey, aided by the two first mentioned succeeded in pulling her from the water. By this time, Mr. McDunna was growing weak but the boys were able to get him from his perilous plight. Mr. and Mrs. McDunna were taken to the home of Thomas Slavin, 59 Pond street and after being cared for were taken home. Beyond the nervous shock it is thought they will be none the worse for their experience.

Daily Thought.

True dignity comes only of humility. Pride is the ruin of dignity, for it is a worshiping of self, and that involves a continuous sinking.—George MacDonald.

HEAVIEST SNOW OF THE WINTER

Started at Midnight and Still Continues

The year 1914 is keeping up its record for stormy Saturdays. This is the seventh Saturday of the year, and out of this number there has not been a Saturday in which it has been pleasant all day. On two Saturdays it did not storm, but the weather was dull all day and the balance of the seven, which includes today have been stormy.

It was predicted Friday that there would be a snow storm during the night and it came along all right. During the evening the weather began to moderate and during the night it began to storm, and at daylight this morning Quincy had the deepest snow of the season and a hard storm was in progress. The wind had died down somewhat, however, and the snow was of a very fine quality. Just the kind that makes fast. The wind freshened a little after sunrise and the morning gave promise of being a disagreeable day.

The street railway started its big ploughs out during the night and this morning cars are moving on fairly good time.

Commissioner Brown also had his ploughs out in good season this morning so that the sidewalks were cleared early.

Since noon rain has been falling, and unless there is a drop in temperature it will be decidedly slushy.

The weather predictions this morning were that Sunday would be pleasant but colder.

TOO COLD AT ADAMS SCHOOL

Damage of Over $200 to Pipes and Fittings

The weather of the past week has been too severe for the new Adams school and as a result plumbers and steam fitters are repairing damages estimated at about $225, due to the bursting of pipes. In the basement the plumbing was damaged to such an extent that it will cost a trifle more than $100 to replace pipes and bowls. The balance of the cost will be made up in renewing a radiator return which burst between the floors in the second story, causing considerable damage.

The building during the cold snap was heated with extreme difficulty and sessions were suspended on the north side of the building. The pupils of these rooms were changed to rooms on the south side of the building. There was no overcrowding owing to the slim attendance.

LINCOLN SERVICES AT UNIVERSALIST

Patriotic services, dedicated to the memory of President Lincoln, will be held in the First Universalist church on Sunday by Rev. Merrill C. Ward, pastor, who will preach an appropriate sermon on the martyred president. The services will be attended by patriotic organizations of the city and the special guests will be the members of Col. Abner B. Packard camp, Sons of Veterans and Paul Revere Post, G. A. R. The camp and post will assemble at headquarters and march to the church where services will commence at three o'clock.

BRAINTREE

Several members of the allied patriotic societies attended the unveiling of the memorial to the Army Nurses, held in the Hall of Flags at the State House Thursday afternoon.

Miss Mary White of Taunton is substituting as teacher of the sixth grade at the Noah Torrey school in place of Miss Piper who recently resigned.

The many friends and pupils of Dr. C. A. Pitkin of Thayer academy will be much gratified to learn that he is able to sit up and is recovering from the effects of his recent severe illness.

Last Thursday evening the members of Amana Rebekah lodge, No. 96, held their third rehearsal in Odd Fellows' hall. The degree mistress was Miss Lillian T. Barrett of Jamaica Plain.

Mrs. Thomas Clinton who has been suffering from a severe attack of double pneumonia for the past two weeks at her home on Quincy avenue was conscious Friday for the first time this week. She has improved slowly since and it is hoped will continue to do so.

Much sympathy is being extended Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel F. Hunt of Quincy avenue. Mr. Hunt had a bad turn a short time ago but is slowly recovering and Mrs. Hunt was taken ill this week and is not improved very much so far.

There will be a meeting of the Hollis School Association, Friday evening, February 20, 1914, at eight o'clock. Mr. Barbour, superintendent of the Quincy schools, will address the meeting, and there will be music and refreshments.

Lester Farrar of Shaw street was seriously injured while coasting in a pasture near W. R. Drake's stable off Hayward street, Wednesday afternoon. He was taken home at once where it was learned that a rib had been broken. He is a plucky little chap and will probably come out all right.

On Friday evening, Feb. 20. Mr. F. A. Anderson will give a free illustrated lecture under the auspices of the Jonas Perkins school association at the Jonas Perkins school hall, on the recent trip of the chamber of Commerce through South America. This promises to be very interesting and it is hoped that everybody will attend. Children in or above the sixth grade are also invited to be present.

IN INTEREST OF ECONOMY

Representative Sullivan Would Postpone River Improvement

(Special from State House.)

Representative Michael T. Sullivan of Quincy received high praise from the legislative committee on harbors and public lands Friday morning for his public spirited attitude toward the proposed improvement of Weymouth Fore river. The bill under discussion before the committee was to provide that the board of Harbors and Land Commissioners improve Weymouth Fore river by dredging that part extending from Germantown point, to Rock Island head. including Rock Island cove. The appropriation necessary for the accomplishment of this work is $150,000.

Representative Sullivan asked that the bill be referred to the next General Court, because, although he realized the necessity and advisability of the improvements asked, he also realized that the Commonwealth is threatened with an enormous tax burden this year, probably more than $10,000,000 and he was in thorough sympathy with the general tendency manifested by the General Court this year towards economy, and, all things considered, thought it best to postpone request for this $150,000 until such time as the Bay State's financial sky was less heavily clouded.

The members of th committee congratulated Representative Sullivan on his broadmindedness and consideration of the public good, and stated that if all members took an equally sensible attitude toward expenditures for local improvements this year, the session would be shorter and the real interests of the people much better served.

..Without doubt the most dramatic event in the history of the world was the destruction of Pompeii in 79 A. D. by a terrific eruption of the volcano of Mt. Vesuvius. Lord Bulwer Lytton in his famous romantic novel "The Last Days of Pompeii" immortalized the event, and using data obtained from scientific research and investigation, peopled it with his imagination. George Kleine with his photo dramatization of Lord Lytton's novel will do even more to recall it to modern amusement lovers. His pictures of the eruption give a most impressive and vivid idea of the awful magnitude of this world famed catastrophe. Mr. Kleine's photo drama "The Last Days of Pompeii" will be presented at the Music Hall, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon and night, February 16, 17 and 18.

MEN'S MEETING DRAWS BIG CROWD

Life Story of John Callahan Holds Close Attention of All

Large Chorus and Cadet Band Lead the Singing

Eight hundred men, young and old, from all parts of the city, attended the first of the series of Sunday afternoon meetings in the Kincaide theatre, under the direction of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. They joined in the singing of hymns before and after John Callahan, superintendent of the Hadley Street Rescue Mission in New York, spoke on his life, under the title of "From Bar Room to Pulpit." The entire seating capacity on the floor of the theatre was taken up and there were a few in the gallery..

Secretary A. F.. Bromley of the Y. M. C. A. conducted the singing led by a chorus of 25 mens voices and the Wollaston Cadet band of 10 pieces.

The program of the Wollaston Cadet band included:

March "Onward Christian Soldier" Arrg. T. M. Carter

Sacred Selection—"Providence" Tobani

"Celebre" from Yachner's Suitie No. 1 Arrg. Laureudan

Adestes Fidelis Arrg. Burrell

Rev. J. A. Matheson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church presented Mr. Callahan and in so doing said "I don't believe the Lord cares anything about our past if we are all right now.

Mr. Callahan said a talk on Jesus will draw a crowd when other topics fail, and one of the best days in the life of any man is when Jesus passes, providing he is not let by, and I want to thank God that people are living in the present and forgetting the past of men.

Home breaking started in the Garden of Eden, said Mr. Callahan, and after sinning Adam and Eve ran away and hid. A sinner always runs away from home. Sin causes their desertion. The Devil today is still breaking up homes and you read of divorce, separations of parents and of children being taken away. All show the Devil is busy and trying to make people miserable and unhappy because that is his business.

My home was broken up through the death of my mother, explained Mr. Callahan, when I was but six years of age. I recall this chapter of my life vividly. One of her last words almost were "take Johnnie and put him in an orphan asylum." Her funeral was held two days afterward, and from then on I missed my mother.

NEW JERSEY HOUSE BURNED

Occupied by 15 Employees at Shipyard

Three firemen were slightly injured Saturday evening at a fire which destroyed the New Jersey House at the corner of South and East Howard streets. The fire evidently started from a furnace, and when discovered there was but one man in the house. The proprietor John Bissett had gone to Boston for provisions and all of the boarders were away. An alarm was sounded from Box 723 at 7.58 o'clock and it was two hours later before the all out sounded.

There was a high wind prevailing at the time and the heavy snow gave the apparatus a hard time reaching the scene. The fire was one of the kind that get behind the walls of the house, and by the time the department arrived the fire seemed to be all over the building and flames were shooting from the windows. It was a most difficult fire to handle and before it was all out the building had been practically gutted.

During the height of the fire an extension ladder was raised to the front of the building and firemen Christopher Oliver and Clareace Metcalf were on the way up the ladder with a line of hose when the ladder snapped and they were pitched into a snow bank. Metcalf was the first to fall and Oliver landed on top of him and then part of the ladder fell on them. Fortunately however, the snow broke their fall and they escaped with a few bruises, and remained at work throughout the fire.

Herbert Griffin of the Central station had an artery in his left hand cut by broken glass and was treated by a physician. He also remained at work and later in the night fired the steamer at the City Square fire.

When the fire was thought to be out and the department was making up preparatory to returning to quarters, the flames suddenly burst through the roof and it took the firemen a half hour to again get it under control. A systematic search was then made for more fire, but this time it had been conquered.

Bassett, the proprietor, arrived on the scene from Boston just about the as the firemen were making up, but he could give no information as to the fifteen men who boarded in the house.

The building was erected some years ago as a boarding house for Fore River workmen and was named the New Jersey in honor of the battleship New Jersey which was then building at the Fore River shipyard. It was a two and a half story wooden building and was practically destroyed entailing a loss on building and contents of $7,000.

It is probable that the boarders lost more or less of their effects, but just what the value of these will be is unknown.

LINCOLN SERVICE

Patriotic Society Attend the Universalist Church

The Universalist church was well filled Sunday afternoon for the Lincoln Memorial service. The G. A. R., W. R. C., S. of V., D. of V.. and L. A. S. attended and made an excellent showing in numbers and in their movements. The color bearers brought the flags to the front and stood with them while the Star Spangled Banner was sung by Miss Edith Hyland. Following this the different orders saluted their flags. Then the Commander of the G. A. R. gave the order: "Citizens and comrades, salute the flag." The service was inspiring. The front of the church was tastily decorated with large and small flags and a picture of Lincoln.

The musical part of the service included two tenor solos by D. J. S. McCurdy, "Just for today" and "O Father in Heaven;" a solo by Miss Hyland "O love that will not let me go;" anthems by the choir and National hymns. Mrs. Florence F. Cutter was organist.

The pastor Rev. Merrill C. Ward, welcomed the patriotic orders and paid a tribute to each. The patriotism of the people was commended and all were urged to be thoughtful to salute when passing the flag. Lincoln is to be honored in James Russell Lowell's words as "The First American." Only Franklin and Washington rank with Lincoln, and the greatest of these is Lincoln. In all secular history there is no name that outshines his.

Lincoln was great according to Jesus' words in Matt. 23:11 "He that is greatest among you shall be your servant." Lincoln was great because he served greatly. In making a study of him, Mr. Ward took his outline from Shakespeare's suggestions. "Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. Lincoln was great in all three ways.

First Lincoln was born great. Not in station or wealth, but in capacity to serve greatly. Mr. Ward massed facts to disprove the usual notion that Lincoln had a mean or unworthy ancestry. His ancestors were the Massachusetts Puritan family of Lincolns tracing from one Samuel Lincorne, weaver and sometime mariner, who from Hingham England came and settled at Hingham, Mass.

The ancestry of Nancy Hanks was also a worthy one including soldiers prominent under Cromwell and Athelstane. There is no great man but had a great mother. Nancy Hanks was worthy, and Henry Watterson after researches tells us that Lincoln's father, Thomas was very far from the ne'er-do-well he is often supposed to have been.

Lincoln's clear vision of right, his firm sense of duty was the purest Puritanism, and gave him that powerful moral authority over men. His pioneer ancestors, and his own hardy youth gave him a great primal strength and adaptability.

Mr. Ward is a careful student of local history. It was news to many to be told that Lincoln once came to Quincy, it being perhaps his only visit to New England. In Feb.. 1848, he was a member of Congress, and by appointment of Congress, came to Quincy with the body of John Quincy Adams.

Secondly.—Lincoln achieved greatness. None was more truly a self-made man than he. Illustrations were given of his great determination to persevere in spite of seeming failure. His patience seemed limitless and his courtesy unfailing. By it he wielded great influence over those who differed with him, winning them to his aid, and the service of the Union. No man showed greater judgment of men

BOSTON AND MILTON STEAMERS RESPOND

Services Were Not Needed Because of Good Stop By Chief Billings and Quincy Department

Spectacular Blaze Attracted Large Crowd Loss May Exceed $10,000

An alarm from Box 26 at 2.15 Sunday morning, followed in a few minutes by a general alarm from the same box, sent every piece of fire apparatus in the city, outside of Houghs Neck hurrying to City Square. As the apparatus approached City Square flames could be seen shooting high into the air, giving the appearance that a serious conflagration was in progress.

The fire proved to be on the fourth floor of the southerly end of the Adams building, where it joins the Savings Bank building, but from which it is separated by a thick brick fire wall. The fire started in the room occupied by James Smollett, a street car conductor, and his wife, who had recently been married.

Just what caused the fire seems somewhat in doubt, but the theory at the time that electric wires caused it was not borne out by an investigation later in the morning.

It appears that Mrs. Smollett was awakened by the smell of smoke, and saw a small ball of fire in one corner of her room. She aroused her husband and they lost no time in getting out, being unable to save any of their belongings. Mr. Smollett immediately ran to Box 26 and sounded the alarm, while Mrs. Smollett aroused Mrs. Emma Marnock and Mrs. Elizabeth Glover who occupied rooms on the third floor.

GENERAL ALARM.

By the time the apparatus arrived in City Square flames were shooting through the roof and Chief Billings immediately ordered a general alarm.

Realizing the dangerous locality, Chief Billings in addition to sounding a general alarm sent a telephone call to Boston and to Milton for aid although as it later proved this additional apparatus was not necessary.

The thermometer at that hour registered 18 above zero, and although the air was bitter cold, the absence of a high wind enabled the firemen to confine the fire to the section of the block on the south end, a brick fire wall preventing it from spreading toward the northerly end of the building.

The steamer was located at the hydrant near the entrance to C. F. Pettingill's' store and supplied water to two lines of hose. Two more lines were run from the hydrant in front of the Hancock cemetery, and two from the hydrant at the corner of Hancock and Temple streets near the First church. Still another line was run from the hydrant on Washington street just around the corner from Temple street and another line from a hydrant on Maple street was taken through the alleyway between the Savings Bank building and the Johnson building.

Two lines of hose were carried through the alleyway on Temple street to the rear of the building, while others were taken up the stairway leading to the top of the building where the fire was. A ladder was raised in front of the Savings Bank building, the idea being to carry a line of hose to the roof of the Savings Bank building. The ladder however was too short to reach the roof, and the line of hose was carried up the the stairway of the Savings Bank building thence through the rooms of the Knights of Columbus, to the fire escape in the rear of the building, thence to the roof where a powerful stream was played directly onto the burning roof.

The gallons of water from these streams soon had a telling effect, and by 3 o'clock all that could be seen from the street was a small ball of fire on the top of one of the front dormer windows, and it was very evident that the firemen had the upper hands of the fire.

OUT OF TOWN HELP.

At 3.20, a ladder pung, and the steamer from Milton, drawn by three horses each, pulled into City Square, and a few minutes later a hose wagon and Engine 20 from Neponset drew up in front of the First church. The Boston apparatus was drawn by five horses from which great clouds of steam rolled showing what a hard run it had been.

At 3.45, engine 46 of Ashmont, also drawn by five horses with its hose wagon pulled into City Square. By this time however there was no sign of a fire on the outside of the building and the out-of-town apparatus did not wait long before turning about and starting for home.

A visit to the scene of the fire later in the morning showed that it did not get below the fourth floor of the building, although everything below that floor was more or less damaged by water.

THE OCCUPANTS.

On the fourth floor aside from the room of Mr. Smollett was a room occupied by A. W. Pierce, the photographer. This is known as a printing room, and here were a large number of valuable photograph plates. This room was entirely gutted and practically all of his printing upparatus and many plates will be a total loss.

As stated above the household effects of Mr. Smollett will also be a total loss, as he was unable to save any of his belongings, being fortunate in getting out himself.

THIRD FLOOR.

On the third floor were the living rooms occupied by Mrs. Emma Marnock and Mrs. Elizabeth Glover, as well as the operating room of Pierce the photographer in the rear, and his reception room on the Hancock street front. No fire reached any of these rooms but the galions of water that came rushing down the stairway leading to the fourth floor as well as the water that came down through the floor did a large amount of damage.

SECOND FLOOR.

On the second floor front are the offices of H. T. Whitman, and Ernest W. Branch, surveyors, and the rooms of the Quincy Board of Trade. These rooms were also soaked with water and the damage is hard to estimate. In the rooms of Mr. Whitman and Mr. Branch were many valuable plans some of which if destroyed could not be replaced. The most of the valuable plans were in a cabinet and were found to be uninjured. There were, however, a number of plans and drawings rolled up on the tables and shelves all of which were more or less wet, and as they can not readily be used without being drawn over again the loss is hard to estimate.

On the rear of this floor are a number of offices, namely George H. Brown, William H. Teasdale, Charles J. McGilvray, William P. Thompson and James M. Nowland. They being on the rear of the building the only damage they suffered will be from the water that ran under the doors onto the floor, and this did not amount to much.

In the Board of Trade rooms the walls were badly wet as was also the furniture, but the damage will not be large.

STREET FLOOR.

The entire street floor of this section of the building was occupied by Woolworths Five and Ten cent store. They carried a large stock of goods both on the street floor as well as in the basement. Their damage will be by water which came down through from the upper floors and it is probable that their damage will be quite heavy.

As noted above the fire was practically out at 3 o'clock although it was sometime later before the all-out sounded.

BIGGEST THING AT PANAMA.

Some one has said that the most interesting thing at Panama is not the Culebra cut, where they have gashed the great continental divide down to the backbone. Nor is it the completed achievement, eclipsing even the Pyramids, hitherto the top of the world's mechanical skill. The most interesting thing is George W. Goethals, chief engineer, now appointed governor of the Canal Zone.

Engineer Stevens, formerly on the job at Panama, said when he quit that they did not need him any longer. All they had to do was to dig a ditch. "What you need now," he added, "is a statesman." Col. Goethals has made his marvellous success by adding to technical skill a gift for inspiring and controlling the polyglot spirits of 45 nationalities working on this job.

The real safety valve of the whole intense energy in play at the Isthmus is in the Colonel's Sunday morning conferences with whomsoever has a grievance. Whether it is the woman with a baby who wants a quieter flat, or the engineer who is grouchy over his pay, somehow it all ends with a big hearty laugh. Goethals has given the impression that he is personally interested in the life story of the man or woman before him.

The average gang of street laborers or government employes have always had the reputation of working in an easy, half hearted way. Somehow the incentive of personal ambition seems to be dull on public work. But the canal is public work, yet every one seems to be in a hurry. Somehow the resistless energy and buoyant enthusiasm of the Colonel have put the spirit of achievement into the whole force.

Such a career is not only an incentive to every ambitious American, but it illuminates many problems of handling men. It is a question of personal enthusiasm. Give the fellows under you some goal to work for, and make them feel that you are interested in their winning, and they will do things.

GRADE CROSSING PLANS EXPLAINED

C. B. Breed, the City's Expert Engineer, Considers Decree Very Favorable

Some Concessions Which City Obtained from Railroad

In compliance with a request of the executive department of the city, C. B. Breed, the city's expert consulting engineer has prepared a statement of what has been done by the representatives of the city and the court commission which has been considering the Quincy grade crossing question, since the beginning of the hearings held by the court. The statement of Mr. Breed in full is as follows:

"When I was first retained by the City of Quincy a local grade crossing committee had considered the problem and it appeared through that local committee that the sentiment in South Quincy was favorable to elevating Water street in its present location and passing it above the railroad, depressing the railroad possibly a few feet.

"The local committee also favored a general depression of the railroad in the vicinity of the present Quincy station, passing Saville street above the railroad by elevating the street a few feet only.

"I advised the city authorities that I was of the opinion that carrying Water street over the railroad would not work out as favorably for the city as to depress it in its present location, but was directed by the City Solicitor to prepare plans for elevating the street, that being the sentiment of the city at that time.

"I also advised the city authorities that with respect to the general depression at Quincy station which the local committee favored, its expense would be so great that it probably would not be looked upon with favor by the commission, especially in view of the fact that the city was to pay only 10 percent of the cost and the Commonwealth and railroad, who were to pay the remaining 90 per cent, would doubtless strongly oppose such a plan and would be able to present reasonable solutions of the problem which would cost very much less.

"But I was informed by the city authorities that they felt that they were bound by the action of a meeting or meetings of citizens which favored the depression of the railroad in the vicinity of the Quincy station and elevating Water street, and I was directed by the city authorities to prepare these two plans for presentation before the Court commission.

"These two plans, then, the one for Water street requiring the street to be elevated and the railroad to be depressed a slight amount, and the one for Saville street calling for a general depression of the railroad tracks in that district, were presented to the commission.

"Since these two projects, namely the Water street and Saville street projects, are entirely independent, I will explain them separately.

WATER STREET PROJECT.

"The Railroad being the petitioner first presented a plan for carrying Water street above the railroad at a point about 300 feet south of Water street. The city then presented its plan for elevating Water street in its present location and depressing the railroad a few feet at Water street.

"As the hearings developed it appeared that the Court commission was tending to look with favor upon the City's plan as compared with the Railroad's plan, probably on account principally of the fact that the Railroad's plan presented steeper grades on the proposed Water street than the City's plan did, and because the Railroad's plan stub-ended the present Water street at the railroad location line.

"The Railroad then abandoned its original plan and substituted for it a plan similar to one which had been suggested by Mr. Field of Quincy, which called for a depression of Water street under the railroad at a point about 300 ft. south of Water street; this involved a slight raising of the railroad tracks.

"The city attacked this plan on the ground that is depressed Water street so low that it could not properly be drained, and also because all of the connecting streets joined this underpass very close to the place where it would pass underneath the railroad and therefore presented several dangerous corners because the corners of the bridge abutments would cut out the view of vehicles coming down the adjoining streets.

"Protracted hearings were held on this plan and the commission thoroughly compared it with the City's plan, with the result that the City's consulting engineer was directed by the commission to prepare a decree plan in general in accordance with the City's plan.

"This plan was in process of preparation when the Court commission called in an outside engineer to examine and report to the commission upon the comparative values of the City's plan and the Railroad's street depression plan. This engineer reported emphatically that the Railroad's plan was in every way superior to the City's plan, with the result that the Commission directed that the work of preparing the decree plan in accordance with the City's plan be stopped until the commission had more thoroughly considered the problem.

"It then appeared that the City's plan would not be adopted but that the Railroad's plan would probably be adopted, and the City authorities then directed me to present a plan for depressing Water street in its present location, which was in accordance with my first advice to the city.

"This plan was presented to the Court commission and after several hearings was adopted, and I was directed by the Court commission to prepare a decree plan on this basis, which is the one, after some modifications were made, which has been reported by the Court commission and which has recently been before the Massachusetts Public Service Commission for approval.

"It involves the depression of Water street 10 feet and the raising of the railroad 8 feet at Water street. It also involves extending Federal avenue as a straight street through to Water street. Water street is to be constructed 60 feet wide from Franklin street, to the bend in the street west of Pleasant street; the present width of the street in this district is 45 feet.

"The plan which I presented gave the railroad a 15 foot headroom under School street, which is the same headroom that the Railroad now has, but the Court commission provided an 18 feet headroom under School street; which necessitated raising School street 3 feet higher than the plan which the City presented. The cost of this entire Water street project will be in the neighborhood of $275,000, including property damages.

SAVILLE STREET PROJECT.

"The Railroad being the petitioner presented its plan with respect to Saville street, which simply called for the closing of Saville street at the the railroad location line and the construction of an overhead foot-bridge at Saville street, the total cost of which would be only about $17,000.

"The City's plan involving a general railroad depression throughout this district, was presented and strenuous objection to it was raised both by the railroad and the Commonwealth on account of its excessive cost.

"The railroad objected not only to the cost of this project which would properly be attributed to the elimination of grade crossings, namely the cost for a 2-track project, but also the additional expense which the Railroad would have to bear in constructing the third and fourth tracks.

"Considerable evidence was given by the opposition relative to the radical change which this plan involved on Granite street, which would have to be carried above the railroad if the railroad were depressed, and which would involve large property damages on Granite street, extending north to Hancock street, presenting a steep grade on Granite street, opposite the entrance to the freight yard.

"The railroad's engineers estimated that the cost of this project on a four-track basis would be $525,087 and my own estimate on the same basis was $436,001. My estimate for this project on a two-track basis was $225,586.

"The railroad claimed that the ground where the third and fourth tracks would lie should be excavated, if the railroad was depressed, so that it would lie with relation to the depressed tracks just as it does today with relation to the two existing tracks, and at the Commission's request I estimated the cost of this grade crossing project on this latter basis to be $305,437.

"The city's representatives were informed, after the hearings were well under way, that there was no liability that the Court Commission would report favorably upon the City's plan. Furthermore Mr. Faxon of Quincy presented a plan involving the closing of Saville street, the building of an overhead footbridge at Saville street, and the extension of Upland road to Granite street, stating that in his opinion this would be a reasonable solution of this project.

"The city then deemed it advisable to present another scheme rather than have the railroad's plan adopted and it presented a scheme for depressing the tracks a slight amount at Saville street, and carrying Saville street above the tracks in its present location, turning it toward the north and joining Hancock street about 100 feet north of the present Saville street, leaving the present Saville street as a level street approaching the station grounds. I estimated that the cost of this plan was, including property damages, $66,000.

"The Court commission decided favorably to a plan in general after the suggestion of Mr. Faxon, and this plan is incorporated in their report which has recently been before the Massachusetts Public Service Commission. It involves the closing of Saville street at its present location, the construction of a foot-subway, passing under the railroad tracks connecting Saville street with Depot street, and the construction of Upland road, extended through to Granite street as a 40 foot street. The estimated cost of this project is $68,900.

"The low headroom under Granite street and the wet condition at that street were presented to the Court commission by representatives of the city, but the Commission decided that it had no jurisdiction to make any changes at Granite street.

"The Court commission has considered all of these plans with a great deal of care and thoroughness and has come to its conclusion after considerable deliberation."

Respectfully yours,
(Signed) C. B. Breed

The Public Service Commission issued an order on the decree which was published in the Daily Ledger of Saturday and is final.

STOMACH TROUBLES

Increasing. A simple Remedy.

It has been said the body is like a machine and digestion and elimination of food are the two great factors to health.

If the digestive organs are weak, the stomach overtaxed, waste matter accumulates in the system—the liver gets sluggish and the blood becomes thin and devitalized.

We want to ask every person in this vicinity who is troubled with indigestion or a weak, wornout stomach to try our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol.

We know it will strengthen and tone up the weakened, tired and overtaxed nerves of the digestive organs, create a hearty appetite and replace weakness with strength.

We just heard of a case of a man in Portland, Me., who suffered from a bad stomach trouble for years and had become so weak he could hardly walk—who was built up by Vinol so he could eat heartily without the slighest distress.

Try a bottle of Vinol and if it fails to help you we will give back your money. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

LINCOLN SERVICE

or greater skill in uniting those of widely differing temperament in the service of the country.

Best of all was his faith in righteousness. "Let us have faith," he said "that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we undertsand it." He began life indifferent to the church and religion, though a regular attendant at church, but came to say that "He loved his Saviour," and "God bless all the churches, and blessed be God who in this our great trial giveth us the churches."

Thirdly, Lincoln had greatness thrust upon him. Gray's Elegy tells sadly of "Hands that the rod of empire might have swayed," but to Lincoln the opportunity came. These veterans enabled Lincoln to save the country and to abolish slavery. Lincoln was fortunate in beginning his political career in Illinois when that was the pivotal state in Union politics. Thus we see that birth, achievement and exigency all combined to make Lincoln great. Even his martyrdom glorified him and made his words and deeds immortal.

Church Calendar and Notes of Church Societies

THE FIRST PARISH.

In spite of bad walking and cold weather the attendance at the First Parish church Sunday morning was considerably above the normal average, indicating that the movement among the Protestants of Quincy to take more responsibility in the matter of church going is strong enough to overcome unfavorable weather conditions.

The subject of Mr. Hudson's sermon was "The New Era of Constructive Faith in Unitarianism." He spoke of a tendency among business men to shy at the word "Faith" as something too intangible for a practical man to take any stock in it. And yet, he went on to demonstrate that every department of business activity rests on "confidence" which is only another name for "faith." Take away faith and business would be paralyzed. The wheels of industry would stop and the doors of banks be closed."

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

The audiences at Bethany church on Sunday were nearly equal to those of Go-to-Church Sunday, especially in the evening when there were nearly 700. Rev. B. A. Willmott's message in the morning was "Great decisions" and in the evening a lecture on "Protestant principles—the God we worship. Protestantism he said, is an affirmation not a denial. Worship of a God whom Christ revealed. Not a God of fear, but a God of love. A God in whom we can trust in this life and in the life to come.

The Bible school observed Lincoln day at the regular session. Edward Southworth and the pastor spoke on the life and examples of Lincoln. Special hymns were sung.

The church council will meet Tuesday evening and the church committee on Thursday evening after the prayer meeting.

The Knights of King Arthur will meet Friday evening at 6.30 and at 7.45 will give a public entertainment when Miss Edith Randall will tell of "Switzerland and its legends."

CALVARY BAPTIST.

Those stay-at-home members missed something Sunday, truly worth while, when they failed to hear Rev. Mr. Tilley, in his "Characterization of a Christian." It was scholarly analyzation and a treat. If he continues to preach such sermons we will be obliged to enlarge our "little church around the corner.."

The Bible study for this week will be held at the home of the pastor, 26 Richie road.

The choir rehearsal will also be held there and the preparation for the social to be held Feb. 25th will be completed.

The Ladies' Sewing Circle will be entertained by Mrs. Reed, 72 Intervale street.

HALL PLACE M. E.

The cause of the Freedman's Aid Society was ably presented at the morning service at the Hall Place M. E. church by the Rev. W. J. King, colored pastor of the Fourth Methodist Episcopal church of Boston. Mr. King touched upon the condition of the Negro during slavery and paid a high tribute of praise to the "immortal Lincoln," for his noble life and work and his signing of the Emancipation Proclamation. He also spoke of the progress of the black men and of the great need of further help along educational lines in order to give the black race a chance to come out of the darkness and superstition they have been living in and measure up to the true standard.

At the close of the Sunday school Mr. King spoke to the young people.

In spite of the snowy weather and cold the attendance at Sunday school was good. In view of the fact that the goal set by the Sunday school board four weeks ago was reached last Sunday the board has adopted a new slogan which it hopes will be successfully carried out before Easter.

The Epworth League service at 6.15 P. M. was a good indication of the fine motive and spirit of these young Epworthians. The meeting was led by Alex Steward who gave some excellent ideas on the practical side of the topic, "Our responsibility for our neighbor's soul."

The subject of the evening service was "The strength and rightness of Protestantism." The text was taken from Psalm 97-10 "Ye that love the Lord, hate evil; he preserveth the souls of his saints; he delivereth them out of the hand of the wicked."

The regular monthly business meeting of the Epworth League will be held in the vestry of the church this evening. A full attendance is desired.

The Ladies Aid Society will hold their meeting in the vestry Tuesday evening at 8.

Thursday evening Charles H. Johnson of Quincy will give a stereopticon lecture on George Washington.

Prayer meeting Friday evening at 7.30.

Junior League meeting Friday afternoon at 4.

Choir rehearsal and practice for the "Old Folks concert" Saturday evening.

PARK AND DOWNS CHURCH.

The pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers, at the Sunday morning service, delivered a sermon of peculiar power, which held the attention and interest of his hearers to the end. Text: Galatians 6-1. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." An appeal for Christian sympathy and understanding which brought out many strong truths.

At the evening service, Mr. Ayers took for his subject: "The Intercessor," which was delivered in his usual strong, masterly and energetic manner. Showing how intercession is a law and a custom at work all about us; and showing how these all lead up in Christ's intercession; and the reasonableness of this mission and its method. A gospel sermon of compelling power.

The co-operation of pastor and people is made manifest not only by the work accomplished, but by the spirit of good will,, of enthusiasm and unity which prevail.

The events of the week will be:

Monday afternoon, (postponed) valentine party, 3 to 5.

Monday night, Norwall club with a lecture on the Panama Canal.

Tuesday night, Outlook Club with entertainment.

Wednesday afternoon, Colonial tea and entertainment by the Woman's Guild.

The Young People's Religious Union held a largely attended meeting Sunday evening at 7 o'clock and listened to an instructive and inspiring address by the Hon. Sanford Bates, the president of the National Young People's Religious Union.

Copies of "Twentieth Century Christianity" by Charles W. Eliot, L. L. D., were distributed after the morning service and eagerly taken. A new supply for free distribution will be placed on the table in the church vestibule next Sunday morning. Every thoughtful person ought to read the whole address and not simply excerpts in the daily papers. Copies may be had free on application to Miss Harriet Turner, 25 Winthrop avenue.

Rev. Carl G. Horst attended the monthly meeting of the Ministerial Union in Channing hall. Boston this morning. The Rev. William R. Lord of Dover, formerly pastor of the Wollaston Congregational church, gave the address on "Some new uses of nature."

The members and friends of the Wollaston Unitarian church are cordially invited to attend a special meeting of the Braintree People's Forum on Sunday, Feb. 22, at 3.30 in the parish hall of All Souls' church. The speaker will be Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes of New York.

The annual collection for the American Unitarian Association will be taken Sunday, March 1, at both the morning and evening services.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

"And he brought him to Jesus." This was the text of a most deeply impressive sermon on "Personal Work," delivered at the Sunday morning service. Its basis was the old story of Andrew who met the Christ and then went to get his own brother, Simon Peter. "Personal work can be done by all Christians. Some feel that they cannot preach, that they cannot even speak before four or five, but every one can do his best to tell one of this Saviour. Personal work is commanded by Christ himself, and is the method carried out by Him in His own work."

A large number were present at the Sunday school session at 12:15, especially among the children, many of whom came long distances in spite of bad walking. The subject of the lesson was "Christ's hatred of shams."

Mrs. Walther had fifty-four children at the Junior C. E. meeting at 3.30 in the chapel. The Blues are ahead in the membership contest.

A most enthusiastic temperance meeting was held by the Christian Endeavor Society at 6. The leader, William H. Talbot, is becoming well known in temperance circles about Quincy, and handled his subject "Why one should sign the temperance pledge," very well. Errold V. Estes sang at this service.

At 7 a song service was held in the auditorium. There was music by the chorus choir and a brief sermon by the pastor, subject, "Why." "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how often would I have gathered you, as a hen doth her chickens, but ye would not."

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL

Rev. John Howland, D. D., president of the International College at Guadalahara, Mexico, addressed a large audience Sunday morning on Mexico and the work of missions and education in that country. At the Bible school session he spoke to the men's class and dwelt more particularly upon the political situation.

Sunday evening, at the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting, Miss I. M. Blake of Turkey gave an impersonation of a Turkish Bible reader and was dressed in costume. Both speakers were very interesting and gave much information upon the work in these two countries.

Wednesday evening the monthly sociable of the church will be held. The supper will be served at 6.30 and an entertainment will follow.

Thursday evening at the midweek service there will be a consideration of the topic, "China's new day." The meeting will be in charge of Miss Ruth A. Taylor.

Next Sunday will be observed as Father's Day and a special program will be given in the Sunday School. All fathers are urged to be present. In the afternoon a vesper service will be held at which the choir will be assisted by the Schumann male quartette and a chorus.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

The pastor at the morning service preached upon "The mystery of the new birth, no barrier;" and the theme of the message at the evening service was: "Three ways of thinking."

The special services will continue through the week and the speakers will be as follows:

Monday and Tuesday evenings, the pastor, Rev. George M. Bailey.

Wednesday evening, Rev. W. W. Bowers of Baker Memorial, Dorchester.

Thursday evening Rev. J. W. Stephan of St. John's. South Boston.

Friday evening. Rev. J. A. Matheson of the Presbyterian church, South Quincy.

AUTO ACCIDENT.

What was apparently an almost new automobile was quite badly damaged on Newport avenue, Sunday afternoon when the car skidded in the snow, and becoming unmanagable, dashed across the street car tracks into the fence. The side of the car was quite badly damaged and street car traffic was held up for some time. In the meantime street car passengers had to transfer from one car to another. Workmen from Gould's garage were sent for and after some difficulty succeeded in getting the car off of the track and to the garage.

Supt. Shea Calls on Mayor to Say Good Bye

Mayor Miller had nothing new to offer this morning, other than to say from what he was able to learn the fire department made a good stop in the Adams building fire.

As for the Michael E. Shea, matter, the incident is probably closed. The Mayor abolished the office and Mr. Shea automatically dropped out.

Saturday, before leaving, Mr. Shea called on the Mayor and said goodbye Mr. Shea said that the fight was over and as the Mayor had won he simply wanted so say goodbye and wish him good luck. The visit was not expected and the Chief Executive was a little surprised, he however in turn wished Mr. Shea good luck in the future, and the incident closed.

When asked this morning if anything had been done about giving Commissioner Brown an assistant, the Mayor said that there had not At this season of the year, there was but little doing in street work and an assistant was not needed. Later on there might be an assistant.

Speaking of the Fire Department, the Mayor said that according to the Chief there was a crying need of more men, and that several new horses should be provided, as those now in the department had about outlived their usefulness.

The Mayor said however, that before getting any new horses that he should look into the matter of tractor trucks for the apparatus. The time for horses on fire apparatus was fast going by, and for the sake of efficiency and economy he was inclined to believe that if the apparatus was equipped with tractor trucks better service would be obtained.

BLOWN ACROSS THE SOUND

Eleven Rescued From Surf After Terrible Experience

New York, Feb. 16.—Exhausted, half-tamished and all but frozen from the beating of the waves that dashed over the sides of their frail dory with each fresh comber, eleven persons, among them four women and two little children, who were thought to have gone down when their barges were cut adrift from the tug Pliny Fisk, were saved when the dory in which they had taken their last refuge drifted into the surf at Orient Point, L. I.

It was 2 o'clock on Saturday morning when the barges were cut loose from the tug near Bartlett's reef. It was twenty hours later when the eleven forlorn human beings who had been aboard them were seen off Orient Point, feebly bailing the water from their dory, which could not have stood out much longer. They had been blown straight across the sound after having been blown in an easterly direction until off Cornfields Point, near Sayville.

Gore Said to Have Spurned Offer to Stop Court Proceedings

Oklahoma City, Feb. 16.—Political circles are stirred over the testimony in the suit of Mrs. Minnie E. Bond aginst Senator Gore for damages for an alleged attack on [illegible], by the statements that the blind statesman was once proffered a communication to compromise but that he refused, replying that he would neither "treat nor retreat."

W. M. Bonner, vice president of a local bank, testified that Gore could have stopped the proceedings which are for $50,000 by the payment of $25,000, but that he spurned the offer and declined to have anything to do with the representatives of the plaintiff, according to a statement attributed to "Jim" Jacobs.

Ponner was introduced by the defense in its effort to establish that there was a conspiracy participated in by James R. Jacobs, Mrs. Bond, Kirby Fitzpatrick, T. E. Robertson and possibly others.

MEN'S MEETING

Touching on his two years in the asylum, Mr. Callahan then mentioned his start in life as a paper boy and boot black in the Grand Central station. He described the life, how he began his sinful career on a small scale, by lying and stealing, and afterward left the big city when the western fever struck, secure in the belief that he could get a new start in life.

He told of how, with Chicago in mind, he saw a crew making up a freight train, how the "side door pullman" appealed to him and his ride through the darkness of the night. Leaving the name of Callahan behiend he said he took an assumed name and it had him going all the time.

He had expected to leave his sin behind but nothing travels as fast as sin he found. In Chicago he learned the ropes, became one of the strong arm gangmen, did his trick at Joliet penitentiary, and left the state to escape the habitual criminal act at the suggestion of an old warden.

He reached his brother's home in Minneapolis secured employment in a bar room, fought a losing fight with liquor for many weeks, during which time he was pinched, sentenced to the work house and then released through political influence obtained through his employer. While celebrating the happy event he passed the religious meeting, and the "God bless you" given by a man at the door and the singing of hymns by those assembled inside drew him, so that he automatically entered and joined in the service.

Mr. Callahan throughout his sketch of his life frequently quoted the scriptural passages, "Thy sin shall find thee out" and "the wages of sin are death," to illustrate incidents in his career which not only had to do with detection of sinners but by death as a result of sinning.

Mr. Callahan daily ministers to the "down and outers" of New York and said he, "the men that I am dealing with on the Bowery began in the gilt palaces on the avenue, and now they drink the "third rail stuff." This meeting was planned to save some men in Quincy. It is a great thing to save a man that is going to destruction.

At the conclusion of his speech Mr. Callahan asked all who wanted help in the fight to lead a better life to raise their hands, and many did and after the closing hymn, at his request, most of these men walked to the platform and grasped him by the hand. Mr. Callahan was given much applause at the conclusion of his talk.

It was announced that Mr. Callahan would speak at the evening service at the Water Street Presbyterian church, and all were invited.

At the close of the afternoon meeting the Y. M. C. A. opened its doors to welcome those who had raised their hands and others. Songs were sung and refreshments were served. Mr. Callahan was present.

EVENING SERVICE.

In the evening Mr. Callahan spoke at the First Presbyterian church to a congregation that thronged the edifice. His talk, "From Dungeon to Palace" was the story of the life of Johnnie White who was, through the medium of religious influence of the Hadley Mission, rescued from a way of sin. The talk was very interesting and touched a great deal upon the vice and dens of the metropolis.

Mr. Callahan also related how the mission was started through the philanthropy of two millionaires in a place where vice flourished and how its opening put these places out of business and offered many of the habitants refuge. Music during the evening was by the regular choir and Rev. J. A. Matheson, pastor, directed the service.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

The regular weekly rehearsal of the Quincy Choral Society will be held this evening instead of Tuesday. The Elijah music is now well under way, and it is hoped that every member will attend rehearsals from now on regularly.

The society has adopted a plan for a short entertainment to be given at each rehearsal, during the intermission, when a musical program is given by various members and visiting artists. The soloists for the last two rehearsals were John Jones, bass of the Porter church choir, Brockton, and Edward Bullock, tenor of Wollaston, a well-known singer to Quincy audiences. Their selections were received with heartiest enthusiasm. The soloist announced for this evening, is Miss Alice Reis, contralto of the Harvard church, Brookline.

It was with keenest regret that the society at its last rehearsal received the resignation of its treasurer, Lawrence H. Allen, who is about to leave Quincy for business interests in Norfolk, Va. Mr. Alln, has served the society untiringly and his leaving is indeed a great loss.

QUINCY A. A. IN THE LEAD

Visit Roxbury and Defeat St. Alphonsus Team

Quincy A. A. jumped into the lead of the N. E. A. A. U. league by beating St. Alphonsus at Roxbury Saturday night 20 to 14. All of Quincy second team players did not appear and the game was forfeited to St. Alphonsus second.

One of the largest crowds of the season gathered to see the Quincy team defeated and St. Alphonsus took the floor confident of victory. Manager Flynn sent in Joe Duggan and Joe Pinel of the second team. The score at the end of the first half was 12 to 8. In the second half they rolled up eight points against two by St. Alphonsus.

The game was not free from roughness on the part of the losers, and Quincy, through the shooting of Joe O'Rourke, profited six points on free tries. No fouls were called on Quincy. The score:

CUNNINGHAM GYM DEFEATED

Quincy Y. M. C. A. Boys Do Trick in Close Game

The great record of the Cunningham Gym basket-ball team has at last been broken, for on Saturday night the Quincy Y. M. C. A. first team defeated them in a grand game by the score of 21 to 17. This is the first time in three years that the East Milton boys have lost a game on their home floor.

The game started off as if it was going to be an easy victory for the home team, for Quincy seemed unable to get the lay of the small floor and were also greatly bothered by the "no out of bounds game" that was played. The score at the end of the first half was 9 to 4 in favor of Milton but at the start of the last period the Quincy boys got a new lease of life and in a very few minutes the score was tied at 11 each. The game seesawed back and forth and with only 2 minutes to play it was 17 all, and it seemed sure that an over-time period would need to be played. Flanders and Trask, however each caged a pretty basket within the remaining time and Quincy had won.

The second team game was also a hummer from start to finish although the Y. M. C. A. players had a slight margin of points throughout the entire game. The first half saw about as ragged a game of shooting as has ever been played at Cunningham for no palyers seemed able to cage the ball; the Quincy boys being especially off in this part of the game.

Alex Robertson played a great game in Fred Croucher's place at left back, scoring 4 goals from the floor and holding his man to one. Shirley also played a good game as a back, while Thomas did the best scoring of the other men.

The Employed Boys of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. had an easy time with the team from the Roxbury Evening Center, defeating them by the score of 42 to 10. Osberg and R. Robertson were the two high-score men of the game the former getting 11 and the latter 5 goals.

The Red Men succeeded in beating the Silent Five in the second game, getting the verdict by a 36 to 22 score. Kemp and Tytler played best for the winners while Gearwar and Dineen did the best work for the losers.

BACON'S DEATH SHOCKS SENATE

Georgia Senator a Leader In the Nation's Affairs

HAD DISTINGUISHED CAREER

Frequently Consulted by President In Shaping Nation's Policy Regarding Foreign Relations—Captain In Confederate Army Practiced Law Upon Ending of War and Entered Politics

Washington, Feb. 16.—Augustus O. Bacon, United States senator from Georgia for nearly nineteen years and chairman of the foreign relations committee since the ascendency of the Democratic party March 4, 1913, died in a hospital here after an illness of ten days.

Though Bacon had been seriously ill with kidney trouble and complications, developing from a broken rib, his death was unexpected. News of the end fell upon the senate as a shock while it was in executive session.

The immediate cause of the senator's death was diagnosed as a blood clot in the heart. Half an hour before his death the senator talked with his daughter, Mrs. W. B. Sparkes. She had just left the room when he raised himself in bed. As Mrs. Sparkes reentered the room her father fell back in collapse. He never regained consciousness.

The scene on the floor of the senate was unusual. Not only had the death of their colleague shocked the senators, but the effect of his loss at a time when important foreign relations measures were pending at once impressed itself upon the minds of Democratic and Republican leaders.

A resolution of respect was sent to the vice president's desk and adjournment followed.

Augustus Octavius Bacon, four times elected to the United States senate from Georgia, was the first man to be sent to the senate by direct vote of the people under the terms of the seventh amendment to the constitution, proclaimed in February, 1913.

As an aid to President Wilson in his policy of "watchful waiting" in the relations with Mexico, Bacon was many times commended by the nation's chief executive. It was his insistence that the policy of the government toward Mexico as directed by the president should not be hampered by useless or inflammatory debate which many times prevented outbursts to embarrass the administration in dealing with the Mexican situation.

He was frequently consulted by the president in shaping the policy of the nation with reference to all foreign relations and the effort to rejuvenate the arbitration treaties with other nations that expire during 1913 and the early part of 1914.

Bacon was born in Bryan county, Ga., Oct. 26, 1839. On being graduated from the University of Georgia law department in 1860 he entered the confederate army, attaining the rank of captain.

After the war, Bacon began the practice of law and took an active part in politics. In 1871 he was elected to the Georgia house of representatives, serving in the legislature for fourteen years, and was eight years speaker of the house.

He was first elected to the United States senate in 1894, re-elected in 1900 and again in 1907. In 1913 he was unanimously re-elected in a general popular election. Bacon served as president protempore of the senate during a portion of the Sixty-Second congress.

WIDE HUNT IS BEGUN

Federal Investigators Plan to Seek Work For the Unemployed

Washington, Feb. 16.—With the purpose of finding work for the unemployed thousands now walking the streets of the country's largest cities, the federal commission of industrial relations inaugurated an investigation to extend from Boston to Kansas City.

Attention first will be given to public and private employment agencies to bring out to what extent the trouble is due to their lack of organization and inefficiency. Four investigators have been assigned to undertake this task with orders to report within six weeks.

ASSURED OF REDRESS

O'Shaughnesssy Again Protests Against Attacks On Wilson

Mexico City, Feb. 16.—Charge O'Shaughnessy made a second protest to President Huerta against the newspaper Imparcial, which continues to publish personal attacks on President Wilson.

The charge went to the president, who assured him that he regretted the attacks and would see that they were stopped. Huerta said he would not tolerate such attacks upon the President of the United States any more than he would similar attacks upon himself.

Three Business Blocks Destroyed With a Loss of $175,000

Montpelier, Vt., Feb. 16.—Three of the principal business blocks in this city, the Union, Bailey and Heaton blocks, were burned in a fire which raged for several hours with the temperature 6 degrees below zero. Help was called from Barre. The loss is estimated at $175,000.

The fire started in the heater in the basement of the Temple dry goods store. Sparks were carried a long distance by the wind and only the heavy coating of snow on the roofs of buildings prevented a general spread of the fire.

Stores occupied the lower floor of the burned structures, all of which were four stories in height, the upper floors being used for offices and lodge rooms.

FEARS FOR LINER AND PASSENGERS

Propellors Broken When Niagara Was Last Heard From

Brest, France, Feb. 16.—Virtually no word was received of the French line steamer Niagara, which, bound from Havre for New York, with 147 passengers aboard, was obliged to turn back, because of broken propellers, and is returning to a French port.

Saturday the Niagara was reported in distress about 125 miles of Ushant, and the steamer Bordeaux had gone to her assistance. The Ushant signal station learned by wireless from a passing ship that the Niagara had been sighted far to the northwest. The station flashed signals in that direction continuously, but has received no answer.

SEEK PLACE TO SLEEP

Couple Spend Honeymoon Beating Their Way to Chicago

Chicago, Feb. 16.—Saying they had passed their honeymoon riding in box cars and on "blind baggages" from Youngstown, Pa., to Chicago, where they expected to find work, David McCollan and his 20-year-old bride applied at the South Chicago police station for a place to sleep.

"We have been on the road for twelve hours," said McCollan, "and would like a place to sleep until we get a new start."

They were given a bed in the matron's quarters, and a charitable organization will try to find work for McCollan and a home for his bride until they have sufficient funds to begin housekeeping.

WILL BE RELEASED

Cassidy and Walter Win Certificate of Reasonable Doubt

New York, Feb. 16.—The political friends and followers of Joseph Cassidy, once political "boss" of Queens county, are jubilant, for on the petition of their counsel a certificate of reasonable doubt has been issued which, it is believed, will result in the early release from prison of Cassidy and Louis T. Walter, Jr.

Despite the fact that both Cassidy and Walter were sentenced by Justice Jaycox to serve a term in Sing Sing prison, after they had been found guilty by a jury of having conspired to sell a nomination for the supreme court, Justice Blackmar has acceded to the petition.

GENERAL ALARM FOR FIRE

J. Williams was on hand early with a large gang of men, and large pieces of canvas were spread over the open roof, so that in case of a storm no more damage would be done.

While the fire was in progress it was given out that the cause was defective electric light wiring, but this theory was disproved at daylight Sunday morning, when it was found that there were no electric wires in the fourth floor. This part of the building has recently been rewired and all the old wiring was dead, the new wiring being on the outside concealed by cleats. Everyone of these showed perfect, putting at rest the theory of electric light wires.

There was a gas pipe to the fourth floor, and in the room of Mr. Smollett, and the latest theory is that either a gas jet or a gas stove was left burning owing to the cold night and the fire in some way started from this source.

There was a large crowd of spectators in City Square during the progress of the fire and a large squad of police officers under the personal command of Chief Burrell, but they had no difficulty in keeping the crowd back to a safe distance.

Many however did not hear of the fire until after daylight, their first information being as they passed through City Square on their way to church.

OCCUPANTS RESCUED.

Mrs. Marnock, who has been ill since Thursday, was taken from her room by the firemen and placed in the police ambulance, which responds to all alarms, and taken to the home of her son on Washington street. Mrs. Glover who is well along in years was taken across the street to the home of Mrs. Beatrice Porterfield where she was cared for. Friends also took Mrs. Smollet in and cared for her.

Mr. and Mrs. Smollet were married about two weeks ago and lost all of their belongings being unable to save anything, and considering themselves fortunate to get out safely. Sunday a movement was started by President Hamilton of the Board of Trade to raise funds for them.

While the fire was in progress several of the officers of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows who came to the fire visited the rooms of the lodge in the adjoining section, but the brick fire wall had prevented any smoke or water from entering their rooms. In fact this brick fire wall kept the fire confined to this section of the building. Had it not been for this the fire would have been much more serious.

GAS EXPLOSIONS.

When the firemen first entered the fourth story, where the fire was in progress, there were several explosions of gas which nearly threw the firemen from their feet, and handicapped them somewhat. Mr. O'Donnell of the Gas Co. was one of the early arrivals at the fire and he immediately shut off the gas. The electric light wires were also cut so as to avoid any danger from the electric current.

Sunday morning Chief Mullen of the Boston fire department drove to the scene in his automobile and after looking over the fire said it had been a good stop.

Mrs. Porterfield and Miss Waldron made some coffee during the fire and furnished it to the firemen for which they were very thankful.

The main hall way of the Savings Bank building was wet somewhat by the leaking hose, but as the stairway is af marble little damage was done. Water also leaked out of the hose onto the floor of the Knights of Columbus room, but it did not do much damage.

THE LOSSES.

The losses are somewhat difficult to estimate, and probably cannot be acurately told until the insurance adjusters have been over them. From what can be learned from a superficial examination however the total loss will figure up something like $10,800, divided as follows:

Building	$7,000
James Smollett,	200
A. W. Pierce	800
Mrs. Emma Marnock	200
Mrs. Elizabeth Glover	200
Board of Trade	200
H. T. Whitman	1,000
E. W. Branch	200
Woolworths	1,000
	$10,800

Pierce, the photographer, says that all of his negatives of public buildings are gone and many of his smaller negatives and printing apparatus, although he saved the greater part of his portrait negatives. His operating room he says will be ready for business as soon as the entrance is ready.

The loss of Messrs. Whitman and Branch is simply guess work, for until all the plans are taken out and dried the loss cannot be figured. Secretary Hall of the Board of Trade estimates their loss at $200 which seems large. The loss in Woolworths tore is also hard to estimate. The rear part of the store was not damaged the loss being on the front of the store by water. As all of the articles are of the five and ten cent kind they will not count up as fast as in some places, so that it is believed that the figures given above are fully large.

Councilman Charles A. Ross, chairman of the City Council Committee on Fire Department matters, was among the spectators at the fire Sunday morning. He was aroused by the alarm and when the general sounded he lost no time in getting to the scene.

THE BRAINTREE PEOPLE'S FORUM

Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes of New York is to speak at a meeting of the Braintree People's Forum on Washington's birthday. The forum has been able to secure her only because she has engagements at the Twentieth Century Club of Boston and at Wellesley College on the 21st. Mrs. Stokes has been asked to speak at the forum each year since it has been in existence but heretofore she has been unable to respond. When she and her husband spoke at the Dorchester forum they had the largest audience of the entire series of meetings. It will be well for those who wish to secure good seats to come early on the afternoon of the twenty-second.

In case there should be any in the community who do not know the character of the forum the following explanation is copied from an old program. "The object of the Braintree People's Forum is implied in its name. It provides a platform for the discussion of live questions of personal and public ethics. It gives to Braintree what Ford hall gives to Boston and what Cooper Union gives to New York. Though All Souls' church has given the use of its assembly hall for the meetings the movement is entirely non-partisan and non-sectarian in every way. The meetings are self-supporting. That is to say a collection is taken up each afternoon to defray the necessary expenses.

After every address the speaker will answer questions from the floor. Everyone from all the surrounding region is heartily invited to attend."

The meeting on Washington's birthday will be either the only one or else one of only two to be held this year. Plans are under way to secure an exceptionably able speaker to tell from his own personal experience the condition of affairs in Mexico. Further announcement will apear in the papers next week.

The time of meeting is 3.30 P. M. The place is the parish hall of All Souls' church. Everyone is invited to be present.

HOUSE WARMING.

William L. Hartley, one of the best professional tennis players connected with the Boston Athletic Association, was tendered a surprise housewarming by the members of the Red Rose Club in his new home at Atlantic street and the boulevard Saturday night. He was presented with a handsome brass fireplace set. Mr. Hartley who is one of the newer residents of Atlantic, has had an enviable career in tennis. His work with and for the B. A. A. has been a source of much satisfaction to the members of that association, and the Red Rose club. A most pleasant evening was spent, and after Mr. Hartley recovered from the surprise caused by the arrival of his friends, and their presentation, he became the "good fellow" he is by nature, and added to the gaiety of the evening by directing the games and events that followed.

SINGSONG PETE

He Proves a Blessing In Disguise

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The lower rim of the sun rested on the edge of the horizon, a huge orange ball against the background of copper red sky.

Nancy Barton watched it slowly sink below the flat Texas plain until all at once it was gone and the weird twilight was about her.

With a little sigh she turned her horse to the low hills that bounded the northeast. Her black Judy skimmed over the ground with velvet feet and the passage of the graceful girl and the beautiful animal were almost like shadows fleeing before the light western breeze.

Then as they passed into the deep gloom of a walnut grove Nancy heard rough voices in discussion. For a moment her heart thrilled with terror, for the Barton ranch was very near the Mexican border, and in these uncertain days there was a growing spirit of lawlessness among the rough characters that invested the neighborhood.

The voices came from a little hollow on the left of the trail, and Nancy was glad of the protection afforded by the great trees that surrounded her.

She pulled Judy to a standstill and listened sharply.

Five minutes afterward she had emerged from the grove and was tearing down the trail toward home.

Her appearance in the yard brought her father into the porch and the cook into the doorway of the bunk house.

"That you, Nan?" cried her father relievedly. "I've been wild about you for the last hour. I know you can take care of yourself, but remember what I told you about staying out after dark. Why, what is it, child? You are trembling." Mr. Barton lifted the girl from the saddle, and she sank limply on to the steps.

"You no see men, Miss Nancy?" shrilled Hep Loo across the yard. He waved a spoon toward his waiting supper table in the bunk house.

"They will come later, Hep Loo," said Nancy faintly, and as the China man returned muttering to his kitchen she said to her father: "Dad, what shall we do? I came home through the grove, and I overheard our men here plotting to burn the ranch and run the cattle across the border."

"You are sure, daughter?" demanded Barton sharply, for he had trusted his cowboys to a man.

"Yes. I heard all their voices. Singsong Pete seemed to be the leader. It is planned for tonight."

"I wonder if they are coming back to supper," mused Barton.

"No. They planned the raid, and after it is accomplished they are to rush in and appear to rescue me. Oh, dad, they said they would finish you, and you know what that means—and"— Nancy's voice broke a little, and her father knew that when his brave daughter's courage wavered there was danger indeed, and he guessed that she had not told him all she had overheard.

"We need help. How shall we get it?" he muttered.

"Let me go, father. I am safer riding than I am here," she shuddered.

"Where will you go, child? You could never ride to Fenby's in time, and"—

"I will go and get Roger Dare," said Nancy.

Mr. Barton started.

"Roger Dare?" he repeated. "He would never come after the way I treated him. I can't expect it. No man with red blood in him would do it."

"Roger would do it, dad," said Nancy quietly. "Just because he has got red blood in his veins would he forgive an injury and help. He's a man!"

Barton stared down at the girl.

"Nancy! I believe—I believe you really did care"— He stopped short as Nan lifted her gloved hand.

"Dad, you can believe almost anything of a foolish girl," she whispered. "Give me a cup of tea and let me go. They are cowards, and they will not shoot me if I run across the gang, but I will go the lower trail if it will lessen your anxiety. You and Hep Loo remain in the house and protect the place." Nancy arose and ran into the house, where Aunt Hepsy, the stout negress, was waiting impatiently to serve supper.

Nancy drank a cup of tea and ate a few mouthfuls of food; then, with a last close embrace from her father, who had protested even while he saw that her pistols were loaded and that Judy was ready at the door, she swung into the saddle and vanished into the night.

Then James Barton worked swiftly. Within an hour the house was closely shuttered and loaded weapons placed at all the upper windows.

Silence fell over the ranch. Hepsy lumbered uneasily about her room, while Barton, kneeling in an upper window, watched the entrances by which the enemy might be expected. While he waited he thought of Nancy flying for help and asking Roger Dare, of all men!

In the darkness Barton blushed. When Roger Dare had first come to the cattle country the finger of suspicion had pointed heavily at him in a very dubious transaction. Barton had been one of his most relentless accusers; he had really believed the man guilty. There had been a lynching stopped at the critical instant by news of the capture of the guilty man, and Roger had been set free, but his stern attitude toward his accusers had told them that he had not forgotten the insult and injury their unjust accusations had brought upon him.

James Barton had made handsome apology for the injustice, and in more ways than one had he been of service to the young rancher, but quite unknown to Roger, for it is probable that that stern young man might have refused the aid that came from unknown sources. Then Barton's contrition had an added bitterness, for Roger had fallen promptly in love with Nancy, and there might have been a romance there on the Texas plain had not the unfortunate affair come up to blight it in the bud.

Now, this very evening Barton had discovered something in Nancy's tone that betrayed her secret. She loved Roger after all. That was what had worn upon her during the past year, although she had maintained her cheerful demeanor. He swore softly under his breath as he thought of how he had failed after all to make his motherless daughter entirely happy, and that was all he lived for.

So James Barton waited for the enemy to come and burn his home, if they could, but his thoughts traveled side by side with the gallant young form speeding through the night surrounded by unseen dangers.

* * * * * * *

The lower trail led away from the chestnut grove and its concealed plotters. The trail skirted the foot of a hill and then followed the dry bed of Cinder creek, plunged through the narrow confines of Cinder canyon and emerged on Roger Dare's north range.

Nancy Barton, leaning low in the saddle, rode the miles unflinchingly. Her pride must suffer in going to Roger Dare for help. But what mattered? She thought of her brave, gray haired father standing off the crowd of desperadoes single handed, and she spurred Judy to greater effort.

The stones rattled in the dry bed of the creek, and then the dark plunge through the little canyon was accomplished with heaven only knows what hairbreadth escapes from death or disaster, and then Judy's feet pounded over the grass of Roger Dare's land.

A dog barked in the distance, a light flared in a window, other lights sprang out around the house, and when Nancy arrived on the almost winded mare she was at once surrounded by a circle of excited men, with Roger Dare in their midst.

"What has happened?" asked Roger, his hand on Judy's neck.

In a few broken words Nancy told him, and then, reeling in the saddle, she murmured:

"I'm not going to faint. I never fainted in my life." And she straightway proceeded to drop into Roger's outstretched arms.

"She has fainted away," said Roger as he laid her on a sofa in the sitting room. "Eliza," turning to his grim featured housekeeper, "there is trouble at the Barton ranch, and I must go, but watch over Nancy. You will know what to do, and guard her as you would your own child. Ben and Gallagher will remain with you."

With a last glance at the sweet, pale face on the pillow, Roger turned and rushed out into the yard, where his men were piling on to their horses. In a moment twenty of them were flying toward Cinder canyon, and the disgruntled Gallagher and his companion were left behind.

Long afterward old Hepsy tried to describe the battle of Barton's ranch, but words were inadequate.

"Lawsy, chile," she told her listener, "I jest wish you could hev been dere and seen how Marse Barton pinged dem snakes wid his gun, and right in de midst of it dere was a rarin' shout from de lower gate, and I declar' if Marse Roger Dare and his men didn't come skyhootin' erlong, and—well, de war ended right off! Marse Roger and de rest of 'em jes driv dat Singsong Pete and de odder snakes clean off de place, and I heahs dey went ovah de bo'der inter Mex'co, and a good place for 'em, too, wid de greasers! Uh, huh! Marse Roger am sure a brave man, but he ain't no braver den Marse Barton—no, suh!"

Roger Dare, coming back from that wild chase over the border in pursuit of Singsong Pete and his band, rode into the Barton yard and met Barton's hearty hand clasp with one equally warm. No one heard the few words they uttered as they stood there side by side, but that very instant the feud between them died.

There was a light patter of hoofs at the gate, and Nancy came riding in on Judy. The girl, her face now pale and rosy, slipped from the saddle and looked from her father to Roger Dare.

"I am so glad you are safe—safe, father," she sobbed, clinging to Barton. "I told you he would come"—

"Yes, darling," smiled Barton over her sunny head. "He has come, indeed, and he tells me that he has come to stay!"

Nancy was silent for awhile, and then she timidly put a hand toward Roger, her eyes still hidden on her father's sleeve. And when she lifted her eyes at last and looked shyly around she found herself standing hand in hand with her father and Roger Dare.

And Aunt Hepsy, who was an interested observer of this scene, was scandalized to hear her master exclaim:

"Well, we can thank Singsong Pete for this!" and Roger's happy answer:

"Heaven bless Singsong Pete!"

But on the wedding day Nancy explained what they meant.

New York State Treasurer Takes Life With Razor

Was to Go Before Grand Jury In State Highways Graft Investigation After Having Declined to Appear as Voluntary Witness—"Temporary Insanity," Says His Counsel

Buffalo, Feb. 16.—John J. Kennedy, state treasurer, committed suicide at the Markeen hotel, where he and his family had lived for about a year. He was found in a small lavatory with his throat cut and an open razor lying on the floor beside him. He died before a doctor arrived.

A flash of temporary insanity, induced by worry over his impending appearance before a New York grand jury, where District Attorney Whitman has been conducting a John Doe graft inquiry into the state highways graft, is said by his attorney, Michael F. Dirnberger, Jr., to be the only reason that can be assigned for Kennedy's act.

Just before leaving Albany on Friday, Kennedy was served with a subpoena to appear at the inquiry, and upon his arrival here another officer from Whitman's office served a second subpoena on him. He sent for Dirnberger, and after a short talk with him it was announced that Kennedy would start for New York Sunday night. A ticket for New York and a sleeper ticket for a train leaving here at 8 o'clock Sunday night were found in Kennedy's pocket.

After the talk with his attorney Kennedy appeared to be in excellent spirits. On Saturday afternoon he met a number of close political friends at a hotel and spent several hours with them.

He went to mass with his son, William H. Kennedy, Sunday, and returned with him about 12 o'clock. After greeting his wife and daughter Kennedy said he was going to his room to lie down until they were ready for luncheon. The son went to the apartments to summon his father shortly afterward and discovered his dead body.

It is understood Whitman invited Kennedy to appear as a voluntary witness several weeks ago, but the state treasurer declined.

Friends say he had brooded a great deal over the coming ordeal and they expressed the opinion that the suicide was the sequel.

SUBSTITUTE FOR "EGGS"

Misleading Baking Powders Are Barred by the Government

Washington, Feb. 16.—"Eggs is eggs," ruled the department of agriculture in slapping the wrists of those manufacturers who have been slipping yellow baking powder over on the housewives as a substitute for hen fruit.

The department has been asked by manufacturers to allow the sale of a product known as "egg powder," or "egg substitute," made from a baking powder containing ground rice with a filler and colored yellow with powdered tumeric.

Holding that "these designations would undoubtedly lead the ordinary purchaser to believe the product either to be made from eggs or to have the effect of eggs in baking," the department refused to sanction the sale of such goods.

After the wreath was placed fifty veterans stood with bowed heads before the monument while "taps" were sounded.

Commerce Board Will Endeavor to Learn What Became of It

Washington, Feb. 16.—In accordance with the senate resolution of Feb. 7, the interstate commerce commission announced that it would shortly reopen the investigation of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad's financial operations.

The four principal objects of the investigation will be to learn what became of $12,000,000 invested in various securities; what person ordered the investment of the New Haven's funds and if such person is amenable to any existing law; whether or not the money may be recovered, and what legislation is necessary to prevent a recurrence of such a situation.

The subsidiary roads which will come under the scrutiny are the Boston and Maine, the Maine Central, the Central New England and the New York, Ontario and Western.

Babies Subjected to Tuberculosis Test In Hospital

SHOWN BY DOCTOR'S REPORT

About a Thousand "Ward Patients," Some In Dying Condition, Experimented Upon by Professor In Diseases of Children—Serum of Incurable Disease Used at Institute

New York, Feb. 16.—One thousand babies, including infants who were dying, were subjected to the tuberculosis test in the New York Babies' hospital by Dr. L. E. Holt, professor of diseases of children in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia university.

Such is the startling admission made by Holt in a report to the American Pediatric society, which has just come into the possession of Michael J. Whitty of the American Institute of Social Service.

These children, who were used as the subjects for scientific experiments in the same wholesale manner as are guinea pigs and rabbits, were for the most part foundlings, orphans and charity patients. Holt refers to them as "ward patients."

Dr. Morgan, house physician at the hospital, when questioned as to whether such test are being continued, said: "Certainly, we are still making the tests. Our patients are taken, as a rule, from the wards."

Positive proof was furnished to Whitty of the inoculation of human beings at the Rockefeller institute by the Japanese surgeon, Dr. Hideyo Noguchi, with germs of an incurable disease and other serums.

Holt, in his paper entitled "A report upon 1000 tuberculine tests in young children," said: "Very few of these children were over 3 years of age, the majority being under 2 years. Dying children who were extremely sick, did not, as a rule, react to any of the tests."

Dr. Noguchi's "luetin serum," which is the extract of the germs of the disease most deaded by humanity, is designed to be employed for obtaining in suitable cases a specific cutaneous reaction that may become a valuable diagnostic sign in certain stages of forms of infection. It is the purpose of Noguchi to find if possible a serum that will serve as an immunity against the terrible blood disease.

Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller institute, whose medical research work has made him one of the foremost scientists of the world, admitted every vital point in the charge made by Whitty.

Not Dangerous, Say Doctors

Boston, Feb. 16.—Boston physicians denied that the use of "tuberculin" as a diagnostic means is fraught with danger to patients. This comes on the heels of the revelations made in New York, where it is claimed hundreds of state wards are subjected to the treatment.

At the Massachusetts, City and Carney hospitals it was admitted that tuberculin is used, but it was strongly asserted that the use of this serum as a means of diagnosing the presence of tuberculosis is not dangerous to patients.

MONTCLAIR HOUSE GUTTED BY FIRE

Fire Department Handicapped by Snow Storm, Cold Weather and Overwork

Some Delay Also in Giving a Box Alarm

An oil heater set in the attic to prevent a water tank from freezing, is thought to have caused a fire which burned the roof off the home of Frank W. Byrne at 62 Vershire street, Montclair, before dawn this morning. The loss is estimated from $2,000 to $4,000.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Byrne, who wakened to find her apartments filled with smoke. She called her niece and after telephoning the Central station both fled to the home of Bayard Taylor, a neighbor.

Chief Faxon Billings ordered the Atlantic apparatus to the scene and responded with the auto chemical. Shortly after their arrival he sent in an alarm from Box 68 which brought the Wollaston apparatus.

The Atlantic hose was on runners and had no difficulty in reaching the house, but the heavy snow drifts on the way to the house stalled the chemical and it had to be towed some distance by the Atlantic horses. The department encountered much difficulty in laying hose which was wet, heavy and partially frozen, none of it having a chance to dry out since the fires in the New Jersey boarding house and the Adams building Sunday night.

The fire had burst through the roof when the first line of water was turned on, but through hard work it was confined to the attic and second floor of the house. The furniture on the lower floor was damaged badly by water.

The alarm sounded at 5.45 and by that time most of the Montclair residents had gathered at the fire. They were not called upon for assistance.

Edward F. Parlee, of the Montclair Improvement Association, said this morning that he thought Chief Billings made a "good stop" and he said that was the opinion generally expressed by other residents in that section. He said the loss would total about $4000.

STATUE COMPLETED.

The soldiers and sailors memorial statue for Topsfield, Mass., the work of our illustrious townswoman, Mrs. H. H. Kitson, is completed and will be cast on Thursday of this week. This is a magnificent piece of statuary, probably one of her masterpieces.

Mrs. Kitson is opening her studio on Park lane Wednesday afternoon so that any one in Quincy who desires to see the group may have the opportunity. The group is that of two young soldiers, one the color bearer who has fallen but the hand which held the flag is upstretched. His comrade seizes the flag and is rushing on with it. The figures are remarkable for pose and expression.

WARD THREE CAUCUS TODAY

Four Candidates for Republican Nomination

The caucus to nominate candidates to be voted for at the special election to be held Tuesday March 10, to fill the vacancy existing in the Ward Councilmen from Ward Three is being held this afternoon and evening at Doble's hall. The polls opened at 12 o'clock and will remain open until 9 o'clock tonight.

There is but one candidate seeking the Democratic nomination, Robert T. Foye, and he is certain to be nominated.

On the Republican ticket there are four candidates, namely Charles F. Barnicoat, August V. Johnson, James Joss and Andrew H. Morrison.

The Progressives have made no nomination. The precinct one election officers are serving at today's caucus.

There seems to be but little outside interest in the caucus and it is not expected that a very heavy vote will be cast.

Opinions vary as to just which of the four Republicans will receive the nomination, and as far as known neither of the four gentlemen are doing much hustling for the position.

Robert T. Foye the Democratic candidate is an advertising agent and is well known in the ward where he has resided for many years.

Charles F. Barnicoat is associated with his father, Frederick Barnicoat in the granite business and is well versed in business matters.

August V. Johnson is an engineer by occupation and has made more or less of study of municipal affairs.

James Joss is a member of the well known granite firm of Joss Bros. Co. and is well known among the granite trade. He has been the treasurer of the Granite Manufacturers association for many years.

Andrew H. Morrison is one of the new comers to Quincy, having resided here about four years. He removed to Quincy from Fall River and while in that city took an active part in political affairs.

The quietness attending the opening of the primaries at noon gave but little indication of the bitter fight that is being waged in the interest of the Republican candidates. As was expected but few votes were cast in the first hour.

Alexander Falconer and the supporters of Mayor Miller are actively interested in the candidacy of Andrew Morrison.

Ex-Representative Walter E. Piper and his friends are reported to be working in behalf of James Joss.

Charles Barnicoat is appealing to the voter through himself, although representative men have allied themselves under his standard.

August V. Johnson while hardly fighting a lone fight has been assured the support of many friends.

It is generally conceded that a small Democratic vote will be cast because Robert T. Foye is the only man in the race. Rumor states however that other names will be written in.

The first Republican voter to cast a ballot was Alexander W. Clark, 84 Pleasant street, one of the younger men of the ward. He was followed by an old line party man, Elisha Hobart of 35 Pearl street. Councilman Ross voted the third Republican ballot.

James P. Doherty of Hammond place was the first Democrat to vote. Up to 12.30 no Progressive had appeared.

The canvass which commenced directly after the Council declared Alexander Cowe ineligible to serve has not been allowed to rest, let alone sleep, and more actual interest is being taken in the primary by Republicans than in the election last fall.

Mr. Barnicoat, up to 12.30, was the only candidate unrepresented at the rail of the polling place. Friends are scouting the ward in his interest, sincere in the behalf that the friction that has developed among the Falconer-Piper forces will result in his receiving the highest vote.

TOUGH STORM IN QUINCY

One Train from Boston Three Hours on Road

Quincy in common with other cities and towns in New England has been experiencing real winter weather this month, especially for the past week or ten days. Monday, however, will go down in the winter's history as a most disagreeable day.

Hardly had the snow of Saturday got settled before another storm came. It began to snow Monday morning and continued all day. The snow was of the fine light dry quality and the high wind which accompanied the storm blew the snow about, which resulted more or less in drifts.

It was not especially hard getting about until late in the afternoon and early evening. Then it was that the wind increased in velocity and the snow was blown about in blinding clouds. At the same time the temperature began to drop and at 7 o'clock in the evening it was most disagreeable.

People who depended on the street cars to get to and from their homes did not experience much difficulty, although as a rule cars on some lines were a little late, while on other lines they were practically on time.

The street railway company had its big ploughs out all day and thus managed to keep the lines fairly clear. Patrons of the steam railroad however were the worst sufferers. During the day trains ran on fairly good time but with the approach of night and the rush hour they began to be late in arriving from Boston and in leaving Quincy for Boston. The 9.19 from Boston did not reach Quincy until midnight. Walking was difficult, and but for the paths cleared by the street railway ploughs it would have been much worse. They however made a good path in the centre of the street.

During the evening the fine snow came so fast that it seemed almost like fog and the head lights of the street cars could only be seen a short distance away.

Several social functions planned for the evening were given up, and even Kincaides theatre and other amusement houses decided not to open their places in the evening on account of the weather.

Later in the evening the storm ceased but the air continued to be cold and people did not care to remain out longer than was necessary.

This morning the air was sharp and cold, but clear and along toward noon it began to warm up somewhat and the themometer which has been near the zero mark for nearly a week rose to the 30 mark.

BROOKLINE TURNED DOWN

Adverse Report on Suffolk County Movement

In the Legislature, Monday, the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs reported adversely on the bill to make the town of Brookline a part of Suffolk county. This is the bill upon which a hearing was held a week ago and at which city officials of Quincy and many others appeared in opposition.

ENLARGEMENT PROPOSED OF CITY HALL LOT

Orders Looking to Enlargement of Washington Schoolhouse; Also for Purchase of New School Lot

New Apparatus for Fire Department at a Cost of $10,000, Etc., Etc.

Although the wind was howling and a light snow was being blown in great clouds about the streets, and cars were running off time, these elements did not prevent a good attendance at the regular meeting of the City Council, some of the members from Wollaston getting tired waiting for a car walked the whole distance. Even the two members from Squantum were present in time to answer to the roll call. Some of the members were a little late, but there were but two absent members, Councilmen Bass and O'Dowd, and illness was the cause of the latters' absence.

There was also a good attendance of city officials, even the Mayor braving the elements to be present.

In point of important orders, it was a busy session for there were several important matters among the large amount of new business introduced. These included an order dividing Ward One into two wards to be known as Wards One and Seven, and an order appropriating $10,000 for the purchase of an automobile combination chemical and piston pump and to acquire land for an addition to City Hall.

Also granting the Electric Light Co., a location for poles on Bennington street. Ordered to a second reading.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL ADDITION.

The same committee reported a resolve requesting the Mayor to have prepared detail drawings and specifications for a four-room addition to the Washington school building and for an assembly hall. Adopted.

NEW SUBWAY.

The Committee on Streets reported an order for a public hearing March 16, on taking land on Federal street for a public way of the city. Adopted.

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

Col. Goethals would make a splendid manager for some big city, but the voters would not respect him if he did not get some graft away from them.

Under Mayor Mitchell the New York police are no longer expected to go out armed with a toothpick to meet the thugs.

Uncle Shelby Cullom did not die as poor as at first reported, but few aldermen would feel that he made much use of his position from a business view-point.

—Many people today seem to have gone mad on the subject of legislation. The latest is a crazy proposition presented to the Massachusetts Legislature to make newspaper publishers liable for misstatements in advertisements they publish.

If Boston finances will not admit that city to assume the burden of improving Squantum, certainly that section should be reasonable in its demands upon the city of Quincy. All parts of the city claim that they are neglected, but that is not a fact, because a large debt has been created.

When the Brookline petition for annexation to Suffolk county was before the committee of the Legislature, one of the Brookline men claimed that there were no fire traps in Brookline. Since the $25,000 fire in the Kilsyth apartments and the narrow escapes, he should revise his statement.

STATESMANSHIP AND WEALTH.

The death of "Uncle" Shelby Cullom for 30 years senator from Illinois, has peculiar interest as a passing of an old type of statesmanship.

Some one once said that Mr. Cullam was poor when he entered the Senate, and has been growing poorer ever since. This turns out to be wrong, as Mr. Cullom had a fair sized estate, as modern standards go. His simple and unostentatious habits of life however, stamped him as belonging to that older school of statesmanship that maintained Spartan indifference to the allurements of wealth.

The opportunities for money-making in so long a political career as Mr. Cullom's could easily have made him a millionaire. Up to a decade or two public opinion was very loose in these respects. If a congressman took advantage of his inside information, to buy or sell stocks likely to be affected by pending action, nothing was thought of it. Such occurrences were too common to attract attention.

"Uncle" Shelby must have seen these chances incessantly for 30 years. He never made loud professions of superior virtue, but somehow these enticements were foreign to his simple and clean nature.

Of course there are many opportunities for money-making offered to prominent statesmen that are legitimate. Audiences almost anywhere would have assessed themselves 50 cents a head to see and hear so conspicuous and picturesque a figure in the political theater. But "Uncle" Shelby belonged to an older race of public men who were principally interested in ideas of government, and money making seemed an uninteresting side issue.

Whatever one may think of Mr. Cullom's political opinions, this imperviousness to the subtile influences of cash in politics, the indifference to the money-getting drift of the times, must command respect.

ROMA DRIVEN FROM COURSE

Steamer Brings Up on Rocks on No Man's Land

WINS AFTER GALLANT FIGHT

Nothing Short of Miracle Could Have Saved Her Had Not Wind Been Favorable—Tug Helps Float Vessel With More Than Five Hundred Persons on Board

Gay Head, Mass., Feb. 17.—In the hurricane and blizzard which lashed inward from the sea the Fabre Steamship company's transatlantic liner Roma, with 418 passengers and crew of 100 men, plunged on the rocky shore of No Man's Land last evening and after a terrific six-hour struggle with the huge waves and breakers wildly hurling against her, succeeded in backing from her perilous position with the aid of a tug.

The Roma was bound for Providence and New York from Marseilles. Meagre wireless reports reaching through the tempest for a time gave confused messages from the stricken steamer and left, for distressing hours, a doubt of her ability to escape from the jagged shore.

The static conditions were bad and wireless communication which has so often proven the salvation of vessels in distress for some time was most uncertain.

Brave efforts were made by lifesavers to respond to the Roma's calls for help. Her radio messages reached the revenue cutters Itasca, Gresham and Acushnet, which immediately started to her assistance.

Succor, however, was delayed by the blinding storm which was borne on the wings of the seventy-mile-an-hour wind, which made navigation in the vicinity of the forbidding land hazardous.

Due south of No Man's Land, and at the extreme western end of Martha's Vineyard, the men of the Gay Head life saving station tried valiantly, but unsuccessfully, to launch their boats in the teeth of the gale. Before them was an eight-mile row, but their willingness to attempt the work came to naught through the severity of the elements.

It was 10 o'clock last night before the revenue cutters Itasca, which was off the eastern end of Long Island, and the Acushnet, which put out from New Bedford, could aid the Roma. For hours they battled with the blizzard, making but slow headway in the teeth of the gale.

The Roma was due in Providence last Saturday, but heavy gales and giant seas held her back from making her schedule run. She reached the American coast in the height of the gale which was central last night off Nantucket.

The Roma had apparently been driven twenty miles from her course, which lies along what is known as the "twenty-fathom curve," when she encountered the dreaded shore of the island.

Details of the beaching of the craft are necessarily meagre. Only can the few wireless messages give an idea of the surprise and consternation which held sway aboard the craft when she suddenly came from out of the blizzard to face the peril of the shore.

Before hand or mind could move to safety the big craft had plunged her bow into the shoals of the coast. How her passengers and crew fared in this moment of peril will not be revealed until the vessel docks at Providence.

But the direction of the wind was her immediate salvation, for few vessels have escaped from the rocks of the little island with the wind from the south.

Had the wind been other than from a north by easterly direction, mariners say, nothing short of a miracle could have saved the Roma.

RECEPTION AT BRIDES HOME

Follows Marriage of Miss Nora Flanagan and T. E. Dillon

Miss Nora M. Flanagan and T. Edward Dillon, well-known young people of the city, were married at seven o'clock Monday night by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan of St. John's church. The ceremony was performed at the parish house.

Miss Sadie Flanagan, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and Edward Sweeney was the best man. The bride was dressed in a mahogany colored travelling suit and wore a picture hat to match.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Field street, after the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Dillon were assisted in receiving by the immediate members of the family. A wedding supper was served. The couple received many handsome and costly wedding gifts from their many friends.

Toward midnight Mr. and Mrs. Dillon left on a wedding trip. They will be at home to their friends at 26 Field street after April 1.

Mrs. Dillon is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Flanagan and the groom is a conductor employed by the Bay State Street Railway.

MR. SMOLLETT SURPRISED

James M. Smollett was a happy boy when, by request, he entered the editorial rooms of the Daily Ledger, Monday afternoon. He had been at Dedham on a street railway court case and had no opportunity to know what the Daily Ledger and his friends were doing for him. He was surprised to learn that a fund had been started to reimburse him in part for his loss at the Adams building fire. He said that President Hamilton of the Board of Trade was unknown to him, and likewise most of the donors to the fund. He appreciated very much however, their kindness. The prompt response would enable him to obtain clothes and resume his position that night. He desired the Daily Ledger to return thanks to all subscribers and well wishers, and would try to merit their kindness. Checks should be made payable to Daily Ledger.

GIVE THAT PUNY CHILD THIS GUARANTEED REMEDY

If your child is under-weight, listless, ailing, liable to get sick easily, it needs a medicine to build its weight and strength. For this purpose there is nothing else we know of that we can so strongly endorse as Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. The remarkable success of this splendid medicine is due to the fact that it contains ingredients that tone the nerves, enrich the blood and furnish to the entire system the strength, weight and health-building substances it needs. And, it does all this without injuring the stomach. In fact, Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is not only pleasant to take, but even the most sensitive stomach is benefited by it, and the digestion improved. On the other hand, it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs, which most parents object to giving their children. It does its good work by taking hold of the weakness and builds the body up to its natural strength, at the same time making it strong to resist disease.

If Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion doesn't build your child up, feed the stunted, puny muscles, and make the little one lively, strong, well, and full of the animal spirits children are meant by nature to have, come back and tell us and get your money back. We don't want you to lose a cent. We think this is no more than fair, and it leaves you no cause to hesitate. For old people also—for convalescents—for all who are nervous, tired-out, run-down, no matter what the cause—we offer Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion with the same guarantee of entire satisfaction or money back. Sold only at the 9000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only at one store—ours. $1.00.

Cheerful Letter Tells of Florida in February

(From the Braintree Observer.)

Editor of The Observer:

Florida has a very interesting history, and from the days of Ponce de Leon its discoverer, down to the present period of rapid advancement and modern methods, there have been a series of developments which have brought to the state a vast amount of energy and capital. Jacksonville is now the largest city, Tampa, Pensacola and Key West coming next in population. Its situation on the beautiful St. Johns river is such that it has become the commercial center and distributing point for the state, and its importance as a port of entry is noted at once by the stranger as he sees the vast amount of capital invested in steamship lines connecting it with New York, Boston and other great cities on the Atlantic coast. Its railroad lines on the east and west coasts and through the center of the state, have been the result of modern enterprise and skill.

In the study of geography our Braintree school boys may have noticed how few of the large rivers in the country run from the south toward the north, the general course of our rivers being in the opposite direction. But here is the great St. Johns which rises far in the southern part of Florida and runs directly north until at this point, Jacksonville, it turns to the eastward and flows for twenty-five miles into the Atlantic ocean. The view from our balcony at the turning point is very beautiful, and as we sit in the warm sunshine watching steamers, tugs and motor boats sailing up and down the river, it is with a languid sense of quietness that we contrast such a situation with that of our neighbors at home, as they energetically thaw out sink spouts and water pipes.

Jacksonville is a very modern city as compared with many other southern ones. It has many beautiful hotels and churches, comfortable electric street cars, nicely paved streets and sidewalks, well lighted by electricity; fine artesian well water, very pure, and distributed freely through the city by modern water service. Its fire department would be a credit to any large city and is the result of the great fire in May, 1901, which practically destroyed the business and a great part of the residential section of the city. Riverside avenue, just off of which we are living, is one of the most beautiful streets the writer has ever seen. Fine palm trees, live oaks, sycamore, and magnolias along its borders, many very spacious and costly mansions with beautiful lawns, flower beds and shrubs surrounding them, while the view of the river from many of these beautiful houses is superb. The number of automobiles travelling up and down the avenue seems almost limitless particularly at about or after sundown when the heat of the day is over.

The state of Florida is exceedingly level in its topography, no hills or valleys of any extent, and it is said in no section are these elevations of much over one hundred feet above sea level. The soil is light and sandy much of it very poor for the raising of crops, but with the use of a good deal of fertilizer there can be grown many vegetables and much fruit which is more or less native to this region. Grain is not easily grown as many of the lawns here show, but by much care and painstaking there is developed a Bermuda grass the roots of which are planted in rows across the lawn, much as we sow peas at home. To the northern man who has never before visited this region, there are many features in the every day life of the people which arouse his curiosity. During the day time very few of the white inhabitants are seen walking upon the residential streets, but colored servants are quite numerous; maids attending the little children of their employers; colored men at work on lawns and gardens, while many delivery wagons and auto trucks from stores and markets are busy through the day; but when evening comes the social life "gets busy" and the "Tango" is much in evidence.

A look into the market place reveals the fact that very little poultry of any kind is dressed and ready for the table. Turkey, ducks, and fowl of all kinds are kept alive in pens and are sold in this way to purchasers whose servants kill and prepare them for eating; or, if not wanted at once, they are put into little pens at the rear of the house where they are fed and kept in good condition until needed; and just at this juncture the writer hears the loud gobbling of a turkey at the rear of a fine residence, the effect of which is to bring back memories of his boyhood days when the old barn ridgepole was lined with gobblers. Eggs are plentiful but are largely of the storage variety, strictly fresh ones are rather scarce, although through the kindly help of our southern friends we have thus far been supplied with very nice ones. Another rather novel sight is the out door washing of clothes at the rear of many residences where colored women are building little wood fires on the ground, heating water in fron kettles into which the clothes are put and finally hung on lines to dry; another climatic effect which to the stranger is rather novel. The police department of the city seems to be well organized, its members neatly dressed with revolvers and clubs hanging conspicuously from their belts. Seats in the street cars are arranged so that the rear ones marked "colored" are intended only for negro passengers.

The so-called "Jim Crow" legislation of a few years ago brought about this separation and caused so much beeling that many of the older "niggers" will not patronize the street cars. There is entire separation between the white and colored school children, the buildings in the more desirable parts of the city being devoted exclusively to the white population although we are told that through private generosity largely from the north, there are several private institutions for colored children which are of great benefit to them. The Jacksonville Public Library is of considerable proportion and largely patronized The Y. M. C. A. owns a large and handsome building, is well managed and of great benefit not only religiously, but in a material way to the young men many of whom are comparative strangers to this reason. It has been our good fortune to take many pleasant auto rides far out into the country where the more primitive life of the people is to be seen; but for many miles in all directions there are evidences of real estate speculation and enterprise. Long avenues of durable concrete and brick paving extend for great distances into the country which is developed and platted by real estate interests. It is thought by some that all this extended enterprise will end in great financial trouble and misfortune, but this a matter of which the new-comer is hardly the one to speak.

To the stranger this country region is for a time of fascinating interest; level as a floor, semi-tropical in its in its growth of palms, ferns, and various species of pine trees from which the bark is scraped so that great quantities of pitch and turpentine can be gathered; negro cabins with their little vegetable gardens; here and there some larger tracts of cultivated land devoted to the raising of fruits and vegetables indigenous to this climate; a few cows foraging for green fodder of which there is very little; a few orange and grape-fruit trees which in this Northern section of Florida are not so productive; all these things are interesting to the "tenderfoot," but when compared with old New England with its beautiful hills and valleys, its mountains, lakes and rivers, its changing seasons, there comes a time when, although for the moment the stranger feels that the southland is the place for him, yet after all, to those of us in comfortable health and strength and accustomed to the cold of our northern winter, there is the satisfaction that our homes are still in the old Bay State, and that the shoveling of coal and the piling on of wood is not so great a hardship as we sometimes imagine.

This view of the situation should not be too disparaging to those who in delicate health may be pining for the sunny southlands where overcoats are a burden and snowdrifts unknown; nevertheless, our friends who are fixed in these determination to make Florida their permanent home, should put into their trunks plenty of mosquito netting and pennyroyal, and screens for their balconies and verandas, because January February, and March are not the only months in the year, a fact well known to our friends at home. The writer has penned these random and rather desultory lines hoping that they may be of some interest to your readers, and with the feeling that a glimpse of Florida sunshine, even on paper, may not come amiss to those of our friends who may to toasting their shins about our Braintree firesides.

By J. O. LEWIS

The Farmer and the Merchant.

THERE can be no doubt that the prosperity of the country—the entire people—is based on the quantity of produce RAISED ON THE FARMS, and no other one thing so seriously affects the business interests of the country as a general crop failure. If the crops are generally good throughout the country and happen to be a failure in one particular locality the merchants are not dependent on the home farmer, but can have his goods, produce, etc., shipped in from other sections and thus supply the demand of his customers, while, on the other hand, THE FARMER IS ALWAYS DEPENDENT ON HIS HOME MERCHANTS—the town or city which is his marketing place—and the home banks for the handling and disposition of his products.

THE MERCHANT NEVER BUYS HIS PRODUCE, HAY AND GRAIN FROM OUTSIDE POINTS WHEN HE CAN GET THEM FROM THE FARMER, BUT THAT THE FARMER IS GIVEN LARGELY TO THE PRACTICE OF ORDERING MANY OF HIS NEEDS FROM STORES IN OTHER CITIES, MORE PARTICULARLY THE LARGE MAIL ORDER HOUSES, IS A WELL KNOWN FACT.

Not a day passes that goods of almost every description, from soaps to farm implements, including gasoline engines, manure spreaders, seed planters, cream separators, cooking stoves and ranges, clothing, groceries and what not, are seen in our depots and express offices addressed to local farmers.

MR. FARMER, DO YOU THINK IT RIGHT TO COME TO TOWN WITH A LOAD OF PRODUCE AND SELL IT TO THE MERCHANTS OF YOUR MARKET PLACE AND THEN TAKE THE MONEY HE PAYS YOU AND SEND IT TO SOME MAIL ORDER HOUSE AND BUY GOODS THAT YOU COULD BUY JUST AS CHEAPLY AT HOME AS FROM A MAIL ORDER HOUSE AND HAVE THE FURTHER SATISFACTION OF SEEING WHAT YOU BUY?

You may say, "Oh, well, I sold my butter and eggs to the groceryman, but he doesn't handle clothing!" Yes; but, my farmer friend, if the clothing man does not sell his clothing he must go out of business, and the groceryman loses a good customer, his business is curtailed, and he then must needs buy less of your produce. You are just as much in duty bound to buy your clothing, your hardware, your farm tools and other necessities from your home market as if these merchants all dealt in your wares first hand.

THESE VARIOUS BUSINESSES ARE INTERLOCKING AND INTERDEPENDENT, AND ON THEIR SUCCESS DEPENDS YOUR SUCCESS.

A certain good farmer in this county ordered a corn planter from a mail order house and, owing to delays in freights, did not get his planter in time to do his planting while a good spell of weather was on. However, it finally came. He got it to the farm, set it up and started in with his planting. Through carelessness or oversight a small gravel got in one of the holes through which the corn drops and there lodged, with the result that the plate was broken. This put the planter out of commission. The farmer had to stop his corn planting and come to town to see if he could get another plate. He called on the hardware stores and implement dealers, but as none of them carried these mail order house planters in stock he could find no plate, and the final result was he was forced to follow the plow and drop his corn by hand. Had he purchased his planter from a home merchant he could easily have got the necessary repairs and not been delayed. It certainly was more costly to the farmer than if he had paid his home implement dealer many dollars more. Furthermore, the implement dealer had been buying corn every season from this farmer who bought his planter from a mail order house.

Every dollar you send to a mail order house is taken out of local circulation entirely, and the good of it is lost forever. IT HURTS YOU IN THE LONG RUN just as much as any one. Therefore, before you order anything else from out of your home town go to town and see if you can find what you want, or if you can't get to town telephone a merchant, and if it is a small package he will send it out by parcel post. If it isn't satisfactory send it back. Merchants guarantee the goods they sell just as well as mail order houses. There is not a local merchant who will not treat you right. Give him a chance and he will [illegible] ate it.

To be continued un[illegible] title, "THE STRENGTH OF THE WHEEL."

SACRED HEART REUNION

A Good Time Although Night Was Stormy

Rev. Fr. John P. Cuffe, the dean of Catholic priests of Quincy, and many parishioners, assembled in Alpha hall Monday night at the eleventh annual reunion of Sacred Heart parish of Atlantic. Weather conditions seriously interfered with the affair, which before the storm broke had given indications of being the premier event of parish history. All that did attend, a comfortable 300, men, women and children, however, entered joyously into the spirit of the occasion.

While the wind howled and the snow swirled an entertainment was given which won praise from those present. An overture by Cuffe's orchestra opened the program and a piano solo by Miss May Stevens; an Atlantic tot followed. Miss Beatrice Costello rendered several violin selections.

The next three numbers were steps of Bonnie Scotland, by Grace MacDonald, Anna Marr, Anna Weinstein, Helen Fleming and Helen O'Day; Irish jig by Helen Fleming; and a Highland fling by Marie MacDonald. The piper was Daniel MacQuarrie, a prominent member of the Highland Dress Association of Boston. All wore kilts and performed the intricate steps with grace and ease. The closing was "Home Circle" and John McCormick's "I hear you calling me" by a violin, cello and piano trio, consisting of Miss Margaret and Miss Florence White and Miss DuTemple.

Dancing was participated in by those who attended and refreshments were served in Union hall. Teddy Keohane was floor marshal and Joseph Duggan assistant. The aids were John A. McGowan, Richard A. Cole, James Keohane, Edward Welch, John McClure, Herbert Lavery, Cornelius Duggan, Jr., Henry Granahan, William Coughlin and Bernard Cullen.

The general committee was headed by Francis Lavery and consisted of P. W. Dolan, Charles Donnelly, William Drea, James Costello, John P. Driscoll, John Sullivan, Cornelius Keohane, John J. Herne, Myles Creamer, Joseph Clerke, William Coughlin, Sr., James McCarthy, William Shea, Jeremiah Donovan, Charles Duggan and John Phinney.

END OF THE POTOMAC

Naval Tug Carried Off by Ice After Being Abandoned by Crew

St. John's, Feb. 17.—The United States naval tug Potomac, caught fast in the ice floes of the gulf of St. Lawrence, was abandoned by the thirty-six officers and men of her crew, who landed safely at Bonne Bay.

The tug was driven seaward before a gale and soon disappeared from the range of shore observation. The ice was piled so thickly about the vessel that it was feared she would be crushed.

Supplies were taken over the ice to the Potomac and Boatswain Wilkinson, her commander, was prepared to remain on board so long as there was any prospect of saving the craft. Adverse weather conditions finally made it imperative to abandon ship.

The Potomac was caught in the ice on Feb. 5 while trying to free some American fishing vessels icebound at Bay of Islands.

HOMAGE TO MAINE'S MEN

Flowers Strewn on Snow-Covered Graves In National Cemetery

Washington, Feb. 17.—Homage to the men of the battleship Maine, who lost their lives in the epoch-making catastrophe in Havana harbor sixteen years ago, was paid by the navy and high officers of the nation at Arlington national cemetery.

Snow-covered mounds over the sleeping warriors were decorated with floral tributes and a vessel plowed through the ice floes of the Potomac to strew sprigs of evergreen on the water. Over the graves a detachment of bluejackets fired three volleys and a national salute and a bugler sounded "taps."

Impressive exercises were held indoors at Fort Meyer, the blizzard making it impossible to carry out the full program arranged for the occasion at the cemetery. Hundreds had braved the freezing blast, however, to participate in the ceremonies at the graves.

FROM GERMANY TO URAL MOUNTAINS

Balloon Pilot Covers a Distance of 1860 Miles

Berlin, Feb. 17.—The German balloon pilot, Hans Berliner, carrying two passengers in his spherical balloon, telegraphed from Kirgischan, in the Ural mountains, Russia, that he had landed there after a forty-seven-hour flight from Bitterfeld, Ger.

The flight is understood to have broken the distance record, but not the duration record. The distance is approximately 1860 miles.

The flight of Berliner's balloon extended farther than that of Dr. Korn, who, after ascending last week at Bitterfeld, landed at Krasno Ufimsk, Russia, about 1775 miles from the starting point.

FIRE DESTROYS MAIL

Three Thousand Letters and Other Matter Burn With a Car

Brattleboro, Vt., Feb. 17.—Seventy-five bags of mail destined for Vermont points were destroyed by a fire in a mail car on the West River branch of the Vermont Central railroad.

Included in the destroyed matter were 3000 letters, many annual town reports, and a quantity of parcel post matter. Nobody was in the car when the fire was discovered and it is thought that the flames started from attempts to thaw out the frozen running gear earlier in the day.

Two empty freight cars nearby were also destroyed.

FIRE ENGINE TAKES FIRE

Novel Spectacle Is Witnessed by Citizens of Hartford

Hartford, Feb. 17.—After ploughing through snow drifts to answer two alarms, fire engine No. 1, recently equipped with a tractor, caught fire in going to a third blaze. The fire was started by explosion of the gasolene tank.

A crowd gathered to view the novel spectacle of a fire engine on fire. Sand, snow and chemicals were used in a vain attempt to quench the flames, but a jet of steam from the boiler did the work eventually. The engine was badly damaged.

TWO NATIONS LOSE AOKI

Death of Japanese Statesman Who Was Friend of United States

Tokio, Feb. 17.—Viscount Aoki, the first Japanese ambassador to the United States, died here, aged 70 years. He was privy councilor of Japan.

The viscount was always a friend of America and sought to further the bonds of peace between Japan and the United States. He was recalled in 1908 because it is said he was attempting to institute negotiations between the two countries for a mutual guarantee of territorial rights.

Arm Torn From Socket

Boston, Feb. 17.—Thomas St. John, 39 years old, while at work on board the steamship Alaunia at the Cunard docks, got his left arm entangled in a rope connected with the steam winch and the arm was torn from the socket.

RIVADAVIA WEATHERS GALE

Returns to Boston After Tough Experience

The Argentine battleship Rivadavia returned to the Commonwealth docks, Boston, Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock, with her forward jackstaff gone, and her forward torpedo net staging bent, and her crew of 1300 men pretty thoroughly tired out after their experience of the past few days and glad to once more be on land.

During her trials she was for most of the time in the Gulf stream so that the passengers on board did not suffer from the cold, but since last Wednesday she has been battling with heavy wind and seas, and since Saturday she has been fighting her way toward Boston.

After completing her run of 39 hours at a 20 knot speed she started in to make her 30 hour run at a 15 knot speed, but owing to the weather this was abandoned, as the storm was rapidly growing worse.

President Bowles who made the trip on the Rivadavia said Monday night, after docking, that he was well satisfied with the way in which the big fighting ship had behaved.

"The storm had subsided a good deal when we turned around. Then a heavy blow came on from the westward, and after we had put the ship through half her 15-knot test we thought it best to give it up. Since then, trying to make Boston, we ran through the worst weather a battleship could be called upon to combat. Saturday night was especially bad.

"How much of a wind did we have Well, on Saturday night it was blowing 70 miles when no one aboard was longer able to hold up the instrument used for measuring wind velocity. Sunday night I don't believe a soul aboard slept. We were most of the time in the Gulf Stream, where the temperature of the water was around 72 degrees. So that we didn't make any ice aboard."

Capt. Jose Moneta, who is in charge of the Argentine officers making the trials aboard the ship in the interests of that country, said that he had nothing special to say for publication and that all the news of the trip would have to come from representatives of the Fore River Corporation.

Besides the men who made the long to be remembered trip, a dog, a fine young Newfoundland, owned by one of the stewards, was a passenger on the battleship. "Max" was tied inside, however, for it was feared that if he was on deck during the storm he would be washed into the sea.

Capt. Joseph I. Kemp of the Boston Towboat Company was in charge of the ship during the trip, with William W. White of Boston as navigator. There were more than 1300 aboard in all, including more than 100 representatives of the Argentine Government representatives from the Fore River Works and other shipbuilding concerns, electrical concerns and the crew.

It is planned, if the weather is right, to take the battleship out again on Wednesday, after she has taken on a fresh supply of screened coal. She will then undergo her 15-knot test, running for 30 hours at that speed. Returning here on Friday, if things go right, she will leave again Saturday night for an eight-hour highspeed test. Then she will go to Hingham, where ammunition will be taken aboard preparatory for her gun tests next wek.

BIG FEATURE AT MUSIC HALL

In securing this wonderful drama, "Last Days of Pompeii" Manager Ashley has indeed been fortunate, as it is conceded by manufacturer and exhibitor alike to be the biggest, best and most realistic production of its kind ever attempted in the history of motion pictures, over 3,000 persons being used in the great arena scene, or nearly the whole population of Pompeii, Italy, in the year 79 A. D., the year that Vesuvius belched forth nearly 28 feet of cinders, stone and lava and so completely obliterated Pompeii that all traces of its location even was lost for almost seventeen centuries.

This beautiful picture of "Pompeii" can be seen at Music Hall, today and Wednesday, only, performance at 2.30 and 8 P. M.

HEARING ON SUFFRAGE

Organized Labor In Boston Appears to Favor Votes For Women

Boston, Feb. 17.—The annual hearing as to whether Massachusetts women shall have the vote or not came to an end last night at 10 o'clock, about six hours having been devoted to the threshing out before the legislative committee on constitutional amendments of the arguments of the suffragists and the anti-suffragists.

Last night was called "labor night," inasmuch as the hearing was conducted by the Political Equality league, which numbers mostly working men and women who are interested in getting the ballot for women.

The suffragists had speak for their side a number of men and women who are leaders in organized labor and who represent their unions. In opposition the anti-suffragists were spoken for by several working women, who, however, were accused, without contradiction, of being affiliated with the labor unions.

It was admitted, as far as organized labor in Boston goes, the hearing proved them to favor votes for women.

NOT TEST OF CHARACTER

President Will Veto Literacy Test If Burnett Bill Passes

Washington, Feb. 17.—President Wilson will veto the Burnett immigration bill if it comes to him for signature with the so-called literacy test contained in it.

This became known after Chairman Smith of the senate immigration committee had announced that the bill, virtually as it passed the house, including the literacy test, would be favorably reported to the senate soon.

Prospects are that the bill will pass the senate as reported from the committee, but the measure never will become law, according to close friends of the president.

The president does not consider literacy a test of character and believes some other means should be devised to prevent undesirable aliens from entering the United States.

FOREMAN CONVICTED IN EXTORTION CASE

Laborers Compelled to "Come Across" to Keep Their Jobs

Boston, Feb. 17.—Edward McDermott, former foreman for the Nawn Construction company, who was on trial two days before Judge Chase and a jury on charges of extorting money from Polish laborers who worked for him, was found guilty in nine counts.

McDermott, according to the evidence of the Poles he had formerly employed on the Copley square section of the new subway, charged them $5 each for their positions, which netted them $12 a week salary, and $1 a week for the holding of the jobs.

The government alleged that McDermott wanted to raise the weekly amount to $2 and that the men complained. Sentence will be imposed later.

ADJOURNMENT JUNE 15

President Looks For Speedy Work on the Trust Bills

Washington, Feb. 17.—June 15 is the date Democratic leaders hope to adjourn congress. President Wilson believes the senate and house may work at the same time on the trust bills.

The president told callers that business men were now showing a greater interest in the new legislation and that in many cases it was a very helpful interest.

That interest, however, is not so active as he had expected, and he attributes this to the fact that business men have discounted the character of legislation and that the measure in a general way meets their approval.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

HOT SHOT FROM G. B. BATES

Would Have Mayor Push Grade Crossing in Legislature

Editor Daily Ledger:

The recent opinion decreed by the Public Service Commission, relating to the abolition of grade crossings in Quincy, is the decision of incompetents. No less a personage than ex-Gov. Curtis Guild, Jr., recently stated in an editorial the following: "With the exception of one member, Mr. George W. Anderson, there is no body of men so discredited in the eyes of the people as the Massachusetts Public Service Commission, the most highly paid board in the Commonwealth. The courts have to be called in to save the people from the patent absurdities of the commissioners' rulings; the public should be relieved of supporting men whose ideas as to public service corporations are as truly the survival of an archaic age as the okapi. Gov. Walsh rightly demands the re-organization of this commission and the reduction of its membership. He deserves universal support in this sensible recommendation. We believe people would support him should he take a more drastic stand. Before legislation can be obtained the present board must pass upon other questions. Must the courts again be called in to correct still further stupid rulings by highly paid incompetents?

"Don't wait for legislation, Gov. Walsh. Keep Mr. Anderson, and send the rest packing. There are men to be found for commissioners who are not only honest and of calm judgment, but sufficiently well posted in law and logic as not to need the intervention of the courts to secure action in the interest of the public."

It is a pity there are not more public-spirited men like Curtis Guild, Jr., and George W. Anderson. Any plan of abolishing grade crossings, conceived in conspiracy and born in corruption against the expressed wishes and consent of a city and its people, would have no standing in a court at law, or before the Massachusetts Legislature.

Now is the time for the people of Quincy, through its public spirited organizations, to rise to the occasion by reiterating their protest and disapproval of this plan, which sacrifices our city to satisfy the greed of a few land schemers.

The opportunity now presents itself to these organizations to demand that His Honor, Mayor Miller, force his petition pending in the Legislature, authorizing the abolition of the grade crossings in Quincy, by the "City plan of depression," and in this way, our city can be saved from this avaricious sacrifice.

When this petition is given its hearing in the Legislature, our citizens and organizations should storm Beacon Hill and enter their protest, and in this way, the right solution of a question of vital importance to the future welfare of our city is assured.

In your issue of Monday, containing C. B. Breed's statement, commenting on grade crossings at Saville street and Water street, my contention that the plans adopted by the commission were the plans of greed and selfishness to plunder the taxpayers and ruin the city for profit, was verified. Mr. Breed states that the plan adopted by the commissioner at Saville street was the Faxon plan, and by that statement he practically admitted and verified my contention, that this is the plan of selfish schemers within our city.

He further stated that the plan adopted for Water street, sinking it 10 feet lower, was the plan of an outside engineer, who was called in by the commissioner.

I am prepared to prove that the plan adopted at Water street eminated in the office of a civil engineer in Quincy.

I am further prepared to prove that a certain engineer in Quincy, had an office in the Tremont building, Boston, on the same floor and almost next door to the office of John L. Bates, chairman of the grade crossing committee for the city of Quincy. Will the plot of Faxon & Co. (the cheapest, most antiquated, and iniquitous—a public calamity) compelling the raising of the bridges and grades at Beale street, Warren avenue, Adams street, Dimmock street, closing up Saville street, stealing Irving place, making Granite street, worse than it is now, raising School street 12 feet higher and Marsh street 7 feet higher and sinking Water street 10 feet lower—be approved by our citizens? When by depression you can save every street with better grades and much better conditions.

Yours for the City plan of depression, the best solution,

G. B. Bates,
Member Grade Crossing Committee for City of Quincy.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

For the first time in the history of the house the show at Kincaide Theatre was suspended last night. Very few people dared venture out in such a terrific storm, and Manager Wardwell decided it best to omit the hsow thus giving the people who gathered, and the theatre employees opportunity to reach their home early and safely.

Over five hundred people enjoyed the matinee and were well pleased with the program. Two of the acts billed to appear got snowbound, but their places were filled by others equally as good. The Four Higgins put on a comedy sketch that was a scream from the start. Gordon's dogs delighted everybody with their exhibition, some of the stunts showing almost human intelligence.

"Just Kids" the 2-reel feature picture is a splendid comedy drama produced by children who are certainly well trained in the part they play so perfectly. The animated Weekly shows scenes of great interest in all parts of the world, and the picture of the burning Bacon Department Store of Roxbury during the zero weather recently was especially interesting.

Improve your opportunity today and tomorrow to see this good show for the program changes Thursday.

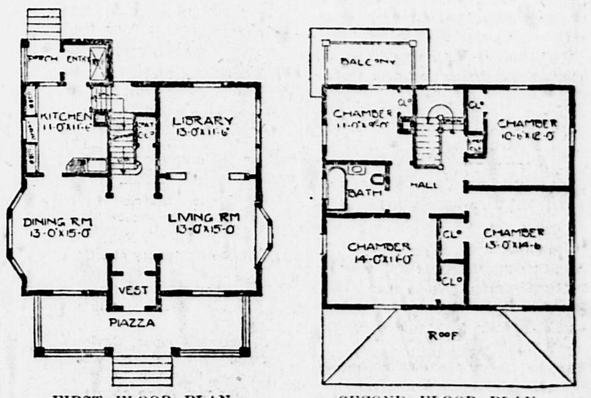
A MODERNIZED COLONIAL DESIGN.

Design 602, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

For a suburban, small village or farm home this plan is without equal. There are three reasons why this plan is unusually good for the purposes stated above—first, economy in construction; second, amount of space for the size of the building; third, ample chamber capacity. There is space in the third story for three chambers in case this is built as a farmhouse. There may also be a bath installed in the third story for hired help. The third story so finished will add about $500 to the cost of the whole. The estimate is given without this third floor finished. The coat closet under the stairs may be eliminated and provide an entrance from the grade door in the rear direct to the third story without even passing through the kitchen. This is a very remarkable and unusual feature for a house designed along these lines. The layout of the first and second floors of the house makes a good comfortable, livable home, with the central staircase hall idea. Size, 32 feet wide and 28 feet deep over the main part. Full basement. First story, 9 feet; second story, 8 feet in the clear when finished. Birch or maple floors throughout first and second stories, 1½ inch face. Finish in first story red gum, second story southern cypress, birch or Washington fir. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $2,950.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will furnish a copy of Saxton's book of plans, "American Dwellings." It contains about 250 up to date designs of cottages, bungalows and residences costing from $1,000 to $6,000.

WAS SCARED BY GRAFT INQUIRY

Constant Worry Probably Unhinged Mind of Kennedy

HE FEARED HIS INQUISITOR

State Treasurer Knew Little of Actual Affairs of His Office—Was Wanted to Tell What He Knew About Rejection of Canal Bid and the Deposit of State Funds

New York, Feb. 17.—Upon receipt of the news of the suicide of State Treasurer Kennedy District Attorney Whitman cancelled the John Doe proceedings in the up-state graft investigation scheduled for yesterday afternoon and sent telegrams to other witnesses not to appear until further notice.

"I had no evidence of dishonesty or wrong-doing against Kennedy," said Whitman to reporters. While Whitman would have nothing to say on the subject, he let it be understood that the suicide is a serious blow to the prosecution.

Friends believe Kennedy was "scared" by the prospects of an inquiry, and the constant work is declared to have deranged him temporarily.

Kennedy was quoted by a state official as having said in Albany a few night ago: 'I'm worried to death over these investigations more than anything. I'm afraid to go down and face Whitman. If he gets me on the stand he'll make a monkey of me. I'm a man of poor education, but so far as I was able I did the best I could in conducting the state treasurer's office. My son is a prominent lawyer in Buffalo and my daughter is a charming young woman. I'd cut my right arm off before I'd disgrace either of them. I used to be a saloonkeeper in Buffalo, but when my son went to college I quit the saloon business because I didn't think it would look well for a college boy's father to be selling liquor."

So little did Kennedy know about the actual affairs of the treasurer's office, his mind not being trained to financial affairs, that he had prepared to take with him as prompter at the John Doe proceedings one of the deputy state controllers.

There were two matters, generally speaking, concerning which Whitman was anxious to question Kennedy. One was the action of the state canal board, of which Kennedy was a member, in rejecting a bid of James C. Stewart after Stewart had refused to contribute a large sum to a "Mr. Gaffney;" the other concerned detailss of deposits of state funds in banking institutions bonded by a company with which Kennedy had formerly been connected.

Books In Perfect Condition

Albany, Feb. 17.—Accountants from the comptroller's office reported after examining the books of the late State Treasurer Kennedy that they were in perfect condition.

The examination went back only to Feb. 9, on which date they were balanced. It is probable a complete audit of the books from the time Kennedy took office up to the date of his death will be ordered.

FUNERAL OF BACON

Neither Eulogies Nor Music at Services In the Senate

Washington, Feb. 17.—The funeral of Senator Bacon was held in the senate chamber today. There were no flowers, because of a rule against flowers in the senate chamber, except that one piece—the senate offering—was allowed to lie on the coffin.

The funeral services were simple, but impressive. There were o eulogies and no music. The senate transacted no business, adjourning immediately after the ceremonies.

LAUNCHED BUT TWO LIFEBOATS

No Others Cut Away When Monroe Met Disaster

HORSLEY TELLS OF RESCUES

Says Crew Did Their Best While Wrecked Ship Had List of Forty-Five Degrees—Had Never Lowered Lifeboats to Water to Show Their Experience In Handling Them

Philadelphia, Feb. 17.—That only two lifeboats were launched when the Monroe sank with the loss of forty-one lives, following her ramming by the Nantucket, and no orders were given for the launching of the others, was brought out at the federal probe here when First Officer Horsley resumed the stand.

Horsley said he did not know exactly why the others had not been cut away, but believed if those on the starboard side had been they would have been smashed to pieces.

"At all events," said Inspector Howard, "that would have been better than having them go down with the ship."

Having described his awakening by the collision and Captain Johnson's orders shouted through the door, Horsley said he rushed out and ordered half a dozen passengers in te companionway to the deck and found half a dozen more there when he arrived.

He found the list to be about 45 degrees, and saw some of the crew tearing the canvas off the boats and others straining to launch them. He then said:

"Our boat got away all right with four of the crew, three or four passengers and myself. We rowed out about a dozen feet, then returned to rescue some passengers on the high side. There were a good many floating about in the water whom we picked up. All I saw had on life preservers. We were so heavily loaded we almost capsized.

"After the Monroe went down we rowed to the Nantucket. We must have had at least thirty-three persons on board, as I had at one time counted thirty. I was then transferred to the captain's boat and returned to the wreck."

It was brought out that the crew of the Monroe had been on the vessel only five weeks, and had held only two perfunctory boat drills between Dec. 22, the day they shipped, and Jan. 30, when the Nantucket sank the Monroe. The new crew of the Monroe had never lowered the lifeboats to the water or rowed them around to prove they were capable of handling them in seamanlike fashion.

Because he remembered hearing Captain Johnson express the old superstition of the sea by remarking that it was Friday morning and he was going to reduce speed, Joseph E. Gately, second officer of the Monroe, testified that he is sure the master slowed down in the fog after midnight.

Gately jumped overboard as the vessel went down and was picked up by a boat that had fallen from the ship.

HUNT FOR MURDERER

Pockets of Slain Man Are Said to Have Been Rifled

Everett, Mass., Feb. 17.—A general alarm has been sounded throughout New England by the Everett police in an effort to locate the murderer of Salvatore Renzulli, 32, who was shot and killed on a street in this city.

The police claim the murderer is John Tasutto and that he escaped after firing the shots which killed Renzulli.

A motive for the crime was advanced when a brother of the dead man claimed that Tasutto rifled the victim's pockets while he was lying dying in the snow. Renzulli said that his brother had more than $200 in his pockets when he was killed.

This announcement was made by a state official, who said Schmidt in his confession stated that an illegal operation had been performed on the girl, and that she died as a result. He then dismembered the body, dropping the several parts in the Hudson river.

Indictments Against Other Railroad Officials Are Quashed

Bridgeport, Conn., Feb. 17.—State Attorney Judson quashed the manslaughter indictments against five officials of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, but refused to annul the indictment against former President Charles S. Mellen.

The indictments grew out of the wreck at Westport, Conn., Oct 3, 1913, in which seven persons were killed.

SNOW SHOVELLERS' WANTS SUPPLIED

Greeted With Shower of Pies and Cakes From Restaurant

New York, Feb. 17.—Aladdin and his lamp had nothing on a gang of Broadway snow shovellers. While the hungry men were admiring a luscious display of pies and cakes in the window of Fisher's restaurant, their mouths fairly watering, the pies suddenly leaped out into the snow.

Incidentally the plate glass came with them, along with crockery, pots, kettles and pans. Next came the patrons of the eating house. The last through was the cook. The gas range had blown up.

The snow shovellers unanimously declared that it's an ill gas range that blows nobody good.

VOTE COSTS $65,000

Samuel Voted In Commons When Firm Had Government Contract

London, Feb. 17.—Sir Stuart M. Samuel, Radical member of parliament for Whitechapel, was ordered by Justice Rowland of the king's bench division to pay penalties and costs, amounting to $65,000, because he voted in the house of commons while his firm had a contract with the British government. The money has to be paid to William Bird as a common informer.

The act of parliament under whose terms he was condemned says a member of the house of commons may not be even indirectly interested in such a transaction or in any government contracts. Samuel gave notice of appeal from the judge's decision.

ASQUITH STANDS PAT

Will Not Show Hand at Behest of Opponents of Home Rule

London, Feb. 17.—Premier Asquith defied the Unionist members of parliament to force him to show his hand in the home rule fight.

Replying to an interpellation, the premier emphatically declined to state whether he intended to propose an amendment to the pending bill excluding Ulster from the measure.

The interpellation caused excitement in the commons, as it was the first direct attempt made to reveal the secrets of the government's program with regard to Ireland.

Mermaids And Sirens

Sad Mishap Spoils the Courtship of Ananias Sline

By J. LEROY BARSTOW.

Ananias Sline finished mopping up the floor of the First bank of Quincy Harbor, cast a look out of the window up and down the street and then suddenly dodged over to the mirror to straighten a brilliant red necktie that blossomed on his shining shirt front.

In a few seconds he was standing in the doorway, ready to make a sweeping bow to the new schoolteacher, Miss Hannah Peabody.

Miss Peabody, who was plump and good natured looking, with bright brown eyes and rather a weather beaten complexion, smiled cordially at the little man.

"Good morning, Mr. Sline. Lovely day, isn't it?" she smiled.

"Grand!" agreed Ananias, rubbing his bald head with a blue cotton handkerchief. "I'm going eeling tonight," he added.

"Oh, goody!" Miss Peabody clapped her hands in a very juvenile manner and glanced archly at the little sailor. "You know what you promised, Mr. Sline."

"I ain't forgotten," blushed Ananias delightedly. "I'm going to start soon's it's dark. We have to spear 'em by lantern light, you know."

"Won't it be jolly fun? I shall be ready at 6 o'clock. Will you come for me, or shall I meet you at the dock?"

Ananias hesitated. There were several other comely ladies in Quincy Harbor who had their matrimonial eyes fastened on Ananias Sline, and it would be better if his attentions to the new schoolteacher did not become public property until he had rather broken the news to his old loves.

Miss Peabody boarded with Miss Simms, and the Simms house was across the street from Em Bevis, and Mrs. Bevis had been the recipient of many attentions from Ananias, and there was the Widow Rowell, with whom Ananias boarded. It was better that the prospective eelers meet on the dock.

It was a busy day at the bank, and, while the little porter found plenty to do, he found time to complete his preparations for the evening's sport. Among other things was the writing of a poem to Hannah Peabody.

"I'd rather mop fifteen miles of painted floor than write one pome," was the dejected opinion of Mr. Sline when he finally tucked the ink smirched paper into his pocket.

* * * * * * * *

The Widow Rowell rushed into Em Bevis' department store, her little, dark face quivering with excitement. Although these two ladies were ordinarily rivals for the hand and heart of Ananias Sline, now, in the person of

"JUST SEE WHAT HE SAYS TO HER, THE OLD FLIRT!"

Miss Hannah Peabody, they found common cause for complaint.

"Em," cried the widow breathlessly, "what do you think that sly cat of a schoolteacher's going to do?"

Mrs. Bevis paled. "I'd never guess, Hetty," she said faintly.

"Going eeling with Ananias—eeling, mind you, and she so scared of a boat she turns sick when she looks at the harbor mussed up in a northwester! Ain't she bold?"

"I should call her brave," remarked Mrs. Bevis dryly. "Ain't it wonderful, Hetty, what some wimmen will go through with for the sake of a little shrimp of a man?" And then:

"How'd you hear about it?" questioned Mrs. Bevis at last.

"He sneaked his old fishing clothes out this noon, and he dropped something on the floor that gave me a clew to where he was going and who was going with him."

Mrs. Rowell drew a piece of rumpled paper from her pocket and pointed to the ink stained pages. There were many interlineations and many blurred words, but the whole thing proved to be the rough draft of Ananias' poem to his lady fair of the moment. It was evident that Ananias had been reading poetry, for the lines were addressed to "My Lady Fare."

"Humph!" sniffed Em Bevis. "Ananias can't spell worth a cent! A body would think he was a trolley conductor and she was a passenger."

"Never mind the spelling," urged the widow eagerly. "Just see what he says to her—the old—flirt!"

Mrs. Bevis settled her spectacles on her nose, and her large, strongly marked countenance settled into an expression of puzzled wonderment as she slowly picked out the words from the jumble of corrections:

"My Lady Fare!
Oh, Hannah, be my lady fare!
To say this thing I'd hardly dare,
But you have smiled on me."

"You bet she has!" interjected Em bitterly. "Grinned like a Cheshire cat whenever she passed the bank." Then she resumed reading:

"Tonight we will a-eeling go,
And while the boat rocks to and fro
I'll hold your dainty hand in mine
And look into your eyes divine."

"Did you ever hear such wicked, unChristianlike gibberish?" interrupted Mrs. Rowell jealously.

"Never. Just listen to this, Hetty:

"And when I tell you of my love
Just when the moon is bright above
I wish that I could say this, Hannah,
In a finer, proper manner"—

"There's, he's given out, poor soul, and I don't wonder," commented Mrs. Bevis sourly as she handed the paper back to Hetty Rowell. "What you going to do about it, Hetty?"

The Widow Rowell laughed shrilly and folded her arms.

"I'm going fishing," she announced.

Em Bevis' face relaxed; she emitted a hoarse giggle.

"You going eeling?" she asked significantly.

"Why not? I been eeling lots of times in my life. The bay's free to all, and seems like I'd relish some fried eels tomorrow."

"Hetty Rowell, you do beat all," chuckled Em appreciatively.

"I aim to," retorted Hetty.

"I don't mind going along to see the fun," remarked Mrs. Bevis.

"Come along. Can you spear an eel?"

"Lord, no, Hetty! But I can hold the torch while you do it, and I'm a good hand at the oars."

"I've been down making my boat ready. We'll start about 6 o'clock. Ananias asked for a 5 o'clock supper—said he had to go somewheres this evening."

"All right. You meet me down on the beach. I know where the boat's drawn up on the sand."

Promptly at 6 o'clock Em Bevis and the Widow Rowell met on the sandy beach. There were many lights about the placid harbor, anchor lights hanging from the larger vessels and little flaring lights from the many eeling boats that were abroad that night.

A light flared at the foot of the landing steps below the dock and then suddenly darted out and away across the bay.

"That's them," said the widow truculently.

In half an hour the two women were close in the wake of Ananias Sline's boat. While the flare of their own torch prevented Ananias or his fair companion from recognizing the occupants of the boat behind, the two widows had a fair view of the tickle Ananias and the timid schoolteacher.

Ananias was standing in the bow of his boat manipulating his torch with one hand while he skillfully speared an eel with the other. The flare of the torch penetrated the water and lured the inquisitive wrigglers to the surface, where the strong arm and unerring aim of the little sailor quickly captured them.

Every time Ananias speared an eel the schoolteacher squealed, and when the wriggling fish was popped into a large covered can Miss Peabody called Ananias a bad, cruel man in a most caressing tone.

"Disgusting," whispered Em Bevis jealously.

"She's a siren," added Hetty Rowell, who was possessed of imagination when occasion demanded it.

"The loudest siren I ever heard," said Mrs. Bevis, who was of a practical turn of mind and had heard the automobile danger horns.

"He's taking a rest," whispered Mrs. Rowell sharply. "I'll bet he runs the boat up close under the old wreck yonder and reads that there pome to her."

"He'll read it to me at the same time if I have to wade there," muttered Mrs. Bevis, picking up the oars in her strong hands. "'Tain't for nothing he's burned out the kerosene in my front parlor."

"I didn't know he'd been there enough to count the cost of kerosene," sneered Hetty Rowell as they followed the larger boat toward the west beach, where the skeleton of an abandoned schooner was half submerged in the high tide.

"There's plenty you ain't aware of, Hetty," said Mrs. Bevis coldly as she bent to her oars.

The two widows fell into silence as their craft followed the boat ahead. Hetty Rowell extinguished the torch, for she had no heart to spear eels when that organ was pierced with the barb of Ananias' perfidy.

All of Quincy Harbor had expected that Ananias would marry his landlady, but so far the god of luck had decreed that the little sailorman should escape his quarry; then his attentions to the owner of the village department store had diverted public interest to Em Bevis, and finally it was an open question which one of the two widows would win Ananias Sline. Meantime Miss Hannah Peabody had come to Quincy Harbor, and Ananias had been smitten with her mature charms. There might be safety in courting a third maiden.

But Ananias was really in love tonight. The poem he had written burned in his pocket, and he could scarcely wait until they were under the lee of the wreck of the Hepsy B. before drawing the paper from his pocket and holding it to the light.

"Miss Peabody," he said diffidently, "I've got something to say to you, and I've put it into a pome; it's all true—just how I feel—and what I wrote!"

"Indeed?" gushed (and probably blushed) Miss Hannah Peabody. "You naughty, poetical Mr. Sline! Who would have suspected you of writing poetry!"

"Silly ninny!" hissed Em Bevis, who had guided her boat into the still water that filled the skeleton of the Hepsy B. Some of the hull remained, and that was all that hid the eavesdroppers from the lovers.

"Ahem!" Ananias cleared his throat and braced his shoulders.

"To My Lady Fare," he began.

"You dear, delicious man!" tittered Hannah Peabody.

"Oh, Hannah, be my lady fare,
To say this thing I'd hardly dare,
But you have smiled on me.
Tonight we will a-eeling go,
And while the boat rocks to and fro
I'll hold your dainty hand in mine
And look into your eyes divine.
And when I tell you of my love
Just when the moon is bright above
I wish that I could say this, Hannah,
In a finer, proper manner.
Indeed, I love you like my life,
Hannah, will you be my wife?"

The voice of Ananias ceased, and there was no sound save the slapping of the little waves against the hull of the Hepsy B.

"LET GO, HANNAH, LOVE!" BAWLED ANANIAS.

Then a delighted laugh broke from the nervous lips of Miss Hannah Peabody.

"Oh—oh—Ananias!" she cried sobbingly and held out her arms.

Ananias came toward her to receive his reward.

At that moment something happened. It was a turn of fate undreamed of by the lovers or the two jealous widows beyond the warped planks of the wreck.

A little tug had puffed into the harbor to make anchorage for the night. The hoarse boom of her whistle had interrupted Ananias' poem. And now as her lights neared the dock there came the heavy wash from her wake.

There came one long, wicked wave that lifted Ananias' craft and rocked it dizzily. Miss Peabody screamed lustily and clung to the little sailor.

"Let go, Hannah, love!" bawled Ananias, who was afraid of a woman and a rocking boat.

Came another wave, hissing and curling in crisp anticipation of the disaster it would create.

When the wave broke against the hull of the Hepsy B. Ananias and Miss Peabody were floundering in the water, while the two widows were rowing madly to their rescue.

It was Em Bevis' strong arm that caught hold of Miss Peabody's coat sleeve and dragged that half conscious lady to temporary refuge in the little boat.

But to Hetty Rowell fell the honors of the occasion.

From the boat she had climbed to the rotting timbers of the Hepsy B., and now she leaned over and helped Ananias to scramble to a seat beside her on the bulwarks.

"I say, Em," she called to Mrs. Bevis, with a cheeriness born of the situation, "you take Miss Peabody straight home and send Jim Lewis after Ananias and me. That boat's too small for four of us."

Em Bevis made no reply. She turned her boat toward the dark, and the little craft vanished in the gloom.

Ananias was shivering with cold.

"Drat that woman!" he muttered savagely. "Mrs. Rowell, she near drowned me! Deliver me from a woman who can't swim!"

"Every siren ain't a mermaid," purred Hetty Rowell, smiling into the darkness.

"And every mermaid ain't no siren, neither!" retorted Ananias sourly.

Em Bevis conveniently forgot to send Jim Lewis with a boat, and when the Widow Rowell awoke to this unpleasant realization she lifted her voice with that of her disgruntled boarder, and they finally attracted the attention of some fishermen, who rescued them from their unpleasant position.

Incidentally the rescue afforded an amusing story to go the rounds of the village, while it cemented the firm belief that Hetty Rowell would marry Ananias Sline in the end.

And Ananias begins to believe it himself.

Miss Peabody resigned her position the next day and went home.

And Em Bevis and the Widow Rowell are not on speaking terms.

EDISON AT 67 JUST LIKE A BOY

Ten Ounces of Food Fit Him For Fifteen Hour Work Day.

DON'T OVEREAT, HIS ADVICE

Senseless Stuffing Causes Ills and Impairs Energy, Declares Great Inventor—Saves Only What Would Be Salary of a Railroad President—Decries Mexican Intervention.

Thomas A. Edison, beginning his sixty-eighth year brimful of health and vigor, says that people eat too much and that's why they are always getting sick and worked out. In the course of an interesting interview the wizard of electricity said:

"I started in years ago to feed myself about ten ounces of food daily. I eat everything I like, but I don't eat much of any one thing. I persuaded Mrs. Edison that I had the right idea and after some argument she tried it and has kept right on."

Short Work Day—Fifteen Hours.

"How hard do you work now, Mr. Edison?" was asked by a reporter, speaking close to the inventor's right ear, for the man who produced the phonograph and perfected the telephone and who has solved wonderful problems in sound delicacy has been hard of hearing since boyhood when a Grand Trunk conductor boxed his ears for uncorking a bottle of phosphorus.

"Oh, I don't work hard any more," he said, with a chuckle. "I start in about 8:30 a. m. and keep at it until 12."

"Twelve, noon?"

"No; 12 midnight. You see, Mrs. Edison objected to my grinding, so she cut down my work hours. But I've got her pretty well trained now. Got her so she needs only five or six hours of sleep a day and nine to ten ounces of food. I get up about 6 usually and find something to play with until 12 or 1 o'clock. A young fellow like me with a lot of ideas in his head only needs five hours of sleep."

Can't Hold on to Cash.

"Is it a fair question, Mr. Edison," continued the reporter, "to ask what your income is from phonographs, the movies, storage batteries, incandescent lights, telephones and the many other inventions patented and commercialized?"

"Why, I'd tell you in a minute if I knew exactly myself, but I don't. The only way for me to get rich is to die. I make a whole lot of money, but I save only what would be a salary for a railroad president."

"A good railroad president?"

"Well, yes, a pretty good one. Money always had a habit of getting away from me, because I'm always experimenting, and that costs a heap. In my laboratory, where I sort of play with science and keep the toys I love best, I spend $200,000 a year. That's what my experimenting costs me. I've always been that way. When I sold to the Western Union the inventions I had got up for them—that was years ago—they gave me $100,000. But I knew I was a goner if I took all that money at once, so I made the agreement read that I was to get it in seventeen installments. They lasted over seventeen years, and I kept feeding 'em into the mill."

"Have you any special word to say to the United States?" Mr. Edison was asked.

"I should like to say," he replied, "that I hope the government will be slow about going into Mexico. We are big enough to stand a little humiliation, maybe, for humanity's sake. Let them fight it out down there, I say. That will be the best thing in the end.

"I truly believe the world is leaning more toward peace."

NEW KIND OF SMALL FLATS.

Designed to Utilize Wasted Space and Add to Comfort.

How flats may be made smaller and still be habitable—that is to say, rentable—is the question now engaging the attention of Cincinnati architects. Too much space is being wasted, in the opinion of owners.

There is a proposal to abolish bedrooms, in the larger sense of the word, but this does not necessarily mean that the new style of architecture will interfere with sleep. The plan is to provide facilities for sleeping, cooking and eating by means of cleverly designed closets surrounding a central living room.

The gross waste of space in flats is pointed out by a real estate dealer, who lives in a five room flat that takes up only the area of one average sized room. His flat consists entirely of closets built around the one room, which he uses as his library and parlor. A mirror is in each closet door. When he desires to eat he opens a door and presto! he is in his kitchen, consisting of china closet, a pantry and a gas stove, all on shelves. Behind another mirror is his dinner table folded against the wall. The bedroom and bathroom are also triumphs of ingenuity.

RESPONDED AT BOX 68 CALL

District Engineer Daniel J. Nyhan Passes Away

District Engineer Daniel J. Nyhan of Atlantic, passed away this morning at his home on Hancock street, after a long illness, aged 53 years. The condition of Engineer Nyhan for several weeks has been such that his death was expected at any time, but it happened this morning, while an alarm from Box 68 at 5.45 was ringing and the apparatus from the Atlantic station was rushing through Squantum street, almost by the home of Engineer Nyhan, that he breathed his last.

Engineer Nyhan had charge of the Atlantic district for some years, and when Chief Billings assumed office the first of the month, while it was known that Engineer Nyhan would probably never recover, he was appointed as one of the three district engineers, a compliment which was greatly appreciated by Engineer Nyhan and which served to brighten his last days.

Mr. Nyhan was born in St. John's N. B., in 1861, where he obtained his early education and learned the trade of a moulder, which he has since followed. Seeking for a larger field of labor he came to Boston in 1878, and a year later to Quincy, where he entered the employ of the Wollaston Foundry Co. where he was employed until 1895 when he opened a brass foundry at Wollaston which he has since carried on.

He has been interested in the fire department since 1880, when he became a member of Chemical 2, located at Atlantic; continuing with that company up to 1888.

He was assistant chief under Chief Walter H. Ripley, during his term of service under Mayor Fairbanks. He was also foreman of the Atlantic company under Chief Williams.

When Chief Packard was appointed by Mayor Sears in 1898, Mr. Nyhan was appointed an assistant engineer, which office he has held ever since, being re-appointed every year. In all his experience with the fire department he has proved himself an efficient fire fighter.

He was very popular with the residents of Ward Six and was affiliated with a number of organizations and societies. He was also up to a year ago president ofthe Norfolk County Branch of the Federation of Catholic societies and parishes, but declined re-election a year ago on account of ill health, and as a mark of appreciation of his work he was made vice president. He has also at various times held office in the Quincy Firemen's Relief Association. He leaves a widow and two daughters.

CAPTAIN FOR 25 YEARS

Dr. Kendall Guest of Boston Bicycle Club

Dr. W. G. Kendall, of Atlantic, the long time president of the Boston Bicycle club was dined and congratulated Saturday evening at the B. A. A. to commemorate the 25th anniversary of his service as captain of the club, although he said in accepting the gifts passed over to him that it was really his 27th year of service.

The club was organized at the time bicycling was in its prime and there was never a more enthusiastic bicycle rider than Dr. Kendall. His first wheel was one of the high kind and since that time he has had many wheels of various patterns and at his home in Atlantic can be seen every wheel he has owned, with the dates.

Dr. Kendall was presented with a large silver tankard, suitably engraved. He was also given a beautiful scarf pin of gold in the shape of the club's star badge, set with five tiny emeralds. The presentation was made by Quincy Kilby, the toastmaster, and in accepting the gift Dr. Kendall spoke briefly in a semi-humorous vein.

The many friends of Mrs. Charles H. Penniman, who has been confined to her home for several weks by illness, will be glad to learn that she is convalescent, although still unable to leave her home.

LADDERS TO BE TESTED

Chief Billings Thinks New Ladders Necessary

The breaking of a ladder at the fire at the New Jersey House Saturday has called attention to the condition of the remaining ladders on Truck 1, at the Central station. There were quite a number of visitors at the Central station, Sunday, among whom was Inspector of Buildings L. C. Merrill. Inspector Merrill after looking at the broken ladder said that the break was caused by dry rot.

According to Chief Billings about all the ladders are in the same condition, and the Chief said this noon that he intended to purchase some new ladders immediately. He will also see that all of the ladders in the department are thoroughly tested, according to the method used by the State and by the Boston fire department.

This test is made by resting the two ends of the ladders on wooden horses and then have a man jump up and down on the centre of the span. This is a very severe test, yet as noted above it is the same that is applied to all ladders in the Boston fire department. The general impression is that few of the ladders now in use in the department would stand this test.

Chief Billings told some of the Councilmen at City Hall, Monday night, that if the apparatus had been supplied with large rubber blankets that much of the water loss at fires could be preventedfl. He cited the case of the water damage at Woolworths store by the Sunday morning fire. Had the department been equipped with rubber blankets, the Chief said that he could have covered the counters in the store early in the fire and that the loss by water in this store would have been slight. He further sand that as soon as the budget passed he intended to purchase some rubber blankets for this purpose.

NO FRANCHISE FOR RAILROAD

Petition of West Quincy Company is Withdrawn

The committee on Railroads of the Legislature gave a hearing this morning on the petition of Theophilus King J. Winsor Davy, Andrew M. Deane and Alexander Falconer for a franchise for a freight railroad at West Quincy, to be known as the West Quincy Railroad Company.

The act would authorize the company to condemn and take land for railroad purposes, and cross streets and ways of Quincy, on approval of the Public Service Commission of Massachusetts.

Charles M. Ludden appeared for the petitioners, and John W. McAnarney, in behalf of the trustees of the estate of John Cashman, in opposition to granting the petition. When the hearing was called Mr. Ludden withdrew the petition. The committee will report leave to withdraw.

The petition sought to legalize the Quincy Quarry Railroad and its present location.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

Rev. Fr. Florence McCarthy, who has been temporarily assigned to St. John's parish during the illness of Rev. J. J. Casey, celebrated his first masses in this parish Sunday. Father McCarthy was one of six seminarians ordained to the priethood a few weeks ago by Cardinal O'Connell.

Father McCarthy is a Dorchester boy. He received his early education in the schools of that district and then entered Boston College High school. On the completion of the course he entered Boston college from which he graduated in 1909 after spending one year at Holy Cross college. Father McCarthy was an honor pupil in his class and was a ready debater.

He entered St. John's seminary at Brighton together with Rev. Fr. Thomas W. Buckley of West Quincy, both of whom were ordained on the same day. Father Buckley commenced his duties as curate at Lowell on Sunday.

THE STORM AT SQUANTUM

Squantum experienced the worst storm of the winter last night. Electric car service was almost completely tied up after 6 o'clock. The last regular trip from Neponset was made at 5 o'clock and on the next trip the car was stalled near the postoffice by a snow plow being stalled. Most of the passengers who came from Boston on the regular trains between 5 and 7 o'clock had to walk half way to their homes in the blinding snow storm. More snow fell at Squantum than in any storm of the past two winters.

The many friends of Mrs. Edward F. Eagar were deeply grieved to hear of her death on Sunday in St. Elizabeth's hospital in Dorchester. Mr. and Mrs. Eagar were summer residents of Squantum and owned two handsome bungalows on Harbor View street. Mrs. Eagar was taken ill about six months ago with a tumor at the base of the brain which caused her death. She was treasurer and a very active worker in Squantum Women's club. Her loss to the community is a very great one and Mr. Eagar has the deepest sympathy of the entire community in his great loss. Requiem high mass will be said at St. Mark's church Dorchester at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Bankers of World No Longer Will Allow Unnecessary Wars

By HENRY CLEWS, New York Banker

WAR today affects injuriously the whole world, frightens investors, drives capital into hiding or expends money into wasteful channels. The bankers of the world will NO LONGER ALLOW UNNECESSARY WARS to be waged. They hold the purse strings in our time. Their decisions in grave emergencies are final. KINGS AND RULERS ARE MERE FIGUREHEADS. The real power rests with those who control the finances of a nation.

Important News In Advertisements

By HOLLAND.

THE valuable news of the day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements. Of course it is important to know what President Wilson is doing, what the latest developments are in China or what baseball club leads the league. But it is also important to know where a bargain in boys' waists, garden hose, breakfast food or straw hats may be found.

These bits of commercial news are among the advertisements. Wise persons look for them and take advantage of them when they are doing their buying. The leading merchants are continually telling you news of their stores, news that is important because it often means a real saving and always means something new and worth while.

Read the advertisements if you seek important news. Read them regularly and always with the thought that back of each advertisement are the reputation and business standing of the merchant. He could not afford to deceive you even if he were so inclined.

TELLS OF ENGAGEMENT AT PEA RIDGE

Col. Edward Anderson Speaks at Meeting of First Parish Club

Horrors of War Told by One in Thick of it

For a time, Tuesday evening, the members of the First Parish club were transferred from the cosy chapel of the First church to the battlefield of Pea Ridge one of the early conflicts of the Civil war of which but little has been recorded in history and with Col. Anderson as their leader the vivid scenes of those trying days were vividly brought to mind.

This engagement was fought during the early days of March, or be more exact on March 6-8, 1862 between the Union forces under Gen. Curtis and the Confederates under Gen. Van Dorn resulting in the defeat of the Confederates. The scene of the battle was in a range of hills in Benton county, Arkansas, near the northwest corner of the state. Col. Anderson took a prominent part in that battle and he was an eye witness to many of the incidents which he described.

As usual the members of the club assembled at 6 o'clock in the lower room and at 6.30 a roast beef supper was served. The front of the head table on the platform was festooned with a large American flag while a second flag formed the background. Seated at this table besides the speaker of the evening and Rev. A. L. Hudson president of the club, were: Commander Chauncy M. Marstin, Past Commander Francis P. Loud, Surgeon James W. Pierce and Comrade Joseph A Lapham, of Post 88 G. A. R., who were special guests of the evening.

The dinner over, the doors back of the head table were raised, disclosing a camp scene. In the direct front were two stacks of guns while on one side was a three pole tent, and on the opposite side the standard of colors. Between these was a large American flag, while in the rear a cosy fire burned in the open fireplace; the whole making an imposing scene, appropriate to the occasion.

Just as President Hudson was about to introduce the speaker of the evening, the club broke out into song, singing that well known army song "Tenting tonight on the old camp ground." It was an impressive scene and could not help but thrill those present.

Col. Anderson apologized for using notes, saying that after 53 years and the forgetfulness due to one of four score years it was necessary especially when dealing with historic facts. In opening he said that the was delighted to be surrounded by

EASY FOR QUINCY HIGH

Defeated Reading 30 to 8---Victory for Seniors

Quincy High beat Reading in an Interscholastic league basket ball game in the High school gym Tuesday 30 to 8, and the Senior class defeated the Junior 14 to 10, and tied them for the lead in the Interclass contests.

The Reading team was defeated with ease although the first period was one of the deadest ever passed on the local floor. Quincy resorted to short passing with an indefiniteness of direction and purpose which was noticeable to a marked degree. The period closed 14 to 3 in Quincy's favor.

During the second period the passing was of a better brand and Quincy rolled up 16 points to 5 for the visitors. Captain Jenkins wrenched his left ankle and was obliged to retire. He was succeeded by Martin. Earl Bates who made 12 of Quincy's' points was withdrawn in the last five minutes and Whet Brown substituted.

But little can be said of Reading's performance. They demonstrated that they had some knowledge of passing, but their shooting was very poor. Time and again they failed to make the most of good opportunities. Beyond a doubt the ball was in the air oftener during this game than any that have been played, but sharp shooting was conspicuous only by its absence, although several pretty goals were contributed by Bates, Leon White and Jenkins.

Contrary to expectations the Howard brothers of the visiting team did not play with the whirlwind style with which they are credited. Fouls were called frequently by Referee Coady, but the offenses were minor ones. The summary:

QUINCY		READING
Bates rf		lb Kingman
Brown rf
Jenkins lf		rb Judkins
Martin lf
White c		c A. Howard
Hamlin rb		lb McLeod
		lf McKenzie
Crocker lb		rf Hutchins
		rf P. Howard

Score—Quincy, 30; Reading, 8. Goals from floor Jenkins 2, Bates 4, White 5, Hamlin, McLeod, Hutchins, Brown. Goals from fouls—Bates 4, Judkins 3, A. Howard. Referee Coady. Scorer Atwood.

THE INTERCLASS GAME.

The Seniors took the lead from the blowing of the whistle and led the Juniors 5 to 4 at the close of the first period. Toward the close of the game the difference of four points between the teams looked unusually small, but no Junior tossed two baskets to make a tie. "Kip" Young made the only hair raising goal of the day when he shot a basket on a direct pass half the length of the court. The summary:

SENIORS		JUNIORS
Matheson rf		lb Morrison
		lb Bowen
Cummings lf		rb Davis
Stedman c		c Roach
Anderson rb		lf McDonald
Sutermeister rb
Young lb		rf Crosscup

Score—Seniors, 14; Juniors 10. Goals from floor—Stedman 3, Young 2 Davis, Morrison, Roach. Goals from fouls—Matheson 4 Davis 3, Roach.

TOOK RAT POISON.

Mrs. Peter Benzie who took rat poison at her home on Larry place Tuesday afternoon is doing well at the Quincy City Hospital this morning. The attempt occurred at three o'clock and is said to have followed a series of domestic troubles. Dr. John H. Ash was not summoned until seven o'clock and he immediately ordered her removal to the hospital. The police auto patrol broke down on the way and an ambulance of John Hall's took the woman the remaining distance. Mrs. Benzie is 45 years of age and lives with her husband. They have several children.

IDEAL WINTER DAY.

It would be hard to find a more beautiful winter day than today. The temperature is higher than it has been for several days and the bright sun and lack of wind has made it a very pleasant day to be out. Although the temperature and sun are high, there is just enough crispness in the air to make it invigorating.

NAVY YARD TO BUILD SHIP

Contract Awarded to Boston by Secretary Daniels

It will be good news to many Quincy men, employed at the Boston Navy Yard to learn that Secretary Daniels has awarded the contract to the yard for building the supply ship for the Navy department. The cost of construction, as estimated by the department was $1,425,000, and the bid of the Boston Yard was $1,171,713. The government will expend $148,000 in equipping the yard for construction of the supply ship, and the yard will be fully fitted for the building of other ships in the future.

It is reported that at the present time there are about 75 Quincy men employed at the yard and when the building of this ship is commenced, employment wil doubtless be given many others, and as there are in Quincy at the present time many skilled mechanics in the ship building art, they doubtless will seek, and probably obtain employment at the yard. The announcement of the award of the contract was made following a fifteen minute conference with Gov. Walsh.

To build the ways it is estimated that about six months will be needed, and that employment will be given to about 500 of the men now on the list of workmen at the yard. The construction of the supply ship thus cannot begin before fall, and when it does start it will mean the employment of about 2400 men instead of 3500 as has been estimated, in the opinion of the naval constructors.

The ways will be built, it is thought, in the eastern portion of the navy yard where it will not be in the way of the docks that flank the big dry dock.

Washington dispatches say that work will begin very soon in preparation for building slips. Secretary Daniels believes an appropriation of $148,000 for marine corps barracks can be made available within a month. He added his opinion that the award means Boston is to be a shipbuilding yard from this time on.

Philadelphia won the contract for construction of the Navy transport at $1,458,305.

In announcing the award of the supply ship contract to Boston, Secretary Daniels said:

"This decision is based upon the revised estimates as received from the yards interested. The Boston yard estimated that it could construct the supply ship at that yard for $1,171,713, whereas the lowest bid received from a private contractor was $1,315,000 from the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company.

The supply ship is to be 400 feet long, 55 feet beam and 21 feet draft. It will be fitted with cold storage spaces for the transportation of refrigerated meats, cooled vegetables and a large quantity of ice. It is designed to accompany a fleet of eight battleships and to supply them with provisions and stores for a period of two months.

The evening was well enjoyed by all and many had the pleasure of meeting old friends.

HORSE STOLEN FROM STABLE

Horse thieves, operating in West Quincy are thought to be responsible for the disappearance of a horse from the stable of John Casey during the blizzard Monday night. No trace has been obtained as yet. An open stable door, which had been securely fastened by the man who has the stable in charge, attracted attention Tuesday morning and an investigation showed that the horse was missing. The animal is a bay and is valued at $250. He was owned by William Ward and was being used by Mr. Casey on a grocery wagon. The loss of the horse has been reported and is supposed to have occurred late at night, because the watchman states that he left only a short time before midnight after having bedded the horse and thrown him hay, most of which was eaten.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

During recent years an enormous share of the savings made by people of quite moderate means has been invested in stocks that are more or less speculative. Many people never grasp the difference between bonds and stocks. If a security bears the name of some prominent corporation, they do not ask how their interest stands related to that of other investors.

The collapse of such securities as the New Haven and Boston and Maine railroads must lead many small investors to greater caution. They should reflect that when they buy stock they merely buy a share of the profits after all expenses and debts are paid. If this narrow margin is wiped out, they not merely lose the dividend, but the price of the stock falls and much of their capital is gone.

But when they buy a bond they buy a prior claim to the income of the company, taking precedence of all classes of stock. The company must at maturity pay the debt in full or confess bankruptcy.

The illusive mirage of "rights" has been a golden hope that led investors into stocks. The companies had a delightful habit of assembling the children once in about so often, and carving rich and juicy "melons."

Most melons nowadays turn out to be lemons. The green pastures in which the corporations used to find milk and honey are today stubborn soils. The cost of operating any kind of a plant is increasing. The public will not permit exceptional profit to public service corporations. It sometimes seems as if it was hostile to a living dividend.

So the small investor does well to cut out dim visions of "rights" and advapces, and prefer definite obligations that repay dollar for dollar. It is perhaps significant of this tendency that the past few weeks has seen much strength in standard bonds.

THE UNEMPLOYED.

Jacob S. Coxey of Massillon O., announces that he is going to raise this spring a new "Coxey's army," to march on Washington to impress the government officials with the need of better legislation. May 1 will be the anniversary of the Coxey army march 20 years ago.

These periodical parades of the "unemployed" have serio-comic elements characteristic of our picturesque American life. Yet there is nothing funny about the general question of unemployment. While the number of "out of works" is constantly aggravated by unwise legislation and needless business fears there seems to be a steadily increasing inability of our industrial system to provide regular work.

Recent statistics from New York state show that 87 per cent of the manufacturers get help by sticking cards in the windows. The ability to attract labor in this way indicates a constant idle reserve drifting about the streets.

The smaller type of factories formerly so common were much more steady in operation. Turning off an industrious mechanic was regarded as almost as disgraceful as bankruptcy. To confess that you had no work for him was interpreted by the community as showing mismanagement or lack of hustling for orders.

Today manufacturing firms fluctuate in number of help employed. The fellow who is dropped begins search for work with grim determination. After rebuffs he loses his nerve. Lack of nourishing food constant worry about his family gives his face a wild look of strain. With frousy clothes he looks like a tramp to the man who hires help.

Many states have established employment agencies. Too often managed by politicians, they have been inefficient. There is a valuable suggestion in the fact that the labor exchanges recently established in England filled 1500 jobs daily during their second year.

CURITYBA NOT READY TO SAIL

No Crew Shipped For Voyage to "Promised Land"

"CHIEF SAM" IS ON BOARD

Says He Is Afraid of Reporters and Wouldn't Say When He Was Going to Start For Gold Coast Even If He Knew—Many Followers With Him, Wtih More to Come

New York, Feb. 18.—"Chief Sam," leader of the proposed expedition of negroes to the Gold Coast of Africa, is on board the old steamship Curityba, purchased for the voyage, but he said he did not know when the vessel would get under way. It is planned to make the trip via Galveston, where recruits will join the party.

More than sixty negroes have been quartered on the Curityba for several days. Sam has only just joined them. He refused to discuss his expedition other than to say that the purchase of the vessel was an earnest of his good faith.

During the cold spell the negroes on shipboard have been sticking close to the boiler room. She is docked in Brooklyn.

When Sam arrived the patient members of the Akim Trading company, Ltd., had visions once more of India rubber and palm oil along the Gold Coast.

Two more negroes climbed up the gangplank, each with a bundle of daily papers, which were laid out before the boiler room councillors. Sam listened while one of his sons read. His regal brows contracted. His tribal pride was wounded.

A stout white man, the only one on board apparently, looked at Sam with an "I told you so" nod. The councillors whispered to each other in twos and threes, and sidled nearer the boilers. That was the council of war.

A reporter who was introduced to Sam found him to be a medium-sized, well-built negro, very black indeed. The conversation was not profitable to the visitor, Sam being grieved by all the newspapers.

"Dat's all, dey hab ruined me," said Sam, his indignation spoiling his English. "I won't say one syllable moe. Who thinks I'd buy a boat and then flee?. I'm not crazy. Dey twisted my facts so I neber knew dem myself. I tell you man, I'm afraid of reporters, and I won't talk. No, sir, I don't know when I'm going to sail, and anyhow I wouldn't say if I did."

This left the mystery unexplained. Chief Sam is aboard, but the Curityba has no crew as yet, and no one knows when it will weigh anchor and depart.

Some 500 negroes have beeen waiting a long time down at Galveston for the vessel to take them to the promised land on the Gold Coast of Africa.

HELD ON DEATH CHARGE

Jury Thinks Dr. Griffith Caused the Death of Musician Robinson

Greensburg, Pa., Feb. 18.—Dr. Martin E. Griffith was held for further investigation by the coroner on the recommendation of a jury, which found that William L. Robinson, a musician, died as a result of an operation by Griffith.

Three physicians testified that Robinson's death was due to Bright's disease, which developed after the assault by Griffith. Dr. McKay, who assisted in the post-mortem, said Robinson died from blood poisoning, probably induced by an operation without antiseptic treatment.

Griffith assaulted Robinson, according to his own statement, after having found him attacking his (Griffith's) wife.

ILLITERATE VOTERS OF AMERICA MIGHT CONTROL.

Report to Congress Shows 2,273,603 Men Who Cannot Read.

"The proportion of the wholly illiterate adults among the population of the United States is a national disgrace which can be very quickly eliminated," declares a unanimous report from the house education committee on the Lever bill to investigate illiteracy. The bill, which carries no appropriation, authorizes the commissioner of education to co-operate in a concerted movement involving field and clerical service with the states, individuals and associations to "obliterate the stain and reproach of illiteracy."

Commissioner Claxton of the federal bureau of education has expressed the belief that illiteracy could be cut to a fraction of 1 per cent, and Representative Towner of Iowa in submitting the committee report predicted it would be accomplished with little delay.

The report of the commissioner shows the number of illiterates in the United States to be 3,184,954 whites ten years old or more at the census of 1910, exceeding the population of the country in 1800.

"There are 2,273,603 illiterate males of twenty-one years and over in the United States," it is pointed out, "or enough to determine any national election at any period of United States history." France, by quick, concerted action, reduced its number of adult illiterates from 45 in 100 to 5 in 100, the report adds.

DIED NAILED TO CROSS.

Spanish Authorities Found a Man Was Thus Killed In Prison.

The Spanish prisoners' committee, recently formed under the auspices of the government, has issued a strong manifesto against the infamous treatment meted out in Spanish prisons to the unfortunate inmates, many of them being there on account of their advanced ideas. The following extracts from the manifesto will give some idea of what is complained of:

"The director of a prison at Figueras (Catalonia), a man named Milena, has had a subterranean dungeon built in order to be able to vent his hatred. This new cell is known as the 'Siberia.' The prisoner who is taken there is bound and beaten until he falls insensible. He is then put into another cell apart from the others until his wounds heal, and he is there made to fast until he is hungry enough to eat the salt codfish given him in order to make him feel the pangs of thirst.

"Recently a prisoner was nailed to a cross. He died. Another has had an eye gouged out, a third an arm broken. Still another had pieces of flesh torn off him. The cries of the victim were heard outside the fortress.

"Marcelino Saurez, who carried on an energetic campaign against these atrocities, was put in prison and is still kept there out of the way."

WOULD SELL HER CORPSE.

Family In Desperate Straits Leads Woman to Make Offer.

To save her husband and their three-year-old daugther from starvation Mrs. Edward Hart of St. Louis will sell her body after death for $300. She made the offer in this letter received by the head of the anatomical laboratory of the College of Physicians and Surgeons:

"I am badly in need of money for my husband, a railroad man, who lost his position because of being in a wreck and who is unable to find employment. If I do not get money soon I will be put on the street and starve. I would like to know if I can sell my body to the medical college for $300."

"Of course I do not want to die," said Mrs. Hart. "but I might as well die and thereby aid my family and science as to die of starvation and deprivation."

LETTER FROM JAPAN.

(From the Braintree Observer.)

Editor of Observer.

My last letter to you was from Gotemba where in the hot summer months we do our work, escaping the heat of the lowland cities. My letters before that were from our home in Tottori, on the west coast of Japan, near the Japan Sea. But after living there for five years it seemed best to us and to our Mission to locate us in this town which is at the south-east corner of the southern most of the four main islands of Japan proper. The sea which is so near that we can hear the breakers after a heavy storm, is the Pacific Ocean; there is nothing between us and California except water (plus a vast amount of ill will on the part of Californians towards the Japanese!) But I will leave a description of the place to another letter: my present purpose is to tell how we got here.

For the past year or two a branch of the main Kyushu Railway has been bringing passengers for Miyazaki to a town about 30 miles away. A ten hour journey by horse-'bus, or a three hour one by auto-'bus brings one here. But the railway journey is tedious and expensive; we prefer the water route when the water is quiet. Usually, as the way is through the Inland Sea, whose beauty is of international fame, the waves are quiet. But, as the sequel will show, this quietness is not to be relied upon. However it is more convenient, less fatiguing and cheaper to go by boat, and so that is the usual way. This time we had an added reason for not taking the train: all four children had the whooping cough. We knew that it would be a far different thing for them to be in a private cabin on the boat from being on the train.

There are two ways to come by boat, and two ports for the town. The old port is Hososhima 45 miles to the north. A very tiring omnibus ride of 10 hours is required at the end. The new port is Uchiumi, 12 miles to the south, and connected by the brand new light railway with Miyazaki. Naturally one prefers to land at the latter; the trouble is that the fast boats from Kobe stop only at the former. There one changes in the middle of the night to the small boat which takes him to the new port. Only it frequently happens that they fail to make the connection, and then one must wait 24 hours for the next boat or else come by the tiring 'bus. This last is what happened to the man who is to be especially connected with me as my evangelist and teacher. Not thinking it wise to change boats in the middle of the night with four whooping cough patients on my hands, we decided to take the slower boat which ought to take 24 hours longer in going but which was scheduled to land us at the new port without change.

It was the second of January when we started; the day was bright, warm and windless. We congratulated ourselves, though we knew that it does not take many hours for a storm to blow up. But by the time we reached Kobo, two hours away from Kyoto by rail there was both wind and rain. I went to the weather observation station where I was informed by the polite man in charge that the wind would subside in a few hours, that the center of depression was moving, etc., etc. I believed him and at 8 o'clock in the evening when the boat started we were all snugly stowed away in the cosy staterooms of the "Beppu-Maru." But the wind did not die down; it rather increased, and the next day spent on that little steamer of 800 tons was one of discomfort. Besides, the wind being dead ahead, we lost time, 8 hours in all.

After we had been aboard for 30 hours the capttain "piled her up" on a breakwater, and he had to wait for high tide to help float us off. This lost us another 8 hours. The captain had to await orders from headquarters in Osaka as to whether we were to proceed even as far as Hososhima, but we finally went on to that port, and had to disembark.

It had taken us just 36 hours longer than if we had taken the fast boat; and as we had to change we had reaped no advantage at all, except that the going ashore was in the daytime instead of the night. But if we had had good luck on the fast boat we should have gone right from one boat to the other without going ashore at all. As it was we waited at the hotel at Hososhima from noon till late evening when they permitted us to embark as a special favor, as the boat was not to sail till one A. M. As a matter of fact she waited till the captain came aboard at three A. M. It was the joyous New year season when it is a sin not to partake of the gladsome cup. I fear the captain had not been guilty of the sin of omission!

Well, the start having been 2 hours late, the landing was also. But meanwhile the sea was very heavy, this same Pacific Ocean it was now, as we had got beyond the sheltering land of the Inland Sea. Besides in this boat there were no staterooms. There was only one general room on whose soft floor we all lay and tried to forget our misery. Fortunately it was only a six hour run. We reached Uchiumi in time to see the train our friends expected us on steam out of the station. So they might enjoy themselves as best they might for the next two hours, while we got some breakfast and a little equanimity after the sorrows of the night.

We found many friends at the station to welcome us and when we reached our new home we found that our kind colleagues, the Clarks, had prepared our house so that we had our own stoves and furniture and beds already in place, and Mrs. Clark's cook was preparing our dinner which we ate in our own house, from our own dishes. All that we needed to do to completely furnish the house was to open our baggage and unpack the bedding. It was a warm welcome and a good home coming; and we appreciated it after such a journey as we had had.

Our thankfulness was further increased by the fact that the very night after we landed a storm arose to which our breeze was a mere infant in comparison. This storm did real damage to shipping, as the ferry at Straits of Shimonoseki was closed all day and one overloaded coasting steamer sank with over 100 passengers. Manifestly the weather is undependable at this time of year. In the early summer and fall when we shall usually be going considerably more reliance can be placed upon it.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

"The Last Days of Pompeii" is the attraction at Music hall which closes its successful engagement tonight. The scenes of the photo drama are taken from the book of the same name by Sir Bulwer Lytton, which no one who has read and been thrilled by this novel should fail to see while it is on exhibition and the pictures deserve patronage by critical patrons of this form of amusement. The classic love story told in the novel is followed closely and the scenes are true to environment for they were taken in Pompeii while the films depicting the destruction of the ancient city by the volcanic eruption are from views of Vesuvius when it was in action during the terrible Messina disaster a few years ago and are vivid in effect and lurid in coloring.

The pictures tell with strict fidelity the pathetic story of the hopeless love of Nydia, the blind flower girl for Glaucus, the nobleman, and the romance element is strong in it while the scenic beauties and splendors of the times and places depicted are a feature that fascinates and holds attention quite as much as the story itself. The pictures of the interiors of palaces and temples, and of the streets of ancient "Pompeii" are rich and beautiful, while the circus scenes are magnificent and astounding in their magnitude and vigor.

DANGER AFTER GRIPPE

Lies in Poor Blood, Cough and Worn-Out Condition.

Grippe, pleurisy, pneumonia are greatly to be feared at this season.

To prevent grippe from being followed by either pleurisy or pneumonia, it is important to drive the last traces of it out of the system.

Our advice is to take Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil, and get your strength and vitality back quickly.

W. W. Lake of Aberdeen, Miss., says: Grippe left me weak, run-down and with a severe cough from which I suffered for a long time. I tried different remedies, but nothing seemed to do me any good until I took Vinol from which I received great benefit. My cough is almost entirely gone and I am strong and well again."

Try Vinol with the certainty that if it does not benefit you we will give back your money. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

February is a short month but many good things are crowded into it in club as well as social life. Two of the best meetings of the Quincy Women's club occur this month, the dramatics and the annual musicale, both at Quincy Music hall.

The dramatics are now of the past but the musicale comes off next Tuesday afternoon. The doors open at one o'clock and the musicale will begin at two. Club members are asked to note that the musicale is to begin promptly at two o'clock and will be followed later in the afternoon by the usual business session of the club.

Y. M. C .A. AUXILIARY.

Miss Mathilda Brown, home missionary of Boston, gave a most interesting talk to the ladies and friends of the Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary, Feb. 13. Mrs. Wilson Marsh led the devotional exercises taking for her subject: "Social service," paving the way for Miss Brown who followed with "The work for the incoming immigrants."

Miss Brown being once a stranger herself in a strange land knows how to extend the glad hand to the helpless new comers, meet them at the gateway of our great country and bid them welcome. Twenty-two years ago Miss Brown came from Sweden and for years since her arrival here has watched daily for the big steamers to rome into port landing hundreds of steerage passengers into her care. Miss Brown's work is a noble one and should have the hearty support of all who believe in brotherly love. Mrs. Celia McKay, Mrs. W. A. Thompson and Mrs. A. J. Podbury of the Park and Downs church and Mrs. Arthur Crowley of South Quincy were the hostesses.

WOLLASTON WOMAN'S CLUB.

A splendidly attended meeting of the Wollaston Woman's club gathered at the Wollaston Unitarian church Tuesday afternoon to hear Dr. Berle, and to discuss the most important business of the season "Shall we or shall we not build a clubhouse?"

The proposition offered by the Sachem club was so liberal that it filled the wants of all, and a unanimous vote was taken, that for some time to come, as long as the Sachem club lasted the Wollaston Woman's club would be in relation to them as brother to sister..

Charles M. Bryant gave a clear and concise plan of the clubhouse which left no doubt in the minds of members as to its being the most feasible thing to do.

The large newspaper proposition by the Telegram was spoken of. So far the returns and work make a good showing.

The Hospitality committee, Mrs. A. P. Thompson, chairman, presented the club with two silver tea urns of unique workmanship, for which a rising vote of thanks was extended them.

The dramatics on May 5 to have been given in the Wollaston School hall, have had to be changed to Quincy Music hall and to May 6 owing to new fire regulations.

Following the business session a splendid musical program was rendered by a double quartet from the Glee club, composed of Mrs. H. Y. Follett, Miss Ruth S. Hardy, Mrs. Anna J. Titus, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Hendry, Miss Dorothy Sayward, Mrs. O. A. Blaisdell and Mrs Kendall, with Mrs. Edith Barry at the organ. "A bed time song" by Nevin and "Ching-a-ring-a-ring" by Molloy were rendered with splendid unity and rhythm.

Mrs. Charles R. Safford introduced Dr. A. A. Berle D. D., professor at Tufts college, who gave a most interesting discourse on his experience of 20 years before legislative Councillors.

A social hour following the adjournment of the meeting was held in the vestry, where tea and fancy cakes were served.

OTTILIE METZGER—APOLLO CLUB

Sunday afternoon is bringing to Boston a German contralto who is said to be the greatest singer of her class that Germany has produced since Schumann-Heink. This is Ottilie Metzger and curiously enough she is the principal contralto of the Hamburg Opera of which Schumann-Heink was for many years a member indeed practically her whole career was spent there before she came to America a dozen years ago. Madame Metzger is said to have a voice of true, rich organ-like quality an honest contralto of which there seem to be comparatively few nowadays.

In the programme with Madame Metzger will be associated the famous Apollo Club of Boston, organized 40 odd years ago by the late B. J Lang and now under the leadership of Emil Mellenhauer is one of the foremost male choruses of the country. The general public has seldom opportunity to hear it as its concerts are usually semi-private affairs. A good male chorus is always a delight to the music lover The programme is as follows:—

Lochinvar — Hammond
Obbligato Solo — Alfred F. Denghausen and Apollo Club
Der Zwerg — Schubert
Volkslied — C. M. von Weber

BATES DECLARED INSANE

Man Who Had "Soul-Mate" Refers to Himself as the Deity

Haverhill, Mass, Feb. 18.—Lorul M. Bates, who claimed that Mrs. Rose Manning was his soul-mate, was adjudged insane by Judge Winn and ordered committed to the state hospital for insane at Westboro. In letters shown to the judge Bates referred to himself as "God."

His "soul-mate" was banished from Haverhill and allowed her freedom after Boston friends agreed to take care of her. The statutory charge, upon which she had been found guilty, was placed on file. She was allowed to take her child, which had been complained of as neglected.

Mrs. Bates, against whom a neglect charge had been made, was allowed to have her four children. The charge was dismissed. She will be aided by friends.

THREATEN DEATH AND KIDNAPPING

Three Blackmailing Letters Sent to a Boston Couple

Boston, Feb. 18.—Three letters threatening death to the parents and the kidnapping of their two children have been received by Henry W. Longfellow, a builder who lives in the Allston district, and his wife.

The letters demanded that $10,000 be placed under a stone in the lot at Warren and Allston streets, and stated that if this order was not complied with both Longfellow and his wife would be killed with a bomb, which would be placed under their home.

Last Saturday night a decoy box was placed at the spot indicated in the letters, in the hope the person who wrote the threats might be captured. The box contained washers. Six policemen carefully watched the place, but no one put in an appearance.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

TO RESIGN JUNE FIRST

Mayor of Boston Will Give Up Seat In Congress on That Date

Boston, Feb. 18.—Mayor Curley last night announced that he would resign from congress on June 1, the date set by Majority Leader Underwood for the adjournment of the house.

The mayor explained that he would do this in order to save the city the expense of holding a special election to fill the vacancy. If he resigns in June the precept for the election of a successor to fill out his short term will be issued setting the date for the state election day in November.

At the same time the man who fills out the long term will be elected. In this way the two elections can be held at the same time, saving approximately $12,000 to the city.

LEADERS A TIE K. C. LEAGUE

Grand Rally By Fallon in the Final Match

The Avery and Fallon teams of the Knights of Columbus league remained tied for the title after the rolloff to decide the tie that developed in the closing matches of the league at the City Square alleys Tuesday night. The finals will be rolled probably on next Tuesday night. The league tie came about through the Coyles defeat of the Averys 3 to 1 and the Fallons defeat of the Sullivans 4 to 0. The extra match favored the Fallons in the first two strings, but the Averys took the third and the team total.

Paul Poehler, champion small ball roller of the world referred the matches, and saw two of the league records smashed. Fallon, who held the single record with 112, broke the pins for 118, and the Coyles jumped the team total record from 1299 to 1319.

The teams finished with the Averys and Fallons having 27 wins and 21 losses apiece. The Coyles landed in third place with 23 wins and 25 losses, and the Sullivans in the cellar with 19 wins and 29 losses. The Averys and Fallons now stand 29 wins and 23 losses each.

The final match was featured by the bowling of Paul Avery, who had 28 in his fourth box on the first string and closed with 113. He got a strike on top of a spare and a 17 spare on the strike.

—Somebody has given the Kansas City public library 500 rolls of music that may be taken home to put on the piano player, and thereby a new departure for libraries has been inaugurated. The music is to be circulated under the rules governing the taking out of books. The selections contain no ragtime, which Librarian Wright says is to be barred in future gifts or purchases. The man who thought to make libraries educational in music may have set a fashion that will be widely followed. The need for setting up an opposition to ragtime music is at least plain.—Taunton Herald.

BIG PINFALL AT WEST QUINCY

Team Single and Grand Total Records Broken

Exceptional bowling resulted in the St. Mary's Division 22 match on the St. Mary's alleys Tuesday night in the West Quincy league. The rooters, armed with cow bells and horns created a din which seemed almost to rock the building and it was like "Bedlam let loose" when the grand total showed that St. Mary's had reached 1528, the highest mark ever attained in this city. In so doing they set a record of 557 for a team single which will stand for some time to come. Only one man failed to triple on the winning team.

High single was made by T. Joyce who got 123. Frank McPherson one of the younger bowlers of the city shot 329 after three strings that cleared the centuries. The men on Division 22 team gave up hopes after the tallying of the second team single but gamely plugged on and despite the attendant excitement netted 449. The summary:

Sports are a regular feature of the Daily Ledger. Some events will be illustrated.

The hockey team of Quincy High school were defeated in the Cunningham rink, Tuesday afternoon by Milton High school, 10 to 3. Nine goals for the winners were scored by Sweeney, Gustafson and Simpson. Sawyer and Captain O'Donnell excelled for Quincy. Others that played for Quincy were Simmons, Crocker, Rice, Deane and Torrey.

Once again the Quincy A. A. team has been nosed out of first place in the N. E. A. A. A. U. basket ball league. The slide took place Tuesday night when the first team lost to St. Josephs T. A. S. of the West End, Boston, by a score of 15 to 3. The Quincy second team lost also to the St. Josephs second 18 to 16, in a game that required a five minute overtime period. Sid Duggan scored all the points for the first team. One woman spectator fainted after two players bumped into her, near the ropes.

FIVE DEAD IN WRECK OF BARK

Three Frozen Bodies Left In Rigging of the Castagna

LIFE-SAVERS RESCUE EIGHT

Vessel Strikes on Outer Bar of Cape Cod During Snowstorm and Sixty-Mile Gale—Benumbed Sailors Unable to Handle Breeches Buoy Tackle Shot Across Deck

Wellfleet, Mass., Feb. 18.—Captain Garva and four sailors perished when the Italian bark Castagna struck on the outer bar of Cape Cod, a mile and a half south of the Cahoon's Hollow life saving station.

Eight men, nearly unconscious from exposure, were brought ashore by the life savers, but the frozen bodies of three were left in the rigging, where the men had lashed themselves to avoid being carried overboard by the heavy seas. Garva was washed overboard and drowned. One sailor died in the lifeboat.

The Castagna, from Montevideo for Boston with phosphate rock, struck during a snowstorm and sixty-mile gale. The beach patrol sighted her 300 yards off shore, with the surf breaking over her.

The combined life saving crews from the Nauset and Cahoon's Hollow stations set up their beach gun and shot three lines across the Castagna's deck, but the sailors were so benumbed by the cold that they were unable to handle the breeches buoy tackle.

The gale had moderated to thirty miles an hour, but the surf was so high that the life savers had to wait some time before they were able to launch their surfboat and pull out to the wreck against wind, sea and biting cold.

The frost-bitten seamen were hurried to warm quarters in the Marconi radio station, where the operators assisted in caring for the almost helpless survivors. The women at the station had hot coffee and food waiting for them when they arrived.

None of the mariners except the mate could speak English, but all evidenced their gratitude for the attention shown them by the life savers and the Marconi force.

Captain Tobin of the Cahoon's Hollow station was badly injured by the overturning of the lifeboat. The loss of life was the largest in a wreck on Cape Cod in twelve years.

The Castagna until recently was the Italian bark Giovanni B. and was originally the Loch Cree. She was built in 1874 in Port Glasgow and is 197 feet long, with a net register of 843 tons.

Survivors In Critical Condition

Boston, Feb. 18.—Suffering severely from frostbite and exposure, the eight survivors of the Italian bark Castagna arrived in Boston last night on a special hospital train, and were rushed to the Carney hospital.

Three of the men are dying and three others are in a critical condition. Luigi Olivari, the first mate, will have one hand and one arm amputated, and even then probably cannot recover. Luigi Bianghi and Josef Loto it is also feared cannot live. Giovanni Marloni, Carlo Zuisi and Nils Halverson are in a critical condition. All these men may have to undergo amputations. The others, whose condition is not so bad, are Angelo Todoroff and Garabaldi Morisin.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

STRONG MINDED

A Third, Ordinary Person Proved a Dark Horse

By F. A. MITCHEL

How Edgar Marston met and wooed Julia Spingler does not pertain to this story. It is sufficient to say that he won her consent to their marriage when she was passing out of her teens and her ideas of the stand she should take in the world were in embryo. Soon after her engagement Julia fell under the influence of Margaret Halsted, an elderly unmarried lady—to avoid the unpleasant term old maid—who wrought a considerable change in her.

Miss Halsted was what was called a strong minded woman till the more pleasing term "new woman" was invented. Under the tutelage of the stronger, or at least the more developed, intellect Julia conceived a different notion from what she had held of the part of women in the universe. That it was a woman's part alone to bear children she did not believe. Under the new dispensation the professions were open to the gentler sex, and she saw no more reason why a woman should not enter them than a man. After consultation with her mentor she resolved to become a lawyer.

Marston was not considered bright, but was universally respected. Some of Julia's intimate friends who looked upon her as a talented girl wondered how she could fancy one who was intellectually her inferior. He regretted that she had entered a field which has been occupied almost exclusively by men, for he was not up to the new departure. He had looked forward to having a wife who would rely on him to provide the home and on herself to run it smoothly. Being one of those persons who believe in the adage "All things come to those who wait," he took no action upon his fiancee's becoming a lawyer, leaving the matter of his relationship with her to work itself out.

Julia consulted Miss Halsted with reference to her engagement with Marston, but did not act on her advice, which was to remain single. The fable of the fox who had lost its tail suggested itself to the pupil, and she saw no reason why because a woman adopted a profession she should give up wifehood and motherhood, so she continued her engagement.

But while pursuing her studies Julia listened to a course of lectures from an eminent member of the bar, by whom she was very much impressed. It seemed after hearing the keen logic of Cyrus Underwood that Edgar's talk was extremely commonplace. Mr. Underwood, who was a bachelor in middle age, took a great fancy to Julia and, not being aware of her engagement, showed her attention.

Julia, who realized that she was bound in honor to Marston and was extremely fond of him, now entered upon one of those periods of indecision that are extremely trying. But whatever there was in him was not glittering and did not appear to advantage beside the brilliant mind of Underwood. In her perplexity Julia made a confidant of Margaret Halsted.

Perhaps if she wished for advice she would have done better to go to a married woman who had had experience in such matters. But even this would not have been likely to avail anything, for Julia was pretty likely to make up her own mind about what she would do in her own affairs without the advice of any one. However, Miss Halsted gave her a couple of pictures, the one of a union with a commonplace man, the other with a brilliant lawyer with whom she might in time be a partner not only matrimonially, but professionally. It must be confessed that this second picture was very attractive. Julia saw herself and her husband working together on interesting cases, each assisting the other with suggestions and oftentimes supplying each other's deficiencies.

It was this that finally determined Julia to break with Edgar Marston and accept Cyrus Underwood. Relying on a certain sense of justice she had observed in the former, she laid the case before him, telling him that she saw in a union with Underwood a brilliant future for herself, and, though it pained her to pain Edgar, she thought that in justice to herself she should make the change. But on no account would she do so unless Edgar assured her that he thought her perfectly right in the matter.

If Marston had a fault it was not in opposing persons whose minds were made up. He said that her problem was altogether too deep for him to solve, but if it was better for her to marry a lawyer it was certainly better for himself that she should do so, inasmuch as he was not a lawyer, but a plain man of business. Nothing would be well for either that was not well for both.

Julia, whose mind at the time was fixed upon the brain union that promised such brilliant results, was much pleased with her lover's statement of the case, not so much on account of its good sense as because it left her free to enter upon a new alliance that appeared so advantageous. A few weeks later she wrote a very kind letter to Edgar, regretfully breaking her engagement with him, and not long afterward her engagement with Underwood was announced.

By this time Julia had been admitted to the bar. The first problem that came up for her to solve after becoming a lawyer was whether she should better practice awhile independently of her fiance or form the expected partnership with him at once. Underwood urged her to be married and enter his office as his assistant for one year, with the partnership in view. This she rejected as incompatible with her ideas of equality between the sexes. She demanded a partnership, and Underwood yielded.

Singularly enough, before consummating the arrangement she wished to ask her former lover what he thought about it. Why she should wish for the opinion of a man she had discarded because he was not intellectual enough for her does not appear. She could probably not have explained the matter herself. it had been agreed between her and Edgar that they should remain friends. She did not, therefore, hesitate to ask him whether she would better remain for awhile independent or enter upon a partnership at once.

Edgar looked at her stupidly for awhile before replying. She was about to turn away from him disappointed when he said:

"Before tying yourself professionally with any lawyer meet him in court as his opponent."

There was something far down at the bottom of this advice that appealed to her, though she could not exactly explain what it was, since she didn't exactly see how such a situation could be brought about. Edgar, who was connected with a corporation having considerable law business, said he would watch for an opportunity. It was not long after this that his company proceeded by law against a man for a debt. The defendant's counsel being Mr. Underwood. Edgar Marston secured the appointment of his former fiancee as counsel for the company.

Mr. Underwood was a lawyer—not a jurist, but a practical court lawyer—from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet. Miss Spingler opened the case by stating the company's claim against the defendant, showing conclusively wherein he had acted with intent to defraud and how he had laid himself criminally liable. She had studied the law in the case carefully and made an excellent presentment of both the law and the case. There was no doubt but that the defendant would be worsted unless his counsel could either throw dust in the eyes of the jury or work upon its sympathies.

When he arose to speak he referred admiringly—somewhat patronizingly, Julia thought—to his "young opponent," as he called her, and to the ingenuity she had displayed in making the law appear to be on the side of the company, while he was prepared to show that it was all on the side of his client. He would also show that the facts in the case favored the defendant. As he warmed up he began to whirl both the law and the facts over the heads of the jury, at the same time appealing to the prejudices of the twelve men in what he called an octopus corporation sucking the blood out of an innocent man whom it had purposely ruined for the sake of sucking the little business he possessed into its capacious maw.

Miss Spingler, who had considered Mr. Underwood to be full of the dignity of the law, was appalled at what she considered an attack on plain justice. Mr. Underwood, who had won success by such handling of his cases and had fought his male opponents with far more defiling weapons, breaking a bottle of wine with them after the trial, was oblivious to the fact that his opposing counsel considered his statements untrue, that he knew they were untrue and, moreover, that he was personally attacking her from the opening to the close of his speech.

The next matter that occupied the court was the examination of witnesses. Miss Spingler's indignation at the treatment she had received was so great that she could barely settle herself to the work of drawing out the facts. While she was doing so her opponent further antagonized her by apparently paying no attention to her. When she had finished Mr. Underwood in cross examination destroyed every point she had made, proved her witnesses perjurers and turned all her efforts to ridicule. His summing up was rather an attack on corporations than a statement of his side of the case. The jury acquitted his client without leaving their seats.

"Come, dear," said the defendant's counsel after all was over and they were gathering lawbooks and putting them in green bags; "let's go to lunch."

To his surprise, Miss Spingler swept out of the courtroom without replying to his invitation or otherwise noticing him. Then for the first time it occurred to him that a woman might not be constructed to stand the browbeating he had been accustomed to visit on his male opponents. He looked after her with a troubled expression and wondered how he could have been so stupid. He must call in the evening and undo the damage he had done.

But before leaving his office that afternoon he received a note from his fiancee stating that, whereas she had considered him a jurist and found him a pettifogger, she felt constrained to break her engagement.

The subsequent career for a year of Miss Spingler was one of indecision. What other women may be fitted for, she was not adapted by nature for a lawyer. She gradually fell back into reliance on plain matter of fact Edgar Marston. It never occurred to her that in the only advice he had given her he had hoped to show her the true situation in her own individual case. She finally married him, and after the birth of her first child, instead of concerning herself with the meshes of the law, she gave herself up to the best treatment of babies during the tooth cutting period.

OF BUT LITTLE PRACTICAL USE

Wireless Fails to Prevent Collision of Ships In Fog

STEAMBOAT INSPECTORS' VIEW

Operator on Monroe at Time of Disaster Says Licenses Are Easy to Obtain—Head Engineer Testifies That Many Passengers Perished In Their Berths When Ship Went Down

Philadelphia, Feb. 18.—While wireless telegraphy has been the means of saving hundreds of lives in times of disaster at sea, it has yet to prove that it is of any practical use in preventing collisions when ships are within a short distance of each other in a fog.

This was the opinion expressed by the board of steamboat inspectors which is conducting the trial here of Captain Berry of the steamship Nantucket, charged with negligence in the collision with the steamship Monroe.

Besides being accused of not reducing his speed in a fog, Berry is charged with "carelessness" and "disregard of ordinary prudence" in not causing his wireless operator to ascertain the proximity of other vessels equipped with wireless.

The board expressed the opinion above quoted after it had examined R. L. Etheridge, the wireless operator of the Monroe. The operator could give no instance where he had ever been of help to a ship's master in the safe navigation of his vessel in a fog.

The board was of the opinion that where steam vessels were within two miles of each other, the time would be too short for captains to ascertain their position and then exchange this knowledge through the wireless operators. And again, with ships running on dead reckoning in a fog, captains would be unable to give exact positions.

The night of the disaster the wireless operator, in sending out the S. O. S., gave the position of the Monroe as "south of Winter Quarter." Winter Quarter lightship is approximately twenty-five miles north of where the collision occurred.

Etheridge testified that wireless operators do not get sufficient pay; that boys as young as 16 years are engaged at $25 a month and cause lots of trouble. Licenses, he said, were easy to obtain.

Other witnesses examined were J. E. Gately, second officer of the Monroe, and John H. Perkins, chief engineer.

That many of the forty-one passengers who perished with the sinking of the Monroe never left their berths was the statement by Perkins. No alarm was sounded, he said, and many of those on the main and saloon decks went down penned in their cabins.

Perkins was one of those who stayed aboard till the ship went down and was picked up, swimming about, by one of the Nantucket's boats. He said he saw one of the crew handing out life preservers, but in the ten minutes that he estimated it took the Monroe to sink not many could have been used. He corroborated the testimony that the engines were going full speed at the time of the collision.

The testimony of Gately was so evasive that Investigator Sargent asked him to be more direct. John F. Lewis, attorney for the Nantucket owners, protested that whenever he asked a vitally important question Gately said, "I am not sure." He asked him if he had been instructed not to answer, but Gately denied this.

REST FOR POTOMAC'S CREW

Will Be Given a Vacation to Recover From Their Hardships

Washington, Feb. 18.—The thirty-six men of the naval tug abandoned in the ice floes of the gulf of St. Lawrence will be sent to their homes to recover from hardships and to await reassignment. They are now fifty miles from a railroad.

Boatswain Wilkinson, the Potomac's commander, reported to the navy department that in abandoning the tug her anchor was left on the ice, in the hope that when the floes break up the anchor would hold the vessel. Most of the officials here believe the Potomac will be crushed and go to the bottom.

Baby Victim of Alcoholism

Boston, Feb. 18.—Three-year-old Thomas J. Foley, the youngest victim of alcoholism ever cared for at the City hospital, is on the danger list at that institution as the result of drinking a quantity of beer. It is not known where the child obtained the beer.

Baltimore's Smallpox Epidemic

Baltimore, Feb. 18.—An active campaign of vaccination and fumigation is being carried on here to check the spread of the epidemic of smallpox. One hundred cases are now under quarantine.

Slain and Robbed of $10,000

El Centro, Cal., Feb. 18.—Charles Gale, known in the gold camps of Alaska and Nevada, was found murdered in his saloon at Mexicali. Diamonds and cash amounting to $10,000 were stolen.

MRS. MINNIE BOND

Woman Who Accuses Gore In Suit For $50,000 Damages

VERDICT EXPECTED TODAY

Attorneys Score Both Sides In Damage Suit Against Gore

Oklahoma City, Feb. 18.—Six of the twelve hours allowed for argument in the damage suit brought by Mrs. Minnie E. Bond against Senator Gore had been consumed when court adjourned last evening, and, unless some unforseen contingency arises, the case will be submitted to the jury late today.

Two attorneys spoke for the plaintiff and one for the defense. Neither spared the parties to the suit and both Gore and Mrs. Bond, as well as those characterized by Gore as "disgruntled politicians whose pleadings for pie were unanswered," and who, the defense charges, engineered the suit, were scored.

MAY BE TRYING TO EVADE DEATH CHAIR

Probable Object of Schmidt's Repudiation of Confession

New York, Feb. 18.—Despite his assertions that he wants to die Hans Schmidt, slayer of Anna Aumuller, is believed to be attempting to escape the electric chair by repudiating his confession that he murdered the girl and saying she died as the result of an illegal operation.

Attaches of the district attorney's office were in conference with Schmidt yesterday afternoon. The former priest is said to have admitted he dismembered the girl's body to hide evidence of an operation. He is said to have implicated three persons in his confession, and the district attorney may act after a thorough investigation.

WEID LEAVES GERMANY

Will Have but $1,000,000 to Start His Albanian Treasury

Berlin, Feb. 18.—Prince William of Weid left here on the way to London and Paris to pay his respects to King George of England and President Poincare of France before assuming the sovereignty of Albania.

The formal tender of the throne of Albania to Prince William will probably be made only after his arrival at Durazzo, Albania, by the assembly of Albanian notables.

The prince will start his reign with only $1,000,000 of the $15,000,000 loan promised him by the powers to finance his treasury. He had hoped to obtain an advance of $2,000,000, but the powers halved the amount.

SENATORS ARE PUZZLED

Cannot Understand Wilson's Position on the Immigration Bill

Washington, Feb. 18.—Information that President Wilson would veto the immigration bill if it is sent to him from congress with the literacy test provision amazed members of the senate immigration committee.

Many of them confessed that they were bewildered, inasmuch as they had determined to retain the literacy test in their draft of the immigration measure, as it passed the house, under the impression that the president would accept the bill if it passes the senate. An interesting session of the committee is looked for.

RIVER STEAMSHIP SINKS

Hundred and Ten Mardi Gras Tourists Rescued at Louisville

Louisville, Feb. 18.—The steamer Queen City, bound from Pittsburg to New Orleans with a crowd of Mardi Gras excursionists, was swept into the the Ohio river by the swift current when she tried to land at Louisville and sank after striking a pier. No lives were lost.

The 110 passengers were taken to shore safely by the life savers of the Louisville station, who made trip after trip to shore, carrying all the passengers.

Centreboard Yacht For Lipton

London, Feb. 18.—A dispatch from Gosport says definitely that the Shamrock IV., Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America's cup, is to be tested as a centreboard yacht.

ASKS $100,000 DAMAGES

Rich Man Broke Promise to Wed, According to Show Girl

New York, Feb. 18.—So suddenly was he immersed in a $100,000 breach of promise suit, Sidney Henlein, a wealthy cloak manufacturer, has not yet recovered his breath, it was gathered, when his attorneys prepared a petition for the supreme court asking for double the length of time in which to answer the complaint.

Miss Lavinia Mason, with "The Passing Show," says her heart has already pained her $100,000 worth, and she not yet 21. The show girl says she has been engaged to Henlein for four years.

Miss Mason estimates Henlein's showers of gifts must have cost him at least $10,000 a year, including a diamond solitaire ring, which she swears was to bind their troth. When "The Passing Show" took the road he accompanied the piece to Pittsburg, Baltimore and points even farther west.

SPLIT OVER TRUSTEES

Railroad Situation In New England Is Still In a Tangle

Washington, Feb. 18.—Lawyers representing the New Haven railroad are in disagreement with Governor Walsh and the officials of the department of justice over the personnel of the board of trustees for the Boston and Maine railroad when that road passes from the hands of the New Haven.

After a day of arguing and discussing the railroad tangle in New England, nothing definite has been settled except that the Boston and Maine shall be put temporarily in the hands of a board of trustees selected by the road and approved by Attorney General McReynolds, and their terms of agreement between the department and the New Haven embodying this idea shall be submitted to a federal court for its sanction.

TWO KILLED BY GAS WHILE AT PRAYER

Aged Man and Woman Perhaps Suicides From Despair

Boston, Feb. 18.—Kneeling like one in prayer before a miniature altar in her room at 1581 Washington street, Miss Margaret Moore, 75 years old, was found dead, with the lifeless body of her 64-year-old brother, Thomas Moore, stretched out at her feet. Gas was pouring from the unjointed extension of a wall jet.

There was neither food nor money in their humble little home. From the position of the bodies, it is believed the destitute old people, despairing of relief and having decided upon suicide, opened the gas pipe and knelt together before the altar on the bureau.

It is supposed the man fell as consciousness left him, and that the woman by some strange chance remained in her attitude of devotion.

ROMA REACHES PORT

Passengers of Damaged Liner Are Landed at Providence

Providence, Feb. 18.—The Fabre transatlantic liner Roma, which ran on the reefs of No Man's Land, near Martha's Vineyard, in the mile-a-minute blizzard, where she pounded for six hours before the wind shifted and blew her off, came into port with a bad list to port and many of her bottom plates ripped open.

All of the 518 passengers aboard, including 100 in the crew, were safe, although two cases of typhus fever developed during the voyage among the Turkish passengers she carried.

All of the passengers were landed here. After an examination by government officials the Roma was declared seaworthy enough to proceed to Brooklyn for repairs.

KING TAKES A TUMBLE

Albert of Belgium Breaks an Arm When His Horse Stumbles

Brussels, Feb. 18.—Albert, King of the Belgians, suffered a broken left arm while riding in the forest near Roitsfert. His mount stumbled over a loose stone, causing the king to come a cropper over the animal's head.

Exaggerated reports of the accident caused much public concern in Brussels. The king's physician, however, allayed anxiety by a bulletin describing the injury and declaring that no grave consequences were likely to ensue.

ARRESTED FOR NON SUPPORT

George W. Clines Traced to New York by Police

Word has been received by the police of the arrest in Brooklyn, N. Y., of George W. Glines, who is wanted in Quincy for non support of his wife and children on Elm place. According to the police, Glines abandoned his wife and three children when he went away and since his absence another child has been born. The case was eventually brought to the attention of the Associated Charities and the secretary after making an investigation reported to the police. It was thought advisable, if possible that Glines should be brought back to Quincy and made an example of.

Chief Burrell had no money in his department for cases of this kind and the matter was put up to Mayor Miller. After hearing the facts in the case the Mayor said, go ahead and get the man and make an example of him, and that he would see that the necessary money to bring the fellow back to Quincy was found.

A warrant was issued against Glines and he was located in Brooklyn, N. Y., and the warrant sent to the police of that city, with result as noted. He is being held pending the arrival of Quincy officers to bring him back to Quincy. It is probable that Chief Burrell will go to Brooklyn, N. Y., in person after his prisoner.

Under the present law, in such cases, if Glines is sent to jail, his family will receive fifty cents a day from the county, of the amount which he earns while in jail, as prisoners in Dedham jail are now put to work.

TELLS OF ENGAGEMENT

old comrades, although they were in the east and he was in the west. The Union forces in those days were made up of untrained recruits, the ranks being filled with men from the slums of the big cities who fought side by side with clerks, college graduates and professors. Often captains elected by the companies did not have the least idea of company formation. Such were the men who fought the battles at the beginning of the war.

Col. Anderson said that he was captured twice during the war but managed to escape both times, once by the aid of a friendly negro, and the second time by the aid of bowie knife. He then described the formation of the country where the battle was fought and the many incidents leading up to the final struggle, and of the many skirmishes which preceded it. He spoke of the battle itself and the movements of the various divisions and of the final struggle which resulted in victory for the Union forces.

He also spoke of the horrible warfare made by the Indians who were fighting with the Confederates at this battle, how they scalped the Union soldiers, stripped them and mutilated their bodies. It was a horrible scene of carnage

Then he spoke of the splendid work of the untrained Union soldiers. To Gen. Franz Sigel, he gave the credit of saving the day for the Union forces. Speaking of Indians he said he never saw a good Indian unless he was dead.

Many of the Union troops were under fire at ths battle for the first time, and it is worthy of comment that they stood with uplifted heads and obeyed the commands. It was a fight for their homes and their flag. They were seeing scenes of horror for the first time, but they were heroes and did not quail. It was an awful baptism of blood, but the whole southwest was saved by that battle.

Col. Anderson spoke for nearly an hour and he was followed closely and with intense interest by his hearers, who at the conclusion of his paper arose as one man and cheered him to the echo

One or two asked questions, and at the close of the evening many went forward to shake the colonel by the hand and personally express their appreciation of the interesting bit of history which he had given them, for they had been enlightened on some of the horrors of warfare by one who had been in the thick of it.

The funeral of Lillian K. Erickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Erickson was held at their home 217 Newbury avenue, Tuesday afternoon. Services were conducted by Rev. A. G. Sporrong of the Swedish Congregational church. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Should Enlargement of City Hall Be Submitted to Voters

The legislative hearing on the bill to reopen the hearings of the abolition of the grade crossings in Quincy is scheduled for 10.30 Thursday morning.

The sewer assessments bill will go this week, and for the first time the amounts will be computed under the new ordinance fixing the sewer assessments. Under the old ordinance the assessment was 12 cents per running foot frontage and 6 mills per square foot to a depth of 100 feet. Under the new ordinance however the assessment will be 16 cents per running foot frontage and 8 mills per square foot to a depth of 100 feet. While it seems a small increase the total will be increased.

The office of Inspector of Buildings Merrill is to be connected by telephone.

The question has been raised if under the City Charter the city can take land for an addition to City Hall and build an addition without first submitting the question to the voters. The City Charter provides that if a new City Hall is erected it must first be submitted to the voters, but in the case of an addition such as may come out of the action of the City Council Monday evening, it is claimed it would not be necessary to submit the question to the voters.

It is pointed out that several of the departments at City Hall are cramped for room and there is also a lack of sufficient vaults in which to keep the many valuable documents.

If the land in the rear of the present hall is taken and an addition built all departments can be better accomodated and ample vault service can be had. In addition to that it will be possible to have the offices of the School department located in City Hall, which alone would mean a saving of upwards of $800 in rental service.

Chief Billings car known as the "red devil" was sent to the factory this morning to be thoroughly overhauled and put in first class condition. The Kissel Kar Co. agreed to make any repairs necessary to the engine free of charge and to put the kar in first class shape and keep it in shape for a year. In the meantime the company has sent out one of its factory kars for the chief to use.

Chief Billings says that since the order for a auto combination chemical and pump went into the City Council Monday night he has had many calls from agents of different makes of apparatus.

Daily Thought.

True dignity comes only of humility. Pride is the ruin of dignity, for it is a worshiping of self, and that involves a continuous sinking.—George MacDonald.

THE ART OF SELLING.

Real Salesmanship Is a Light That Can't Be Obscured.

The boss wants lookers, because he knows the looker of today is the buyer of tomorrow and he wants to make the lookers feel that his store is "the best place to trade," which is only another way of saying that it is the best place to do one's looking. He also knows that the looker of today can sometimes be converted into a buyer before the day is over. All he requires to accomplish what he desires is salesmanship among his salespeople.

Does he get it? Not from all of them. If he did there would be less need for commissions to inquire laboriously into the relation between shopgirls' wages and shopgirls' chastity, for real salesmanship will get the money wherever it is practiced and by whomsoever it is practiced. Real salesmanship is one light that can't be hidden under a bushel. It's a light that can't be obscured. It's a light that will shine above department heads and floorwalkers and reach clear up to "the old man" in his private office, if you keep it burning long enough.

What is salesmanship? No one quite knows. But if you will take care of the lookers, if you will make all the lookers pleasantly remember what you showed them and how you showed it to them when they were merely looking, you will have mastered one very important branch of retail salesmanship.—Collier's Weekly.

SPEED OF GAME BIRDS.

The Hazel Hen Said to Be a Wonder In a Short Spurt.

What is the fastest game bird that flies? Of course, in seeking an answer to the question, as a writer in the Scotsman points out, one must assume equal conditions of atmosphere and cause for flight, for all creatures, human or other, seek their highest rate of speed under the influence of fear.

A recent writer declares that in a race of, say, 200 yards he would back a bird which, though not found in Britain, is indigenous to most of the rest of Europe and is especially familiar in Scandinavia—the hazel hen or gelinotte.

Yet, curiously enough, this is one of the forest haunting birds which, like the American "fool hen," usually fly up into a tree when flushed and, rejecting further attempts at escape, elect to be shot sitting. "But," says the writer referred to above, "on the rare occasions (and that they are rare I readily admit) when one catches a gelinotte in the open I have never seen any bird fly so fast nor move its wings with such extraordinary rapidity."

Next to it at any rate one must surely place the teal, which has a marvelous knack of getting under way quickly. Some experienced observers would give the third place to a bluerock pigeon—the wild, not the Hurlingham variety.

Inflammable Celluloid.

Celluloid, being first cousin of guncotton and closely related to nitroglycerin, is highly inflammable and should never be brought in close proximity to a flame. Celluloid is a compound of cellulose or vegetable fibrine, reduced by acids to guncotton. Cellulose is found in all vegetable life, particularly in young plants. It is a starchlike substance. Cotton fiber is principally cellulose. After the cotton fiber is cleaned it is submerged in acids, which quickly reduce it to cellulose in the form of a thick, pasty, semi-transparent mass. Camphor is added further to thicken it, and the required coloring matter is thoroughly mixed in, after which the celluloid is molded by heat and pressure into various useful and ornamental objects, such as combs, boxes, pins, paper cutters, ornaments, etc.—New York World.

Learn to Write Well.

First legibility, second sightliness, should be the endeavor in handwriting and let the "character" and the "individuality" take care of themselves. If you wish to devise a signature hard to forge that is another thing, but one's everyday handwriting should be plain and as good looking as one can make it. The art of writing a neat, legible, well punctuated, correctly expressed and spelled letter should belong to every high school graduate, much more to every college graduate, and the thanks of the community are due to those who are testing and trying to improve our methods of education; but they must remember that the letter style is properly more loose and conversational than any other and therefore should not be criticised in just the same way.—Kate Upson Clark in Leslie's.

Within the Law.

A real negro mammy of the old type came up the walk through the old fashioned garden to the side porch. She had a basket of "fresh aigs" on her arm and was offering them for sale.

"Yes'um, they sho is all right, Miss Bess. Ain't nary disorderly aig amongst 'em."—New York Post.

LADIES NIGHT AT Y. M. C. A.

Fair Guests Participate in Series of Sports

An indoor athletic meet of an unusual kind took place Tuesday night in the Y. M. C. A. when the first Ladies night of the season took place. The fair guests took part in all the events and proved themselves as well versed in the arts of the gymnasium as the fellows. After the team bowling matches there were several events in the gym including the sponge put, 30 inch dash, basket ball relay, Indian club relay, volley ball, etc.

By this time the group were all in fine appetite, and an adjournment to the dining room took place, where sandwiches and cocoa were served. The singing of popular songs by the group concluded the fun of the evening. The committee in charge of the event was: Adrian McFarlane, Fred Ward, H. C. Hallowell, Sturgis Hunt and Ben Gouterman. Mrs. LaRose and Mrs. Flanders chaperoned the party.

WARD THREE IS FOR DEPRESSION

Send a Committee to State House Hearing Against the Decree Adopted

After Plans Are Explained by City Engineer And Others

The fact that there is an interest in the Ward Three Improvement Association was shown Wednesday evening when over 100 citizens of the ward crowded Clan MacGregor hall to over flowing at a meeting of that organization.

The meeting was opened by temporary chairman James Joss and Joseph B. Grossman acted as secretary pro tem.

The committee appointed at last meeting to look up suitable quarters for meeting purposes reported and it was decided to hold the next meeting in Clan MacGregor hall, on Wednesday evening, March 4.

Charles F. Barnicoat, representing a committee which was appointed to draw up by-laws, reported and presented a copy of by-laws which had been drawn. These were read by the secretary and it was decided to act on their acceptance and to elect officers at the next meeting of the association.

The life of the meeting really began when City Engineer Sargent explained the plan of grade crossing abolition by the elevation of the railroad tracks, which has been accepted by the Public Service Commission. He told in detail the different parts of the plan, without giving his opinion as to whether or not depresion was better than elevation.

Principal Assessor G. B. Bates, who was on hand ,entered into a discussion with Mr. Sargent concerning the plan and then explained the Bates plan and the City plan, both of which provided for the depression of the tracks through Quincy.

Mayor Miller was present. Any rumors which may have been around the city that there was a breach between the Mayor and Principal Assessor because of their disagreement in regard to depression may be laid to rest.Mr. Bates denied it, and his denial was quickly concurred in by the Mayor himself.

His Honor said that his reasons for his opinion in regard to the plans which have been passed on favorably by the Public Service Commission in favor of elevation of the railroad tracks was because all the expert engineers had said that the plan of elevation was best, and that depression was practically impossible. The Mayor preferred the testimony of experts to the flow of oratory and the beautiful silvery hair of Mr. Bates. He had been told that under no conditions whatsoever would the Public Service Commission consider any other plan for the abolition of grade crossings than that which they had passed on.

City Engineer Sargent took occasion to say that if the city did not accept the decree of the Commission the question would again go back seven years and it would take that long before there would again be as much advancement on the proposition as there was now.

John Q. A. Field declared himself against depression as he thought that there would be a depreciation of 50 per cent in the value of real estate on the line of the railroad. He gave as an example the city of Newton, where the tracks were depressed and said that real estate had depreciated in value there a great deal.

At this point Mr. Bates contradicted the foregoing statement. He said that he had been appointed as principal assessor by the Mayor to lower the tax rate and that, if the plan of elevation were carried out the tax rate would increase to at least 30 per cent. Mr. Bates set forth the disadvantages of elevation very emphatically. He said that this would mean tying up many streets and some would be taken away entirely by the railroad. On the contrary the plan of depression was of benefit to the City of Quincy and to her people, and he was going to see that it was carried out.

It was urged that a committee be appointed to attend the hearing at the State House on Thursday on the peti-

QUESTIONS FOR THE MAYOR

Correspondent Asks Why He Changed So Suddenly

Editor Daily Ledger:

Will you please allow me space in your paper to ask His Honor, the Mayor, a few questions?

Mayor Miller, why did you advocate depression of the railroad tracks in 1908, while president of Granite Manufacturers' Association, and in the public print March 14, 1908? (See Daily Ledger of that date.)

Why did you petition the Legislature for the abolition of grade crossings at Saville street and Water street by the depression plan on January 17, 1914?

Why did you within twenty days after petitioning the Legislature give your approval to the elevated or Railroads' plans without consulting the City Council or calling a mass meeting of the citizens to consult the people whose servant you are, and to give reasons for your change of opinion?

Do you not think that you exceeded your authority as Mayor to act as you have done?

Do you think your judgment is better than that of the great majority who have expressed their wishes and opinions at mass meeting in City Hall and by the referendum vote later?

Kindly answer these questions Mr. Mayor and oblige many who are wondering why you changed your opinion so hurriedly and decidedly.

E. F. Brault,

UNANIMOUS IN PROTEST

Granite Cutters Against Grade Crossing Decree

At a meeting of Quincy branch of the Granite Cutters International Association Wednesday evening, it was voted that the branch protest against the acceptance of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R.'s plans for abolishing the grade crossings in this city.

The objections against the Railroad's plans have been voiced from platforms and printed in newspapers in this city so many times that it is needless to go into detail in connection with same. Suffice to say that it seems strange that the railroad would object to the proposed City plan on account of cost, particularly when we know that recent investigations in connection with the expense accounts of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. have shown that hundreds of thousands of dollars have been expended by this railroad in an effort to lead legislation into what the railroad officials would term the proper channels.

We feel that the proposed City plan was the only plan which dealt fairly and equitably with our citizens, particularly those of them who have property adjoining the railroad, and when we know the Railroad's plan puts School street twelve feet higher in the air than it is at present, and Water street, ten feet lower, it must be admitted that there is no comparison between a plan which involves such changes and a plan which maintains a perfect level between Wollaston and Quincy Adams and such is the condition obtaining in the City plan.

Representative Michael Sullivan brought in a bill this year, the purpose of which was to have a law enacted compelling the railroad to abolish grade crossings as per "City Plan" but before the Legislature had an opportunity to act on same, Mayor Miller accepted the Railroad's plan, and we have every reason to believe that Mr. Sullivan's bill would have become law.The vigorous protests made by every organization in Quincy during the past four years must have had some bearing with the Legislature.

NO FATHER FOR BILL IN THE LEGISLATURE

Mayor Miller and Assessor Bates Clash on Mayor's Grade Crossing Petition

Quincy Organizations However Appear at State House Today in Favor

The hearing before the Legislative Committee on Railroad Matters at the State House this morning in relation to the grade crossing question in Quincy resulted in somewhat of a clash between Mayor and his Chief Assessor G. B. Bates.

Mayor Miller said that the bill on which the hearing was held was a child of Bates. That he had signed the petition in order to protect the city, in case something should arise that needed protection, while Mr. Bates in his argument said that the Mayor had exceeded his prerogative in approving the decree plans.

Levi H. Turner conducted the hearing for the petition and among those to speak for it asfce from Mr. Bates were Representatives Sandberg and Sullivan, who said they appeared in a private capacity, and John L. Hamilton of the Board of Trade.

Grade 2

Mr. Bates in opposing the decree plan gave his twelve reasons, which have been published several times. He declared that it was a scheme to develop a lot of land and stop up streets, and to build other streets for an invisible commission which was controlling Quincy.

Seventy-five percent of the land between School street and the Adams Temple was controlled by three gentlemen and they can paralyze and prevent busines progress on the west side of Hancock street and a monopoly of conditions would result, and that they with the invisible commission fixed the commission appointed to separate the grades, so that they decreed a loss to the city.

He believed that the Mayor had exceeded the prerogative of his office when he accepted the decree. He would have liked to have appeared before the Public Service Commission but was not invited.

When asked as to who composed the special Commission he said that John L. Bates, a relative, was chairman, but on this occasion blood runs thicker than water.

City Solicitor Pinkham reviewed the situation as to the grade crossings in Quincy and that seven years had been already taken up and in view of the chaotic state at present he believed that the decree plan should be accepted.

Henry M. Faxon also spoke along the same line and said that the development of property in Quincy had been delayed for seven years.

Mayor Miller in opposition to the bill said that it was a creation of Bates and that he had signed it to protect the city. He now however would like to withdraw the petition.

When the matter was discussed before the special commission the matter of School street did not enter into it, and that the Public Service Commission could not consider it. In closing the Mayor said that he was not afraid to change his mind.

Several questions were asked the speakers by members of the committee and a full report of the hearing will be published in Friday's Daily Ledger.

BRIDGE HEARING.

Mayor Miller, City Solicitor Pinkham and City Engineer Sargent attended the hearing at the State House this morning before the Committee on Bridges, on the bill for a new bridge across the eNponset river at Atlantic.

Senator Langelier appeared and spoke of the need of a better bridge

Ex-Representative F. Howard Mildrum of Boston said the people of Dorchester wanted it.

Representative Sanford Bates of Boston said under the old plan the cost was estimated at $350,000, but under the new plan it had been reduced to $200,000.

Mayor Miller of Quincy did not like the apportionments of the cost proposed which is as follows:

Boston, 40 per cent
Quincy, 20 per cent
Norfolk County, 10 per cent
Plymouth county, 5 per cent
Street Railway, 15 per cent
State, 10 per cent.

He claimed the burden on Quincy would be too heavy as taxes and the tax rate were already high.

City Solicitor Pinkham of Quincy argued that the city of Quincy could not afford it this year.

Corporation Counsel Sullivan of Boston opposed the bill saying there was no necessity for a new bridge.

Others spoke for and against the bill especially against the apportionment.

Scarcely have the echoes of the acclaim with which the natal day of Abraham Lincoln was hailed, faded into silence, when again we welcome the coming of the anniversary of the birth of that great American of an earlier period, whose name shines ever with brighter luster with passing generations. The name and fame of George Washington loses nothing in comparison with the brilliant constellations of noted Americans who have shone upon the pages of our history since his day.

He sacrificed all the physical comfort known in his day, preferring the rough life of the field and the camp, with its sometimes appalling hardships that he might be of service to his country; pursuing the even tenor of his way when reviled and misunderstood, and later when the tide turned in his favor, refusing to consider the crown which might have been his, that the "government of the people, by the people" might be established.

Is it cause for wonder that his story still inspires lovers of our country to noble aspirations and noble deeds? We should fail as patriots did we not include the 22d of February as a day of special observance; one for eulogy and for eloquence. Teachers of patriotism can have no better theme than this, no finer object lesson to place before the children, especially the little aliens who are being fused in the great "melting pot" of this nation, later to be moulded into American citizens.

ADVERTISING AND QUALITY.

Quality is the only permanent basis of success in any article. There is little money in selling an article once. The profit comes when you sell some one some kind of thing over and over again. To get that kind of trade you must deliver the goods.

A business man who paid down good money to advertise goods that he could not back up would be a fool. The wider he distributed them, the more trouble he would have. Not merely would the goods come back, but the people who bought them and were disappointed would tell all their neighbors. This would create bad will instead of good will.

The public understands these facts perfectly. When a merchant talks publicly about his goods, the public looks at it as a guarantee of good quality. In fact, advertising standardizes quality. The public accepts statements made in a well advertised store at face value, feeling that the merchant is under the bonds of publicity to make good.

NEGROES ONCE MORE IN DOUBT

Sunshine Disappears With Departure of Chief Sam

VESSEL WITHOUT A SKIPPER

Captain Brought From Jamaica to Sail the Curityba to Gold Coast Seeks Legal Aid to Secure Money Due Him After Being Discharged by Head of Children of Akim

New York, Feb. 19.—The black cloud that hovered above the Curityba in Erie basin all last week and showed its silver lining when Chief Sam climbed over the steamer's side to greet his waiting followers has lowered again over the forty newly made sons and daughters of Akim. Their chief had gone so soon, said Captain King, that he almost met himself arriving, and the Gold Coast visions grew blurred once more.

The negro colonists had hopes of departing at once. They received Chief Sam with joy. Then the sleepy ones woke up to find he was off again. But that was not the worst. The ship was without a skipper, and the sailing time far away.

And perhaps the gloom was deepened a bit by the fact that Captain Hauck, who had been engaged to navigate the ship to sunny Africa, was on his way to the legal aid bureau to seek help in getting some money due him from the Akim Trading company, Ltd.

Chief Sam left rather hurriedly. He told his aides, whom he left in charge of the ship again, that he was going to Delaware to raise more funds for the voyage. The sailing of the Curityba need not be delayed, he added, and the optimists in the company think that means perhaps this week.

The chief's plan now is to take her to Portland, Me., where he will ship a crew offered to him by a church in Boston. This crew is said to be composed of white members of the church, who have offered to serve without pay, but the name of the church is not mentioned at all. In Portland the ship will be overhauled and repaired.

Hauck left hurriedly, too. He said he had been hired as skipper to sail the Curityba to the Gold Coast by a negro who met him in Kingston, Jam., and told him the company had big trade and owned three vessels plying between Galveston and Africa. His passage was paid to Brooklyn, he said.

He remained in command of the ship until Sam came aboard and fired him. It was a polite discharge. The chief asked the skipper to leave the ship because they hadn't met before.

Hauck left the vessel, but apparently Sam has not seen the last of him for he is trying to set the machinery of the law in motion to collect the money he says is due him.

CONFERENCE ADJOURNS

Boston and Maine Terms Said to Have Been Agreed Upon

Washington, Feb. 19.—As the result of a series of conferences between officials of the New Haven railroad, officials of the department of justice and Governor Walsh, representing the commonwealth of Massachusetts, a tentative agreement was reached just before final adjournment last night as to the terms of separation of the Boston and Maine railroad from the New Haven road.

Chairman Elliott and counsel for the New Haven will submit the argument to a meeting of the New Haven board of directors in New York and if it is approved and ratified by that body, it will be duly signed by the parties in interest and will be submitted to a federal court for formal indorsement as a legal decision of that court. The utmost secrecy was maintained as to the details of the tentative agreement.

At first it was thought that the limbs of several of the patients would have to be amputated.

WIRELESS MISPLACED

Operator on the Monroe Thus Testifies on Witness Stand

Philadelphia, Feb. 19.—The position of the wireless apparatus on the steamer Monroe, which was sunk by the Nantucket off the Virginia coast with a loss of forty-one lives, made it impossible to send out S. O. S. calls except for a few seconds after the crash.

Testimony to this effect was given by Robert L. Etheridge, a wireless operator aboard the Monroe, at the trial of Captain Berry of the Nantucket, charged with negligence.

Etheridge said the wireless outfits were misplaced on nearly all coastwise vessels, and declared that both the auxiliary or extra switches and the telephone to the pilot house should be placed at points convenient to the wireless operator.

Etheridge admitted that if he or the other operators had remained in the wireless room a trifle longer the distress signal could have been sent out again by reason of the auxiliary dynamo being placed in commission by the second engineer.

EXEMPTION TO STAND

Democrats Oppose Wilson's Suggestions For Repeal In Panama

Washington, Feb. 19.—It will be extremely difficult to procure the repeal of the Panama canal tolls exemption for coastwise shipping, Majority Leader Underwood told President Wilson. Many leading Democrats say the president's fight will be a losing one.

Not only is Underwood opposed to the repeal himself, but he told the president that most of the Democrats who voted for the exemption last year are inclined to stand by their guns.

He indicated that the country at large supports the attitude of congress as expressed at the last session, according to the belief prevailing in the house at the present, and that an attempt to secure the repeal at this time would result in disaster.

ARMENIANS HELD IN MURDER CASE

Two Suspected of Knowing About Killing of a Turk

Waltham, Mass., Feb. 19.—After an all-night grilling by Chief Lyons and Policeman Burke of the Watertown force, two of the seven Armenians who were taken to the police station there to be questioned regarding the murder of Ismayel Izmerley-Oghlo, a Turk, aged 27, who lived in Watertown, are held under afrest. They are Melkie Hadjisarkian, proprietor of an Armenian coffee house, and Hagop Doostoonian. Both live in Watertown.

The two were arraigned in court on a charge of being accessories before the fact of murder, and were remanded to the Cambridge jail pending a hearing Feb. 25.

Five other Armenians were released after having been interrogated for six hours. Officer Burke rounded them all up.

Jury Finds Maine Man Guilty of Killing Divorced Wife

Bangor, Me., Feb. 19.—The jury deliberated long in the case of Rance Grasse, a lumber crew foreman, charged with the murder of his divorced wife, Mrs. Nettie M. Appleby. A verdict of manslaughter was reached.

In his closing, Attorney General Wilson referred to an accusation of mistreatment brought against Grasse by Marcia Torrens, a 12-year-old niece, and suggested that the child's story had stirred Mrs. Appleby to such anger that she assailed Grasse with a bitterness of speech that maddened him and prompted the fatal shot.

From time to time as the exercises proceeded, the ex-queen wiped tears from her eyes, but she said she enjoyed the occasion and rejoiced over Hawaii's prosperity.

VANDERBILT HOME BURNS

Loss of $1,000,000 When Sixty-Room House Is Destroyed

Jericho, L. I., Feb. 19.—The country home of William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., valued with its furnishings and art works at $1,000,000, was destroyed by fire. A caretaker and a few servants were the only occupants. How the fire started is not known. The caretaker attributed it to an overheated furnace.

The house was built last year at a cost of $400,000 and later additions cost $100,000 more. It had sixty rooms. The walls were hung with rare tapestries and valuable paintings.

WILL TRILL LIKE BIRDS OF THE AIR

President's Daughters to Star Again In Nature Play.

FIRST SEEN AT CORNISH, N.H.

Human Songsters In a Veritable Fairyland—Miss Eleanor Wilson as the Bird Spirit Who Turns the Plume Hunter From the Ruthless Slaughter of Feathered Creatures.

On Feb. 24 there will be presented in New York city in the interests of bird conservation a play quite as wonderful as it is unique, by prominent persons, including two daughters of President Wilson. In this play, the bird masque "Sanctuary," by Percy Mackaye, the participants appear in the costume of the characters they represent. The approaching performance will be given as nearly as possible along the lines of its production in New Hampshire last September, the chief difference being that whereas the first production was given out of doors that of this month will be given in a hotel. Miss Eleanor Wilson as the bird spirit will take the leading part, the same as she did in the performance last fall, and Miss Margaret Wilson will again sing a song of the hermit thrush.

Addresses by Burroughs and Pinchot.

A program relating to bird conservation will be given in the morning and afternoon of Feb. 24, and a dinner in the evening will precede the masque, at which addresses by such ornithological authorities as Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester of the United States department of agriculture, and John Burroughs will be delivered.

Mrs. Wilson, the wife of the president, will be one of the patronesses of the masque. The proceeds will go into the fund devoted to bird conservation work.

Describing the play given in New Hampshire, the Outlook says:

In a stretch of woodland a plume hunter, clad in leopard skins and the plumage of birds slaughtered by his skill, encountered a faun and a dryad. He had apparently just shot a bird. The effect of the shot had been felt by the bird spirit, who fell fainting and wounded to the earth. To the plume hunter, however, the bird spirit was invisible. Charmed by the grace of the dryad, the plume hunter lost his predatory character for a moment and immediately found that the bird spirit was visible. His hunting instinct prompted him to attempt her capture with his net. He was restrained by a poet and a naturalist. Then the dryad appealed to him, and as a consequence of her eloquence he flung his gun and net away and abandoned for good and all his vocation of plume hunting.

The poet was Percy Mackaye. It was his bird masque "Sanctuary," which the participants in this occurrence performed. The faun, Quercus, was Joseph Linden Smith, who has managed several pageants of note. The naturalist, Shy, was Ernest Harold Baynes, the promoter of the whole performance.

Appear In the Role of Birds.

Members of the Cornish colony participated as birds of various species. Each person in the audience wore a simple costume of mantle and hood.

The song of the hermit thrush, sung by Miss Margaret Wilson, was to the words of a lyric by Arvia Mackaye, the dramatist's little daughter.

The twinkling electric lights, the rustling of the leaves of the trees in the wind, the music performed by a small orchestra, the robes and cowls of the audience, the fantastic costumes of the players, all combined to make the whole performance seem elfin and mysterious. And while the fauns and the spirits of the birds skipped and hopped and warbled about in the pine grove the roads outside for miles around were kept bright by the searchlights of visiting automobiles.

Appropriately the place selected for the performance of the masque was a stretch of woodland which has been set apart as a bird sanctuary. It has been planted with trees, shrubs and vines of the sort that attract birds, and it has also been supplied with devices for promoting the comfort of birds, such as food houses and bird bathtubs.

SAYS CANAL IS TOO SHALLOW.

German Engineer Declares Big Ships Cannot Pass Through.

D. W. Ewald, a prominent German engineer, in an article published in Der Tag predicts that large warships and ocean liners perhaps will never be able to go through the Panama canal and that second class ships will be able to go through the great waterway only part of each year.

Mr. Ewald expresses doubt that the canal under the present system can ever be supplied with sufficient water to make possible the passage of warships and big liners, for which, it is reported, a depth of thirty feet is not sufficient.

Gatun lake, Mr. Ewald says, will be able only for part of each year to feed the canal to a depth of thirty feet. He predicts that during the dry season the canal will fall to eighteen feet and even lower. In conclusion Mr. Ewald warns everybody against having too optimistic views in regard to changes in routes for the world's trade by reason of the opening of the canal.

THE WEATHER FOR JANUARY.

Much cloudiness and frequent precipitation marked the weather during January. With the exception of the cold wave of the 13th and 14th normal temperatures prevailed throughout the month. The mean temperature of 25.3 degrees was 0.2 degree less than the average for the month, as compared with 36.0 degrees in January, 1913 and 17.7 degrees in January 1912. The highest temperature reached was 60 degrees on the 30th and the lowest 12 degrees below zero on the 14th. The latter is the lowest temperature recorded since 1907.

The total precipitation of 4.30 inches was .18 inch more than the normal amount and the most in January since 1910. A measurable amount of rain or snow fell on 17 days, the most in one day being 1.04 inches on the 21st. The total snowfall of 11 inches was 5 inches less than the average amount and the most on the ground at any time was 5 inches on the 22nd and 23rd. The mean relative humidity of 76.1 per cent. was 2.0 per cent. more than normal and the highest in January since 1910. There was a large excess of cloudiness and the total sunshine of 94.7 hours was 25 per cent. less than the usual amount. There was more wind than customary and the prevailing direction was northwest. The maximum velocity of the month was 70 miles per hour from the west on the 12th.—L. A. Wells, Blue Hill Observatory.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Now that the interest in birds is soon to revive, the Thomas Crane Public Library is fortunate in having on exhibition for the coming three weeks, 13 of the re-issue in 1860 by chromo-lithography of the plates of Audubon's Birds of North America.

The pictures are life size, and show the birds in their natural surroundings and attitudes. There is the black vulture or carrion crow, the pair feeding on their prey, an American deer; the great-footed hawks with green-winged teal beneath their talons; a battle royal in mid air between a pair of red-tailed hawks; the black-shouldered kite; the American sparrow-hawk, etc.

The brown pelican and the herons may be seen in their nesting places, also the strange nest of the purple martin. We find the brown thrasher, the yellow-breasted chat, and the ruby-throated humming birds with their young on the trumpet flower.

In connection with the exhibit, it might be interesting to note that the original edition of Audubon's Birds of North America was published in 1830-39, years of toil and discouragement to the author. It contains 435 plates and 1055 specimens. The subscription price was $1,000 a copy, and the cost $100,000. Copies now bring $4,000, and there are very few originals.

Audubon studied painting under the French artist David. He was a lover of nature, of adventure, and of the birds. "He was the artist of the birds before he was their historian. The writing of their biographies seems to have been only secondary with him."

The library has two copies of the life of this interesting man, artist and backwoodsman, by his widow. (413.19 and 413.45.)

CLASS IN DRAWING.

The class in drawing and lettering for granite cutters closed its second term of 20 nights Wednesday evening after a very successful season. There is not a doubt but that this class has now become a fixture in the city's educational scheme, and that the course will be repeated hereafter every year. In the case of industries which are less prominent in the community probably trade courses given at periodical intervals would suffice, but the machinists and the granite workers courses are two for which there will be annual call.

SUPERINTENDENT BARBOUR.

The Superintendent of Schools will speak tomorrow evening before the newly formed Parent-Teachers Association at the Hollis School, Braintree. Saturday night, he will start for the annual convention of the superintendents' section of the National Educational Association to be held this year in Richmond, Virginia.

CODDINGTON ASSOCIATION.

Stacy B. Southworth of the Boston Latin school addressed the Parent Teachers Association of the Coddington school Wednesday evening on "Abraham Lincoln." Among those present was Miss Julia Underwood, his first teacher at the Coddington, who was also one of the teachers when Edward Southworth, father of the speaker, was the principal.

Selections from Elijah were rendered by the pupils of the eighth grade under the direction of Miss Whitcher, their teacher. They joined in the singing of the chorus of America after Ruth Jones sang the verses.

Refreshments were served by the vocational pupils who had prepared the food under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Pope, their instructress. Many members attended.

Mr. Southworth was a former teacher at Quincy High school and is well known to many in this city. He discussed his topic in a highly interesting manner and illustrated his talk with anecdotes that had never been heard by most of the audience. He also quoted the first speech of Lincoln, a reply to a political opponent who had attacked him because of his years and slight political experience. The reply delivered during the lightning rod introductory season stated that he would rather have youth and character as the qualities for office than be the possessor of years of experience through which a fortune could be amassed and in the end be obliged to string a house with lightning rods for protection against an angered God.

Mr. Southworth was liberally applauded at the close of his address.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Miss Edith Randall gave an interesting talk on Holland at the Quincy school Wednesday afternoon before the pupils of the fifth and eighth grades. Her talk was greatly enjoyed. It was given under the auspices of the Educational Committee of the Quincy Women's club and was much appreciated.

THE HIGH SCHOOL PUPIL.

The following description of the attempt to make the High School pupil a useful factor in the home is so significant that it deserves thoughtful reading and attention. There are so many suggestive thoughts contained in the several items, that some possibly may be found applicable to local conditions. Underlying the whole plan is the desire that the youth shall not simply spend four years in studying High school subjects and books but may at the same time render assistance to his home and his community and grow in the ability to bear responsibility.

CREDITS FOR HOME WORK.

One of the many problems of school administration is that of uniting school life and home life more definitely. The plan of giving school credits for home work is meeting with favor in some communities as a means of bringing about a closer relation between the school and the home. This movement has hitherto been more pronounced in the rural than in the city schools, but some few cities have formulated courses of study, allowing credits for definite home tasks. One of the latest of such courses received at the U. S. Bureau of Education is that in operation in the high school of St. Cloud, Minn. The following is an outline of the plan recently adopted by the school board of that city.

HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA.

Sixteen units are required for graduation, at least 15 of which shall be regular school credits. One credit may be granted for systematic and definite home or continuation work as outlined below.

Seventeen units are required for GRADUATION WITH CREDIT, two of which may be for home or continuation work. Standings must average pass plus or above 80.

Eighteen or more units are required for GRADUATION WITH HONOR, three of which may be for home or continuation work. Standings must average pass, double plus or above 90.

Pupils may graduate on the old plan, with 16 or more regular school units. To graduate WITH CREDIT on this basis an average standing of pass plus must be obtained, and for graduation WITH HONOR, standing must average pass double plus.

OUTSIDE WORK.

The following outside work when properly certified will receive credit as indicated:

Regular weekly piano, violin, cornet pipe organ, or voice lessons, under an accredited instructor, one-fourth unit per year for not to exceed four years.

Active membership in any high school or approved city musical organization, one-fourth unit per year. High school glee club or chorus work one-fourth unit per year.

(Credit for music work is limited to one and one-half units.)

Literary society work or rhetoricals, debate, public speaking, or expressive reading, one-fourth unit per year.

Granite or paving block cutting, or work in any of the local trades, shops factories or industries, one-fourth unit for each summer vacation.

Clerking in store, bank, bindery, publishing house, or office, one-fourth unit for three months.

Steady work on a farm, followed by a satisfactory essay on some agricultural subject, one-fourth unit for three months.

Horticulture, gardening, poultry raising, or bee culture, with essay, one-fourth wait for one season.

Raising one-fourth of an acre of onions, tomatoes, strawberries, or celery, one acre of potatoes, two acres of pop corn, five acres of corn or alfalfa, one-fourth of a unit.

Running a split-road drag or doing other forms of road building for three months, one-fourth unit.

Judging, with a degree of accuracy, the different types of horses, cattle, and hogs, one-fourth unit.

Selecting, drying, and testing seed corn, one-fourth unit.

Faithful definite work in the home, with well-written essay on suitable topic, one-fourth unit for three months.

China painting, oil painting, crayon, burnt wood, art needle or other handicraft or home decoration work, with exhibit, one-fourth unit.

Three months' employment in a dressmaking establishment, 1-4 unit.

Three months' employment as nurse 1-4 unit.

Three months' summer vacation tract, with written description, 1-4 unit.

"See Minnesota First" trip under approved instructor, with essay, 1-4 unit.

HOME TASKS.

The following home tasks when well done and certified by parent or guardian will represent 1-8 of one unit or credit:

1. Shingling or painting the house or barn.
2. Making a canoe or boat.
3. Swimming 300 feet at one continuous performance.
4. Installing three or more electrical conveniences in your mother's home.
5. Taking sole care of an automobile for one season.
6. Preparing one meal alone daily for three months.
7. Baking the bread for three months.
8. Cooking meat and eggs three ways and making three kinds of cake. Exhibit.
9. Making the beds daily for three months.
10. Doing the laundry work weekly for three months.
11. Making a waist, dress, or nightgown or other wearing apparel or articles for the home.
12. Making a hat or cap.
13. Keeping a flower garden, with ten choice varities of flowers.
14. Recognizing and describing twenty different native birds, trees, and flowers.
15. Sleeping for one year in the open air or with open window.
16. Keeping a systematic savings bank account for one year, with regular monthly deposits.

HIGH SCHOOL DRAMATICS.

The Senior Dramatics will be given by the members of the Senior class of the High school on or about April 17 and this afternoon tryouts will be given so that the cast can be chosen. A "Pair of Crackerjacks," a three-act piece, brim full of fun and liveliness has been chosen as the vehicle in which they will ride to success. Miss Dawes of the English department will coach during the early rehearsals but it is thought that pressure of duty will require that she relinquish her position before the final rehearsals.

STEPPING STONE TO SUCCESS.

Joseph M. Larkin, supervisor of apprentices at the Fore River shipyard, addressed the various classes of Quincy High school Wednesday morning on vocational training. His address was very interesting and well received by the students. Mr. Larkin's topic was "Apprenticeship, a stepping stone to success." He said in part:

"The great problems of today, with which we are vitally concerned, are industry and commerce, and must be solved in terms of service. To meet them we must catch the spirit of the Greatest Teacher, who said, "He who would be greatest among men, let him serve."

"It is therefore my purpose to show young men the advantages of entering upon some apprenticeship after graduation.

You should be faithful subordinates before aspiring to some official position, realizing that successful men, to a great degree, are those who started in minor positions, and by faithful application, constant service, and unswerving loyalty, advanced to leadership, and, perhaps the greatest leadership of all is that of industrial leadership.

Those who contemplate college courses after graduation have undoubtedly consulted with the master and teachers. This is the logical course to pursue, and should be adopted by the boys who are preparing themselves for other occupations. They should seek the advice of their teachers and the business men of the community, in order to select studies while in the school that will best fit them to meet the demands of business.

While it is essentially proper for the young man who intends to follow a profession for a livelihood to master the languages and other studies of high art, it is equally as important that the young man who intends to follow a trade should be well grounded in the more practical subjects, such as mathematics, physics, and various branches of the training courses now offered by our schools. By this method his training not only meets the demands of the school but the school is meeting the demands of the business the young man intends to follow on the completion of his school courses.

The manual training courses of the High School have been arranged to more nearly meet the demands of industrial lines than perhaps any other branch of the school work, and I am pleased to say that we are always anxious to take boys in as apprentices at the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation after they have had the manual training instruction of this school. Not only are we anxious to get this material for apprenticeship, but we offer special inducements to those who have completed the High School courses and show special fitness for the work.

Our modern form of apprenticeship opens the way to leadership and is perhaps the best stepping stone to industrial success. By these modern methods a boy is not only taught the use of his hands in the performance of his work, but is developed mentally as well, bringing out the best there is in him and making him an intelligent and skillful mechanic.

The leaders in industrial pursuits realize full well the necessity of making their employees happy and contented in order to obtain their best efforts, and to this end the management of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation has striven. We want our men and boys to be as happy and contented as it is possible for us to make them.

GREATNESS.

The test of greatness is success. A single victory is not success either in the field or the forum, but a series of victories due always to plan, courage and brilliancy of execution places the actor above the region of criticism as to the possession of extraordinary powers. The great things in art, in war and in literature are the products of absolutely great men and by the ordinary movements of great minds. The greatness of man is not found in a repetition of what has been done or said in other ages or by other men. The demand is for some new thought, some advance in scientific knowledge, some new idea in government, some progress in art, some feat or stratagem in war, for which no precedent could be found in the age, or some word or deed or policy by which nations are created, regenerated or saved.—George S. Boutwell.

FUNERAL OF ENGINEER NYHAN

The funeral of Assistant Engineer Daniel J. Nyhan was held this morning from the Sacred Heart church Atlantic and was very largely attended for aside from many of his personal friends there was a delegation of forty permanent and call firemen under Chief Billings, as well as delegations from the different societies with which he was affiliated.

The firemen escorted the body from the house to the church and after the mass escorted the cortege a short distance they then took an electric car for West Quincy, meeting the cortage at the West Quincy engine house, from which point it was escorted to St. Mary's cemetery.

Rev. John P. Cuff celebrated the Mass while on the altar were Rev. Fr. McNiff and Monsignor A. F. Roche of Watertown, formerly of West Quincy who gave the eulogy. There was a profusion of beautiful flowers including set pieces from the organizations with which he was affiliated and from the Firemens' Relief association, and ex-Chief A. L. Litchfield who was among those present. The bearers included two firemen tnd two from each of the societies with which he was affiliated.

COSMOPOLITAN DAMASCUS.

The Oldest City on Earth, It Show All the World's Peoples.

At last we are set down in the midst of Damascus, a city that can claim life without a break from its founding back in the dim dawn of the world's history. When Abram crossed the desert from Haran 4,000 years ago this city was standing (Genesis xiv, 15, and xv, 2). She dates back to the time of the Pharaohs in Egypt. In fact, she was old when Greece and Rome were striplings in years. Rome may be termed the Eternal City, but Damascus is twice as old, and though her streets have run red with blood of battle and rapine many times, she has not been overthrown.

"Babylon is an heap in the desert, and Tyre a ruin on the shore," but Damascus remains.

Was there ever such a place to see the nations of the earth parading together? Here in the market place are motley crowds of Persians, Moors, Afghans, Indians, Egyptians, Sudanese, Jews, Bedouins, Druses, Turks, Europeans. The streets—so crooked, so narrow, so dirty, so full of life, with that strange spell of the desert upon them! The residences as seen from the street are ugly and disappointing enough, yet like old barns and tumbledown mills at home are fascinating and picturesque.—Christian Herald.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

How to Build Up or Tear Down This Community

BY J. O. LEWIS

The Strength of the Wheel.

THE wheel, composed of hub, spokes and tire, is one of the most useful and one of the strongest of man's mechanical devices. It also illustrates well the manner in which various parts are needed to make a perfect whole. A GOOD TOWN, A CENTER OF TRADE, RESEMBLES A WHEEL. With all of its contributing factors closely wedged in like the spokes fit into the hub of a wheel the prosperous country surrounding it holds it together like the tire holds the wheel.

So long as all parts are in place the device runs smoothly and is a perfect machine. Remove a spoke and THE WHEEL AT ONCE BECOMES WEAKER and is no stronger than its weakest point.

TO HAVE AND TO MAINTAIN A GOOD SOLID TOWN EVERY KIND OF BUSINESS MUST BE FIRMLY ESTABLISHED, AND AROUND THESE MUST BE UNITED PEOPLE WORKING FOR THE COMMON GOOD.

Destroy the mercantile business or the manufacturing business or the banking business and, like removing a spoke from the wheel, you weaken the interests of the whole.

Send your money to mail order houses or patronize merchants in other cities and you take away that patronage which rightfully belongs to the home merchant and thereby undermine the business of the town. All classes or kinds of business are so closely related and interlocking that when you damage one you damage all.

But we have a beautiful little city, prosperous, growing and happy, and in it we have some of the best merchants, banks, mills, jobbers and factories, conducted by as fine a set of men as you will find anywhere on earth. We have fine schools, handsome churches, excellent public utilities and many fine buildings the equal of any city of its size in the entire country, and ALL MADE POSSIBLE BY THE BUSINESS MEN—big hearted, progressive and aggressive hustlers and boosters.

There is hardly a day that the business men—merchants, banks, jobbers, mills, etc.—are not called on to make a subscription or donation to some institution or some worthy cause—to do something, if you please, for greater building or better living. And that they generously give and have given is proved in the many institutions we have for the intellectual, moral and the spiritual uplift of our citizens. Therefore, when you solicit a subscription from these business men of your home city you should feel in duty bound to give them what assistance you can and to always patronize them to the exclusion of others and outsiders.

THE VALUE OF YOUR HOME, THE RENTAL OF YOUR PROPERTY, THE PRICE OF LOTS—ALL ARE BASED ON THE SUCCESS OF YOUR BUSINESS MEN.

If the town has a lot of vacant stores, idle factories, mills running on half time, there can be no substantial value to property. Therefore, to keep the stores rented, the dwellings occupied and a general good tone to property values it is necessary that you GIVE TO YOUR HOME PEOPLE YOUR ENTIRE SUPPORT.

Patronizing mail order houses is not altogether limited to poor people or to farmers or to people who do not know the hurt they are doing the home town, but is a common practice among certain well known, well to do men. I believe this is more the result of thoughtlessness and of being misled by embellished and highly exaggerated descriptions than through a spirit of antagonism to the home merchant. Moreover, I firmly believe that when you think over this matter seriously and carefully, analyzing it in every detail, that hereafter YOU WILL GIVE YOUR HOME MERCHANT YOUR TRADE.

CHELSEA 44 QUINCY 32

The fast Chelsea Y. M. C. A. first team took a fall out of the Quincy Association team Wednesday night at Chelsea winning by a score of 44 to 32.

The first half was a walkaway for Chelsea, the period ending 30 to 17 but in the last half Quincy took a brace and made a fine showing, scoring 15 to Chelsea's 14 points. Burnham of Chelsea who played back against Price scored 6 goals in the first period but was unable to score at all in the second half. Trask played a fine game as usual making 4 goals from the floor and scoring 8 out of 12 foul tries. Wilcox and Lloyd did good work for Chelsea. On the Quincy team were Johnson, Kenn, Trask, Flanders and Price.

The Chelsea second team forfeited to Quincy and this game puts the local team on an even standing with the Newton second team with 6 games won and 1 lost.

The Warmington Pets beat the Sons of St. George at the City Square alleys. Wednesday night. Johnson of the winners secured the best single, 112 and Ernest Collins took the high total with 276.

The Silent Five play at Braintree tonight against the strong B. A. A. second and a good game ought to result. The following men will represent the Quincy team: Gearwar, Andrews, Dineen, Sprague, Corthell and Robertson.

The two winners in the Sunday School bowling league will meet at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night. The Rand Class showed far better pinfall in their match with the Makarias than the Davis Class boys did in their match with the Clark Class and ought to clean up the match tomorrow night.

SPORT NEWS

Quincy High school has received word that their relay team is booked to run against Cushing Academy and Tilton Academy of Tilton, N. H., at the Interscholastic games in Mechanics hall on Feb. 28. The local contingent have not verified the choice of the matchmakers, and will in all probability write them that they prefer not to meet Cushing Academy which they say is represented by a team far superior to the Quincy five. The members of the team will be chosen this week and final preparations for the event will then be in order. The boys are using the Y. M. C. A. track and exhibit much interest in the approaching games.

A dispatch from Dexter, Me., says that Huntington "Tacks" Hardwick of Quincy, one of the famous Harvard foot ball squad, left Wednesday morning for Moosehead Lake, where he will camp for three weeks and do some ice fishing for trout. He is accompanied by Arthur Eastman, a guide and trapper. He and Hardwick became fast friends last summer when Eastman was acting as guide at the summer school at Moosehead, where Hardwick was a pupil.

The Faculty defeated the Freshmen in the High school gym Wednesday afternoon by a score of 49 to 13. The Faculty outweighted their opponents almost two to one and easily won the victory. The star for the teachers was French, and for the Freshmen Jenkins and Chisholm. On the faculty team were Thompson, French, Fenner, Fuller and Paulsen. The representatives of the Freshman were Westland, Prout, Berg, Jenkins, LeCaine, Chisholm and Gilliatt.

EXILED FROM PERU

Billinghurst, Son and Minister, on Ship Bound For Panama

Lima, Feb. 19.—Guillermo Billinghurst, the deposed president of Peru, was sent into exile, together with his son, George, and his minister of the interior, Don Gonzalo Tirado.

At midnight the fallen chief executive was taken from the penitentiary, where he had been confined since his overthrow on Feb. 4. Under military escort he was taken to the port of Callao, six miles away, where he and his two companions were placed on board the Peruvian cruiser Lima, which at once sailed for Panama.

WILD FOWL FED BY SYMPATHIZERS

Ice Has Cut Off Birds' Food Supply Along Long Island

New York, Feb. 19.—The pitiful spectacle of thousands of wild ducks dying of hunger has aroused the residents of Long Island towns on the Great South bay to action, and daily they are taking large quantities of food over the ice-covered bay to the fowl.

During the recent zero weather the Great South bay became covered with heavy ice and the recent snowfall has placed three feet of covering over the ice. There is but one airhole, several hundred feet in circumference, where the wild ducks and geese can feed, and thousands of the starving fowl have gathered at this place.

BOXERS ACTIVE THE COUNTRY OVER

McFarland Meets Mike Gibbons on March 9.

A GREAT BATTLE EXPECTED

McFarland Makes Demand For $10,000 Guarantee — Knockout Eggers the Man of the Hour In Bantam Circles. Jack Johnson Won't Meet Langford For $15,000 Purse.

Another long established practice at boxing shows, which had increased to such an extent that it became a nuisance, was legislated out by the New York state athletic commission at a weekly meeting. It is the custom of introducing numerous boxers from the ring previous to the start of the main event. In some instances the list of introductions ran up to a dozen or more, and they occasioned much delay as well as weariness to the spectators. The rule adopted by the commission provides that there shall be no introductions from the ring except that relating to the boxers who are to take part in the next bout.

Another rule adopted by the commission was that no cases will be considered in the future unless both parties to the agreement in dispute have signed contracts.

Fight fans are commenting on the effective showing Knockout Eggers is making in his bouts and predict great things for this scrappy lad, who has fought twelve battles since New Year's day without a defeat.

His next fight will be his thirteenth for 1914. But Eggers is not superstitious. "The No. 13 will be unlucky sure," he says, "but the bad luck will be my opponent's and not mine."

KNOCKOUT EGGERS.

The fourth assistant rubber at the Sharkey Athletic club in New York says, "Eggers is the chloroform kid, because he puts people to sleep with either mitt." A statement from an authority like that should prove conclusive as to his ability.

Eggers is a bantam, and his latest victory was over Kid Herman of Pekin, Ill.

The British National Sporting club has received a dispatch from Jack Johnson, in Paris, in which he declines to fight Sam Langford for $15,000. The directors of the club will meet and may increase the offer.

"I'm willing to fight Langford," said Johnson, "but I will have to have a better offer than that made in London. I haven't much money left, but the Britons can't tempt me with a cheap offer."

Johnson has definitely declined an offer to meet Gunboat Smith in a match on the Mexican border this summer. He will, however, meet Frank Moran, the American heavy, on the day before the Grand Prix, as announced.

Packey McFarland and Mike Gibbons will fight in New York March 9.

There seems to be some hitch regarding the amount of money which the boxers are to receive for their ten rounds of work. McFarland, as usual, demands a very large sum. He wants a flat guarantee of $10,000. This the Garden A. C. is not willing to give. The directors of the club say that McFarland should be willing to box on a percentage basis.

This will probably be McFarland's last important battle before he retires from the game. For this reason men who are in touch with McFarland say that is why the match with Gibbons is worth $10,000. Quite a number of wise ones profess the belief that McFarland will meet defeat for the first time in his twelve years in the ring, and because of this he is anxious to obtain a "get away" stake proportionate with the loss of his prestige as a boxer.

Gibbons is so confident of a decisive victory that he is willing to meet the Garden A. C. officials more than half way regarding his end of the gate receipts. Gibbons has conceded all of McFarland's demands in reference to the weight conditions and has agreed upon 145 pounds at 4 o'clock on the day of the battle.

FOR ALASKAN RAILROAD

House Passes Measure Authorizing President to Spend $35,000,000

Washington, Feb. 19.—The administration Alaskan railroad bill, authorizing the president to construct a $35,000,000 railroad from Alaska's coast to its great coal fields, was passed by the house by a vote of 230 to 87.

A similar measure already has passed the senate and the bills will be taken up at once in conference between the two houses, with a view to sending it quickly to the president, who has signified his intention of signing it.

The bill provides for the construction of a road "not to exceed 1000 miles, to be so located as to connect one or more of the open Pacific ocean harbors on the southern coast of Alaska with the navigable waters in the interior of Alaska, and with a coal field or fields yielding coal sufficient in quality and quantity for naval use, so as to best aid in the development of the agricultural and mineral or other resources of Alaska."

BAIL QUESTION COMING UP

May Be Decided In Hearing In Thaw Case at Concord

Concord, N. H., Feb. 19.—The final dispositon of the Thaw case, as far as New Hampshire is concerned, will probably be made at the hearing before Judge Aldrich of the United States court for the district of New Hampshire, which is to begin tomorrow.

Two main questions will be considered, first that of habeas corpus, upon which a final decision will not be made, as Aldrich has already stated that he was to send certain questions involving the constitutionality of a New York statute to the supreme court for review. Second, the question of bail, upon whicha decision will undoubtedly be made. Upon the attitude of New York counsel depends the amount of time which the hearing will consume.

FOREIGNERS IN NET OF MEXICAN REBELS

American For Alleged Spying, Britisher For Filibustering

Juarez, Mex., Feb. 19.—Two foreigners, one a British subject and the other an American, are under arrest here, and the American, Gustave Bouch, may be shot as a spy.

Bouch was tried by court martial. He was found guilty and sentence was left with General Villa. Bouch has been a railroad engineer in Mexico for many years.

The British subject arrested is William S. Benton, owner of a 100,000-acre ranch west of the city of Chihuahua. He has lived in Mexico for thirty years, and his wife is a Mexican woman. He was arrested on suspicion of having been connected with the federal filibustering movement having its base on the American side.

M'DERMOTT SENT TO JAIL

Four Months For Boston Man Who Took Bonuses From Laborers

Boston, Feb. 19.—Edward McDermott is the first to be convicted under the law that makes the taking of a bonus from a laborer, by one who can employ labor, an act of extortion, and Judge Chase sentenced him to four months in the house of correction.

McDermott, who was formerly employed as foreman by the Hugh Nawn Contracting company, charged a number of laborers $5 to give them a job and also charged them $1 a week so that they might continue in their employment.

FREIGHT HITS STREET C. R

Two Persons Killed and Six Dying as Result of Collision

Indianapolis, Feb. 19.—Two persons were killed, six probably fatally injured and twenty-five others were hurt here last night when a street car was crushed between two heavy traction cars.

The dead and majority of the injured were standing on the rear platform of an English avenue car, which was telescoped. Rain, which froze when it struck the car tracks, is said to have made the rails so slippery that the motorman of the freight car was unable to stop it.

MUST PAY $25,000

Verdict Against Millionaire Who Slandered His Partner

New York, Feb. 19.—A verdict for $25,000 against Frederick Hollaender, the millionaire beer importer, was given in supreme court in Brooklyn in favor of Karl Tiejenius, his former partner. He sued for $200,000.

Tiejenius sued because his wife and daughters left him after Hollaender told them he was keeping another establishment.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES

Mr. Georgiana M. Fisher, 73 years old, of Worcester, Mass., was crushed to death between an elevator car and the floor of her apartment.

The Overlook Selleck sanator at Nyack, N. Y., was destroyed by fire with $50,000 loss. Students were driven from the dormitory into the snow in bare feet.

A Singular Union

It Was for the Purpose of Spending a Fortune

By SADIE OLCOTT

George Underhill on coming of age had everything to live for. He stepped into a fortune of half a million, or $25,000 a year; was in excellent health, a favorite with his friends, especially attractive to girls, and the management of his estate was likely to give him enough to do to put an edge on his leisure moments. This was the outlook before the young man the day he was twenty-one years old.

But on that same day he noticed a swelling in his neck about the size of a hazelnut. He had never had an excrescence of any kind on his body and could not understand the sudden appearance of this one. He stood before a mirror looking at it wonderingly. He pinched it, and it hurt a little, though not much. He thought he would show it to a doctor and get his opinion upon it, but since he expected to be busy with his guardian and the lawyers nearly all day, passing the papers in receiving his estate, he deferred the matter till the morrow.

During his birthday he was so taken up with affairs pertaining to his property that he forgot all about the swelling in his neck till preparing for bed, when he noticed it again. He was a bit troubled about it and resolved that the first thing he would do in the morning would be to show it to his physician, Dr. Franklin. So as soon as the office hour of the physician came round George was admitted to his consulting room.

George did not leave Dr. Franklin's office for nearly an hour, and when he did he was in a very different mental condition from when he entered it. The lump indicated an incurable disease. The doctor tried in every way to avoid telling him this, for the double reason that his patient would suffer in mind as well as in body and his knowing that he had not long to live would hasten the end. George, however, gathered from him that he had anywhere from a few months to a few years on earth. As to how much he would suffer the doctor did not tell him. Possibly he did not know himself. He convinced his patient that he had better remain ignorant of what the disease was.

George was a philosophic fellow, and when he had recovered, so far as recovery was possible from the shock, he began to lay plans for spending the brief unexpired term of his life in a way to alleviate the condition to the best advantage. Miss Alice Woodbridge was his favorite among his girl acquaintances, and he thought he would like to have her companionship for the brief season of life left to him. He called upon her, stated the case and asked her to be his wife, agreeing to settle half his fortune upon her, the other half to be spent in such comforts or pleasures or journeys as would help him to forget his coming demise.

Miss Woodbridge asked for a few days to consider the proposition, but, being a girl with an eye to improving her condition, when she gave her answer insisted that the whole amount of his estate be settled on her except the income during his life, which she considered ample for his purpose. Whether or no she was right he did not stop to consider, but broke off the negotiations.

George tried several other girls. One who had no especial affection for him refused him on the ground that she did not care to tie herself up for a money consideration to a man who would be in a dying condition during their married life. Others balked at this or at that till at last George had well nigh gone the rounds of the girls he would care to marry. One he had not tried. She was Lucy Ellis, an amiable, happy-go-lucky girl, from whose shoulders trouble rolled off easily and whose financial necessities were such that she was quite familiar with the pawnshop.

To Miss Ellis George concluded to make a proposal, but, being somewhat discouraged in his quest for a companion in his trouble, offered her much better terms than any he had yet proposed. After modestly telling her that he thought his income would suffice as well as a larger amount for the purpose of making him forget what was coming he promised to settle his whole estate upon her if she would marry him.

To his surprise, she threw her arms about his neck and said, with tears in her eyes: "We'll spend it all. And what will a lot of money be compared with the remembrance that we shall have at least a short time together?"

"But," he protested, "what will you live on when I am gone?"

"Why, I won't be any worse off for money than I am now, will I?"

She looked up at him from a pair of ingenuous, childlike eyes through her tears, and then and there his heart was won.

"Very well," he said. "Be it as you say."

Nevertheless it was not as she said, for George on the day of the wedding, unknown to her, placed $100,000 in trust for her. He did not give it to her direct, for he had no confidence in her holding on to it. Since she took no part whatsoever in the management of his affairs, he was enabled to do this without her discovering that it had been done.

George found in Lucy Ellis just what he needed. Perhaps she was too sympathetic, but sympathy in dealing with a sufferer is a good fault, and George would have rather had her sympathetic than cold. But his swelling grew larger and pained him, and he needed devotion as an invalid rather than a spender of money. For awhile after their marriage they spent money like water. In this George found his wife all that was to be desired. But his sufferings gradually increased, and he was obliged to give up pleasure seeking.

We can never tell for what persons are fitted until they are tried. Lucy, of whom her husband had expected nothing as a nurse, rose to the occasion. Her sunny disposition proved a great comfort to him. When he was much cast down, instead of speaking words of encouragement which she did not feel she wept with him. This did him more good than telling him what he knew was false, and he would say to himself: "Poor little girl! She suffers for me more than I suffer. I must brace up for her sake."

George's condition grew gradually worse. He would not have doctors to visit him, because he had been told that they could do him no good. Dr. Franklin came to see him occasionally and was now and then called in to effect some temporary relief. George asked him one day to tell him the nature of his disease, but the doctor convinced him that it was better for him to remain in ignorance of it.

One day Mrs. Underhill received a note from Dr. Franklin asking her to bring her husband to his office. Many cures were being announced for different diseases by investigators, but most of them excited wild hopes only to be crushed. A cure for her husband's disease had been discovered which—at any rate, in certain cases—gave temporary relief. She might tell this to the invalid, giving him to understand that the relief was expected to be only temporary. Any relief was acceptable, and, ordering a car, George was carried to the physician's office.

Dr. Franklin covered his neck with sheet lead with a hole in it large enough to admit the swelling. What else he did George could not see, and, as for Lucy, she did not understand what it meant. The doctor was bringing to bear upon the swelling some invisible current, but what it was she could not know without an altogether uncommon scientific knowledge.

Several visits were made to Dr. Franklin's office, and the swelling on the patient's neck began to recede, and after awhile it became diminutive. Then one day Lucy took up a morning newspaper and read to her husband an item of news. It was an announcement that the radium rays had been brought to bear on cancer and that the disease had been in certain cases undoubtedly interrupted. Whether or not radium would permanently cure it the operators had not considered themselves prepared to announce.

"Lucy," said George, looking at his wife with hope lighting his eye, "I shouldn't wonder if that's what my trouble is, and Dr. Franklin is applying radium in my case."

"I'm sure it is!" cried the wife with that impulsive embrace which was her treatment for both good and bad conditions.

George was to visit the doctor that morning. When he and his wife reached the office Lucy said to the physician:

"Doctor, my husband has cancer, and a cure has been found."

"Who told you that?"

"The newspapers."

"Well," replied the doctor thoughtfully, "we are not yet ready to announce that we have found a cure, but we feel very hopeful."

"You mean you are certain, but you won't say so for fear of raising false expectations."

"We're pretty well satisfied that radium is death to the cancer scourge."

The Underhills left the doctor's office a happy couple. Their visits to the doctor were continued, and with the continuance of the treatment the swelling returned to its original size. When it had almost entirely disappeared Lucy said to her husband one day:

"George, don't you think it time we were beginning to get rid of some of this property that I married you to help spend? We haven't used half the income."

"That's just what I was thinking about. I fancy I can keep up the treatment as well in one city as another. Suppose we go abroad?"

"It's just the time of year to go, especially to Italy."

"We'll do it. By the bye, sweetheart, this discovery of radium as a cure for my trouble just came in time to prevent you having to spend our fortune alone."

"It wouldn't have been half the fun, would it?"

"I don't suppose it would."

She gave him a kiss, after which he wrote a note to a steamship company asking for room on the vessel to sail that day two weeks and to his banker for a letter of credit.

They sailed in February for a trip to Naples and other Italian cities, and before their departure so great had become the confidence by the medical profession that efforts were being made to preserve the radium producing grounds in the United States for the benefit of the sufferers of the dread disease, which has always been one of the scourges of humanity.

And now George and Lucy Underhill are touring in Europe, but the money they were married purposely to devote to keeping up the husband's spirits is not needed. They have all the comforts and luxuries they require without encroaching on their capital.

DIVERSITY SECRET OF FARM SUCCESS

"Don't Put All Your Eggs In One Basket," Says Expert.

COWS AS MONEY MAKERS.

But They Should Not Be the Mainstay of a Small Acreage—Dairy Business Is Not Get-rich-quick Proposition—A Word of Warning to Would Be Fruit Raisers.

Jared Van Wagenen, state lecturer of the New York State Farmers' institutes, in a recent lecture to farmers and would be farmers in Schermerhorn hall, Columbia university, said that they could make a good living by keeping cows, but that dairy farming was no get-rich-quick scheme at best. His advice to the man with fifty acres was not to specialize in cows or fruit or garden truck, but to take a try at many different things.

"The unvaried story of agriculture," he said, "is this: That under former conditions men turned toward the production of cash crops, usually grain, because fertility was abundant, because the capital required was much less than in animal husbandry and because the cash item came in promptly. Sooner or later diminished soil fertility necessitated the keeping of animals in order that manure be made. Still later came the time when the greater possibilities of profit from the growing of fruit, high grade market crops and dairy products displaced the fat steer and the wool bearing sheep.

"Men who are looking toward the land today on the whole must expect to grow fruit or vegetables or to market milk and cream. The type of farming the city man chooses depends upon the location of his markets and his bent of mind.

Beware of Lean Years.

"It will probably be to his interest to diversify his work to a considerable extent. Putting all your eggs in one basket in farming as well as in other things is likely to be bad policy. There are bound to be lean years. The excessive fruit farmer may find himself all but without income as the result of a single frosty night when his trees are in bloom. Fruit may be so abundant as to sell at prices that hardly pay for picking and packages, a condition just as disastrous as unseasonable frosts that result in no fruit. On the other hand, if the dairy farmer can have some truck crops it frequently will make a most welcome addition to his income and in many cases it will be grown at very slight additional cost. He may find it possible to grow a crop of potatoes or strawberries between milkings.

"Dairy farming has the disadvantage of requiring large preliminary outlay for equipment and land. It also requires expert attention and unceasing care throughout the year. Its advantages are that it maintains soil fertility excellently, and while the profits are never large the business possesses elements of dependability and comparative freedom from unforeseen disasters.

Ten Cows Do Not Pay.

"There are no wonder tales of fancy profits to be told about cow keeping. Success will come only when accompanied by patient, hard work, coupled with real knowledge and ability.

"There is no place for the fifty acre farm with cows as the main interest. The man with small acreage must look toward the fruits and the truck garden. It may be possible to make a good living from thirty cows, but certainly not from ten.

"To buy a farm big enough and equip it for a dairy of thirty cows involves a really big expenditure, as country expenditures go. There ought to be not less than 125 to 150 acres of and of good quality—not merely rocky hillsides—on which are ample modern dairy barns. Cows good enough to be profitable cost $100 each, if in good condition and fresh in milk. One-third of the total receipts probably will be spent for grain feed. To grow the feed and care for thirty cows will require the labor of three men. The depreciation of the cows is very serious—not less than 15 per cent.

"It requires no expert accountant to show that cow keeping is not a get-rich-quick proposition, yet all over the state men are bringing up their families and slowly paying off mortgages by milking cows and delivering the milk in forty quart milk cans at the railroad siding each morning of the year."

BRAIN TO BRAIN BY WIRELESS

Invention Will Transfer Thought, Says Syracuse (N. Y.) Man.

Burton F. Babcock of Syracuse, N. Y., announces in a letter to the Electrical World of London the discovery of a means of transmitting thought direct by wireless.

"A few hundred volts of wireless controlled into a small, strong and continuous current a few inches in diameter," he writes, "will not only convey sound in the form of ordinary conversation, but will transfer thought from brain to brain.

"When one is accustomed to this method of communication a conversation can be carried on over a distance of several miles without any audible sounds whatever."

HATS FOR SPRING.

Designers Are Given a Good Deal of Latitude In Designing Them.

CHIC NEW HATS.

There seems so far to be a good deal of difference of opinion among authorities as to what will be the prevailing shape of spring hats. Most of the milliners agree that hats will be built high and that ribbon will be one of the most popular trimmings.

Illustrated here are two girlish looking new models. The upper hat is of black hemp trimmed with dark green velvet ribbon and trailing red poppies. The other hat is a neat looking affair, with the entire crown of the satin ribbon, which is knotted into a chic little bow at the back of the chapeau.

Charming is the little hat for the spring. Its bigness has gone, but its picturesqueness has been inherited by the tiny, piquant shape of the moment.

For instance, there is the little pompounned Pierrot affair. Can anything be more picturesque? Pompons of clipped ostrich are in quite "high style" at the moment.

Brims might be wide if they did not flare, but they do, for that is the fashion. Some of them ever and ever so high—on one side only—overtop the soft, close little crowns that outline the head in straw or fluff just a speck in velvet, satin or taffeta.

Smart New Outing Coats.

Whether for polo, hockey, tennis or golf, the sport coat illustrated here is a model of smartness. It is carried out in white, a favorite color for spring. It is brought over to the side and fastens with a buckle at the back.

For all their informality, the mid-season outing togs are immensely smart and becoming and have admirable lines of their own.

The ideal tramping rig, for enjoyment of invigorating walks along beautiful country roads, includes a knee length coat, loosely cut and built of all wool homespun, frieze or tweed—a big coat, double breasted, with a collar that may be turned up about the throat, and deep pockets into which cold hands may be thrust.

Under this coat, on specially bleak days, is buttoned a clinging sweater of angora wool, through which no reasonable amount of cold can penetrate. A short skirt of homespun or corduroy, flawlessly cut and with flat plaits cunningly inserted to give room for a wide step without destroying smart lines, swings just clear of the ankles, and with sturdy tramping boots of tan calf and a fur cap that may be drawn down over the ears one is delightfully equipped for an afternoon out of doors.

The dainty high heeled button boot which sets off the draped town costume is out of place on a rutty country road, and not far could its wearer walk in it. Buttoned or laced boots with broad, moderately low heels and plenty of room under the ball of the foot should be provided for tramping.

Popular Sleeve Lengths.

It is said that seven-eighths length sleeves are to be popular in the spring. These will probably be welcomed by the woman who has been spoiled for long sleeves by the long reign of the short sleeve—certainly the most comfortable sort to wear. The seven-eighths sleeves may seem a bit awkward in appearance until we get used to them. A full length sleeve or else one not much below the elbow is usually more becoming.

SENATOR GORE IS EXONERATED

Jury Finds Him Not Guilty of Improper Conduct

BUT ONE BALLOT IS TAKEN

Verdict In Mrs. Bond's Suit For $50,000 Damages Would Have Been the Same If No Evidence Had Been Introduced by Defense—Decision Quickly Reached Oklahoma City, Feb. 19.—Senator Gore was exonerated of charges of improper conduct, by a verdict in his favor returned in the district court here in the suit for $50,000 damages instituted by Mrs. Minnie E. Bond of Oklahoma City.

The verdict was returned ten minutes after the case was given to the jury. Only one ballot was taken.

"We find," the jury stated in the verdict, "the evidence submitted by the plaintiff entirely insufficient upon which to base a suit; that said evidence wholly exonerates the defendant and had the defendant, at the conclusion of the plaintiff's evidence, announced that he desired to introduce no evidence and rested his case, our verdict would have been the same in that event as now returned by us, in favor of the defendant."

Trial of the suit began Wednesday. In her declaration Mrs. Bond alleged that the senator attacked her when they conferred at a hotel in Washington last March, in connection with the possible appointment of her husband, Julian Bond, as internal revenue collector at Oklahoma City.

Gore seized her, she alleged, throwing her violently across a bed. She claimed she freed herself only after several men appeared in the doorway of the room. In the scuffle, Mrs. Bond asserts, her face was scratched and hand lacerated by fragments of her broken eyeglasses.

In his answer Gore denied the charges, and as a counter-charge alleged that the suit was instigated by political opponents who had failed in their efforts to obtain federal patronage.

The jury, comprising nine farmers, a grocer, a banker and a broker, was obtained on the first day of the trial. Mrs. Bond was called as the first witness. Repeating her allegations, she denied any knowledge of the plot alleged by the senator, who is candidate for renomination at the Oklahoma primaries next August.

Efforts to have depositions bearing on alleged incidents in connection with the past of both plaintiff and defendant were prevented by a ruling of Judge Clark, who held such evidence not vital to the suit.

T. E. Robertson, Kirby Fitzpatrick and J. H. Earb, Oklahomans, who were in Washington at the time of the hotel episode, appeared as the principal witnesses for Mrs. Bond. All were unsuccessful candidates for federal positions.

Robertson and Fitzpatrick claimed to have been eye-witnesses to the alleged assault, while Earp asserted that he had been importuned by Gore to have Mrs. Bond leave Washington and "hush the matter up."

BUTLER SUPPORTERS WIN

Bill For Statue to General Passed by Bay State Representatives

Boston, Feb. 19.—After a bitter wordy battle into which race, religion and politics were interjected, the admirers of the late General Benjamin F. Butler succeeded in securing favorable action upon the bill providing for the appropriation of $25,000 for the erection of a statue to General Butler, in the house of representatives.

By a vote of 117 to 104, the advocates of the Butler statue bill succeeded in overturning the adverse report of the committee which had this matter in charge and in having the bill for the statue substituted.

Previous to the vote Butler's civil and military records were both eulogized and censured.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Joseph A. Keating has been confined to his home for a week with a serious cold.

Quincy court, M. C. O. F. will hold a roll call and identification meeting at G. A. R. hall, March 4.

The blow on the fire alarm circuits at 4.08 this morning was caused by trouble on the wires.

Senator Langelier addressed the Current Events club at Hyde Park, Wednesday morning, on legislation in general. Lieut. Gov. Barry also spoke. About 400 ladies were in attendance.

On Saturday evening the Granite City club will follow its usual custom of keeping open house on the evening before a holiday. A buffet lunch will be served the entire evening and the latch string will be out for members and their friends.

At the present time sleighing is exceptionally good and every night sleigh parties have passed through City Square. The most of these parties come to a stop in City Square and the parties adjourn to one of the restaurants for lunch.

Nine tables were in play Wednesday evening at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club. The two best scores of the evening were made by Dennis Crowley and Nathan Ellis. As usual a lunch was served after the tournament.

Although the snow this morning was of the fine quality it is making very fast and the street railway is having a hard time trying to keep its tracks clear and the cars running. Up to noon trains on the steam railroad were running on fairly good time There is a question however how they will be later in the day.

K. OF C. BALL WEST QUINCY

Fourth Annual of Ave Maria Council Grand success

The fourth grand ball of Ave Maria council, Knights of Columbus, in St. Mary's hall Wednesday night, eclipsed the successes of past years and added another social triumph to Knights of Columbus local history.

The invited guests of the evening were Rev. Fr. Thomas R. McCoy, pastor, and Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy, Curate, of St. Marys church, District Deputy Supreme Knight Edward D. Barrett, Grand Knight William A. Carey, Deputy Grand Knight Peter M. Sullivan, and Past Grand Knight Michael T. Walsh, all of Quincy council. Members of Cohasset, Braintree and Weymouth councils were also present.

The hall was prettily decorated with American flags and bunting, and streamers of pink and nile green, blue and white. The platform, banked in palms hid an orchestra which furnished a concert until 9 o'clock.

The concert program was The Joker March of Lake, selections from Whitmark's "The Lady of the Slipper," The Night of Gladness concert waltz by Stern, a popular success; That Squirrell Rag by Rossiter, and the Blue Jackets march of Haroid Rossiter.

The grand march was led by Grand Knight Bernard M. O'Neil and his daughter, Miss Mary O'Neil, and was participated in by an even 100 couples. All the intricate evolutions of the march were carried out with precision. At its close dancing was commenced and continued until 2 o'clock.

Just previous to the final maneouvering in the grand march, Katherine Ash, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John H. Ash and Edward Sarto Minihan, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Minihan, marched to the centre of the floor and distributed the dance orders, the design of which was original and artistically attractive. Both pages wore Spanish costumes and added a touch of novelty to the ball.

From 10.30 o'clock until the close of the ball a buffet luncheon was served by Burleigh Martin, in the lower hall. The menu included chicken salad, rolls, assorted sandwiches, frozen pudding, bombe glace cafe parfait, harlequin, macaroons, lady fingers, light and fancy cake, coffee.

Although the weather conditions were not ideal for the ball they had no serious effect on its attendance. All that attended were in evening attire and the young ladies of the ward appeared in handsome gowns. Extra cars transported the merrymakers to all points after the ball.

The floor marshal was Grand Knight Bernard M. O'Neil and Deputy Grand Knight James E. Geary was floor director. The assistants were Martin A. King, Thomas J. McLaughlin and George A. McDonald.

The aids were Owen H. O'Toole, Michael J. Crowley, Edward T. Monahan, Joseph A. Barry, Charles F. Buckley, J. Edward Reinhalter, Chas. A. Reardon, Angelo P. Bizzozero and George E. Reinhalter.

The reception committee was headed by William H. Teasdale and consisted of Charles J. McGilvray, John J. King, William J. Corcoran, Dr. John T. Reynolds, Dr. John H. Ash and John J. Mahoney.

Town River Yacht Club Entertain at Clubhouse

The first of a series of social events under the auspices of the Town River yacht club was held Wednesday at the club house at the foot of Edison street, and took the form of a ladies' night. There was a large attendance of club members with their ladies and a pleasing program was given. This included selections by an orchestra, an address of welcome by Commodore J. R. Mellen. Other numbers of the program were: selections by the Old North trio; readings by Henry Armstrong and Mrs. Armstrong; and vocal solos by Harry S. Anderson. All of the numbers were greatly enjoyed and freely encored. Following the entertainment refreshments were served, the evening closing with dancing for which French's orchestra furnished the music.

The general committee in charge of the evening were George H. Jaques, chairman, Commodore J. R. Mellen, Joseph Carruthers, W. C. Luther, William T. Irwin, A. MacGeachie, R. M. Harmon, A. J. Coates, Arthur Foster, Edward F. M. Royce, W. N. Newcomb, T. M. Gabler, Eugene Gaudreau and William Gibson. The dancing was in charge of ex-Commodore Thompson B. Crane and Elijah P. Barrows.

This evening the club will hold a whist party for gentlemen only. Other events scheduled are a yachtsmen's supper Feb. 26, and an illustrated talk by Rev. R. E. Armstrong on March 4.

FAIR AT QUINCY POINT

Entertainment Given by the Campfire Girls and Others

Although the travelling was rather rough Wednesday evening it did not prevent a good attendance at the Colonial Dames' fair at the Washington street Congregational church given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. The vestry where the fair was held was prettily decorated in a Washington's Birthday scheme and most of the ladies in charge were dressed in Colonial costume.

There were booths for the sale of useful and fancy articles, and they were in charge of the following chairmen. Cake table, Mrs. Jacob Peterson; candy table, Mrs. Daniel Scouler; punch table, Mrs. E. H. Bushnell; fancy table, Mrs. C. W. Newcomb; apron table, Mrs. Walter Hayden; children's table, Mrs. Carlton McNeil.

The supper which was served at 6.30 was in charge of Mrs. Will Hayden, the menu consisting of cold meats baked beans, potato salad, macaroni, rolls, coffee and pies of all kinds.

At 7.45 a pleasing entertainment was given, by the Campfire girls under the direction of Miss Ruth Bass. The drama, which was one of two acts was entitled "An uninvited member." The young ladies in the cast were: Mabel Roache, Jennie Gibb, Sara Leet, Doris Carter, Doris Peterson, Frances Ward, Marion Allen, Marion Peterson, Elsie Carter, Mary Leet and Eva Forrest.

In addition to the drama there were recitations by Marie Lorentsen and tableaux by the Camp Fire girls. During the drama the young ladies were assisted by a delegation from the Boy Scouts.

PLENTY OF SNOW.

Just as if we had not had snow enough during the past week or ten days, more began to fall during Wednesday night. The weather predictions of Wednesday were for rain or snow during that night. It was after midnight however before it began to snow and by daylight several inches of the white mantle had been added to the snow and ice which already covered the ground. As the snow of the past few days fell on a foundation of ice, the chances are that it will remain with us for some days.

FALSE ALARM.

The alarm from Box 71 at 10.20 Wednesday night was a false alarm. The apparatus made good time in reaching the scene in spite of the hard going, but found no sign of a fire, or nothing to indicate who had sounded the alarm.

WOMAN BEATS BRITISH PEER

Militant Vigorously Applies Whip to Lord Weardale

MISTOOK HIM FOR ASQUITH

Noted Liberal Has Face Seared With Welts and Lip Cut When Assaulted While Waiting With Wife For Train—Assailant Remanded Without Bail For Trial

London, Feb. 19.—Lord Weardale was attacked by a suffragette in Euston railway station, knocked from his feet and badly beaten with a dog whip.

The suffragette, after being locked up, declared she had mistaken Weardale for Premier Asquith. "$t was Premier Asquith I wanted to lash," she said.

The peer was accompanied by Lady Weardale when the attack occurred. They were waiting for a train when a woman approached Weardale as though to ask him a question. As he turned toward her the woman drew a dog whip from her jacket and began striking at his face.

Weardale was so astonished that he could hardly move, while Lady Weardale began screaming for a policeman. One blow knocked the peer from his feet and as he lay prone the woman continued to inflict blows.

A detective placed the woman under arrest. A taxicab was called and Weardale was conveyed to his home. His face was seamed with welts and his lip cut by the whip.

Weardale is a Liberal, is president of the Inter-Parliamentary union and is one of the most influential members of the upper house of parliament. He recently visited the United States in behalf of the movement to celebrate 100 years of peace this year. He is also a writer of note. He is opposed to women's suffrage.

At the time of the attack Lord and Lady Weardale were on their way to Northampton to attend the wedding of Sidney Peel and Lady Delia Spencer. The station was crowded with about 200 members of aristocracy leaders on their way to the same function.

Lord Weardale's assailant was remanded without bail for trial. Weardale testified that the woman was a stranger to him. He added as a possible explanation for the assault that he and Earl Curzon of Kedleston were joint presidents of the anti-suffragist society.

Longfellow Thinks Blackmailers' Letters Were Idle Threats

Boston, Feb. 19.—There will be no further vigilance of detectives and armed guards about the Allston home of Henry W. Longfellow, who has received letters threatening his family with death and the destruction of his home by bombs unless the sum of $10,000 is left beneath a stone in a vacant lot on Allston street.

Longfellow decided last night that ample time has been given the blackmailers to carry out their threats, had they been sincere.

He is convinced that the letters were idle threats, and states that he will seek no further assistance from the local police or postoffice inspectors. Today he will dismiss the men who have stood guard each night.

BUSINESS IS DULL

Idle Clerks In City Market Which Sells Groceries at Cost

Chicago, Feb. 19.—Chicago's unemployed did not flock to take advantage of the opening of the municipal market, which will sell them groceries at cost.

Up to 9 o'clock there had not been a single customer and all the municipal clerks had to do was to dust off the shelves where were beans priced at 3½ cents a pound instead of 7; scap at 3½ cents a bar; rice at 2½ cents a pound instead of 6, and bacon at 17 cents a pound.

First customers will not be questioned as to whether they have employment. Later purchasers will be investigated.

MENS' CLUB AT BRAINTREE

President and Speaker Both Prominent In Quincy

The February meeting of the Men's club of the South Congregational church, South Braintree, was held in the chapel Wednesday evening. Supper was served at 6.45 o'clock and consisted of baked beans, brown bread, cold ham, coffee, rolls, hot apple pie and ice cream.

After a social session with "smokes," during which time the names of two gentlemen were proposed and accepted for membership, all adjourned to the upper hall where Frank A. Read, the new president, introduced as the speaker of the evening A. Fitch Bromley, secretary of the Quincy Y. M. C. A., who had for a subject "Our responsibility to the coming American."

Mr. Bromley's talk was concerning the work of the Y. M. C. A. in helping immigrants in various ways as soon as they land in this country. He told of the good work the Association secretaries do in meeting these men at the wharf, protecting them from sharpers starting them to their destinations, teaching them the language etc, etc. Mr. Bromley considers the problem of immigration a vital one, one that affects us all, and one that none of us should dodge. He expressed the hope that the South Congregational church would appoint a committee to look into the mater. Mr. Bromley's remarks were reveiced with enthusiasm and he was accorded a rising vote of thanks.

President Reed showed himself to be a hustler an dthe right man in the right place. On account of illness in the family, or inability to serve for other reasons, Mr. Reed was unable to get a chairman for the supepr committee and so made all the arrangements for the evening single handed and at the last moment secured a speaker, doing practically all the work of preparation himself. The other members of the committee were John C. Bridgham, Percy Thayer, J. E. Allen, Dr. W. B. Robbins and M. C. Gillette. These gentlemen acted as waiters and were assisted in the kitchen by Mrs. Isaline R. Coy.

CAMPBELL—McDONALD.

The home of Mr. Harry Campbell, 142 Quincy street, Quincy was the scene of a happy event Wednesday evening when his wife's sister Nora, daughter of Kenneth McDonald, Brookfield, P. E. Island was united in marriage to his brother, William Foster Campbell of Quincy.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. B. McLeod, M. A., pastor of the First United Presbyterian church, Quincy, in the presence of about fifty invited guests, friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The charming bride who was given away by her brother Donald, was gowned in white satin with beaded tunic and white Chantilly lace. The bridesmaid Florence May McDonald, sister of the bride was becomingly attired in pale blue charmeuse, with overdress of white shadow lace and beaded tunic. The groom was supported by his brother John A. Campbell. After the ceremony the guests to the number of about fifty repaired to the dining room where a sumptuous supper was served. Red and white carnations added to the attractiveness of the scene. A feature of the evening was the sing of Gaelic songs by the bridesmaid and her sister, Mrs. Harry Campbell. Donald McDonald "put the Gaelic on the violin" with thrilling effect. The numerous and valuable presents testify to the popularity of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell and all wish them a happy journey through life.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A very pleasant surprise party was given to Miss Elsie Whitehead at 308 Farrington street Wednesday evening by the members of her Sunday School class, composed of the Misses Bertha Schultz, Mildred Bean, Annie Lave, and Florence Martin. The following young men were also present: Waldo Crafts of West Somerville, George Woodsum of South Braintree, Edward Newcomb, of West Quincy, George Parlee and Edward Schultz of Atlantic. Games and refreshments helped to pass a very pleasant even ing.

—An advance notice of the automobile show to be held in Boston states that five years ago it required considerable physical exertion to operate a car. Today one may start it, drive it, light it, and in addition, may light his cigar electrically, without taking his hands from the steering wheel, or at least without getting out of his seat. But a good many drivers do not have as much trouble starting it as they do in stopping it. There is yet much to be done in making the auto fool proof and accident proof.—Spencer Leader.

PROFIT SHARING AT THE SHIPYARD

President Schwab Tells Commercial Club His Theories Work Out Beautifully

Would Not Apply to Whole Industry But to Departments

President Schwab of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation of Quincy was a speaker on Thursday evening at the Commercial Club, Boston. His remarks were of local interest saying in part:

"Great corporations have worked great benefit for this country, but in one respect—the deadening of individual initiative and enterprise—have done great harm.

"It was this spirit of individual initiative, that gave to this country its splendid industrial impetus, and it should be revived and encouraged if we are to maintain our present position."

He declared that in the Bethlehem steel works and at Fore River in Quincy since he obtained control of the shipbuilding plant, he has put his theories into practice and has found that they work out "beautifully."

"My idea is to reward men for what they do, according to the normal standards of salaries or wages, and to encourage initiative, enterprise and efficiency by additional rewards," he explained. "This is profit-sharing, to be sure, but with the men who really contribute to the profits and not with those who do not.

"Determine what is a fair output for a fair wage in any department and then, when that output is exceeded in quality or efficiency, share with the actual producers in this department the profits of their production. And as the output increases in quality, quantity or efficiency beyond certain standards let the percentages of profit increase.

"Such a plan generates enthusiasm, causes men to think and stirs them to action, lifts the day's work out of the dead level of routine and develops initiative and enterprise. Through a proper and well-planned efficiency system even the humblest worker can be recognized by this plan, and, if he cannot properly increase his output, can be encouraged to produce it more economically or efficiently."

Although Mr. Schwab did not mention the plans of George W. Perkins or Henry Ford, he said, in response to questions, that he did not wholly approve profit-sharing plans that included an entire industry rather than progressive departments of it. Such general plans of profit-sharing he regarded simply as wage increases.

He said he thought the corporation a necessary factor of modern business, and that Government supervision is unobjectionable and even desirable, so far as it provides against plans for price maintenance or restriction of output. If carried to an extreme, however, he said it would simply add a prohibitive expense to the cost of carrying on business, without any return either to producer or consumer to compensate for this cost.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

City Clerk Crane Reports on Marriages and Deaths

The time for filing nomination papers for the special election in Ward Three, expires Wednesday, Feb. 25, at 5 o'clock. There are rumors that some of the candidate for the Republican nomination defeated at the primaries, are to take out nomination papers.

The City Clerk is busy tabulating the vital statistics of the city. According to his returns the total number of marriages recorded in the year 1913 was 422 compared with 398 in 1912; and the total number of deaths 562 compared with 477 in 1912. The work tabulating the births is being delayed on account of the physicians not filing their returns. From what have already come in however the number of births recorded for the year 1913 will be unusually large.

Nothing has been done as yet toward making alterations at City Hall to provide more room for the Mayor's office. At one time it was planned to take a part of the Council Chamber for one of the offices for the City Engineer, but on account of the kick that was being put up by the members of the City Council, this was given up. Several schemes have been suggested to give the Mayor more room, but just what will be adopted is not definitely settled.

Chief of Police Burrell has gone to Brooklyn, N. Y., after George W. Glines who is wanted in Quincy for neglecting to support his wife and minor children. He is expected back tonight or Saturday.

Commissioner Brown is having his hands full just at present in an effort to keep the streets and sidewalks passable. The snow of the last two storms was of the fine dry kind, which has now been worked up into a mealy mass, which is not only hard to handle but makes walking difficult.

WHIST AND DANCE.

St. Kevins court, M. C. O. F., held a well attended whist and dancing party in Poland hall, Atlantic, Thursday night. Guests were present from all parts of the city. The winners of whist souvenirs were Mrs. John Poland, Mrs. Frank Mullen, Miss Margaret Dennehy, George Lemieux, John Kane and Patrick Duggan. Music for the dancing which continued until midnight was by Wilson's orchestra. The committee consisted of Richard A. Cole, William McCarthy and Miss Mary Driscoll.

ANNUAL BALL OF THE EAGLES

The Grand March Was a Feature of Evening

The annual concert and ball of John Adams aerie No. 1180, Fraternal Order of Eagles was held in Alpha hall Thursday night with an attendance that was not lessened because of unfavorable weather conditions.

The special guest of the evening was Mayor John L. Miller who arrived during the concert. He was given a fine reception by those present. Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, had been invited but pressure of business prevented. A letter of regret, wishing the aerie a continuation of their prosperity, was received from him.

The concert program, given by Wilson's orchestra included the Kings Escort march of Losey, Suppe's Jolly Robbers overture, Wiegaud's Tender Memories concert waltz, Remick's popular song success, Good-bye Boys, and Remick's American Lady. The orchestra was completely hidden by palms and potted plants from the green houses of Perry Green.

The grand march formed at 9.30, with President and Mrs. Frank J. Duffy and Past President John J. Feeley and Miss Annie Shea as the leading couples. The uniform degree team of the aerie came next and was followedfollowed by 100 couple.

All the new grand march formations were executed, including the initials of the order, and as the marchers divided for the last time the programs were distributed by Lauretta McArthur and Elizabeth Marie Gillis, two popular Quincy Point girls.

The feature of the evening was the drill by the degree team which has been state champion several years. Directed by Conductor Bernard Burke the team carried out the initiatory and installation drills, omitting nothing in their fine military presentation.

Dncing was enjoyed by all of the younger people that attended and the gallery was thronged by the mothers and wives of members. A buffet luncheon was served during the evening.

THE INVISIBLE COMMISSION NAMED

G. B. Bates Tells Legislature It Includes Messrs. Faxon, Whitman and King

Hearing on City Plan to Abolish Grade Crossing

For nearly two hours Thursday, the bill calling for the abolition of grade crossings according to the "City plan of depression" was intimately discussed by the railroad committee of the Legislature and interested parties and Mayor John L. Miller and Gustave B. Bates, his principal assessor clashed in their opinions.

Mr. Bates accused the executive of exceeding the prerogative of his office in signing the decree of the Grade Crossing Commission before the public Service Commission a few days ago. Mayor Miller defended his action on the ground that the best engineers in the state had declared that the only practicable solution to the problem was elevation, and he added, "I was one of those that was not afraid to change my mind."

Representatives Edward J. Sandberg and Michael T. Sullivan, in their personal capacity, both recorded themselves in favor of the bill. Others who favored it were President John L. Hamilton, representing the Board of Trade; Levi A. Turner, who conducted the hearing. Its opponents were Mayor Miller, City Solicitor Walter S. Pinkham and Henry M. Faxon.

The bill drafted by Mr. Bates, signed by Mayor Miller as a protective measure, and presented by Representative Sullivan would have probably been withdrawn had the Executive not been absent, with the City Solicitor, when the hearing opened. Both were before the committee on roads and bridges and their position was not known to the committee until the propponents had placed their sentiments on record.

No hearing ever held at the State House developed so animated a discussion as this one and charges of an "invisible government" and "the fixing of the commission" were made by Mr. Bates.

During the heat of the arguments a member of the committee asked the name of the Grade Crossing Commissioners, and when the principal assessor named John L. Bates as chairman he next remarked, "a relative, but on occasions like this blood runs no thicker than water."

The committee was generous in its suggestions as to where relief could be obtained and several intimated that they considered their committee had nothing to do with the approval or disapproval of grade crossing plans which had been completed after seven years work by engineers.

Mr. Bates, said, as a member of the committee appointed to consider the abolition of grade crossings in the City of Quincy, a business man, he was present to favor the petition of the Mayor, for depression according to the City plan. He declared it to be the only solution and said the Public Service Commission had ruled one of their patent absurdities again. They not only propose to block Saville street but steal Irving place, charged Mr. Bates. Granite street has been an abomination to the city since the railroad was put over it. School street is safe in its present position but the decree plan calls for an elevation which will make a prohibitive grade.

Mr. Bates introduced his twelve reasons why the tracks should be depressed. He said such action left an opportunity of running another street from Granite to Adams street which would relieve the congestion of City Square.

After taking up the subject from every possible angle, in reply to questions, Mr. Bates was asked why the commission favored elevation when depression would do as well according to the views of the speaker, Mr. Bates said, "Ah, I am glad you asked me that. There is a scheme on foot to unfold a lot of land, stop up streets and build another street for an invisible commission who has control of the city. From School street to the Adams Temple three gentlemen owned and controlled 75 per cent of the centre, and they can paralyze and prevent business progress on the west side and monopolize the business on the east. In combination with the Grade Crossing Commission they fixed our Public Service Commission in some way, that body that has been so discredited by the courts and people."

Mr. Bates named Messrs. Faxon, Whitman, King, as the gentlemen in question, and in reply to further questions as to the status of the grade crossing problem said "I think the Mayor exceeded the prerogatives of his office when he accepted the decree before the Public Service Commission. I would liked to have ap-

INFANT MORTALITY.

Miss Julia Lathrop, chief of the new federal Children's Bureau, says in her first annual report, that 150,000 babies under one year of age die in a year as the result of neglect.

Some one has remarked that it is more dangerous to be a baby under five years of age than to be over 80 years of age. The death rate is bigger.

It is a curious fact that hard times decrease infant mortality. Prosperity raises the baby death rate. For when times are good, the mothers go into the mills. There they make the tragic trade of child life in exchange for the money that is supposed to buy more happiness and comfort.

When the Lancashire mills of England were shut down as the result of the American Civil war and consequent cotton famine, the death rate of adults in that hungry and haggard district showed a marked increase. But the death rate of infants was smaller.

The natural food of infants, even with an ill nourished mother, is more wholesome than food that seems better from the adult viewpoint, if it is accompanied by neglect.

Of course the needless infant mortality is largely among the ignorant population, a big slice of it in families of newcomers just arrived from the coarser sections of Europe. When the immigrant baby is sick, the doctor is the last one to be called. Previously a council of neighbors and friends is held. The conclave assembles in the sick room, the men smoking. The air is nearly thick enough to stifle a well person, let alone the little bud of life fading out on the pillow. As a last resort the physician comes. But it is too late.

"Doctor no good" says the neighborhood, as the relatives gather for the funeral. But the undertaker's bill is enough to have paid the doctor's several times over had he been called in time.

REPRESSION OF GRAFT.

The state of New York is at present engaged in one of its smelling campaigns that come around as regularly as Presidential elections. The results are physically nauseating and mentally depressing.

In the year 1910 there was a general clean-up of graft in a number of cities and states. The results were widely accepted as rather permanent. The house of politics after abundant ablutions of disinfectants and purifiers seemed in fairly wholesome and sweet condition. The New York Nation, remarking on the improvement, said at that time: "It will be long before things can get as bad at Albany, at Columbus, and at Pittsburgh, as they were before this work of housecleaning was undertaken."

Perhaps the editorial prophet who wrote that forecast is not as confident of this regeneration as he was. This recurrence over and over again of the black trail of graft, through public departments, legislatures and city councils, is the most depressing feature of American life.

Even if it were possible to put a lot of the grafters in jail, the temperamental good nature of the American people would come to their relief. The opinion would be widely entertained that the disgrace of the thing had "punished them enough."

The shock of separation from comfortable or even refined homes would awaken widespread sympathy. The distress of their families would create pity. The plucky way in which they accepted the inevitable would give rise almost to admiration. Petitions for their release would be freely signed in almost any business community.

Graft will go on and on in politics, until the grafters are put on the same plane as burglars, and are sentenced accordingly and the sentence executed. Legal involutions need to be abbreviated, so that final justice can be meted out while the memory of such acts is still fresh.

Brutal Torture Said to Have Been Inflicted Upon Turk

PUNCTURED WITH A KNIFE

Fifteen Wounds on Hands and Eight on Forehead Before He Was Battered to Death With Iron Pipe—Claim of Counsel For Two Suspects Who Are Under Arrest

Boston, Feb. 20.—Brutal tortures were inflicted on Ismayel Izmerly-Oghlo, the Watertown Turk who was found dead with his head battered in in East Watertown, according to the statement of Sevasly Miran, an Armenian attorney, after an interview with the two Armenians charged with the murder.

This is declared to be more probable than the theory of the police that the murdered man was the victim of a vendetta or of a black hand society,

The men charged with the crime are Elgia Aselbigian, 23, and Hapit Kahyaian, 22, both of East Watertown.

According to the police there were fifteen punctures on Oghlo's hands and eight on his forehead. They were probably made with a knife. His death, however, was caused, not by the punctures, but by a terrific battering with a three-foot iron pipe with a curved elbow on one end.

"I believe the victim was tortured before he was finally killed to compel him to give up money I have heard he won at cards," said Miran. "He is said to have won an amount that would appear large to the kind of men he was playing with. The puncture marks on his body indicate that he was subjected to incredible agony before he found relief in death."

The Watertown police and State Officer Smith declare that the men under arrest were with Oghlo about twenty minutes before the murder was committed at an Armenian coffee house in East Watertown, and engaged in an altercation with the victim there.

The coffee house in question is conducted by Meikle Hadjiskarian, who, with Hagop Doostoonian, was arrested, charged with being accessories before the fact, and sent to jail without bail.

The police made an exhaustive search yesterday for evidence against Aselbigian, in the shape of hidd garments which he wore Wednesday night, and which, the police believe, will show blood stains. It is alleged that blood stains have already been found on some of the clothes he wears, but that the coat he wore Monday night has disappeared.

SOLICITED CASH BY MAIL

Goethals Fund Promoter Placed Under Arrest at Washington

Washington, Feb. 20.—Robert A. Hamilton, aged 37, who says he is a civil engineer employed by the Canadian Pacific railway, was arrested here by postoffice inspectors on a charge of having used the mails with intent to defraud.

They charged him with connection with a project which mailed circulars to mayors of 700 cities soliciting contributions to a $50,000 fund to buy a home for Colonel Goethals.

Hamilton protested that he was a great admirer of Goethals and intended to withhold from the funds collected only enough to pay his expenses in arranging for the gift to the Panama canal builder.

Steerage Passengers on Steamer Roma Moved From Providence

Providence, Feb. 20.—The 163 steerage passengers of the Fabre line steamer Roma, from Mediterranean ports, who have been detained here because of the discovery of two cases of typhus among Turkish immigrants, were transported to the New York quarantine this morning on a special train.

Because of lack of quarantine accommodations, they have been detained on the Roma here, as the authorities would not allow them to proceed to New York on the steamer because of her damaged condition.

The Roma will clear for New York to repair damages sustained from her pounding for six hours on the rocks of No Man's Land during the blizzard of Monday.

ONE POLLOCK HAS A BILLION EGGS

WINTER WHEAT CROP

Lowest Estimates For Record Production of 110,000,000 Bushels

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 20.—Reports from all over the state and southern Nebraska and northern Oklahoma, following the general snow, indicate that in practically every county the condition of the winter wheat still is above normal, with every prospect so far of a yield in Kansas that will smash all previous records.

None of the estimates based on present conditions are for a crop of less than 110,000,000 bushels, and the great majority of estimates run the probable yield from that up to 125,000,000.

SENATE SEEKS INFORMATION

Wants Further Light on New Haven Railroad Pact

NEGOTIATIONS STRIKE SNAG

Breach Over Personnel of Board of Trustees to Take Over Stock Controlled Through Boston Holding Company—Sudden Departure of Governor of Massachusetts

Washington, Feb. 20.—Whether any immunity to the officers of the New Haven or any of its financial or fiscal agents is proposed under any agreement now being negotiated by the department of justice with that railroad was demanded in a resolution introduced by Senator Norris.

The attorney general was called upon to inform the senate also whether any such agreement or contract included the surrender by the railroad, or any stockholders of it or its subsidiaries, of the right to bring action for damages against any of the officers or fiscal agents accused of "looting" the property.

Negotiations for separating the New Haven and the Boston and Maine railroads struck a snag that may delay an agreement between the New Haven and the government. Governor Walsh of Massachusetts, who has been a party to the conferences during the last three days, left for Boston yesterday afternoon without having seen Attorney General McReynolds.

Several points have not been agreed upon, but the most serious breach has been over the personnel of a board of five trustees to take over the Boston and Maine stock now controlled by the New Haven through the Boston Holding company. The government made one concessison on this point, as it at first asked for a board of three trustees.

The departure of Walsh came on the heels of his statement that he expected to remain in Washington until the main points of the agreement were settled. He indicated before leaving, however, that he had made certan the optional interest the state of Massachusetts has in the matter will not be affected by any agreement later reached by the government and the New Haven officials, and that he does not believe it will be necessary for him to return to this city.

Chairman Elliott of the New Haven, who left to confer with other New Haven officials in New York city, is expected back next week.

"There are important questions of law and questions of financiering involved in this case, besides many matters concerned with the actual operation of the road," said one of the New York attorneys. "To draw up an agreement that will dovetail all these matters is a huge task. Much difficulty is due to the fact that the Boston and Maine is in poor condition financially, and may not be able to 'satnd on its own feet' without some able assistance."

BOTH FREE TO REMARRY

Report That Mrs. Mackay Will Get $25,000 a Year From Husband

Paris, Feb. 20.—The American colony was astounded by the news of the mutual divorce secured by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay. The methods of the French courts aided greatly in maintaining the secrecy which both principals sought.

Under the terms of the decree, which was granted on the grounds of desertion, both husband and wife are free to remarry, but the rules of the church of which Mackay is a member forbid his doing so under the circumstances.

No announcement of the financial conditions involved has been made, but it is reported that Mrs. Mackay will receive $25,000 a year.

WASHINGTON LECTURE.

Chrles H. Johnson of this city gave a fine stereopticon lecture on "George Washington," at the Hall Place M. E. church, Thursday evening. A more timely subject could not have been chosen, coming as it does, so close to Washington's Birthday when we should all pause and consider the true worth of this noble man a true American "The Father of this country." A number of pictures were shown, all depicting various scenes and incidents in the life of Washington which showed his sterling qualities and go to make him the hero of the American nation.

FRAIL, SICKLY CHILD

Restored To Health By Vinol—A Letter to Mothers.

Anxious mothers often wonder why their children are so pale, thin and nervous and have so little appetite. For the benefit of such mothers in this vicinity we publish the following:

Mrs. M. L. Cassidy, of Thomasville, Ga., says: "My little daughter was anaemic, delicate and nervous, she had no appetite and seemed listless. We could not seem to find anything that would help her until we were advised to give her Vinol. Inside of two weeks after taking it she showed a marked improvement, both in appetite, vim and looks. I continued giving it to her and words fail to express my gratitude for what Vinol has done for her."

This child's recovery was due to the combined action of the medicinal dements extracted from cods' livers,—combined with the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol.

Vinol will build up and strengthen delicate children, old people, and the weak, run-down and debilitated. We return the money in every case where it fails. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

The boys are: Sturgis Hunt, Milton Moore, James Matheson, William Cummings, William Welsford, Harold Baker, Joe Beale, Frederick Tobbenboska, Gustaf von Colon and Elmer Asklund.

On account of the conference there will be no Saturday morning meeting this week. On Saturday, the 28th, Rev. Carl G. Horst will speak on "A good sailor's equipment."

The regular monthly meeting of the board of directors will be held in the Association hall Wednesday evening Feb. 25.

The monthly meeting of the Boys department committee is to be held on Tuesday evening Feb. 24. The date has been changed from Monday on account of the holiday.

Members of the Senior class are planning for a sleighride to take place early next week.

At a meeting of the Mother and Son's banquet committee held Wednesday evening plans were formulated for making the evening of March 18 a conspicious one in the annals of the Boys' department. The committee consists of the following: George C. Beal, John F. Hunt, J. S. Baker, F. A. Maxwell and Rev. J. A. Matheson. The next meeting of the committee will be held on Wednesday, March 4.

The shop meetings of the Boston Gear Works were resumed Thursday noon. A. Fitch Bromley, general secretary of the Association, conducted the meeting, and Rev. S. C. Lang, pastor of the Washington Street Congregational church was the speaker.

Corporal James A. Tanner who is to address the Men's meeting at Kincaide's theatre Sunday afternoon is to arrive in Boston Saturday and will be the guest of ex-Commander in Chief John E. Gilman of the G. A. R. Mr. Gilman is to accompany Corporal Tanner to Quincy and will sit on the platform at the meeting.

The first meeting of the Cadet class for young boys, 10 to 12 years old is to take place Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 25, at 4 o'clock. The boys will be given an examination, measured for their suits, and given first instruction.

In the Junior all-round games championship Nelson and Wester are tied for first place with 353 points apiece. None of the other contestants have a chance to better that mark except possibly Dodge who has not shown his strength yet.

The first basket-ball team is to rest Saturday night, but will have a hard game Monday night when Brockton comes to Quincy. The second team meets the Milton A. C. of Mattapan Saturday night. This team has only been beaten three times this year and has not been beaten on their own floor Quincy held them to the lowest score of the year in Mattapan.

The second team as well as the first plays Monday night, meeting the Brockton second team in Quincy. Both the Saturday and Monday games should draw good crowds to the local gymnasium.

In the Junior gymnasium contest, the Pilgrims still hold the lead. The Wanderers have nosed out B. A. A. for second place and the Puritans are fourth.

In the Employed Boys competition, Yale forced her way to the front and now leads Tufts by a point and Carlisle by two points.

The Rand Class and the Davis Class roll off their first match tonight. Each team has won from its previous opponent and although the Davis class team will not show its full strength it hopes to make the contest a good one.

The Puritans and Wanderers were unable to bowl their match last Saturday but will try conclusions this week. The teams are of about equal strength and the match should be a good one. Competition for the Hollis bowling trophy is still going on but there are now but a few weeks in which to finish. The rules call for twenty-five strings to be rolled between November 15, and March 15. So far Brooks, LaRose, Hunt and A. Djerf have the best averages.

NEWS ITEMS FROM MILTON

A social and dance was held in Ellsworth hall Wednesday evening which was largely attended by the members of the East Congregational church.

Mrs. Lucy J. Price lectured in Ellsworth hall Thursday night under the auspices of the Anti-Suffrage league of Milton. The attendance was large and Miss Price handled her topic which had to do with anti-suffrage agitation in an interesting way. She was warmly applauded throughout her talk, particularly in her references to the aggressive methods of the suffrage exponents in their fight for franchise.

The exhibition by the Bird Club which has been running in Town hall for several weeks closed Thursday night.

The Milton Club are arranging a series of whist parties and lectures to be held in Ellsworth hall during the Lenten season.

The storm set in heavily in Milton and seriously affected affairs in the town. The blizzard of Monday night travelled at a rate exceeding 50 miles per hour and the snow drifted and swirled causing banks that interfered with travel. The trolleys were delayed, in spite of the effort was made to keep the schedules on time. No accidents occurred although slight damage has been done to property in the Randolph avenue section. Several chimneys were reported to have been toppled in the New State section. Business was practically at a standstill.

Miss Bertha Wallace of the freshman class is confined to her home on Adams street with a severe cold but is reported to be resting comfortably.

Ernest P. Libby of Belcher circle returns Saturday from a trip to Philadelphia.

J. E. Smith of Reservation road who is on a trip to Canada will return Wednesday.

The present selectmen and auditors of Milton were renominated at the Citizens caucus held in the Town hall Monday night. Nearly 200 voters braved the storm to register their choice. George R. Eaton and Maurice A. Duffy, were re-nominated for selectmen. James F. Mitchell and Jacob F. Turner were tied for third place and will run on nomination papers. It is expected that William B. Batchelder and M. Joseph Manning who were defeated will also run on nomination papers. William A. Will and Ernest P. Libby were re-nominated for auditors, defeating J. Herbert Raymond and Charles F. Williams. Thomas S. McWhirk was nominated assessor. J. Sumner Draper was renominated for park commissioner, defeating Frank L. Richards. The candidates for other offices were nominated without opposition.

BRAZIL AND ITS COLORS.

Flag Day There Has Now Become the Great National Festival.

In the republic of Brazil, where the ruling language is Portuguese and a welcoming hand is extended alike to the European and the Asiatic immigrant, great attention has been paid for some years to the cultivation of a spirit of patriotism.

The cult of the flag has become more and more ardent in the hearts of that people, and the "feast of the flag" each recurring November is celebrated with more and more pomp and enthusiasm all over the immense empire and on every Brazilian ship, wherever it may be. In a country noted for its numerous saints' days the celebration of Flag day has become the true festal day.

Commenting on this, Le Bresil Economique of Rio Janeiro says: "Our people are imaginative and simple. A flag undulating in the breeze as it passes by to the strains of martial music, that the officers salute with the sword and before which everybody uncovers, speaks more strongly to the heart of the people than any dry historic date which presents nothing in the concrete and which to the ignorant recalls nothing of significance."

The lesson of the flag is taught to all the children of the schools in Brazil, and on Flag day they gather in the public squares of the city and town and, as in the United States, sing patriotic hymns.—Indianapolis News.

COLLEGE HAZING.

It Was Called "Wrecking" In Carthage In St. Augustine's Time.

At most American colleges it is called "hazing;" at West Point it is called "crawling" and at English schools "fagging" is often applied. When St. Augustine was a boy they called it "wrecking."

In a translation of his "Confessions," for which I am indebted to a learned clerical friend, St. Augustine relates what the boys did at the University of Carthage:

"I would take no part in the wild doings of the 'wreckers,' a cruel and devilish name, which was looked upon as the stamp of the best set. I went about with them, and of some of them I made friends, yet I always disliked their ways of going on their wreckings, their wanton attacks upon the shyness of freshmen and the unprovoked affronts with which they carried on their malignant amusement. Nothing could be more like the conduct of devils, and what name could be fitter for them than 'wreckers.'"

That sounds as if the Carthage sophomore was fully as much endowed with self importance as the American sophomore. I may add that St. Augustine's criticism of "wrecking" is one more ancient proof that "boys will be boys."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Labby's Long Walk.

In "Bohemian Days In Fleet Street" is this Labouchere incident, which happened when he was in the diplomatic service and was sent on a mission to St. Petersburg:

Before starting he had a dispute with the foreign office about his expenses. The foreign office had its idea of the scale; Labouchere had his. But the office refused to reconsider its decision. Labouchere took his leave, crossed the channel and was to all appearance lost. A week after the appointed time he had not arrived at St. Petersburg. A representative of the foreign office was sent out on his trail. He was traced to Paris and from thence to Vienna, where he was run to earth. In reply to his discoverer he coolly said, "The foreign office refused to pay me my expenses, and I'm walking to St. Petersburg."

Precocity.

Little Willie is really too precocious. I met him the other day with his school bag under his arm.

"Well, well," said I, "and so you go to school now, eh?"

"Sure, Mike!" said little Willie. "Ain't I over six?"

"And do you love your teacher?" I asked.

"Aber nit!" said little Willie. "The old hen's too old for me."—Washington Star.

Adam's Apple.

The projection in the front of the throat in men, denoting the position of the thyroid cartilage, is styled "Adam's apple." It develops rapidly usually when the voice "breaks," being comparatively small in both children and women. The name arose from the tradition that when Adam attempted to swallow the apple in paradise it stuck in his throat, giving rise to the swelling since seen in all his adult male descendants.

THE PLAYHOUSE

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

Despite the storm last night a well filled house was on hand to witness the mid-week change of program at Quincy's popular playhouse. And it sure was a show worth seeing. Burns & Clifton were very pleasing in both their singing and their dancing. Dolly Meeden is one fine singer. Her costumes are beautiful and her songs very refined and enjoyable. The Cavanna Duo, did a little of everything and did it well. Clyde Veau & Co. in their comedy skit entitled "The Duke of Mulberry" were the cause of lots of laughter. The photo plays were all tip-top and the orchestra, as usual was there with lots of good music.

Monday a all new show will be given The Keith quality vaudeville engaged to appear includes Conway Sisters' novelty dancing duo; Douglas Flint & Co., presenting their comical comedy sketch "The Mixers;" Lillian Dora, the girl with the golden voice; and the Majestic Musical Four, in a musical act par excellence.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The play that John Craig will give at the Castle Square is a decided novelty. It is a brand new farce, will be acted for the first time on any stage, and as it is yet unnamed, a prize will be offered for the best title. Mr. Craig will give a check for $100 to the patron who suggests the most fitting name for it, and he hopes that many thousands will compete. The play itself is a laughable one, but there is no need to disclose its plot. Everybody will want to see it, in order that they may be properly equipped to compete for the prize. It will be given for only one week on the Castle Square stage.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Wm. H. Crane, Douglas Fairbanks, Amelia Bingham and Patricia Collinge will appear for one more week at the Hollis St. Theatre, Boston, in their present great hit "The New Henrietta" playing the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees and a special holiday matinee Washington's birthday. No theatrical experiment of the last several years has turned out such a genuine treat as this handling of the famous old play by Bronson Howard which is the vehicle for the great stellar cast. The present story was arranged by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes. While it follows the salient details of the original it is a departure in that the present authors have revised and rewritten it to suit the requirements of latter day construction. In its new guise the story loses none of its potency both as comedy and as drama but rather takes on a newer and fuller life and appeal. It was voted one of the best things of the season in New York.

NAVY YARD CONTRACT

Can Supply Ship Be Built Well and Economically?

Commenting editorially on the decision of the Government to build a ship at the Boston navy yard, the Monitor says editorially:

"If the policy of government construction, in the place of private contracts, can be settled, it will probably make the yard a desirable neighbor. The navy yard is an asset for the politicians, those in office and the others aspiring to get in. The notion that the government has at its disposal the places in its workshops gives congressmen from the adjoining districts a responsibility to their constituents comparable to the task of naming postmasters, only considerably more extended in numbers. The officials, taxed with maintaining efficiency have their need of stout resistance to the political filling of the places at the bench and on the ways. The particular opportunity that the new work at Charlestown gives is to make a showing that the government can employ men successfully, measured by the returns of their work. The building of the supply ship will become a creditable item in navy yard history if it demonstrates beyond question the ability of the United States to do its own public work well and economically.

INVISIBLE COMMISSION

peared before that commission but the Mayor did not invite me.

LEVI TURNER.

Levi Turner, in favor of the bill, said he would have appeared as a remonstrant had he known the Mayor was to go before the Public Service Commission. Mr. Bates and Mr. Hamilton would also have appeared. He knew nothing of it until it appeared in the press, and the Mayor was unauthorized by any expressed will to accept the decree. He could not appear here supported by 14 per cent of the citizens of the city in favor of track elevation but we could appear here with 86 per cent opposed:

In spite of the fact that the Mayor was the father of the bill before us, he occupies the inconsistent position of appearing before the commission and taking the stand he did.

CITY SOLICITOR EXPLAINS.

The questions commenced to fly by members of the committee all apparently eager to learn the reason why the Mayor had signed the decree favoring elevation after causing the bill to be introduced that called for depressing and City Solicitor Pinkham took the floor.

Mr. Pinkham reviewed the seven year's struggle with the problem and said when it was found that the decree reported had not been passed on by the Public Service Commission as required, we were requested to appear before the commission for a conference in reference to this matter. Mayor Miller, City Engineer Sargent, Engineer Breed who was retained in the city's interest during the early discussion of the question, and myself, went before the commission and we were asked whether we approved or disapproved.

We suggested changes, but they said they had no power. The situation was, if we approved the decree, something was accomplished, and if disapproved it meant chaos again.

We said, then and there, that the Mayor would withdraw the bill favoring depression that was introduced in case everything fell by the board. I believed it was better to determine the matter then and there than waste further time.

Representative Bazley asked—"Even if the plan is wrong?" and Mr. Pinkham replied "My personal opinion is that the plan submitted by the commission is very much better than that submitted by Mr. Bates.

Representative McInerney asked if as claimed, Mr. Bates could get 90 per cent to favor depression?

Mr. Pinkham replied "I don't care to characterize that statement, but I don't think it is true." To further questions he said, "I think most of the people who attended the hearing favored depression."

MAYOR MILLER.

Mayor Miller said he was a member of the original committee that served with Mayor Shea, since deceased. Various plans were given a hearing. City Hall was packed from back to front at several of them and about 17 plans were presented. The commission finally took the matter under advisement.

Originally I was in favor of depression, especially an overhead bridge over Water street, but when all engineers say a subway under the track at this station is the proper solution I must listen to them.

The City Council, Board of Trade and Granite Manufacturers Association, at the time of the hearings favored a bridge at Quincy Adams and the depression at Quincy.

The bill before us is the child of G. B. Bates and I put my name to it to preserve our rights. We accepted the plan with only one detrimental point in sight, the elevation of School street We were told if the people had been united on it, it could have been developed in the scheme. I was one that was not afraid to change my mind."

Representative Tague asked "In the plans now submitted to you by the Public Service Commission you say an alteration that could be made for the benefit of the city cannot be changed by the commission.

Mayor Miller answered in the affirmative.

John L. Hamilton favoring the bill, said elevation was out of the question and against the best interests of the city. If Quincy as a city has no rights to say how a railroad will go through the city I would like to know where the State fits in railroad matters. The future of the city is put in the balance by the abortion about to be committed and if the raising of our voices can be effective we will protest, with all our might.

REPRESENTATIVE SULLIVAN.

Representative Sullivan said a peculiar condition prevailed. The Mayor had filed a bill for depression and after a conference with the Public Utilities Board he accepted an elevation plan. Mr. Sullivan, who said he appeared in a personal capacity, said he didn't care to criticise, but he thought the citizens of Quincy would have been better satisfied if Mayor Miller had considered his action for a few days instead of taking immediate action when before the board.

HENRY M. FAXON.

Henry M. Faxon reviewed the situation, and in reply to Representative Peppin, who asked how he accounted for public sentiment favoring depression and the commission reporting as they did, said it was an engineering problem.

Mr. Faxon battered down the Chinese wall theory, Mr. Bates argues will result from elevation, and described briefly the changes that will be made. The railroad refused to entertain depression.

In reply to Representative McInerney's questions as to whether he was interested in any real estate along the track, Mr. Faxon said yes, large areas on which he paid taxes which cannot be developed because of this agitation.

Mr. Faxon said depression at Granite street would cause tremendous damage to property used for mercantile purposes.Owners he said could recover damages but the proprietors of the stores along the line would suffer because they could recover nothing.

This closed the hearing.

SPORT NEWS

Jack Welsh set a new alley record at West Quincy Wednesday night when he rolled a single of 151 breaking the record of 148 established last year by Dan Duggan. It was made outside of competition, and is one pin less than the record of George Mahoney who made 152 at the City Square alleys two months ago. Both Welsh and Mahoney are practically joint holders of the amateur record and a movement is on foot to frame a match between them to pick the best bowler.

The Avery and Fallon, tied for first place in the Knights of Columbus league; roll off for first place at City Square alleys tonight. The first ball is scheduled to scatter the bunch at 9.30. The match closes one of the most interesting schedules filled this season. The next event is the banquet when prizes will be awarded.

The single of 557 made in competition by St. Marys Monday night will probably remain as the record score the rest of this season. Nifty bowling is required to pass it.

Wellesley High school, winners of the championship in the Interscholastic league, met their first defeat of the season at Newport on Wednesday at the hands of the Rogers High school. Quincy was scheduled to play these Tigers last Saturday, but cancelled owing to the uncertainity of travel during the storm. Another date will be arranged. The victory over Wellesley, conceded to be the fastest basket ball team in the state is a warning to Quincy. It means that in preparing for the game care must be taken so the men will not go stale, and it further means the best players must be taken along. All this will require special effort and keen choice on the part of the coaches. Quincy has a good material. The team has not reached the standard of real consistency as yet, and victory over the vanquishers of the state champs will bring glory to the local quintette.

Leo O'Dowd of Weymouth has signed with the Topeka team of the western league. He is a well known Eastern ball player and formerly played with the Braintree White Sox.

Irving Carson who is joined to the Red Sox by contract has not been assigned for the summer. Carson is a pitcher who commenced at Milton High school and worked out in this city weekly. Having more beef than most boys it was simply a uestion of strength and when he tackled out of door work he developed rapidly and well. His arm is made up of firm pitching muscles and his eye is keen. He is skirmishing with fame and needs only practical experience to bring him into the big salary class. Youth is in his favor and he is fortunate enough to have been endowed with maturer judgment than most players at his age.

FRANKED MAIL MATTER.

At One Time Soldiers In This Country Enjoyed the Privilege.

The postoffice was first established for the principal and in some countries for the exclusive purpose of carrying official correspondence by mail. Later in France, Great Britain and the United States because of the great expansion and commercialization of the postal system the free carriage of mail matter came to be regarded as a privilege and this privilege was claimed by persons in official position.

In England the house of commons claimed the privilege as early as 1660. It was abolished in Great Britain, however, by the passage of Rowland's cheap postage measure in 1839. In the United States the first appearance of the franking privilege is traceable to the action of the Continental congress assuming control of the postoffice in January, 1776. It is interesting to learn that it was then granted to all private soldiers actually in service for all letters they might write or that might be written to them.

In the early years of the United States government the privilege was granted widely, but it soon became necessary to restrict it. An act of March 3, 1845, limited the privilege to the president, the vice president, members and delegates in congress, the third assistant postmaster general and all postmasters. Other offices were directed to keep quarterly accounts of postage.—Argonaut.

Do You Know the Answer?

A teacher was giving to her class an exercise in spelling and defining words. "Thomas," she said to a curly haired little boy, "spell 'ibex.'" "I-b-e-x." "Correct. Define it." "An ibex," answered Thomas after a prolonged mental struggle, "is where you look in the back part of the book when you want to find anything that's printed in the front part of the book."—Philadelphia Ledger.

American Envoy at Mexico City Is Armed to Kill

EDITOR GETS DUE WARNING

Miron, Who Repeatedly Attacked President Wilson In Editorials, Will Be Shot If He Accosts O'Shaughnessy, Who He Promises to "Get" —Huerta Decorates His Bodyguard

Mexico City, Feb. 20.—Nelson O'Shaughnessy, American charge of affairs, threatened to shoot Diaz Miron, editor of El Imparcial, the Huertaista newspaper, which has been villifying President Wilson, if the editor accosts him. O'Shaughnessy backed up his threats by carrying a pistol and by displaying another within easy reach on his desk in the embassy.

A telegram from Secretary of State Bryan was received by O'Shaughnessy, commending the charge for resenting the insults of El Imparcial and assuring him that the American government would give O'Shaughnessy and his family all the protection necessary.

O'Shaughnessy armed himself against Miron because of open threats against him made by the editor. The American diplomat twice complained to President Huerta about scurrilous editorials in El Imparcial, attacking President Wilson, and Huerta ordered Miron to stop them.

That incensed Miron and he made his threats to "get" O'Shaughnessy. The charge told all about it when a newspaper correspondent, visiting the embassy, sighted the pistol.

"I am armed, and I will shoot Diaz Miron if he accosts me, here or elsewhere," O'Shaughnessy said.

Yesterday was the first anniversary of Huerta's assumption of the provisional presidency, following the Diaz revolution that brought about the assassination of President Madero and Vice President Suarez. The day was mildly celebrated, but there was not much demonstration because of the presence of troops everywhere throughout the city.

Huerta commemorated the anniversary by personally decorating the troops of the Twenty-Ninth regiment, his bodyguard, for their loyalty to him during the year of his tenure.

Approaching Huerta in one of his lighter moods, amid the flowers, music, gaiety and wine of a reception at the Huerta home, O'Shaughnessy obtained the dictator's promise to establish a neutral zone for foreigners during the approaching rebel attack on Torreon.

The state department at Washington is said to be trying to extract a similar agreement from General Villa, the constitutionalist commander.

ROOSEVELT IN 1916

Powers Says He Is the Only Man Who Can Defeat Democrats

Boston, Feb. 20.—Congressman Caleb Powers, a Republican leader in Kentucky, told the members of the Boston City club last night that the only way to save the country from another Democratic administration after 1916 was for the Republican party to nominate Theodore Roosevelt for the presidency.

The congressional elections, said Powers, will result in another victory for the Democrats. If Republicans and Progressives again fight each other, the Democrats will win in 1916. Roosevelt's radical ideas, such as the recall of judicial decisions, he would "forget in his saner moments," the speaker declared.

FIFTY THOUSAND DEAD

Disease Adds to Misery of Starving People In Northern Japan

Tokio, Feb. 20.—That more than 50,000 men, women and children have perished in the northern section of the empire, where millions are starving as a result of the failure of the rice crop, is the information received from government investigators.

The government methods of relief have relieved the distress in a great measure, but an epidemic of disease has broken out and the nurses and physicians sent to the stricken section have been unable to cope with the situation. Volunteer doctors and nurses are now being enlisted to go to the scene.

PANAMA CANAL TOLLS

House Wants to Be Shown Change In International Situation

Washington, Feb. 20.—President Wilson pressed further for repeal of the exemption clause of the Panama canal act in conferences with congressmen. He talked with Senator Kern, majority leader, who said he thought it probable the senate would act on the repeal before the house did.

Although Kern voted for the exemption, he said the president had told him of various international phases of the question which were not before the senate when the Panama canal act was passed. It is thought he will be among the administration supporters.

House leaders desire some announcement or message to congress by the president before reversing themselves on the tolls question, so as to be able to make clear to their constituents that international circumstances had arisen requiring a change.

Representative Underwood, it is understood, while still believing in the tolls exemption, will not organize any opposition to the president in the house.

SANITATION FOR FARMERS

New York State Grange Declares It to Be a Pressing Need

Albany, Feb. 20.—It is not the walled-in city man, but the farmer who is blessed with fresh air and cursed with ignorance of the laws of sanitation, that needs the state health department's aid, a committee from the state grange told Health Commissioner Biggs.

Conditions in the country were termed "shameful." The rural death rate last year was far greater than that of New York city, it was pointed out. Had they been the same, 3000 less deaths would have been recorded up-state.

Dr. Biggs suggested that a rural sanitary inspector and at least one public health nurse be assigned to each of the twenty state sanitary districts. A publicity campaign through small weeklies and dailies was urged.

ELEVEN YALE MEN ARE DISCIPLINED

Story of Reve's on Campus and In Fraternity House

New Haven, Feb. 20.—An all-night escapade, in which Yale seniors entertained a dozen young women on the campus and in a fraternity house, has resulted in the dropping of eleven of the students. This is the largest number of undergraduates ever to be dropped at one time.

The escapade started with a session at the dansant in the grill room of a hotel. The party went to the campus when the hotel closed at midnight.

After tangoing about the historic elms of the campus, the party adjourned, it is declared, to the assembly room of one of the secret society houses, where they continued their revels until morning.

The faculty refuses to deny or affirm the reported details of the affair, but they admit that the students involved in it have been disciplined.

GHOULS INVADE TOMB

Steal Remains of Children Who Died Over Forty Years Ago

New York, Feb. 20.—The bones of three children laid to rest in a burial vault in a Secaucus, N. J., cemetery more than forty years ago have been surreptitiously removed.

The heavy doors of the vault were found broken open and on the floor lay three of the seven coffins in the tomb, from which the bones and dust and even the grave clothes had for some mysterious reason been taken.

The vault is the property of Abel I. Smith, a New York lawyer, who said it had been broken open four times in the last two years. Smith said he could not understand why the tomb should be invaded by ghouls.

An Interference

By JOHN Y. LARNED

"What's the matter, Billy?"

My sister Beth asked me the question one morning when I was sitting on the porch looking dreamily on the buds that were opening on the trees.

"Nothing," I replied.

"Yes; there is."

Beth and I were great chums. Ther was not much more than a year be'tween us, and I was used to giving her my confidence about everything. I resolved to throw my burden upon her in this case.

"You know Alice Woodson"—

"Oh, a case of lovesickness."

I made no reply to this. I was sorry I had begun a confession.

"Go on, Billy," Beth added.

"I won't. You'll only poke fun at me."

"Not a bit of it. I'll help you. Don't you know that I, being a girl, know just how a girl should be treated to be won?"

"You can't tell me how to win Alice. In the first place, she's in love with Fred Perkins; in the second, she seems to have some sort of grudge against me, and in the third"—

"That's enough. You needn't tell me any more. Now, listen to me. I knew all about this before I asked what was the matter with you. I've been watching you and watching Alice, and I'm convinced she's playing you."

"What?"

"Playing you—a sort of cat and mouse business."

"Oh, bosh! For a week past she has treated me abominably and all the while has been looking up with her eyes at Fred like a"—

"Like a chick in a thunderstorm. Will you do what I tell you to do?"

"That depends upon what you tell me."

"The next time you meet Alice pretend to be thinking about something else and don't see her."

"That will make matters worse."

"Very well; if you won't take the medicine I prescribe, go your own road."

I concluded to try Beth's prescription. The next time I saw Alice coming I pretended to be absorbed in something else, and just before we were to come together I turned off in another direction. That was in the morning. In the afternoon of the same day we met again. I couldn't play the same game twice in the same day, so I looked at her. She looked at me, too, or, rather, she stared at me with a cold, blank, withering stare that froze the marrow in my bones. I went to Beth and abused her for getting me into such a pickle.

"You're as weak as watered milk. I'm sorry I tried to do anything for you. I couldn't love a man I could bluff like that."

"What would you want him to do?"

"Crush me like a worm."

"How crush you?"

"Will you simply do nothing so far as Alice is concerned and leave the rest to me?"

Since I felt entirely incapable of carrying on such a contest myself I agreed to this Fabian policy. During the next few days I kept out of Alice Woodson's way so far as I could. When I saw her coming toward me I changed my course. I tried not to look troubled or angry or anything in particular. I did my best to show no especial emotion while waiting for Beth to do something.

One day I met Alice face to face. She bade me good morning in a rather huffy tone. I replied to her salutation.

"I can understand now," she said, "your recent unfriendliness to me since I have learned the cause."

"What cause?"

"Oh, don't pretend ignorance! I used to think that you had a mind of your own."

"And you don't think so now?"

"You're the first man I ever knew who would permit his sister to run him."

I began to catch on to what was at the bottom of this. Beth had evidently been at work.

"What do you mean by my sister running me?"

"I'm not supposed to tell, but I made no promise. Beth has told me all about it."

"About what?"

"About your new fancy, Mr. Ignorance, or, rather, her fancy. Any one can see that she is trying to bring it about herself, and with such a pliable brother I dare say she will."

I plucked up a lot of courage at this. Beth had evidently produced a revolution.

"Do you mean to say that my sister has been betraying my confidence?"

"Your confidence! Why, she told me herself that she was bent on making a match for you. She said she wanted you to marry a girl that was her friend."

I was pretty stupid, but not so stupid as not to see Beth's device and what it had accomplished. I cut the matter short by saying that when I married I would consult no one but the girl I wanted and began to talk of something else.

It would have been better for me to have had the pluck to manage the affair myself, for my wife has never forgiven my sister for "trying to switch me off to one of her especial friends." I have told her the true story, but she won't believe it. Beth doesn't expect her to believe it. She says she wouldn't believe such a thin story herself.

SHORT COATS.

They Are Attractive Features of New Spring Suits.

NEW CREPE SUIT.

Many coats for spring wear are cut on very abbreviated lines, like the one illustrated here. This chic little suit is of canton crepe with a very wide hip sash in satin, which is shown in all its amplitude by the very brief coat. The little straw hat in the shape of a cap has a very high trimming of gathered satin ribbon at one side.

The real straws pointing which way the winds of fashion will blow are the fabrics which are seen upon the shop counters.

If displays of this kind of merchandise are any indication we are to enjoy a season of beautiful modes.

The colors most frequently displayed in the shops appear to include the lighter tints of green, rose, orange, purple and red.

Somehow they suggest the soft artistic colors of the Roman stripes seen to best advantage in ribbons, shawls and sashes which are imported from Italy.

The most exclusive dry goods shops are displaying taffeta and bengaline silks. When arranged close together, representing the order of colors usually to be found in a Roman striped sash, such an effect is unusually lovely and especially decisive when seen against a background, provided by draped lengths of brilliantly colored Egyptian crapes, printed to reproduce old China and Indian flower and conventionalized motifs in bouquet and other forms.

Without doubt the vogue for taffetas of the better quality will be the most prominent feature of early spring fashions. But poplins, crapes and Shanghai silks will be tremendously demanded.

Poplins especially, either in brocaded, plain colored or printed styles, will be in excellent style for the spring. Brocaded homespuns, ratines and gaberdines will also be in demand.

For afternoon frocks and for semi-dress purposes the Egyptian crapes, either printed or embroidered, are destined to receive important consideration.

WHAT'S IN STYLE.

Sash draperies are shown on dresses and jackets.

Some of the spring coats are little more than boleros.

Many of the new blouses have peplums and coattails.

The expanse of tunic at hips is repeated in some of the coats which have godets.

Novelty cottons, taffetas, crapes, failles, gaberdines and serges are the spring fabrics.

Long stoles, soft and pliable, are wound about the figure in various ways, and fur turbans are trimmed with weird fantasies of plumage.

The new bustle effects promise ill for our old clothes of last season. The shoulder still droops, the waist is of goodly expanse, and narrowness draws in the ankles.

In collars the Japanese will last well into the summer, both in blouses and gowns. There will be a few hood effects also. Some flat ones will be draped. Soft, loose girdles with sash ends will be prominent.

Mending China.

Valuable china may be mended with the following mixture. When dry it will bear hot water and ordinary usage. Mix well a teaspoonful of alum and a tablespoonful of water. Place in the hot oven till quite transparent. Wash the broken pieces of china in hot water, dry and while still warm coat the broken edges thinly and quickly, as it sticks instantly with this mixture.

DEWEY'S BOOK ATTACKED

Germans Do Not Relish Account of Manila Bay Incident

Berlin, Feb. 20.—A sharp attack on Admiral Dewey in regard to the statements made by him in his autobiography concerning the German fleet at Manila during the Spanish-American war in 1898 was made in the imperial parliament by Matthias Erzberger, one of the leaders of the Clerical party.

The German newspapers have severely criticized Dewey's book, demanding that the German government issue an authoritative statement regarding the "Manila legend."

Admiral Dewey, in relating the incident in Manila bay, says it arose through Admiral von Diederichs' disinclination to observe the rules of the blockade established by the Americans, one of which insisted that neutral warships entering the bay should report to the Americans.

The German vessel, Cormorant, disobeyed the rule and a shot was fired across her bows, which had the desired effect. Explanation followed the next day, and there was no further interference with the blockade.

KEEPS BODY MANY DAYS

Woman Afraid to Tell of Death of 111-Year-old Husband

Camden, N. J., Feb. 20.—Theodore Harris, who was born May 3, 1803, 111 years ago, died on Feb. 13, and his body lay uncared for in his home in this city until yesterday.

All through the days that have elapsed since he died his wife has been going out daily to work. She had no money with which to bury the body and feared to tell anyone her husband was dead. She is past 70 years old and for twenty years has been supporting herself and her aged husband by going out to do housework.

There is no doubt as to the age of the man dead. He enlisted in the United States navy when a young man so his record was easily verified.

ROAD PAYS $835,512 FOR RECORDING FEE

County Receives Record Check From New York Central Road

New York, Feb. 20.—A check for $835,512 from the New York Central and Hudson River railroad in the form of a recording fee for a mortgage established a new record in the hall of records.

The New York Central and Hudson River railroad paid the sum stated as a recording tax. It had mortgaged all of its property in the state of New York to pay outstanding issues of indebtedness. The amount of the mortgage is $167,102,400. The loan is payable to the Bankers' Trust company as trustees.

The previous record was held by the Interborough Rapid Transit company on a mortgage in April, 1913, the road paying a recording fee of $303,263.

SAILOR REFUTES CAPTAIN

Monroe Seaman Says There Were but Sixteen In Lifeboat

Philadelphia, Feb. 20.—There were fifteen men and one woman in the lifeboat launched under the direction of Captain Johnson of the wrecked steamship Monroe, according to testimony in the trial of Captain Berry of the steamship Nantucket, which collided with the Monroe.

Martin Reinhardtsen, a seaman, testified concerning the lifeboats. Johnson, when on the stand, said he rowed to the other side of the ship and altogether rescued about thirty persons.

Berry is charged with having caused the disaster, in which forty-one lives were lost, through neglect of duty.

JAILED AS FIREBUG

Methodist Pastor Is Arrested After His Parsonage Is Burned

Detroit, Feb. 20.—Rev. J. A. Cottam, pastor of the Methodist church at Dearborn, a suburb, was arrested on a warrant charging arson. The minister had been detained at the county jail while an investigation into the burning of his parsonage, which occurred Jan. 15, was being conducted.

When Cottam learned that the warrant had been issued he resigned as pastor of the Dearborn church, although he asserted he was innocent of the charge.

Industrial School Barn Burns

Virgennes, Vt., Feb. 20.—The cattle barn at the state industrial school, where the executive building was burned three weeks ago, was destroyed by fire with a loss of $20,000. A herd of registered cattle was saved. The fire is believed to have been incendiary.

Westport Wreck Victim Gets $8000

Providence, Feb. 20.—The first verdict resulting from the Westport wreck on the New Haven road, which occurred Oct. 2, 1912, was $8000, awarded to Edward J. Bridgett, who had sued the road for $15,000.

A fast train on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad has just put a powerful searchlight on the observation car to show the scenery en route at night.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Taffetas Plain, Printed and Brocaded. Contrasts Rule and Short Lengths Get Their Innings. New Coiffures.

Styles have been launched for the fashionable contingent that seeks relaxation at the Southern resorts shortly after the holidays, and one can already pick the winners that are liable to last over the next two seasons, if they don't become overpopular. Not everything shown is novel, many types are only the best winter styles revamped a bit, but Spring and Summer costumes are launched now as a "try-out" by the best designers, to see which will catch on, with the smart set that all the world follows more or less closely in a sartorial way.

TAFFETAS GALORE.

Taffetas are leaders for silk gowns of every sort, and practically anything in these silks is fashionable, though the supple, soft sorts that sell from a little less than two dollars a yard, wide width, are best worth while, both for appearance and draping qualities, beside being most liable to wear satisfactorily.

Black taffetas make the sort of frock that goes suitably almost anywhere, and their popularity is therefore easily understood. They turn out especially well in the fussy draped styles of the moment. The peg-top skirts, three tiered styles, and the various plays on the lamp-shade tunics, as well as the surplice waists, more lace than silk, all work up prettily in taffeta of any shade or color.

ATERFNOON GOWNS.

"Afternoon gowns" means all the varieties of fussy frocks suited to wear at Bridge-fights and Tango-teas, and at any small dinner or evening affair. A very pretty one beautifully worn at a tea-dance the other afternoon, was of Nile green taffeta. The surplice, kimono waist of shadow lace had a little vestee of the silk and the sleeves were finished with a soft upstanding ruffle of the silk above a bracelet of dark fur, which circled the arm just above the elbow. The creamy shadow lace extended from the waist down to a little below the hip line, in a full gathered puff—caught to the "peg-top" draped, taffeta skirt by a double valance of the silk. This was banded in the centre with the fur and this same trimming circled the waist. The neck was set off with a soft ruffle of the silk, turned back revere fashion with a little fold of tulle against the neck. Very girlish and pretty.

A YOUNG MATRON.

A dress worn by a well known young married woman at the same afternoon dance, had a skirt of puce colored plain taffeta and a coat of a darker shade of the same silk broceded in fruit designs in dull tapestry colorings. The coat bore the hall mark of a Parisian maker, in its freakish cut, and the smart patchy effect of its odd little split bolero front. The back extended nearly half way down the skirt. All sorts of odd little coats are seen on the smartly dressed crowd here, whether as part of the skirt and coat suit of woolen material, or in some of the many silk and velvet weaves which make very effective extra coats to go with different dresses. Moires in poplin, taffeta, and even faille weaves, and crepe finishes on all sorts of silk materials are particularly stylish and printed effects and brocades are used in innumerable ways for trimmings and combinations.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR CLEVER ECONOMIES.

A Poiret gown of printed taffeta has the full sleeveless waist and little apron of matching plain taffeta, the figured stuff used only for the draped skirt. Guimpe and sleeves of figured lace. This kind of combination marks most of the finest dresses seen here, and offers great chances for clever economy, since short lengths of material work in admirably when such fashions prevail, and it is an easy matter to bring a last year's frock up-to-date, with a little contrasting material if one follows a good model. It is not safe to combine in hit or miss fashion unless one is possessed of the genius that marks the successful designer.

NEW COIFFURE.

In line with the quaint picture styles now worn comes a return to the old time hair dressing familiar in miniatures. A girl with nearly black hair had it parted and brushed smoothly down following the exact contour of the head. Just at the ear there was a flat loop drooping over it and completely concealing it. A low coil at the back completed the old time coiffure Not everyone goes to this extreme, and indeed it takes a very pretty regular face to stand it, but the drooping arrangement that conceals the ear is a notable fad wherever fashionables assemble. Usually the droop is just a soft wave-like puff, but people who go in for spectacular styles, have a flat plastron of hair over the ear and to ensure this and make it more striking a shell hairpin inset with rhinestones is arranged to press against the lock. It is not pretty and looks exactly as if the pin was falling head down, but it's a notable fad with the ultra crowd here. Walking boots with gray uppers are tremendously popular.

ONE STORM AFTER ANOTHER

How Street Railroad Maintained Its Service Thursday

The man who a few weeks ago was predicting that the severest part of the winter was over, and that there would be no more severe weather the present winter, has, like the ground hog, crawled back into his hole. More severe weather than has been experienced this month would be wintry indeed. In the first place, it has been the coldest month of the year; snow storms as well as rain storms have been frequent, and for the past week it has seemed to be just one snow storm after another. On the level there must be nearly two feet of snow and ice on the ground.

Snow fell all day Thursday until late at night. Although it was of the fine quality it made considerable and walking was a tough proposition. The city ploughs were kept going all day, but it was with difficulty that the sidewalks were kept passable. The street railway early in the day abandoned its elevated service through Wollaston, although regular half hour trips were made all day.

On account of the difficulty in keeping this line open, the big semi-convertible cars, which are equipped with four powerful motors were used on this line running between Quincy and Neponset, and all through cars to the Dudley street terminal were run via Hancock street.

In order to keep the service on better time the cars on the Weymouth Landing line were run between City Square and Weymouth while another line of cars were run from City Square to Neponset. In this way all lines were kept open and on fairly good time. The company had its big ploughs out all night and this morning the regular schedule is being run on all lines.

There was not much difficulty with the steam trains during this storm and all trains ran nearly on time.

MEETING.

The gray sea and the long black land,
And the yellow half moon, large and low;
And the startled little waves that leap
In fiery ringlets from their sleep,
As I gain the cove with pushing prow
And quench its speed in the slushy sand.

Then a mile of warm, sea scented beach;
Three fields to cross till a farm appears,
A tap at the pane, the quick, sharp scratch
And blue spurt of a lighted match
And a voice less loud, through its joys and fears,
Than the two hearts, beating each to each.

—Robert Browning.

YACHTSMEN PLAY WHIST.

Although the weather was rather inauspicious the whist party at the Town River yacht club house Thursday evening was largely attended. Play was keen throughout the evening and an enjoyable evening was had. There were fifteen tables in play and the prizes for the best scores were awarded to Robert Lincoln, Jacob Peterson, C. C. Foster, G. Foster and Gilbert Arnold. It was the general impression that more of the same kind should be held. The members of the club are now looking forward to the yachtsmen's supper to be held on Thursday evening, Feb. 26.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

A meeting was held at the home of Howard G. Hinkley on Prospect avenue this week to make plans for an Equal Suffrage organization. A nominating committee of three was selected to present a list of officers at a meeting next Tuesday evening. It was decided to hold a public meeting in the Wollaston school hall Monday March 2, when Miss Marcia Booth Kelley will speak on "Votes for Women," and Mr. Kelley will speak for "Men's Suffrage. A play "How the vote was won" will be presented. Mrs. H. J. Gurney will preside.

RIVADAVIA AT SEA AGAIN

Speed Trials to Be Followed by Gun Trials

The battleship Rivadavia left the Commonwealth docks Boston at 10 o'clock Friday morning to complete her trials. The battleship returned to Boston last Sunday morning after having completed part of her tests which were carried out in a hurricane.

On the present trip she will have her eight-hour run at top speed, and then will try a run at a 15 knot speed for 30 hours. These trials completed she will return to Boston and a little later will go down Massachusetts Bay for her gun trials.

When she has her gun trials all breakable material possible will be put on shore for one of her gun tests calls for the discharge of all her 10-inch guns at one time, and the concussion from this will be terrific and will doubtless wreck what glass and similar breakable material there is on board.

A more unfavorable season of the year, as far as weather conditions are concerned, could not have been selected for the trials of the big ship and the fact that her 30-hour run at 22 1-2 knots was made in a gale speaks well for the stability of the fighting machine. If everything goes well she should complete her trials before the first of the month. In addition to the officers of the Fore River Co., and Argentine officers, she has a crew of over a thousand men on board during the trial trips.

BRIEFS

The annual meeting of the Wollaston Citizens' association will be held this evening. Reports of the officers will be received and new officers elected.

Joseph Mulligan, a conductor on the Bay State Street railway, died at his home at 24 Wesson avenue, Thursday in his 22nd year. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Foxwell Mulligan, two brothers, James and Paul and several sisters.

Rev. E. A. Skogsbergh of Minneapolis, Minn., one of the leading Swedish clergymen in the country, will preach at the Swedish Congregational church of Quincy, March 1, 2 and 3.

Peter J. McPartlin, a long time resident of Atlantic, died at his home at 51 Walnut street, Thursday, in his 71st year. He is survived by his family.

A Change of Tune.

"Mamma, I'm tired of going to school."

"What's the matter, Willie?"

"The teacher"—

"Now, don't you say a word against your teacher, Willie. I've no doubt you annoy her dreadfully, and she seems like a very nice sort of person."

"Well, she said this mornin' that she didn't think I had much of a bringin' up at home, an' "—

"Wait! Did she say that? Well, of all the coarse impudence! You shan't go back there another day!"

Exit Willie, grinning.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Important News In Advertisements

By HOLLAND.

THE valuable news of the day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements. Of course it is important to know what President Wilson is doing, what the latest developments are in China or what baseball club leads the league. But it is also important to know where a bargain in boys' waists, garden hose, breakfast food or straw hats may be found.

These bits of commercial news are among the advertisements. Wise persons look for them and take advantage of them when they are doing their buying. The leading merchants are continually telling you news of their stores, news that is important because it often means a real saving and always means something new and worth while.

Read the advertisements if you seek important news. Read them regularly and always with the thought that back of each advertisement are the reputation and business standing of the merchant. He could not afford to deceive you even if he were so inclined.

"WHAT IS THIS AMERICA'S CUP?"

A Common Question Which Is Concisely Answered.

SOME FORGOTTEN HISTORY.

Story of the Yacht Trophy Which America Captured Sixty Years Ago and Which Sir Thomas Lipton Again Aspires to Carry Away to England. Race First Suggested In 1851.

Now that the general public is beginning to take an interest in the preparations that are being made by Sir Thomas Lipton and of the three American syndicates for the big yacht race in September, the question is being frequently asked, "What is this America's cup anyway?"

To begin with, says Herbert Duckworth in the New York Sun, the cup was not originally wrested from the English in an international contest, as is commonly supposed. The year before the great London exhibition, in 1851, an English merchant suggested to some New York business men that a visit from one of the then famous American pilot boats would enhance the interest of the regattas during the exhibition year.

The invitation was brought to the notice of George L. Schuyler and John C. Stevens, the leading yachtsmen at that time, with the result that William Brown, the principal ship builder in New York, undertook to build from the designs of his partner, George Steers, for the sum of $30,000 a schooner of not less than 140 tons, which he guaranteed would beat any craft of her size in America and England, the purchasers to have the right of rejecting her in the event of her defeat.

The First Race.

Brown's offer was taken up, and so the America was built. On June 20, 1851, the America sailed for the other side. The very day she reached the Solent she soundly beat the British yacht Laverock in a little friendly race of about six miles to Cowes, and the British yachtsmen became so scared that for a time no owner could be induced to tackle the redoubtable Yankee.

After issuing an abortive challenge to race the America against any British yacht of any rig for any sum up to $50,000 Commodore Stevens, in despair of arranging anything in the nature of an international contest, entered the schooner for the Royal Yacht squadron regatta of Aug. 22, the prize being a cup of the value of $500 presented by the club.

The course was around the Isle of Wight, and the result was a walkover for the America. Out of a fleet of fourteen British yachts the only one to show any speed at all was the Aurora, which finished second, twenty-four minutes behind the America.

Near the Needles the America passed and saluted the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, in which Queen Victoria had gone down the Solent to meet the yachts. The story is told that the queen asked the signalman of the royal yacht whether the racing vessels were in sight and, receiving a reply in the affirmative, inquired:

"Which is first?"

"The America," was the answer.

"And which is second?"

"Your majesty, there is no second."

An Unavailing Protest.

After the race the owner of the Brilliant lodged a protest against the America on the score that she had failed to round the Nab light vessel, but as the sailing instructions supplied to Commodore Stevens did not mention the Nab as a mark of the course the protest was not upheld by the committee.

And so the cup, which was destined to become the most famous trophy in the realm of sport, was brought over here and for more than sixty years has defied all attempts at recapture.

INDIAN ROAD BUILDERS.

Redskins to Do Mile Stretch of the Lincoln Highway.

Indians will build a mile of the proposed transcontinental Lincoln highway, according to the plan of L. R. Creel, Indian agent, who has charge of the Indians and Indian farm in the center of Skull Valley, Utah. Mr. Creel said:

"Now that the Lincoln highway has been designated through the Indian farm, I intend to build a mile of model highway across this property. The road at present is far from being good for automobiles, but by the time the touring travel starts next spring, I will have the best mile of road between Salt Lake and Ely, Nev.

"I was surprised at the travel through the farm last year by automobiles, and this gave me the idea of improving this part of the route. We can have the Indians out there build the road, and I believe it will be the only mile of the Lincoln highway from coast to coast which will be built by Indian labor."

Here's a Real Live Chair.

One of the most interesting curiosities at the San Francisco exposition next year will be a chair which John Kubsack of Embarrass, Wis., has forced nature to make for him. He has trained twenty-eight box elder trees during a period of eight years to grow in such relation to each other as to produce a perfect chair. He is said to have been offered $3,000 for this curiosity.

QUEST OF EL DORADO.

That Elusive Land of Gold and Jewels In South America.

Guiana is bounded on the north by the great river Orinoco and on the south by the still greater river Amazon. These two grand rivers are connected with one another, the Cisiquiare, a branch from the Orinoco, falling into the Rio Negro, a tributary of the Amazon. Within Guiana itself are many rivers of very considerable size.

The kingdom of El Dorado was reputed to exist somewhere between the Rio Branco and the Essequibo, called by the Indians the Brother of the Orinoco. Manoa, the capital, was said to be somewhere between the Rio Branco and the Rupununi, a tributary of the Essequibo. From the thirties of the sixteenth century some eighteen expeditions had been sent by the Spaniards to Guiana in search of the golden kingdom. Diego de Ordas, one of the captains of Cortes at the conquest of Mexico, led the first attempt in 1531. After him followed many a brave cavalier, but all was in vain, and disasters as well as failure attended nearly all the expeditions.

From a state paper in the public record office, London, it appears that in 1580 persons who traveled in America had reported that there was a place where the women wore great plates of gold, covering their whole bodies like armor. In every cottage pearls were to be found; in some houses a peck. Banqueting houses were built of crystal, with pillars of massive silver, some of gold. Pieces of gold as big as a man's fist were to be found in the heads of some of the rivers. Raleigh read accounts of these expeditions, but their want of success did not deter him from attempting to find the golden region.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A LIGHT IN AN AUTOMOBILE.

Use One of the Spark Plugs When You Have No Matches.

Did you ever while making an automobile tour find yourself on a lonely country road, perhaps miles from the nearest house, and suddenly discover that you had no matches? If you were anxious to light the lamps or eager for a smoke such a discovery would not prove at all conducive to the smoothness of your temper.

There is a simple way in which any one may secure a light without the aid of matches. You may be anxious for a smoke or it may be getting dark and you want to light your lamp, but in any event you can secure the necessary light if you will follow these directions:

Unscrew one of the spark plugs and let it lie on the cylinder head. Wrap a small wisp of waste around the end of any small stick of wood or if there is none handy wrap it around the end of a screwdriver or any other tool. Dip the waste in the gasoline until it is thoroughly soaked. Of course you should have only a very small piece of waste; otherwise the blaze will be too big for you to handle. After dipping this in the gasoline lay it close to the spark plug and turn the engine over until this plug sparks. This will ignite the waste and you will have a little torch sufficient for lighting your lamp. Even if there is a heavy rain or snow, you can secure a light in this manner sufficient for your needs.—Detroit Free Press.

Fear of Old Military Service.

A prisoner's appeal to the court of criminal appeal for a longer sentence, although the first on record before that tribunal, is not altogether unparalleled at the assize, for offenders who have had the advantage of inside knowledge of the working of the prisons acts have been known to ask the judge to give them penal servitude instead of a short period of hard labor. They shrink from the more Spartan diet and severer restrictions that attach to the nominally lighter sentence. A century ago, when capital punishment was inflicted for many trivial crimes, a prisoner was sometimes given a choice—death or service in the army or navy. And the services in those days had such a terror for some criminals that many elected to be hanged instead of serving their country.—London Spectator.

Government of Japan.

The government of Japan is not an absolute monarchy, the mikado being largely responsible to the parliament and, to a degree, to the people back of the parliament. Under the mikado is the house of peers, composed of the princes of the blood and the nobility and the representatives of the vested interests, and the house of representatives, which is made up of some 380 members, representing the masses of the people.—New York Journal.

An Exception.

Little Mary was coloring pictures with her set of paints. She used a tint that failed to please and exclaimed: "Oh, I didn't mean to do that! However, what's done is done and can't be undone—except shoe laces."—Chicago News.

Poor Dora.

"Dora must have suffered some terrible disappointment. One never sees her smile now. What is the matter?"

"She's had two front teeth pulled out."—London Telegraph.

Up In a Balloon.

To remain motionless and watch the earth fall away from you as rapidly as a baseball falls from you when dropped from a window is the sensation of going up in a balloon.

There is only one cure for public distress, and that is public education, directed to make men thoughtful, merciful and just.—Ruskin.

CHALLENGE FOR QUINCY CUP

South Boston Yacht Club Hopes to Win It.

There will be races for the Quincy Yacht club cup during the season of 1914. The South Boston Yacht club has sent a challenge to the Boston Yacht club which now holds the trophy.

The cup has been defended successfully for two years by the Ellen, owned by C. P. Curtis, each time against a formidable field. The challenging club has not named the boat that will try to take the trophy, probably off Marblehead next July, and it is not necessary to do so under the racing rules until a few days before the first contest of the series.

THE QUINCY CUP.

A sonder that is likely to figure in this race is the Chance , recently purchased by G. E. F. Carroll from C. A. Wood of the Corinthian Yacht Club, and the little craft will fly the colors of the South Boston Y. C. this season. The boat was built last year especially for the German-American sonder races by Lawley, but failed to make a place on the American team. Another sonder that will probably be counted in the coming challenge series is the Badger, owned by C. F. Sterling.

WANTED FOR STETSON BREAK

George Conant Sentenced at Fall River Yesterday

Word was received by the police this noon that Manuel Charumde, alais Cocheco, alias George Conant, and doubtless many other aliases, who was wanted by the Quincy police for the break at the home of James H. Stetson last September, was sentenced by the superior court at Fall River on Friday to five years in State's prison. The charge against Charumdo in Fall River was larceny, but on account of his bad record, he was given a State's prison sentence.

Some days after the Stetson break the police recovered property to the value of $1,200 at Brockton, which had been sold a second hand dealer by a man who gave the name of George Conant. The fact that some of the goods were recovered was kept quiet in the hopes that the fellow would attempt to dispose of more of them but he did not.

A short time ago, however, Conant, or whatever his name may be, was located in Fall River, where he had been arrested for the larceny of a watch. Inspector Goodhue with the Brockton dealer who bought the goods of Conant visited Fall River, where the dealer positively indentified Conant as the man who had sold him the goods. As Conant was under arrest at Fall River the Quincy police had to wait until the case against him there was finished.

Now that he has been sentenced, however, the police will bring him to Quincy from the jail at Charlestown on a habias corpus warrant and he will be tried in Quincy for the Stetson break. That he had accomplices in the break is well understood, but who the other parties are Conant refuses to state.

W. Y. C. HOP.

The mid-winter hop of the Wollaston Yacht club was held with great success at the club house Friday evening. Although cold winds blew and drifts were deep in the vicinity of the beach all was bright and pleasant within the club house. Dancing was enjoyed from eight until one by a large number to the music of Murdock's orchestra. At intermission a dainty lunch was served.

The affair was distinctly a formal one and for pretty costumes and gallant swains it would be hard to rival. In charge was the entertainment committee consisting of Gerard Frazer, C. A. Franklin, Thomas Raiche, Benjamin Chase and E. A. Bean.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Work to Commence Monday on Mayor's New Office

Active work making the necessary alterations at City Hall to give the Mayor a new office will be commenced Monday morning, and today those offices which will be affected by the changes are getting ready to move their effects.

The plan of the Mayor is to take the office on the first floor, now occupied by the City Engineer. A door will be cut through from the Mayor's present office to the new office giving a passageway from the City Clerk's office through the office of the City Solicitor into the office of the Mayor. There will also be a new door cut from the office of the City Messenger so that visitors to the Mayor will have to pass through the City Messenger's office as usual.

Down stairs in the basement the partition between the office now used by the Inspector of Buildings and that used by the Sealer of Weights and Measures wil be removed and the two rooms thrown into one for the City Engineer. The office of the Inspector of Buildings will be moved to room 11, which will continue to have desk room there. The Sealer of Weights and Measures will be moved to a corner of the room used by the Sewer Department in the basement.

Chief Engineer Billings, who has been granted a leave of absence for a year, as a permanent member of the Fire Department, has appointed Edward Lane to substitute in his place. By this arrangement should Chief Billings be retired from the office of chief, he will still retain his position as a member of the Fire department.

Guests were present from Abington, Rockland, Brockton, Weymouth, Holbrook, Braintree, Jamaica Plain, Roxbury, Dorchester and Cambridge. Music was furnished by Hamilton's orchestra. Refreshments were served in Union hall.

WAS ONCE CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR OF CITY

Ex-President Ralph W. Hobbs Passes Away After a Long Illness

Active Member of the City Council for Five Years

Ex-Councilman Ralph W. Hobbs, passed away at his home 11 Clark street, Atlantic, shortly after 7 o'clock Friday evening after an illness of some weeks duration, in his 44th year. Mr. Hobbs has not been a well man for a long time. It was in 1907 while acting as chairman of the Committee on Streets that he was obliged to go to the Boothbay hospital, Boston, where he underwent a surgical operation. He recovered from the operation, but has never seemed as well since that time.

Mr. Hobbs was born in Boston, Nov. 1, 1870, and passed his early days in that city, receiving his education in public schools. When a young man he entered the office of Francis Welch one of the largest real estate operators in Boston, and from a small position he climbed the ladder until at the time of his death he was one of the most valuable men in the real estate line in Boston, holding an important position with that firm.

He came to Quincy about 14 years ago, locating at Atlantic, where he has since resided. He immediately began to take an interest in city affairs and in 1905 he was elected to represent Ward Six in the City Council of 1906, being returned to the City Councils of 1907, 1908 and 1909. During his first three years in the Council he served on all the important standing committees on several of which he at various times served as chairman.

In 1909, he was elected as President of the Council, and served as such during the years 1909 and 1910. When he retired at the end of that year he was presented with a handsome ivory gavel by the City Council, in appreciation of the able and impartial manner in which he had presided over the deliberations of the Council.

At the municipal election in 1910 he was the Republican candidate for Mayor, having as his opponent on the Democratic ticket, Hon. William T. Shea, who was seeking a fourth term. It was during this campaign that some of the paving blocks used in paving Hancock street, Atlantic, were taken about the city and used as a campaign exhibit. Mr. Hobbs, however failed of election.

In the election of 1911 he was again a candidate for the City Council from the ward and was elected and served during the year 1912. At the end of that year he retired from political office.

While in the City Council he proved himself an ever ready debater, and often while its presiding officer would take the floor and argue some measure in which he was interested.

During the latter part of his service in the City Council, he began the study of law at the Boston Y. M. C. A. evening school, and as this required many of his evenings, he withdrew from political office. He and the late ex-Councilman John Moir were fast friends, and the latter gentleman was also a member of the Y. M. C. A. law school at the same time, although a year later. Mr. Hobbs received his degree from the law school last year and shortly after was admitted to the bar. He however, did not enter the active practice of law, as he took up its study more to help him in his real estate business than for active practice.

His first legal case was that of Officer Timothy J. Golden, against whom charges were preferred late last year by ex-Mayor Stone.. Officer Golden had been incapacitated from active duty for several years, and refusing to sign he was removed. Through his counsel, Mr. Hobbs, Golden asked for a hearing, and a date for it was set by Mayor Miller, but owing to Mr. Hobbs' illness, it has been postponed from time to time, and is still pending.

Ex-President Hobbs was a member of Wollaston Masonic lodge, Quincy lodge of Elks, the Squantum Yacht club, Quincy Board of Trade, the Atlantic Patriotic association, and other local organizations

He leaves a widow and two duaghters. Funeral services will be held from his late residence, 11 Clark street Sunday at 2.30.

The Murray Club of the Universalist church are going to hold a dancing party at Colonial hall, Monday night, February 23.

Greater Fertility—More Chicks

You can get more eggs and bigger hatches from your present flock without increasing your labor or feed bills. And the extra eggs and chicks are all "velvet"! Here are the facts:—Every hen will lay heavily and produce fertile eggs if you keep her in the right condition. This means perfect health, with every organ doing its full share of the work of converting food into eggs; strong circulation, active liver, bowels and reproductive organs. Weakness or inactivity of any of these will surely reduce production and cause loss.

UNFAIRNESS IN SMUGGLING.

Customs examination was once a good deal of a farce not merely along the Canadian line, but also at New York and other highways of the illicit underworld. While collectors were smoking contemplative cigars on silky rugs in their offices subordinates told them as much as they ought to know. Meanwhile some of the inspectors were wearing white carnations the symbol of accessibility.

But things have changed since Hannah died. The inspection is the real thing now. It is impossible to understand, how men of the experience of Ex-Congressman Littauer and his brother, just sentenced for smuggling, could have so lacked business judgment as to have taken these chances.

By very devious reasoning, people who were ordinarily conscientious used to excuse themselves. Some people disapproved of a protective tariff, therefore they felt justified in perjuring themselves about a question of fact. Some looked around at the honest and benevolent faces of the other liars making their declarations, and found comfort in this company in falsehood. Meanwhile the successful hoodwinking of Uncle Sam created a joy not to be found in the unadventurous spoils of any bargain counter

It is not a question of the justice or injustice of a tariff. The smuggler demands a privilege which is forbidden to his neighbors. They have to go to a retail store and buy silks or woolens of a man who has paid the duty in cash. He is compelled to charge the duty to the consumer.

The wealthy tourist returning from Europe demands to be relieved of a tax which all his home staying neighbors must pay. Wherefore the Littauer brothers will not receive many testimonials of sympathy and confidence in their little difficulty at the custom house.

THE PROBLEMS OF IRRIGATION.

Gov. Ammons of Colorado, acting on suggestion of Secretary of the Interior Lane, has asked the governors of the Western states to meet and confer on irrigation problems. They are asked to consider these matters at the conference of Western governors meeting in Denver the second week in April.

There is a general popular failure to realize the basis on which prosperity rests in the irrigation districts. It is a matter affecting also the great body of people through the East who are buying irrigation securities.

If the owner of irrigated land finds his water rights insufficient, his tendency is to blame some one above him along the ditch, for taking too much water. He starts a law suit. Meanwhile the real trouble may be far up the mountainsides, where some one has cut down or burned over tracts of trees.

As high as $1,000 to $2,000 an acre is paid in some irrigated districts for orange orchards. Well located but unimproved ranches bring $200 to $300 per acre. Yet if anything happens to his little stream, his tract would be dear at $15 per acre for a sheep pasture.

In the San Bernadino valley of California, which has been a pioneer in preserving water supply, it was found that where the land about the stream sources was well forested, 60 per cent of the rainfall was saved. Where land had been stripped, 95 per cent ran off and was wasted.

If some part of the fortunes that have been spent in attacking and defending water rights could have been devoted to co-operative efforts to protect water supply sources, Western farming would be on a more secure basis today. Fifteen years ago there were streams that could be had for the taking, which today are worth millions. The Western governors have some big problems to talk about at their coming conference.

RANCH OWNER IS EXECUTED

Death of Benton Arouses Indignation on the Border

HE TERMED VILLA A BANDIT

Tried by Court Martial and Found Guilty of Complicity In Plot—Rebel Leader Makes Hasty Departure When News Becomes Known—Bryan Hears About It at Washington

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 21.—William H. Bennett, the British subject who disappeared in Juarez, is dead, according to news brought Mrs. Benton by Thomas D. Edwards, American consul at Juarez.

Benton was tried by court martial and found guilty of complicity in a plot to take Villa's life. He was executed by a firing squad.

Villa, whose act is stigmatized by Benton's numerous friends as wanton murder, left suddenly for Chihuahua on a special train. No single act of any of the recent revolutions, not excepting the Cumbre tunnel disaster, has so stirred indignation.

Benton's ways were blunt, but his friends admired him for them and there were moist eyes and muttered imprecations among them when they heard the news.

"No foreigner is safe in Mexico," was the general comment, and a suggestion that a mass meeting of protest be held here met with considerable favor.

Benton was arrested at Juarez last Tuesday. A long telegram covering the case was sent to the British ambassador at Washington. Benton, who was a mine owner and ranchman, was considered wealthy. He had known Villa for many years and his wife and friends hoped that the rebel general was merely disciplining him for his outspoken protest against rebel depredations on his estate.

Benton's remarks to Villa, whom he called a bandit, were deliberate. Exasperated by what he considered wanton damage done his ranch by rebels, Benton spoke to friends of his intention to tell Villa just what he thought of him. "He is still a bandit and I am not afraid to tell him so to his face," Benton remarked. His friends attempted to dissuade him from the use of any intemperate language, but the ranchman disdained the advice.

Instructions had been sent by the American state department to Edwards, it is reported, to see that no harm should come to Benton, the instructions being sent at the request of the British ambassador at Washington. The warning, it now appears, came too late.

Benton had been in Mexico for about twenty-five years. He was about 45 years old.

Villa's sudden departure with his staff is regarded as flight from the storm of indignation which was presaged by the interest manifested in the disappearance of Benton.

MAY MEAN INTERVENTION

Execution Causes Anxiety Among Supporters of Huerta

Mexico City, Feb. 21.—The execution of William H. Benton has revived the fear among government supporters that the United States will be forced by Great Britain to take some action that easily might become intervention.

Although since revolutionary conditions assumed serious proportions three years ago, there have been killed in various parts of the country some 150 Americans, there are on record the deaths of only four Britishers, including Benton.

The three others were killed in districts where the chiefs of neither faction had any direct authority, and Benton's is the first case where it appears that culpability may be placed definitely.

Bryan Knows About It

Washington, Feb. 21.—That W. H. Benton, the British mine owner and rancher who defied General Villa, is dead, was admitted by Secretary of State Bryan. Whether he was murdered by the Mexican rebel chief's order, Bryan claimed not to know.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, who called upon Secretary Bryan to ask for information of Benton, also was told the news.

After Benton was arrested in Juarez, Villa at first denied knowledge of Benton's whereabouts, but, in conversation with inquirers, intimated that he knew something about the Englishman and added that Benton threatened him with a revolver. Villa was quoted as expressing profane indifference toward an appeal to the British ambassador at Washington.

Agricultural Bill Asks For $18,947,000

Washington, Feb. 21.—The agricultural appropriation bill, carrying funds aggregating $18,947,000 and proposing many radical changes, including a general reorganization of the department of agriculture with a view to co-ordinating its various activities, was reported to the house.

Deer Herd In Church Shed

Parker, Conn., Feb. 21.—A herd of seventeen wild deer sought shelter in the shed of the Baptist church here. Wood choppers' shanties have also sheltered deer.

SONG CHECKS PANIC

Ragtime Calms Theatre Crowd When Cry of "Fire" Is Raised

Boston, Feb. 21.—A serious panic among the 900 persons in the Columbia theatre last night, when youths in the gallery called out "Fire!" was averted by the presence of mind of Billy Day, a singer, who leaped on the stage and began to sing a rollicking ragtime song.

People had already jumped to their feet in the darkened auditorium and were beginning to fight their way to the exits. Disaster was imminent, with possible loss of life, when the notes of the song rang high above the hubbub.

Arrested by the calmness of the singer, the throng moved more slowly, hesitated and finally sank back into their chairs. A few, near the doors, had made their way out.

Two women fainted. They were taken to the ladies' room and revived. Nothing had occurred to justify the cry of "fire."

BREAKS HIS PROMISE

Employer Balks When Stork Appears to Be Getting Too Busy

Waupun, Wis., Feb. 21.—Six years ago the Loomans Lumber company promised John Howard, an employe, that with every arrival of the stork his pay would be increased. Howard had just married.

At the end of a year the first baby arrived. When he saw the boost in the figure on Howard's pay check, President Rossman of the lumber company smiled.

The next year twins arrived and the following year brought two more babies. At the end of the fourth year Rossman smiled only faintly as he signed the pay check, and at the end of the fifth year he smiled not a whit.

Encouraged by its more enthusiastic reception each time it arrived, the stork yesterday brought triplets. Then the employer applied the recall to his promise.

SENATE DEFEATS TREATY CHANGES

Amendment Included Monroe Doctrine In General

Washington, Feb. 21.—The senate in executive session rejected the Chamberlain amendment to the Spanish general arbitration treaty to exempt from arbitration questions relating to Panama tolls, immigration, admission of children to state schools and all questions involving the Monroe doctrine. The vote was 40 to 13.

The vote on the Spanish treaty, brought about first by the administration leaders to test the sentiment of the senate, would indicate that President Wilson's program for renewal of all the treaties in their general terms, including those with Great Britain and Japan, has the support of a substantial majority. Those particular treaties, however, will have separate votes.

PEONAGE IS CLAIMED

Copper Mine Strike Breakers Said to Have Been Under Guard

Hancock, Mich., Feb. 21.—Unemployed men imported to take the places of copper mine strikers testified before the congressional committee that they had come here with the understanding that the strike virtually was over, and that during their journey and after their arrival here they were kept under guard.

Counsel for the strikers endeavored to prove by six witnesses that peonage was practised by the mining companies in order to keep the mines in operation.

The mining companies attempted to establish on cross examination that the guards maintained over the strike breakers were to afford protection from the strikers.

CRISIS FOR THE QUAIL

Humane Persons Urged to Scatter Food For Suffering Birds

Boston, Feb. 21.—The various sportsmen's associations throughout the state and all humane citizens are appealed to by the state commissioners on fisheries and game to aid the starving quail by scattering cracked grain or other food where the birds may get it.

The commissioners say the situation is serious enough to call it a crisis for the quail, and urgently ask that every public-spirited person help in the work.

HOLYOKE WILL BROKEN

Jury Decides Maine Lumberman Was of Unsound Mind

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 21.—The will by which Frank H. Holyoke, a lumberman of Bangor, Me., left the bulk of his half million dollar estate to two nieces, Madeline and Marjorie Holyoke, was broken by a jury in the superior court.

By a 11 to 1 verdict the jury decided that Holyoke was of unsound mind when he made the will just prior to his death in Pasadena, in November, 1911.

THE LATE E. C. PEEBLES

Eben C. Peebles was born of Irish parentage at Henryville, Quebec, Feb. 5, 1841. When eighteen years of age his family moved from the Richelieu District into the County of Stanstead. Here he spent the rest of his life with the exception of one notable period. Like so many young Canadians of the "fifties" and "sixties," he was tempted across the "line" and found remunerative employment in and near Boston. It was at Quincy, Mass., that he met Miss Mary Faxon, member of a well-known New England family, whom he married Sept. 25, 1879.

Subsequently Mr. and Mrs. Peebles returned to Stanstead and settled on a beautiful farm near Fitch Bay which became famous through the countryside as a centre of kindness and hospitality. Here the family remained for more than twenty years and then removed to Beebe Plain, where Mr. Peebles passed away on his journey to "a better country, that is a heavenly," on the 30th of January, 1914. He was buried according to the rites of the church of England by the Rev. James Hepburn, the Rector of Stanstead, for many years a friend of the deceased. The sympathy of the whole community and of many friends, scattered far and wide, is extended to Mr. Peebes' faithful wife and devoted daughter, Grace, who survive him.

For some time friends noted a failing strength in Mr. Peebles, but it was only a few weeks before the end that he could be persuaded to act as an invalid. Always a man of strong will and energy, the confinement and restrictions of the sick room were irksome and to be deferred as long as possible. However, when the time came he resigned himself to the inevitable and was most patient, kind and considerate. Indeed, the greatness and sweetness of character which always existed, became more marked as the years rolled on and shone out clearly on his death-bed.

It was only in the evening of his life that Mr. Peebles adopted a definitely religious position. When he did so, he did it with thoroughness and strong conviction. For years he had felt drawn to the church of his fathers, and was baptised publicly in St. Matthias Church, Fitch Bay, in his sixty-fourth year. A few months later he was confirmed in the same church by the Bishop of Quebec. Henceforth he continued a true and faithful Christian, striving in all humbleness of heart to live up to his profession. And now he has been called away where he can see his Master more clearly and worship Him more perfectly. May God's peace rest upon him.—The Stanstead Journal, Rock Island, P. Q.

PORTRAIT OF C. F. ADAMS

Much favorable comment is heard from those who have seen the portrait of Charles Francis Adams by Robert Vonnoh, exhibited at the Doll & Richards galleries, Boston. The picture of Mr. Adams is full length and life size and is painted for the Massachusetts Historical Society.

It is an impressive and dignified composition, rich in color, unusual in design, a striking piece of characterization. No less than four different kinds of reds enter into the color scheme, those of the leather-upholstered chair of the presiding officer of the Massachusetts Historical Society, of the faded crimson carpet, of the darker crimson curtains, and of the fiery glow from the fireplace in the background. The way in which these difficult tones have been brought into harmony and concord by the artist is quite a triumph. They are united by the black of the Princeton gown worn by Mr. Adams, by the dull gold of the picture frame which surrounds the Copley portrait of his grandfather, John Quincy Adams, hanging over the carved marble mantelpiece, and by various other connecting links in the elaborate scheme of color; and in spite of the interest that attaches to the many accessories, which go to make the work a picture, rather than a mere portrait, the chief interest does first and last centre in the remarkable painting of the man's own personality, as it should.

It is interesting to learn that when this portrait was to be painted, Mr. Adms intimated to the artist that he did not especially care about the literal correctness of the likeness, and the inference is that he considered the beauty of the work the prime thing. It is also interesting to know that the introduction of the rich scheme of red tones in the background was suggested by Mr. Adams himself, who spoke of the remarkably effective employment of such tones by Titian in his portraits.

MILITIA TALK ILLUSTRATED

Before Wollaston Park Improvement Association

Captain Frederick G. Bower, 8th regiment, M. V. M., spoke Thursday evening a the Park and Downs church on "Three centuries of the Massachusetts State Militia," before a large audience of members and friends of the Wollaston Park Improvement Association.

The lecture was generously illustrated with stereopticon views showing the origin and development of the militia and a number of motion picture reels showing life in camp at recent manoeuvres.

The speaker stated that the militia form of organization dates back to 1066, and before, while the standing army was first maintained in the 16th century.

Captain Myles Standish headed the first Massachusetts volunteer militia when he led a group of settlers against the Indians.

Captain William Turner made secure the position of Connecticut valley settlers when he sent the volunteer militia against the Indian chief, King Philip. The American Minute men at Bunker Hill, were mostly of the Massachusetts militia.

The militia's part in the Civil war was mentioned and the 4th regiment headed by Colonel Packard of Quincy was referred to as one of the first four regiments marching to the front.

The Quincy troops were the first to set foot on hostile ground, being detailed to Fortress Monroe. Service of the militia at fires and strikes, especially that at Lawrence, was related. "Preparedness for war," said Captain Bower, "is the surest guarantee of peace."

The first reel of motion pictures showed the field artillery going into action at a sham battle of the summer manoeuvres. Watering the horses and sighting and manipulation of the guns were shown.

The signal corps were shown constructing a wireless station, also signaling with wig wag and heliograph. The rapid establishment of a first aid station by the hospital corps and a contest between the ambulance corps were other scenes.

The naval brigade on the Chicago and the torpedo boat Macdonough were shown. An interesting feature of this series was the firing of a coast defense disappearing gun at Long Island.

The last pictures showed the infantry under all conditions making and breaking camp, deploying, skirmishing cooking and charging all under actual field conditions.

At his conclusion Captain Bower was extended a hearty vote of thanks.

At the business meeting at 7.30 which preceded the lecture ten applications for membership were received, making a fine start toward the 200 the Association is aiming.

President Kelley announced a communication received from the Abigail Phillips Chapter, D. A. R., asking cooperation in the purchase of the old Quincy homestead. A committee of three was appointed to confer.

The bungalow committee, through Chairman Burrell, reported it inadvisable to proceed at present owing to the present status of the Sachem club, and the litigation over the proposed site of the association bungalow.

BUILDING OF BATTLESHIPS

There are objections in Germany to having built in that nation a battleship for a foreign power. In debate in the Reichstag on naval matters Grand Admiral von Tirpitz defended the German shipbuilders from the charge of want of patriotism in building Russian ships. If these ships were not built in German yards they would, he declared, be built in the yards of another country, and he could not see what would be gained in giving another country a monopoly together with the financial benefit of the contract.

AVERYS TAKE BOTH STRINGS

And Win Championship of the K. of C. League

Captain Averys team of the Knights of Columbus league closed a glorious season Friday night when they beat the quintette of Captain Fallon at the City Square alleys two successive strings and captured the championship. Both teams tied in a roll-off Tuesday night after they had tied in the last scheduled matches. To avoid this possibility again, it was agreed to roll for two out of three points.

The first string was captured by 13 pins and the second by five. The big man of the evening was "Bill" Mahan, who got 116 in his second string by first class rolling, two pins less than the league record single of 118 made by Captain Fallon.

The match was witnessed by many members of Quincy council, but while excitement was tense no cheering was indulged in. The desire to win affected the showing of some of the bowlers who fell below their average. The roll-off:

His total was 313. The losers the Franco Americans, were only a few behind in the team total, the taking of which would have resulted in a division of the points. The council beat the circle 3 to1.

SPORT NEWS

The subject of baseball among the grammar schools is being discussed in an offhand way and it will be only a few weeks before the project will be launched in earnest. Since the appointment of Dr. J. Gardiner Smith as physical director of the schools, sport has been given great impetus. He has directed three baseball and three soccer leagues, so successfully that from three to eight hundred pupils, teachers and adults witnessed each game. The championships always drew, and the interest of the pupils in the coming season augurs additional success. Dr. Smith is required to devote all his time to his work, and has but little time for pleasure. In fact he is pressed and an assistant may be appointed before another year passes.

The Italian American A. C. is almost disorganized. Frank Bruce who represented Italy in the Stockholm games is the only active member. Vendetti is in Italy where he will remain for several years. Peter Fruzetti who finished in the second division of the Brockton marathon is out of training, and Dominic Fascio who reels off mile and three mile events in good style is said to have retired. Nunzio DeEranio does not live in this city now. All in all the club prospects are not bright unless new material is gleaned from among the younger men of Italian birth and descent.

Young Barstow of this city who is sparring for honors in the 125 amateurs is said to be in "the making." Experienced ring men who have seen him perform say it is only a question of the proper development. His appearance at several cards, in Brockton especially, has been a little better than expected. The fans hope to see him blossom the right way.

The final event of the Knights of Columbus league will be the banquet Tuesday night, when the prizes will be awarded. Thomas Fallon will receive the prize for high single, his 118 being the best during the schedule. The three string total prize will go to Captain Paul Averys of the champion team, who netted 288. Captain Ray Coyles men have taken the high team single prize with 472 and the high team three string single prize with 1319. The averages of the ten high men at the close are Avery 91, Rus Sullivan 87, Dan Driscoll, 87, Fallon 86, Al Thompson 84, Michael Walsh 83, Ray Coyle 82, "Bill" Mahan 82, Jack Tierney 82, Henry McGee 82.

Base ball may be given the boost it needs locally, if as contemplated the Old Colony league is reorganized. Information on that point has been announced by a fan who is close to inside dope. The formation will probably include Quincy, Brockton, Rockland, Taunton and probably two other teams. Michael T. Shea who was one of the organizers of the old league is said to have strong convictions that base ball can go here. If the plans are carried out and the public fails to support teams as they have in the past it will be up to them. Quincy is a thriving city and the "piker fan" element can be eliminated. Many self respecting residents will patronize the game and prospects are that they will have the opportunity. The sporting public should boost from now on. National stars commenced playing with the old league. More stars are alive today than ever before, but they must be made.

FEES AWARDED JUDGE BUMPUS

Judge Morton in the United States district court handed down an opinion Friday finding for the commissioners who assessed damages for the Gloucester Water Supply Company when the city of Gloucester took over the company's plant. The commissioners' fees amounting to $27,000 were claimed to be unreasonable, but the court finds that the fees were reasonable and that there was an actual, tacit contract between the company and the city to pay the commissioners reasonable compensation for their services.

The commissioners who were appointed Sept. 14, 1897, were Everett C. Bumpus of Quincy, chairman, John W. Ellis of Woonsocket and John R. Freeman of Providence.

A petition to limit the crews of class S boats to four members was granted. It was also arranged to give the new Interclub Sonder boats a class the coming season, and the Massachusetts 18-foot Knockabout association was taken into membership.

John J. Harland was reelected as president and Howard Gannett of the Squantum yacht club was elected as treasurer.

RAND CLASS WINS FROM DAVIS

Last night at the Y. M. C. A. alleys the Rand class of Wollaston took the measure of the Davis class in good shape winning all four points in their match. The Davis class was without the services of two of their best bowlers, but even if the full strength of the team had been present the team would have had to hit the pins for fair to win. McLeod of the Rand class was high man with a single of 105 and a total of 284 for the three strings. For the Davis class Beauleau was best with a single mark of 95 and a total of 254. This victory gives the Davis class a score of 7 points won and only one point lost.

QUINCY WINS AT HAVERHILL

Grand Rally in Second Half Won for Visitors

Quincy High journeyed to Haverhill Friday afternoon and took the latter's basket ball team's scalp by a score of 33 to 20.

During the first half, which ended with the score 15 to 11 in favor of Haverhill, the Quincy team seemed to be lost, which may have been due to the extreme width of the floor. Martin started at left forward for Quincy but was not in good condition and at the end of eleven minutes of play gave way to Capt. Jenkins.

Great credit must be given to Jenkins, for he played the stellar game of his career. Haverhill did not score a point after he entered the game. His presence gave the necessary courage to the boys and they started using the short underhand pass and continued to do so to the end of the game. Haverhill was completely mystified and absolutely unable to break it up.

With four minutes left to play, Jenkins was hurt and Brown took his place, while Mullin went in for Crocker. It was then that Haverhill scored the only points they made during the last half, 5.

Hamlin produced the best shot of the game, and White played a fine game at center. Capt. Green excelled for Haverhill.

CONCERT BY WOMEN'S GUILD

A very successful concert was given by the Women's Guild in the Park and Downs church Friday evening before an appreciative audience of large proportions.

The contributing artists were Miss Amelia Green, reader, Mrs. Edith Carey Page, soprano and Arthur F. Capen tenor. Assisting were the Weston Musical Trio.

The program opened with a selection by the trio which consisted of James Hobbs, cellist; Roscoe Dickinson, violinist and Miss Mary Wells Capewell, pianist. The several numbers of the trio were well received and loudly applauded.

Miss Green from the Emerson school of Oratory received a rousing reception. Her readings included "A sisterly scheme," "A game of comedy," (translated from the French) and "Who's afraid."

Mrs. Page was cordially welcomed as an old friend and her solos as usual contributed much toward making the occasion a success. Among her numbers were: "Come down laughing streamlets" by Stross, "The honeysuckle" by Chadwick, "At dawning" by Cadman and "The owl" by Lekman.

Arthur F. Capen a local singer, coming rapidly into prominence found favor with his tenor solos. His contributions included "A perfect day" by Bond, and "An Irish love song" by Lang.

G. W. GLINES SENTENCED

Chief Burrell returned from Brooklyn, N. Y., Friday night with George W. Glines who was wanted in Quincy for neglecting to suport his family. In court this morning he was found guilty and sentenced to three months in the house of correction. Sentence was suspended until Dec. 23, and in the meantime Glines is to pay the probation officer $8 a week toward the support of his four minor children.

MURDERED IN STREET

Crowd Witnesses Stabbing of Alleged Slayer of Woman Partner

New York, Feb. 21.—Murder in the street while hundreds of horrified passersby looked on was the latest fruit here of the vendettas of East Side gunmen. The crime came when a man said to be Angelo Lasco, ran up to Luigi Lazazzari, thrust a knife three times into his body and fled, while his victim fell dead to the sidewalk.

Pistols in hand the police entered a wine cellar and there found Lasco, who, they said had a handkerchief bearing the bloody outlines of a hastily-wiped knife. He was locked up.

Lazazzari was accused of having stabbed to death a woman partner, Mrs. Spinelli, as the result of quarrels over the operations of a stealing band. He was discharged for lack of evidence, but was since known to be a marked man and was usually accompanied on the street by an armed bodyguard.

Lasco, the police believe, took advantage of the temporary absence of Lazazzari's guards to settle the feud.

ACCESSORY TO ARSON

Jury Finds Derry Helped Plan Burning of His Box Factory

Salem, Mass., Feb. 21.—Fred J. Derry of Danvers was found guilty of having been an accessory before the fact to arson, in connection with the burning of his box factory on Nov. 22, 1911, for the purpose of defrauding insurance companies, by a verdict returned in the Essex superior court.

Derry is exonerated from the direct arson charge of setting the fire, but held guilty of being an accessory in planning it.

The insurance was $45,000, and sixty-four sprinkler heads were found plugged. The case has been on two weeks.

ICEMAN SENTENCED TO PROHIBITION

Given Many "Dry" Years Instead of Term in Jail

New York, Feb. 21.—Seven and a half years of total abstinence from liquor instead of seven and a half years in jail was the sentence imposed by Supreme Court Justice Davis upon Joseph A. Sheridan, president of the Independent Ice Dealers' association, convicted of attempting to extort $1000 from the Knickerbocker Ice company by threats to institute a newspaper campaign against the company.

"It is apparent," said Davis, "that you are a victim of drink, and it would be a good thing to send you away to get liquor out of your system. I will suspend sentence with the understanding that if you drink or carry on in the way you have carried on, you will be brought before this court at any time within the next seven and a half years, when sentence will be imposed."

Seven and a half years' imprisonment was the maximum penalty for the crime.

CANNOT MONOPOLIZE WIRE

Queen Mary's Privilege to Telephone to Paris Is Cut Off

London, Feb. 21.—King George has just learned that his telephone privilege of claiming the first vacant line for Paris calls at any time has been abused at Buckingham palace.

It is said Queen Mary recently held up the Paris line a half hour, causing great inconvenience. The king now has a special postoffice operator in charge of the palace exchange, with instructions that the royal claim for continental calls must not be made unless the king himself requires the line.

The queen asked the same privilege, but the postoffice refused to grant it.

FORE RIVER MATCHES

All Four of the Contests Were Decisive

The Fore River league matches at the Coliseum alleys Friday night developed much excitement among the bowlers and a large gallery witnessed their work.

The feature of the evening was the team single of 504, rolled by the Machine Gallery. Every man passed the century, excepting one. High single went to Smith who got 121. Clark was second with 116. Several other men passed the 100 mark.

The Machine Gallery beat the Yard 3 to 1.

MAY GO UP TO SUPREME COURT

Judge Is In Doubt as to Thaw Bail Question

ALDRICH CHANGES HIS VIEW

Indications That Freedom of Fugitive Will Be Long Delayed—His Counsel Bitterly Attacks the Prosecution—"Movie" Man Cranks Camera In Courtroom For the First Time

Concord, N. H., Feb. 21.—Another long delay in granting freedom for Harry K. Thaw on bail seemed imminent at the conclusion of an all-day hearing before Federal Judge Aldrich. After much arguing by three of Thaw's lawyers and William T. Jerome, the New York state attorney, Aldrich said that he might leave the question of bail to a supreme court judge.

Thaw and his battery of legal talent confidently expected that Aldrich would release the prisoner on bail following yesterday's hearing, in view of the favorable report submitted by the commission appointed by the judge to assist him in deciding whether or not the "man from Mattawan" would be a menace if given liberation under bail.

When Aldrich, toward the close of yesterday's hearing, said he had changed his view on the question of allowing bail, and might place the matter before a supreme court judge, it came as a surprise, and Thaw's attorneys were quick to plead against such action.

Former Governor Stone opened the case, and with emphasis held that no crime was substantially charged, and that the state of New York was acting in bad faith in its efforts to secure extradition. Vehemently the Thaw lawyer denounced Jerome and the other New York state officials because of the methods he declared they had used to secure the indictment of Thaw.

Stone shouted: "Thaw is innocent and I question the good faith, not of the people of New York nor of the governor of New York state, but of his prosecutors."

Counsel Chase declared Thaw had a right to escape from Matteawan and that the guardianship over him lasted as long as he was within the limits of the state. When Thaw came into New Hampshire, the burden of guardianship was transferred to this state, said Chase.

Mr. Jerome then took part in a discussion on what kind of idiots could be extradited and what kind could not. When Chase asked Jerome if in effect he was asking for the extradition of an insane man, Jerome replied:

"Not because he is an insane man. The mere fact that he is an insane man does not relieve him of responsibility for his criminal act."

Jerome said that if every allegation of the escape from Matteawan was struck out from the indictment there would still be a perfectly good indictment.

There were no "fireworks" from Jerome, as he made no reply to the criticisms that were made against him by the Thaw attorneys. He will have his "innings" today.

Those high on the pinnacle of their profession were the men who argued and heard arguments. Beside her son sat the mother of Thaw and Mrs. Geoffrey G. Whitney, Thaw's sister, the former Countess of Yarmouth.

And, hovering over the dignity of the law, over the dignity of age, interrupting staid words of the judge and counsel alike, indifferent to indignant flashes from the eye of Mrs. Whitney, was an ubiquitous "movie man."

For the first time in the history of any courtroom in the United States, a moving picture operator was allowed to set up his tripod in the place that suited him best and grind away to his heart's content—getting films for a photo-play to be called "The Man Hunt."

COLE IS PARDONED

Was In Prison For Larceny of $18,000 From Trust Company

Boston, Feb. 21.—Governor Walsh and the executive council pardoned Elmer B. Cole, a former box manufacturer of Middleboro, who has served twenty-three months of a state prison sentence of from 3½ to 4½ years for the larceny of $18,000 from the Plymouth County Trust company of Brockton.

The pardon was recommended by the state parole board, and at the hearing by the pardon committee of the executive council there was no opposition to the recommendation.

GETS $100,000 A YEAR

Mrs. Mackay Will Remain Abroad as Sequel of Divorce Decree

New York, Feb. 21.—Close friends of Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay say they understand she will remain abroad as the sequel of the divorce decree granted by the Paris courts. Her lawyer and Mackay's attorney were in conference here as to the terms of settlement. Mrs. Mackay, it is said, will receive $160,000 a year in consideration of her surrender of the $4,000,000 Harbor Hill estate at Roslyn, L. I.

"Mrs. Mackay shuns the publicity of this case, and for that reason found a pleasant haven in Paris, where the divorce was obtained very quietly," said the reporter's informant.

FAVORS GRANTED FOREIGN IMPORTS

Nation Wide Inquiry Ordered by the Commerce Board

Washington, Feb. 21.—A nation-wide inquiry into the relationship of international and domestic rates on railroads was ordered by the interstate commerce commission.

Imported merchandise is carried from the various ports of the country to interior points at a less rate than is exacted on domestic shipments from the ports to interior points. Many complaints have been received of discrimination in favor of imported merchandise, and it is the desire of the commission to readjust matters so as to eliminate this alleged unreasonable handicap to American shippers.

EX-MAYOR AWARDED $100

Result of Suit Against Minister by Whom He Was Clubbed

Ft. Plain, N. Y., Feb. 21.—For a clubbing received at the hands of Rev. George E. Stockwell, D. D., of Ft. Plain, the wealthy retired Methodist minister, Ex-Mayor Lewis A. Dunckel was awarded a verdict of $100 and costs in the supreme court at Fonda.

Stockwell and Dunckel have large adjoining estates here. They disagreed over the question of whether part of the land claimed by Stockwell was a public highway.

When Stockwell erected a fence, compelling Dunckel to climb it to get to his land, the latter demolished the fence and was clubbed by Stockwell, he charged, escaping serious injury only because his stiff hat broke the force of a hard blow.

Goethals Expects Panama Canal to Be Opened July 1

IT IS ADEQUATELY PROTECTED

Builder Opposed to Exempting Vessels From Paying For Use of Big Ditch—Needs More Money to Complete Work—Says He Is Not In Politics When Asked About Boom

Washington, Feb. 21.—The Panama canal will probably be opened July 1, according to the estimate of its builder, Colonel Goethals, who arrived here to report to President Wilson, Secretary of War Garrison and congress on the waterway.

"I have every expectation that it will be ready on that date," Goethals said. "There is no danger that slides will close the waterway, although geologists tell us minor slides may be expected when the water rises to its full level in the cut. The defenses of the canal are practically completed—those on the Atlantic side entirely so. The statements that the canal is inadequately protected can be flatly denied."

Talking of the formal opening of the canal Goethals remarked:

"It will be a great show, but I hope I won't be there." Then he added: "Now there is nothing significant in that. You know I don't like celebrations and never did. When they have this celebration I think I shall go away for a little trip until it is over."

Discussing the question of tolls, Goethals said he had always favored charging every vessel that used the canal.

"My object has always been to get as much money for the canal as possible," he explained, "and I don't believe in exempting any vessels from paying for the use of the canal which would benefit their owners or the government. I am unfamiliar with the legal status of the question and the treaty rights to be involved, and know only the practical side."

Goethals will discusss with President Wilson administrative features of his new job as civil governor, and will ask money from congress for the completion of the enterprise.

It is understood Goethals will ask an appropriation of $23,700,000 to complete the canal, an increase of $7,500,000 over the present fixed appropriation, although he expects to save $5,030,000 by reducing the construction force.

Disposition of much of the canal machinery is another problem which Goethals is seeking to work out systematically. He is against the plan to transfer this machinery to Alaska for use in construction of the Alaska railroad, holding that new machinery can be bought at a lower cost than the transortation of the Panama machinery from the zone to the Arctic. The Panama railway equipment is also wider than the "standard gauge" of the proposed federal railroad in Alaska.

"I am not in politics," was all Goethals would say when asked regarding the New York police commissionership and his boom for governor of New York. He refused, however, to deny flatly that he would run on the Bull Moose ticket.

DR. AKED'S VIEWS

He Declares They Are Shared by All Educated Protestants

San Francisco, Feb. 21.—Rev. Dr. Charles F. Aked, pastor of the First Congregational church, declares that sensational reporting started the nation-wide controversy over his alleged heretical pronouncement regarding the miraculous birth of Christ.

"There is nothing original in my views," he says. "They are the common property of educated men and women in all the Protestant churches of the world."

ECONOMY AT SHIPYARD

President Schwab Making Changes for Efficiency

It is perhaps not generally known that soon after taking the presidency of the Fore River Ship Building Corporation Mr. Schwab began to curtail expenses in a number of directions. President Schwab has a system of his own, and this is now in force at the Fore River yards. In brief it is known as the efficiency squad, who were sent to the yard to look about and see where money could be saved in running expenses. While these men have no authority to personally make changes it is reported that any suggestions made to President Schwab by them are immediately carried out.

Of course people at the yard know what changes are being made, but all must admit that they will save the company money. One of the recent changes inaugurated is to pull out of service two of the three locomotives that were doing work shifting about the yards. Now but one locomotive is used and this use is largely confined to operation of the railroad between the yard and the East Braintree depot.

The plan in use was when any part was wanted to send a locomotive from one end of the yard to the other after it. Now however the work of transporting material about the yard is being done by an electric motor truck and instead of running back and forth at the beck and call of everybody it has regular hours for making trips. Thus if a man on the Rivadavia wants a certain part or piece of machinery instead of running about the yard after it himself, and then sending for a locomotive to haul it to the ship, he simply telephones to the proper department and the part wanted is brought by the motor truck on its next trip.

The efficiency men have also learned, by actual timing, that time can be saved by the truck in going from the office yard to the lower wharf by turning into Howard avenue and following that street to the lower gate and then entering the yard again.

Then again these men have it figured out just how much energy should be obtained from a pound of coal, and coal that is delivered to the power house is weighed and careful tabs kept to see that the required number of unit heats is obtained.

President Schwab's great ability has always been as an organizer and he is carrying the practices which have made the Bethlehem Steel Co. a success, into the management of the Fore River Corp.

The above are simply cited to give a general idea of how everything at the yard is now being placed in a system. That it will result in the saving of many thousands of dollars there is but little doubt.

It is reported that as soon as work is commenced on the Supply Ship at the Boston Navy Yard that the Fore River Corp. may lose many of its skilled workmen. It is well known that as soon as it became known that the Navy Yard was likely to get the contract for the vessel a large number of the workmen at the Fore River yards made applications for positions. The chances are, therefore, that three or four months from now, when actual work on the supply ship is commenced more Quincy men will work at the navy yard. Probably many will continue to live here.

March 1,—"Christ in Gethsemane"
March 8,—"Christ before Pilate."
March 22,—"A serious lesson on silence of Christ."
March 29,—"A choice, Christ or Barabbas."
April 5,—"Ecce Homo—Behold the man."
Special music at each meeting.

SECOND OF MEN'S MEETINGS

Corporal Tanner to Speak Sunday on Patriotism

The second of the series of Sunday afternoon meetings for men under the auspices of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. will be held in the Kincaide theatre tomorrow at 3.30 P. M.

The doors will be opened at 3 o'clock and there will undoubtedly be hundreds of men there at that time as the first to come get the best seats, all of which are free. A large section will be reserved for members of the G. A. R., Sons of Veterans and United S. W. V., of Quincy and nearby towns, who are invited to attend in uniform.

From 3.10 to 3.30 the men will enjoy a musical treat furnished by the Wollaston Cadet Band orchestra. Then there will be a spirited song service led by the Men's Chorus of 40.

The speaker of the afternoon is a man whose address is well worth travelling many miles to hear, and he comes clear from Washington, D. C., to talk to the men of Quincy. Corporal James Tanner is Past Commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. Corporal Tanner will talk on "Patriotism" and no man alive is better qualified to handle that subject. He went through the Civil war and lost both legs fighting for the Union. For fifty years he has been travelling all over this country on artificial limbs pleading for people to honor the flag he and his comrades fought for.

The men of Quincy should pack Kincaide Theatre to the doors Sunday to enjoy this great patriotic meeting, especially coming as it does on Washington's Birthday. So come along Mr. Man and bring others with you.

ELECT NEW PRESIDENT

Wollaston Citizens Association Holds Annual Meeting

The Wollaston Citizens Association completed its first year with a meeting, Thursday evening, at its headquarters in the Wollaston hotel and elected the following officers for the year to come:

President—Chester I. Campbell.
Vice President—Albert N. Murray.
Second Vice President—Nathan G. Nickerson.
Third Vice President—William S. Sayward.
Secretary—Victor Harrie.
Treasurer—A. L. Baker.
Sargent at Arms—Martin F. Burns.
Director—B. H. Bain, Arthur Murphy, E. S. Tenney, F. J. Schahrer, A. E. Walker, William Dean Sanford.

Several new members were admitted. George B. Curran read the annual report of the secretary and treasurer. The retiring president, William Dean Sanford reviewed the pear's work, and praised the untiring efforts of the officers and directors.

Committee reports were received from J. A. Severance for finance, Martin Burns for house and T. C. DuPlessis for membership.

The report of the nominating committee was read by Chairman DuPlessis, and in the absence of other ranking officers the third vice president William S. Sayward was escorted to the chair. The new secretary, Victor Harrie, was also installed with due ceremony.

It was voted to make representatives of the local newspapers honorary members. Milton C. Burton was elected assistant secretary.

SHARPENERS ALSO AGAINST

Adopt Resolutions Against Grade Crossing Decree

At a meeting Friday evening of the Tool Sharpeners branch, No. 1, G. C. I. A., the following resolution was adopted:

"That the members of this branch publicly protest against the acceptance of the plans of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. for the abolishing of grade crossings in Quincy.

"The members of this branch feel that the present conditions existing on Water street and School street are bad enough, yet Mayor Miller has accepted the railroad's plans, knowing that to lower Water street ten feet at the crossing at Quincy Adams and to raise the grade at School street bridge twelve feet will make matters infinitely worse than they are at present.

"The subject matter of the abolition of grade crossings in this city has been thoroughly discussed and is clearly and definitely understood by the great majority of our citizens, and with very few exceptions they are all of the opinion that the so called "City plan" which had for its object the depression of the railroad tracks, was the proper method to use if the streets in our city which are located near the railroad would be worthy of the name of streets, and we feel that to make dead ends or to discontinue the use of passage ways which have been in existence for almost one hundred years is bad policy if not bad business, and up until the early part of this year there was no stronger advocate for the so-called "City plan" than our present Mayor, and it seems strange to us at least that a man who would hold decided opinions on anything for so many years would make such a change in a day or two.

"We commend the gentlemen who are making a fight against the acceptance of the railroad's plans, and trust they will be successful in their efforts to have the City plan accepted."

REUNIONS OF TWO CHURCHES

The reunions of St. Mary's and St. John's parishes Monday night will take precedence over all other Pre-Lenten events, and the Catholic people of the city have given generously of their efforts in preparing to make these affairs gala ones in the social history of the parishes.

The unusual feature of the St. Mary's reunion will be that it is the first since Rev. Fr. Thomas R. McCoy became pastor, and in a good many ways it will be a monster reception to him.

St. John's parish annually observes the event and Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, with the assistance of a large committee have completed plans for an affair that will surpass former affairs in brilliancy.

The St. Mary's reunion will be held in St. Joseph's hall and the program includes moving pictures, a concert, and dancing. A similar program for St. John's parish has been arranged which will take place in tht hall of the St. John's parish school.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Observed in Most of the Public Schools of City

David H. Goodspeed, principal of the Wollaston and Massachusetts Fields schools addressed his pupils Friday on "The Life of Washington." Patriotic songs were sung by the pupils, after which there was "the salute to the flag." The program at Wollaston was carried out in the morning in the assembly hall, and in the afternoon the Massachusetts Field pupils held their observance.

Handicapped by the lack of a school hall the pupils at the Washington school were obliged to hold their observance of Washingtons Birthday in the class rooms. Patriotic programs were carried out under the direction of the teachers. All the exercises closed with "the salute to the flag."

Washingtons and Lincolns birthdays were observed by the pupils of the Adams and Cranch schools with appropriate exercises. The Adams school pupils gathered in their assembly hall in the morning and carried out a patriotic program and were addressed by Principal Arthur S. Townsend. Busts of Lincoln and Washington were on the platform and American flags draped over them. In the afternoon a similar program was carried out at the Cranch school.

A special flag drill by 20 girls under the direction of Miss Mabel Lovejoy was the central feature of the observance of Washingtons Birthday at the Quincy school. The program, arranged by Charles Sampson, principal, who was assisted by the teachers, conisted of recitations and the singing of patriotic songs by individuals and classes.

Other schools also held exercises.

Although the Y. M. C. A. first team does not play tonight there are two fine contests scheduled. The Milton A. C. of Mattapan, who have a record of 18 games won and only 3 games lost, will try conclusions with the Association second team; and the Tech 16 will play against a team composed of "Old Timers." The "Old Timers" will play 10 men altogether in their game as the condition of these men is not expected to be of the best. The first half will see Morris and Brooks as forwards, Jenkins at center and Russ Bates and Holmes as backs. The Brockton Y. M. C. A. first and second teams will play here on Monday night and two great games are expected. The Quincy players are still a bit "peeved" at the way the game ended at Brockton several weeks ago and are determined to show the visitors that they can win with an expert officialhandling the game. SAD HOLIDAY FOR CITY OF QUINCY

Edward Southworth and Dr. John F. Welch Numbered Among the Dead

Death Came Suddenly to Former After an Active Day

Edward Southworth, one of Quincy's honored citizen's died at his home on Greenleaf street shortly before midnight Monday night, the result of a shock sustained earlier in the day. Until the unexpected seizure, Monday morning, he was apparently in the best of health. On Sunday he attended both services at Bethany church and also in the afternoon a reception given to Corp. Tanner at Kincaide's Theatre, and was one of those who sat on the platform. Early Monday morning he sustained a shock and toward noon his condition indicated that he had sustained a second shock. He never regained consciousness after he was taken ill.

Mr. Southworth was born in South Scituate, April 26, 1838, and after obtaining his early education in the public schools of his native town entered the Bridgewater Normal school, leaving in his senior year to join the army at the outbreak of the civil war.

He enlisted in Co. G 18th Messachusetts regiment, July 31, 1861, and was wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862. He was discharged from service in April the following year, immediately re-enlisting in the 2d regiment, United States colored troops, serving in Mississippi and Florida until 1864.

At the close of the war Mr. Southworth entered on a long career as a school teacher. In 1866 he was appointed master of the Coddington school, and in 1867 became sub-master of the Wright school of Boston, holding that position until he was appointed as master of the Mather school which position he held for a period of 32 years. There he won the highest esteem and on his retirement in 1910 he was pleasantly remembered by hundreds of graduates of that school.

Mr. Southworth was twice married, to his first wife Miss Elizabeth S. Talbot in 1859, who died in 1864 while he was at the front; and to his second wife Miss Hattie E. Hill of Sherborne in 1867. Miss Hill was one of his classmates at the Bridgewater Normal school.

One daughter was born by his first wife, now Mrs. Howard C. Torrey of Roxbury. He also had two children by his second wife E. Frank Southworth of Syracuse, N. Y., and Stacy Baxter Southworth, a junior master at the Boston Latin school, who lectured last week at the Coddington school on Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Southworth was a member of the Loyal Legion and for years had been prominently identified with the Bethany Congregational church. He was liked and admired by all with whom he came in contact, always greeting his friends with a smile and pleasant word. He was one of those men who could always be depended upon.

BELOVED PHYSICIAN DEAD

Dr. John F. Welch, one of Quincy's beloved and best known physicians, passed away Monday noon after an illness of seevral weeks' duration. Some years ago Dr. Welch underwent a serious surgical operation, and at that time his life was despaired of for several weeks. He eventually recovered, however, and apparently regained his usual good health. Re-

BUSY DAY FOR ODD FELLOWS

Fine Exemplification of the Encampment Degrees

Manet encampment of Odd Fellows entertained Sagamore encampment and the patriarchs of several other encampments on the holiday, and it was a notable day for both encampments. The former added 12 new members and the latter 11, making the present membership of Manet encampment 186.

The work began early in the day, a special meeting having been called for 2 P. M. Among the guests was District Deputy Edward B. Prout and suite of Rockland.

The Golden Rule degree was first exemplified by the degree staff headed by Past Chief Patriarch Frank W. Flowers, about fifty participating and doing some excellent work, said to be equal to anything in Massachusetts.

The Royal Purple degree followed, being presented in approved style by Past Chief Patriarch Fred West and his staff.

Manet encampment served a supper to all present and there was a social time in the evening.

WIRELESS TO PANAMA

Good Reports From Trials of Rivadavia

The battleship Rivadavia returned to Boston on Saturday from the Rockland course, where she had been undergoing her trial of a 15-knot speed for thirty hours. This test was successfully made the vessel aquitting herself admirably in her run of 450 miles.

After taking aboard more coal she will leave for her eight hour run at top speed, which includes turning and backing while going at full speed This test over she will be put through her big gun test after which she will be ready to turn over to the Argentine government.

The wireless apparatus aboard the Rivadavia made an exceptional showing during the trial run. The Rivadavia is said to have talked with Colon, Panama, while that port was 2000 miles distant. Wireless men consider the achievement a remarkable one, if not a record, for a battleship.

REED—JELLOW.

Miss Charlottee E. Jellow and William E. Reed, a popular South Quincy couple, were married at the St. John's parish house Monday evening by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan. The bridesmaid was Miss Marguerite Jellow, a sister of the bride. Bernard Talbot was best man.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Jellow, Quincy street, followed the ceremony. There was a large attendance. The bride was dressed in white satin, trimmed with shadow lace and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her veil was caught up with blossoms of the same flower. Her attendant was dressed in pale pink silk under chiffon.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed left on a trip to Washington at midnight. They will reside in Quincy.

Annual Party Just Before Lent Largely Attended

Nearly 1200 members of St. John's parish met in the St. John's school building on Phipps street Monday evening at the annual reunion, coffee party and dance. The affair was a glorious success, socially and financially and far eclipsed previous affairs.

During the evening a musical program was carried out which consisted of songs by Miss Eva Rice, James McArdle and Joseph Shea; buck and wing dancing by Thomas Joyce, whistling solos, by Matt Fay; piano duets by John Mahan and Leo Bigoness; and vocal selections by the St. Johns trio, Russell Sullivan, Edwin Donovan and Peter Sullivan and Irish jig and reel dancing by the Coughlin brothers.

On another floor of the building a monster whist party was held, at which the souvenirs were awarded to Mrs. Frank Wade, Martin O'Shaughnessey, Miss Josephine Daley, Timothy Ford and John Bruton.

The guests of the evening were Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, pastor, Rev. Fr. Walter A. Quinlan and Rev. Fr. Florence W. McCarthy, curates. Many former members of the parish attended the affair.

While dancing was enjoyed in the school hall by the younger people, Irish jig and reel dancing was held in the corridor on the second floor and many indulged in this feature of the evening. Supper was served continuously, commencing at about 8.30.

The chairman of the general committee was Edward J. Fegan, and the secretary was John W. Lynch. The chairman of the other committees were Henry T. Gallagher, whist; Mrs. Herbert J. Lund, refreshments and supper; Joseph S. Austin, dancing and entertainment;; and Edward I. Bean, reception.

CITY OFFICIALS PAY TRIBUTE

Funeral of Ralph W. Hobbs Largely Attended

The funeral of ex-President Ralph W. Hobbs was held Sunday afternoon from his late residence, 11 Clark street. The services were very largely attended, the home being hardly large enough to accommodate those who came to pay their last tribute to him whom they had known so well in life.

Aside from representatives of Wollaston Masonic lodge, Quincy lodge of Elks, the Atlantic Improvement and Patriotic societies, and the Squantum Yacht club, there was a large delegation of present and past city officials many of whom had served with Mr. Hobbs in City Councils of the past.

Among those noticed were: President Joseph L. Whiton of the present City Council, ex-President Walter E. Piper, Senator L. F. R. Langelier, Representative and ex-Councilman Edward J. Sandberg, Councilmen John R. Nelson, Herbert G. Beeman, Charles A. Hadlock and Robert J. Williams, Jr.; Clerk of Council Geo. T. Magee, ex-Representative Rednor P. Coombs, City Auditor Henry O. Fairbanks, City Engineer Ezekiel C. Sargent, Assessor John A. Duggan, Chief Engineer Faxon Billings, Inspector of Buildings L. C. Merrill, ex-Councilmen George W. Abele, James H. Cunningham, Albert N. Murray, John R. Richards, Frank E. Badger, Charles E. Cherrington, Herbert S. Barker, Edward F. Parlee, Alexander Falconer and Charles L. Bean, ex-Chairman of the Board of Health William H. Teasdale and John L. Hamilton, president of the Quincy Board of Trade.

The casket containing all that was mortal of the deceased was almost buried beneath a wealth of beautiful floral tributes. Aside from set pieces from the various organizations with which he was affiliated, and the City Council of 1914, there were many flat bouquets and other pieces from those associated with him in business as well as from many personal friends.

The services were very simple in compliance with the wish of the family, and were conducted by Rev. James Huxtable of the Hawes Place Unitarian church of South Boston, a former pastor of the family. After reading from the scriptures Rev. Mr. Huxtable spoke briefly on the value of friendship, closing with a prayer. The burial was in the family lot at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Out of respect the flag on City Hall was at half mast all day Saturday and on Sunday until after the funeral services.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A very pleasant surprise party was given Miss Violet Louise Shay at her home on Beach street, Wollaston, by about 20 of her young friends and classmates Saturday evening.

Music and all kinds of games were indulged in including the donkey game for which prizes were awarded Miss Bernice Hobson and "Charlie" Morris. At 10.30 each guest was given a half heart containing half a quotation which had to be matched for partners. Much fun was had comparing them and when each got his partner all marched into the dining room, which was decorated in pink and white and on the centre of the table was a large cake decorated with pink and white candies. Ice cream cake and candies were served by Mr. and Mrs. Shay, assisted by Miss Mildred Podbury and Miss Edna Shay. After refreshments, dancing and music was enjoyed. Miss Violet was presented with a handsome gold bracelet.

COMING HOME FROM EGYPT.

The former starts for home about the first of April, and after a few weeks stay will return, and about July 1 Dr. Curtis will come for his visit. They have been very successful in their profession in Egypt.

CORPORAL TANNER AT MEN'S MEETING

Advocated Peace and Told How North and South Are Getting Together

Col. Anderson Takes Active Part at Sunday Gathering

Corp. James Tanner, the legless veteran of the Civil War, past commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. was the central figure at a men's meeting held Sunday afternoon in the Kincaide theatre under the auspices of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. He delivered a vigorous address in which he approved the action of President Wilson toward Mexico.

The meeting opened with prayer by Col. Edward Anderson, Quincy's 81 year old resident, after which John E. Gilman, past commander-in-chief at the G. A. R. sang "The Sword of Bunker Hill," not he said because he is a singer, but because he was a singer 50 years ago. Commander Dr. C. R. Marstin of Paul Revere Post called for three cheers and a tiger when he finished and it was given heartily and there was more applause.

Grand Army posts of the South Shore were well represented as were the allied patriotic societies of this city. There was a profusion of flags on the platform, the colors of the post being carried into the theatre and set near the footlights. Music was by the Wollaston Cadet orchestra and the singing of hymns by the 900 present was led by a chorus of 25 men's voices.

Col. Anderson introduced the speaker as one old veteran would another.

Corporal Tanner advocated peace and noted that the country was more firmly united —no North, no South. Any intervention in Mexico would mean war. He commended the attitude of President Wilson and said all the Mexicans were not worth as much as the life of one American. He recorded himself in favor of woman suffrage and a memorial at Gettysburg to commemorate the love feast of Union and Confederate veterans last July. He said we are taking an account of the country's stock and I hope no great number will fail to comply with the demands of the income tax, for a man can show his appreciation of the country under which he has prospered this way. In the days of old, men made the supreme sacrifice when it was necessary to found our government and it was a matter of deepest conscientiousness with them. It was not only bred in their bones, but it was in religious beliefs. A man can show his patriotism by meeting the income tax as the Boys of '61 met the Confederates.

Colonel Anderson at the close of Corp. Tanner's address spoke a few words at the latter's request, for, said he, it may be the last time I will ever have the pleasure of hearing my old friend Col. Anderson. He entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion.

Others on the platform were Commander Marstin of Paul Revere Post, Edward Southworth of the Loyal Legion, Commodore Ring, of the U. S. Navy, Past Commander George E. Adams of the Spanish War Veterans and others. General Secretary Bromley presided.

Probably those Mexican editors would not be so sassy to President Wilson if he would threaten to stop his subscription.

Before joining the "Back to the land" movement this spring, you would better see if you can stand it to dig up enough earth to plant the morning glories at the back door.

It often seems difficult nowadays to tell whether people are dancing to the music of the orchestra or the kick of the punch bowl.

It is believed that Congress would appropriate money to fight human tuberculosis, provided you could prove that the hogs were in danger of catching it.

Mr. Edison says he feels like a boy at the age of 67, in spite of the fact that he seems to like to work on holidays.

Mr. Bryan will no doubt find the llama that has been sent him from Buenos Ayres a nice pet, and no doubt after it gets warmer John Bassett Moore will be glad to drive it out to pasture every day.

There is a fine for impersonating a congressman now, although few people ever seemed disposed to risk their reputation by doing it.

The correct way to educate the public up to the career, achievements, and services of George Washington, is to give a bridge party with favors cut out of red paper in the shape of hatchets.

If it proves that a Canadian government has lost $40,000,000 in graft and waste in building the trans-continental railroad, it can no longer be said that our next door neighbors are behind the times.

It looks as if President Wilson had failed to read those patent medicine "ads" showing one how to cure the severest cold in 12 hours for 25 cents.

Now that the English Suffragettes have burned a Carnegie library, it becomes possible for Andy to give away another.

THE GLAMOR OF DISTANCE.

"Distance lends enchantment." No proverb is truer to real life than this sententious saying, which packs into three words a whole philosophy of business.

To some people the fact that an article of goods was made in England, Paris, or elsewhere, is prima facie evidence that it is better. If they stopped to think about it they ought to know that the United States, whatever its political and social faults, is acknowledged as supreme in material achievement.

Our compatriots build the best bridges, provide the most convenient railroad travel, and the most comfortable homes. The chances are at least more than even that the output of their mills is better adapted to meet home needs than those of some distant foreign producer.

Similarly there are a good many people who feel an instinctive prejudice against articles bought in their home town. Something secured in some distant store looks better to them,—until they actually test its qualities.

Yet if this feeling is analyzed, it is seen to be about as well founded as the fancied superiority of foreign goods. The home store does a smaller business than some distant department emporium. It loses a fraction of costs there. But it more than makes it up by cheaper rents. Then there is the fact that the larger a business center is, the more it costs to run a store there. Almost every item in the expense account is at a higher rate. All this is charged to the consumer.

For such a reason a well advertised home store is about as efficient a machine for serving the public as you can get. The buyer for stores the size of ours is close enough to the counter so that he makes very few mistakes.

CURLEY DRAWS TWO SALARIES

House Resolution Declares Offices Are Incompatible

BILL INTRODUCED BY MANN

Mayor of Boston, Whose Salary Is $10,000, Draws $625 a Month as Congressman—Case of Others Who Tried Unsuccessfully to Hold Seats In Congress Are Cited

Washington, Feb. 24.—A resolution declaring that the offices of mayor and representative in congress are incompatible, and proposing that the seat in congress formerly occupied by Mayor Curley of Boston be declared vacant, was offered by Republican Leader Mann and was referred without debate to the judiciary committee for report. His salary is $10,000.

Curley took the oath as mayor of Boston on Feb. 2. Two days later he drew his monthly salary of $625 as a member of congress. It was said he indicated at that time his intention of holding both offices until the end of the present session of congress in order to redeem pledges made to the people of the Twelfth Massachusetts district, and to save Boston the expense of a special election to name his successor.

It was recalled yesterday that Representative Lilley, after being elected governor of Connecticut some years ago, and General Joseph Wheeler of Alabama, after being commissioned a major general of volunteers in the Spanish war, tried unsuccessfully to hold their seats in congress.

After reciting the facts incident to the election of Curley as mayor of Boston and his entering on the duties of that office nearly a month ago, the Mann resolution reads:

"Whereas, the offices of representative in congress and mayor of the city of Boston are incompatible, and it is impossible for any one person to perform the duties of both; and

"Whereas, the acceptance of the office of mayor aforesaid by the said James M. Curley was in effect and in fact a vacation of the office of representative in this house; therefore

"Be it resolved, that the name of James M. Curley be stricken from the roll of membership of this house and the seat formerly occupied by him be, and it is hereby, declared vacant."

MAINE POTATO EMBARGO

Governor Names Committee to Meet Federal Authorities

Augusta, Me., Feb. 24.—The proposed quarantine of Maine potatoes because of the powdery scab disease will be taken up with the authorities at Washington at a meeting there by a committee of three men appointed by Governor Haines.

The committee was appointed at the conclusion of a long session behind closed doors of the executive council, at which a large delegation of Aroostook county potato growers was present.

Reports showed the disease is prevalent in the towns along the New Brunswick border, but has not yet developed in other parts of Aroostook county nor in the centre of the state.

BOMB IN BISHOP'S OFFICE

It Kills Five Clergymen of the Greek Catholic Church

Derreczin, Hungary, Feb. 24.—Five clergymen were killed by a bomb explosion in the office of Bishop Miklossy, a prelate of the Greek Catholic church. The bishop himself, who is supposed to have been the object of the outrage, had a narrow escape.

The victims include the bishop's vicar, whose daughter, on hearing of her father's death, became insane.

The creation of a Greek Catholic bishopric here a year ago provoked much hostility.

MONEY IN SUNFLOWERS

Their Cultivation Yields Large Profits to Missouri Experimenter

St. Louis, Feb. 24.—L. C. Phillips will plant 1000 acres of land in sunflowers this year as a further demonstration that this plant can be cultivated with profit.

Phillips has been experimenting for several years in the culture of sunflowers, whose seed, when mixed with other seed, makes excellent chicken and hog feed.

The cost of planting and harvesting is about $6 an acre, he says, and the returns from $35 to $48.

American Artist Says He Has Found Real Affinity

Paris, Feb. 24.—Ferdinand P. Earle, the American artist with a fondness for affinities, charged with abduction of his son Harold, arrived from Christiania in custody of an officer and was handed over to detectives awaiting him.

"I was not present when the court gave Mme. Fischbacher, my former wife, the custody of my son Harold, so the verdict was not fair to me," said Earle. "I want my boy to have a proper American training."

Asked about his companion, Miss Charlotte Herman, who will be tried with him for Harold's abduction, Earle said:

"She is a true, loyal woman, my real affinity, and together we have attained happinesss that few are blessed with."

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Today for the first time, women of Chicago have an opportunity to vote. They are participating in the selection of every party's nominee for alderman.

The most interesting fight, to follow the primary elections, is promised in the famous First ward, where "Bathhouse John" Coughlin, Democratic county alderman, with "Hinky Dink" Kenna, will be opposed by Miss Marian Drake, candidate for the Progressive nomination.

"Bathhouse John" and "Hinky Dink" have been busy rounding up their cohorts for the first real battle of their lives.

PATROLMAN BEATEN UP

Two Brother Officers Are Alleged to Have Assaulted Him

Boston, Feb. 24.—Patrolmen John T. Flatley and Roland P. Green of the Dedham street police station, who are accused of having waylaid and assaulted Patrolman Edward C. Fitzgerald, because of factional troubles at the station, are to be brought before a trial board.

Commissioner O'Meara is said to have attributed the origin of the trouble to over-zealousness in police work, which developed later in petty jealousies and caused the formation of cliques.

Fitzgerald is said to have been subjected to verbal abuse by the two men he accuses of having waylaid him. They awaited him on Garland street at 3 o'clock in the morning for the purpose of attacking him, he believes.

HOUGHS NECK NOT UNANIMOUS

Adams Shore People Oppose Movement for New Ward

Editor Daily Ledger:

The so-called Houghs Neck petition to the City Council for the division of Ward One should not be taken as the unanimous wish of the residents of the easterly portion of Ward One. Certainly a majority of the residents of the Merrymount sub-division, Adams Shore, Post Island, Bethel Beach and Germantown, which is included, areopposed to the movement.

One strong objection comes from the fact that voters in the localities named would be compelled on Election days and Caucus days to journey to the Fire station at Houghs Neck to record their votes. There is no central point that would be convenient as a polling place for the proposed ward. City Hall is just as convenient to a majority of the voters of the district as the Houghs Neck fire station.

In the next ten years the greatest growth in substantial houses and valuation will be at the westerly end of the district, rather than the easterly end, and the localities above named have little in common with Houghs Neck so called at the extreme end of the peninsular.

There is no justice or equality in the proposed division of Ward One. A more equal division would be on the present precinct lines, as they divide the ward almost in half. But it would not be justice to the other wards of Quincy to make two wards out of Ward One by any division.

The sooner Quincy people forget ward lines, and work together for the whole city, the better for our city.

SUNDAY FIRE QUINCY POINT

House of Andrew Buckley Damaged About $300

The alarm from Box 723 at 9.55 Sunday morning called the department to a lively blaze in the house of Andrew Buckley at 16 Clairmont park. There was no one at home at the time the fire was discovered, Mr. Buckley being out of town, and the remainder of the family being at church. From what could be learned the fire started from an over-heated funnel, which set fire to the woodwork about the chimney. The fire worked in behind the walls and when the department arrived a sheet of flame was pouring out of one of the upper windows.

While at work at the fire a bystander told Chief Billings that there was a child asleep in the building. Notwithstanding the flames and smoke Chief Billings and a squad of firemen entered the building and made a search for the child. None was found, however, and it was later learned that the child was not in the building.

As the fire got behind the walls it was a difficult one to extinguish. The loss is estimated at $300.

MISS CORLEWS PARTY.

Corlew at the Copley-Plaza, Boston, and fond parents and friends looked on and enjoyed the pretty scenes. RESCUED BY BOYS.

James Gray and Francis Creamer of Atlantic did an heroic act on the holiday when they rescued Mr. and Mrs. Cole of the boulevard from the icy waters of Quincy bay. While walking on the ice they broke through. A man whose name is unknown came to their assistance.

GIVE THEM THE TEST.

The Brockton Enterprise says: Quincy residents should not feel the more secure from fire loss nor its firemen more immune from danger because of the discovery that the department ladders have been all attacked by dry rot. Better to break a few ladders in tests, and foot the bill, than to crack the necks of the fire-fighters—especially when their services are most needed, to look at it in a practical, if not humanitarian, manner.

THE FIRST PARISH

Humanity has always worshipped an "Unknown God," said Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson in his sermon yesterday morning on "Faith in God." It is inevitable, since the human mind cannot grasp the infinite.

But for purposes of concrete worship men have always set before them some tangible image of their God, whether made of wood and stone, or of words and definitions. As knowledge has increased these images have became less crude and more intangible but all alike man-made and hence imperfect. And yet through all these varied forms the heart of man has worshipped the one true, though unknown God.

Today the average man who really dares to think for himself and ask sharp questions, has rejected all former efforts to define God; and if he has been led to believe that these definitions are the very reality, then he is apt to think himself an atheist or agnostic. The dilemma does not disappear if he undertakes to formulate a new intellectual conception more in harmony with modern thought For on the one hand the heart of man cannot possibly worship a mere intellectual conception however rational: while on the other the heart will not continue to worship an image, however beloved, which the intellect does not approve.

The dilemma disappears, however, if we turn to the simple teachings of Jesus of Nazareth. In one of his sublimest utterances he sets forth God as spirit, to be apprehended by the spirit of man, not by his physical senses or his reasoning powers. He defines the relationship of God to man as that of Universal Fatherhood. And He presents as the normal attitude of worship, the faith and trust of a little child.

As the modern mind turns from creeds and philosophies to this profound but simple spiritual insight, it is brought into the presence of that subtle something which in all ages has inspired men's lives to deeds of heroism and loyalty, of devotion, sacrifice and love. In such a presence reverence becomes rational and faith the normal condition of the soul.

Such faith and reverence are the greatest needs of our time. Without them civilization decays. Where they are fostered and maintained society advances toward the realization of a nobler social order.

Let philosophers employ their utmost skill in efforts to define the undefinable. Let churches keep their ancient creeds so long as they help a single soul to retain a vital faith. But those who find no help in either may still return to the simple teachings of the Nazarene, and worship the Father in Spirit and in Truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship Him. At the close of the sermon the choir rendered "God is Spirit."

In the afternoon Mr. Hudson spoke to the Young People's Religious Union on "Washington and Lincoln as types of American citizenship."

On next Sunday morning Mr. Hudson will continue his series on the "Great Affirmations of Unitarianism," the special subject being "A Unitarian's Faith in the Bible."

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Herbert W. Stebbins of Dorchester, preached at both services at Bethany church on Sunday to large audiences, and also addressed the Makaria class. His lecture in the evening on the subject—"Why men go to prison"—was of special interest, as Mr. Stebbins was for many years chaplain of the State prison at Charlestown.

He said no man in prison was altogether bad, and no one outside prison altogether good. That most of them inside have enough good to make a saint, and most of those outside enough bad to create a fiend. Men go to prison because of habits formed when children, because they do not learn to respect rightful authority of parents and teachers, because they never do anything well, because they have no sand, because they cannot stand ridicule, because they are slaves to fashion and live beyond their means and lastly because of crimes committed because of drink. He told of many confessions made to him by prisoners.

Teachers and officers of Bethany Bible school will dine together this evening and later study the lessons for March.

Action will be taken on candidates for church membership at the Thursday evening meeting.

CALVARY BAPTIST.

The unusually large congregation that assembled to hear Rev. Mr. Tilley on "Patriotism and service," was amply rewarded. The pastor laid great stress on love and obedience. He said Washington proved his greatness when at 14 years of age he wanted to go to sea, but refused to do so because it displeased his mother, and again when he knowingly faced death in the Indian war and bravely obeyed the command of his superior officer and organ when he refused to become a king, or accept the third term as President, proving that he who serves humanity first serves God and himself best.

The Ladies Sewing Circle, assisted by the Davis class, will present a patriotic entertainment and social at the church Wednesday evening. Refreshments will be served. Everything will be absolutely free and a cordial invitation is extended to all and a hearty welcome awaits you.

The regular prayer meeting on Thursday evening, at 7.30 in the church.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

The subject of the Sunday morning discourse at the Wollaston Methodist Episcopal church was "What will you do with Jesus?" or "Personal relations to the Son of God."

The text was from Matthew 27:22; it being the question put by wavering, weakening Pilate to the clamoring, insistent mob.

At the evening service Mrs. F. H. Morgan preached a heart-stirring sermon from the text found in Matt. 19:20 "All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?"

Mrs. Morgan also spoke at the Monday evening meeting upon the Prodigal Son.

The pastor, Rev. George M. Bailey will speak on Tuesday evening which will close the series of special services.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

All services at the Wollaston Baptist church Sunday were spent in celebrating the Judson Centennial. It was expected that Dr. Thomas S. Barbour would deliver an address on Judson in the morning, but was unable to do so because of illness. Mr. George B. Huntington spoke in his stead, his subject being, "Judson, the Pioneer." One cannot fail to be impressed as one hears of the struggles of this missionary, Adoniram Judson, and his faithful wife and helper, struggles with government, language, climate and native hostility. From the appeal of these two for aid from Baptists in America, grew the first great Baptist Foreign Missionary Society now so well known. And this is not the only result of the foundation laid by "the Pioneer," for aside from translations," founding of churches, etc., we can trace back almost all of our present missionary accomplishment, to the ceaseless devotion of Adoniram and Ann Judson, in Burmah, one hundred years ago.

All individual classes were discontinued at the session of the Sunday School, in order that all might hear Miss Florence Barbour speak on "Episodes in the lives of Adoniram and Ann Judson." Miss Barbour is the daughter of Dr. Thomas S. Barbour, and naturally very familiar with the subject which she had to handle.

At 3.30 the Juniors held their meeting in the chapel with Mrs. Walther in charge, subject, "Blessings That Come from Hard Work."

William E. Bullock was the leader of the Christian Endeavor meeting. The subject, "Rules for young business men and women," was well covered by him, as one who belongs to the above group himself.

At 7 the pastor gave a stereopticon lecture on "Buddhism and Christianity in Burmah." The pictures were very fine and the lecture itself most instructive as well as entertaining.

PARK AND DOWNS CHURCH.

The Sunday morning service was very largely attended. The pastor the Rev. William B. Ayers, though physically showing the result of a severe attack of grippe and tonsilitis was not deterred from his usual masterly delivery, presenting some strong spiritual truths most ably. It was a lesson of helpfulness and encouragement. The minister took for his text Matt. VI-12, "Forgive us our sins." The purpose of the sermon was to show that it it not a vain appeal we make when we pray that our sins should be forgiven.

The evening service brought out as usual a full house, the sermon was taken from the "Prodigal Son."

In addition to the regular choir, the service was still further enhanced by two exceedingly fine solos rendered by Arthur F. Capen.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The services Sunday were of a patriotic nature, appropriate to Washington's birthday. The musical selections by the Girls' choir and Mrs. Royal L. Turner, and especially the solo by Miss Ernestine Hunt were much enjoyed. The sermon by Rev. Carl G. Horst was appropriate to Washington's Birthday and was based on the text "Fear the Lord and serve him in truth with all your heart, for consider how great things he hath done for you." 1 Samuel 12-24. After paying tribute to the "First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen," and emphasizing the fact that the true grandeur of a nation is its manhood, Mr. Horst urged a better acquaintance with the great social, political and economic movements of the world. The best offering that we can make to the state is intelligence, service and a character above reproach.

The regular meeting of the Alliance will be held in the vestry Wednesday, Feb. 25, at 2.30 o'clock. The program will be in charge of Mrs. Robert E. Park and the general subject is "How art touches life." Miss Catherine Child of the Stuart Club for art and music students in Boston will speak. An original dialogue between a man and a woman, written especially for this meeting by Mrs. Elizabeth Thayer Huntington, will be read by Mrs. Park. This promises to be an exceedingly interesting meeting to which all the women in the parish are invited. Tea will be served as usual.

The first in the series of special Lenten services will be held Sunday evening March 1, at 7.30 o'clock. The visiting preacher is the well known preacher, lecturer, author, president of the Boston Twentieth Century Club the Rev. Charles F. Dole, D. D.

The annual collection for the American Unitarian Association will be taken Sunday at the morning and evening services. Every dollar contributed goes direct into the field for church extension and to promulgate correct views of religion.

The next vesper service will be held Sunday, March 8 at 4.30. The Apollo Quartet of Boston will sing.

The meeting of the Y. P. R. U. Sunday, March 1, will be held at 6.30 o'clock, a half hour earlier than usual on account of the special Lenten service. Speaker, Mr. Fred Eliot of the Harvard Divinity School.

Rev. Carl G. Horst will address the boys at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday morning, Feb. 28.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

Sunday was "Fathers Day" at the Wollaston Congregational church and consequently the men formed a large percent of the audience at the morning service and many of the fathers attended the Bible school which followed. The church was strikingly and beautifully decorated with the stars and stripes in honor of the Father of His Country, whose birthday it was. The music was also appropriate to the day and by special request the quartet sang, just before the sermon, "The little brown church in the vale."

The pastor, Dr. I. W. Sneath spoke from the texts: Deut. 8:2; "And thou shalt remember," and Deut. 32:7, "Remember the days of old."

He said in part: "Again and again on the edge of the Promised Land, Moses says, 'Remember, remember for thy children's sake.' Our ancestors were men and women of sterling integrity and character because; they trusted in the Lord Jesus Christ for salvation from sin and guidance on life's journey. You are the men and women you are today because back there they fought in the name of Christ to give you the virtues which make for character today. It is worth while for us to go back in the years and remember to the end that we may give to the boys and girls of this generation an example and character, life and faith in God that will make them as useful in their day and generation as our fathers and mothers were in theirs."

The Bible school met at 12.15 in the vestry in charge of Charles A. Campbell, superintendent. The primary department united with the intermediate and senior and there were special exercises in honor of Father's day. There was a large attendance, the fathers being made especially welcome.

The Junior C. E. meeting was held under the direction of Mrs. Weinschenk, assistant superintendent. The subject was, "Blessings that come from hard work. Leader, G. Hillman Barney.

A large audience attended the vesper service at 4 o'clock, when a male quartet assisted the chorus.

The Christian Endeavor meeting was held at 6 o'clock, leader, Miss Madeline K. Morse; topic: "Principles for young business men and women."

PEOPLE'S FORUM AT BRAINTREE

Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes Speaks on Socialism

After a lapse of two years a meeting of the People's Forum was held Sunday afternoon, in All Soul's church, Braintree, and every seat was filled, showing that the interest in these gatherings is by no means abated.

Owing to the absence of the pastor Rev. D. Roy Freeman who was called to the West on business, Horace R. Drinkwater acted as chairman and filled the position most acceptably. He introduced as the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes of New York who talked on the subject of "Socialism." She spoke convincingly and in a way that showed her to be thoroughly conversant with her topic.

Mrs. Stokes considers Socialism the only logical remedy for present day social conditions and evils, and thinks it must ultimately triumph. Among the incongruities of life under the present capitalist system she cited the fact that a million men in this country are at present seeking employment and unable to find it. At the same time the mills and factories are filled with children compelled to work from morning till night.

She claims that the land should be free to all, the same as the air, and nobody should be allowed to own it. She defined capitalism as gambling, the winnings of which go to the promotors of big schemes and not to the common people who are the ones who really earn them. In other words the profits so called, are merely the misprint portion of the unearned increment which really belongs according to socialistic principles to those who earn them viz. the workers.

According to Mrs. Stokes, business is business but present day business is hell. She made the rather startling statement that 90 per cent of the people of this nation are only allowed 10 per cent of the profits of their labors while 10 per cent of the whole population get 90 per cent of the profits. According to the scheme of Socialism, the people should own the land and the machinery of production and the net receipts or profits from labor should be divided more equably.

In conclusion, the speaker urged all present whether advocates or opponets of Socialism to look carefully into the subject and inform themselves as to its various phases. She has made a deep study of socialism and is well qualified to be an exponent of its theories.

At the close of her talk, Mrs. Stokes answered at considerable length and very clearly several questions propounded by interested listeners. The meeting was closed at about 4.45 o'clock with the singing of America by the audience.

N. F. HUNT PASSES AWAY

Was a Selectman and Tax Collector of Braintree

Nathaniel F. Hunt, one of the oldest citizens of Braintree, passed away at his home on Quincy avenue Sunday afternoon at four o'clock. He had a paralytic shock last summer which left him in poor condition and finally caused his death.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Hunt and was born in East Braintree, March 23, 1838. He received his early education in the old Stetson schoolhouse and later went to a school at Quincy Point. After leaving school Mr. Hunt learned to be a shoemaker, at which trade he worked for a number of years and was employed by Frank Shaw of South Braintree the latter part of his time at this work.

In 1873 he married Miss Aeria Robbins of Lowell, and settled down in his late home on Quincy avenue.

He played an alto horn in the old Weymouth band and was a member of the following societies: Son of American Revolution, Mayflower Descendants, the Alden Kindred, and Colonial Wars.

In 1888 he was elected selectman from the east part of the town and served in this office for five years. He then served as tax collector and later as auditor for the town of Braintree. Mr. Hunt retired about five years ago and has spent most of his time traveling in Europe and United States since his retirement.

Mr. Hunt is survived by his wife, is at present confined to her bed in a run down condition.

Funeral services will be held from his late home on Quincy avenue, Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. The Rev. Edward Norton of Quincy will conduct the services.

QUINCY HIGH BEAT SALEM

Grand Rally Came in the Second Period

Quincy High beat Salem in the High school gym on the holiday 22 to 9, before a crowd of fans which included for the first time this season more adults than pupils. The Seniors beat the Freshmen 19 to 5 and took first position in the interclass league.

Salem took the lead at the start and had Quincy 9 to 8 at the close of the first period. In this time they demonstrated flashy passing and an ability to break up the Quincy plays. The local boys were off color and appeared to be unable to shoot baskets.

The tossing of a foul by Earl Bates in the first minute of the second half tied the score. It was followed by a goal by Jenkins and while Quincy rolled up the winning points they held Salem scoreless during the period.

At times the games tended toward roughnes and Frieburg was obliged to retire in the second half after striking his elbow against the wall. He starred for the visitors. The summaries:

QUINCY		SALEM
Jenkins lf		rg Martinson
Bates, Brown rf		lg Rice
White c		c Grier
Crocker lg	rf Frieburg, Kenneddy
Hamlin, Brown rg		lf Doyle

Score Quincy 22; Salem 9. Goals from floor—Jenkins 4, Bates 2, White, Hamlin 2, Rice, Doyle, Frieburg 2. Goals on free tries—Bates 4, Frieburg Referee—Thompson.

In the interclass game the summary was:

Quincy High, East Boston High and West Roxbury High have been matched in the relay events at the B. A. A. schoolboy games on Saturday. Everett High and Hope Street High school of Providence will not compete. Cushing Academy, which was one of the t owmatched against Quincy is also out. Quincy had protested running against them, on the grounds that they were far superior.

James F. Young, secretary of the Old Colony Gentlemens Driving club of South Weymouth, has just purchased a two year old bay gelding colt in New York. The colt was by Don Frazier who was by Col. Drinkwater's Cochato. The colt will make his appearance on the South Weymouth track the coming season.

Quincy High has lined up a strong relay team for the school boy games Saturday. Barbar, Watson, Sears, Safford and Anderson have been chosen. All are nearly equal in ability and the best conditioned men will make the start.

Paul Poehler and Archie Walsh beat John Christopher and A. H. Millar in the first 10 strings of their match at Boston on Monday by 87 pins. The former team got 2215 and the latter 2128. Walsh rolled 1092 and Poehler 1123, Millar had 1088 and Christopher 1040. Champion Poehler was in fine form, averaged 112 and got 133 for best single. Millar weakened on the last few strings and Christopher, according to spectators had his proverbial hard luck. Walsh raised a rumpus by getting only one string less than 100. The final 10 will be rolled tonight.

NEW GOLF CLUB.

The Winnetka Course, Near Chicago, Nearing Completion.

A new outlet for the enthusiasm of north shore (Chicago) golfers will be afforded next season. Vice President Robert Stevenson, Jr., has announced that the scenic course of the Winnetka Country club, lying midway between Kenilworth and Winnetka, will be completed and thrown open for play on July 1. This is a welcome addition to the list of popular links bordering the lake on the north side because of the congested conditions that prevailed last season, when overflow membership rosters prevailed.

Directors of the new Winnetka club are already forming plans for their formal bow in Chicago golfing circles in July. President Douglas Smith has recommended that an invitation tournament be staged from the 1st to the 4th, together with several special events for women golfers and the usual holiday attractions on July 4.

High "Death Rate."

Last year was surely a hoodoo for the champion English fighters, as five of them were defeated. Bombardier Wells was knocked out twice by Georges Carpentier, Johnny Summers lost two decisions in Australia to Harry Stone, the American fighter; Jack Harrison was defeated by one of his countrymen; Bill Beynon was knocked out by Charley Ledoux, the French bantamweight, and Jack Ladbury was stopped in ten rounds by Jim Berry, an Englishman.

CASHIER IS MURDERED

Phone Girl's Wit Leads to Speedy Capture of Alleged Slayer.

Corning, N. Y., Feb. 24.—While defending a $10,000 shipment of currency, Henry Edwards, night cashier in the office of the Wells Fargo Express company, was shot and killed by David Dunn, a former employe.

The prompt discovery of the crime and arrest of the alleged murderer was due to the quick wit of Miss Carrie Niles, a central telephone operator.

When a call came over the express office line and she could get no response to her requests for a number, she listened and heard sounds that led her to believe that all was not well. Miss Niles communicated with the police, and when an officer arrived at the express office he found Edwards dead. A trail of blood led to the hiding place of Dunn.

In his confession, according to the police, Dunn said he told a hard luck story to induce Edwards to let him sleep in the office, and while the clerk was taking a nap, he tried to get into the safe. Edwards awoke and a fight ensued.

PANAMA CANAL TOLLS

Goethals Says American as Well as Foreign Ships Should Pay

Washington, Feb. 24.—Governor Goethals of the Panama canal zone explained to the house appropriation committee his estimate of $23,700,000 for next year's work on the canal and for the maintenance of the zone government.

He again voiced his opposition to free canal tolls for coastwise American shipping to Chairman Adamson of the house interstate commerce commission.

"We have spent $400,000,000," said Goethals, "in constructing the canal, and now we ought to have an opportunity to make the canal pay back this cost. American vessels as well as foreign ships should bear the burden."

RED SOX PLAYERS OFF FOR TRAINING

Carrigan's Spring Troubles Will Begin at Hot Springs

Boston, Feb. 24.—Manager Bill Carrigan of the Red Sox started for Hot Springs this morning. Secretary Riley attended to the transportation and all other arrangements.

Carrigan and his companions had only to step on board the train at the South station. Bill's troubles do not begin until he has reached Hot Springs.

With Carrigan on the rattler were Players Gady, Hendricksen, Green, Collins, Muldenan and Coumbe. At New York Wagner will join the party. When they reach Hot Springs it is expected several Red Sox pitchers will be on hand to welcome them.

BARK'S CREW SAVED

But Attempt to Rescue Them Cost Lives of Fourteen Men

Wexford, Ire., Feb. 24.—The survivors of the crew of the wrecked Norwegian bark Mexico were taken off the barren island on which they had landed Saturday and where they had been since then without food. Altogether, fourteen men were drowned in the various attempts made to rescue them.

The Mexico went ashore Friday. Her distress signals were answered by two lifeboats, one of which was stove in on reaching the vessel, but its crew managed to scramble on board. The other capsized and sank.

The Mexico was dashed to pieces on the rocks, and her crew and the remaining lifeboat men were washed ashore, where they had no shelter except that formed of wreckage.

MAKES MOVE TO REGAIN OFFICE

Sulzer Brings Suit For Salary as New York Governor

HE RAISES OLD CONTENTIONS

Have Already Been Passed Upon by Court of Impeachment, Which Former Executive Claims Was Illegally Organized—Court Order Commands Comptroller to Appear

Albany, Feb. 24.—William Sulzer has instituted legal proceedings before Justice Chester of the supreme court with the purpose of regaining the governorship, from which he was removed last October.

An order was issued by the court commanding Comptroller Sohmer to appear and show cause why a writ of mandamus, compelling him to pay the former governor his full salary as the occupant of that office, should not be issued. Sulzer previously had made a written demand on Sohmer for his salary.

When Attorney General Carmody notified Chester that he would oppose the granting of the writ the court said he intended to refuse it as a matter of law, holding that the court of impeachment had already passed on the contentions of Sulzer.

An agreement then was made between the attorney general and Alexander S. Bacon, counsel for Sulzer, to facilitate the determination of the questions involved by the state courts. The appellate division will be asked to affirm Chester's proposed order denying the granting of the writ, and then the case will be carried to the court of appeals, where a similar request will be made.

Thus Sulzer will be able to file his case in the supreme court of the United States with little delay, it is believed. Doubt is expressed, however, as to whether a final decison can be obtained from the supreme court before the term of Governor Glynn, successor to Sulzer, shall have expired on Dec. 31, 1914.

The contentions raised by Sulzer were passed on fully by the court of impeachment. Chief among them are that the assembly action in impeaching him was illegal, that the court of impeachment was illegally organized, that six members of the court had no right to sit and that the acts with which he was charged were committed before he took office.

This is the first proceedings instituted by Sulzer to test the validity of his removal from office. Two other actions have been started by residents of New York city, but the former governor has disclaimed all connection with them.

HINGES UPON SCHEPPS

Indications That Becker Will Be Granted a New Trial

New York, Feb. 24.—Persistent rumors that the state court of appeals had decided to grant a new trial to Charles Becker, the former police lieutenant, now in the death house at Sing Sing for conspiracy in the murder of Herman Rosenthal, are current, and it is said the office of District Attorney Whitman is preparing an exhaustive case in anticipation of the court's ruling.

The opinion is freely expressed in authoritative circles at Albany that a new trial for Becker is certain to be ordered by the court of appeals, which will hold that Sam Schepps was an accomplice in the Rosenthal murder and, therefore, ineligible to appear as a witness.

NEARLY 7000 VISITORS

Record Washington's Birthday Reception at Bay State Capitol

Boston, Feb. 24.—In the history of Washington birthday receptions by the governor of Massachusetts there has never been such a crowd as that which filed through the Hall of Flags to shake hands with Governor Walsh.

The visitors numbered 6819. The largest previous attendance on record was that of the year 1909, when Governor Draper greeted 5557.

Members of the Grand Army of the Republic were at the head of the line. Curtis Guild was the only ex-governor to appear.

Found In the Ice

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

On the 7th day of October, 1852, the ship Princess left Australia with a cargo of wool and other articles valued at $250,000. She had in her treasure room gold in dust, bars and coin aggregating $1,300,000. She was never heard from.

In June, 1868, eighteen years after the loss of the Princess, I was one of the crew of the Boston whaler Talisman, which was trying the cruising ground on the south of Cape Horn. We had had a fair run of luck when we got a gale from the north which lasted for four days and nights without a break. This drove us away south among the ice, and on a dozen different occasions the ship was within a hair's breadth of being cast away or overwhelmed. After the fourth day of the gale there was a calm lasting thirty hours. During this interval the Talisman lay between two monster icebergs, with her boats down and ready to tow her out of the way should they close in on her. Then we got a strong breeze from the east.

Sometimes we lay moored to a berg for several hours; again we were pounding among the great cakes of ice, which threatened every moment to crush in her sides. We had been driving to the southeast for three days when the breeze fell and left us on a heaving sea, with a monster iceberg about two miles away to the south.

The ship had thus far sustained little damage, but the crew were exhausted with the hard work and constant vigilance. The men were given an all day's rest, and no incident occurred until late in the afternoon. The mass of ice had a front a mile long on our side, with an average height of 300 feet. What its width was we could not say. We were astonished to see smoke rising from the far side of it. No one doubted that it came from a fire lighted by shipwrecked sailors, who had caught sight of the Talisman and were making her a signal.

The third mate and three men were ordered off in one of the whaleboats to investigate, and I was one of the three selected. We took with us a breaker of fresh water, a bottle of rum, bread, meat, blankets, a boat compass and a lantern, and darkness fell as we pulled away from the ship.

We pulled to pass the western face of the berg and found it to be about half a mile long. As we reached its southern limit and turned to the east we caught sight of a small fire on a ledge about 100 feet above the water. As soon as we got up to it the mate hailed and was promptly answered that there were two men on the ledge, one of whom had a broken leg. Thereupon I was ordered to remain by the boat and hold on, while the mate and the two men landed on the berg and began making their way up to the ledge.

Twenty minutes later the berg split, a fog settled down, and with it came a breeze. I did not know what to do, and so I laid in my oar, wrapped myself in a blanket and sat down in the bottom of the boat. You will think it queer that I fell asleep under the circumstances, but that is exactly what happened, nor did I wake until daylight came again. Then I found myself in an ice floe which was drifting to the south at the rate of about three miles an hour.

I am not at all sure how long I drifted, but the general direction was south, and the time was at least four days and nights. On the morning of what was probably the fifth day I awoke to find that the floe had ceased drifting, and a quarter of a mile to the east of the boat was a mass of ice.

It was a mile or more in length and not over thirty feet high and looked more like a wall resting on the water. The ice was yellow and dirty, with rocks embedded in it here and there, and I have no doubt that a good portion of it was the lower part of an iceberg which had turned turtle. Between me and the wall was a jumble of ice, over which it seemed impossible to make my way, but as soon as I had broken my fast I set out to try it. It took me a full hour to make that quarter of a mile, but at length I reached the wall and found that I could easily get up its rough side. When I reached the top it was to discover that the mass of ice was almost a cube, with a great hollow in its surface to remind one of the crater of a volcano.

In the center of this hollow lay a mass of wreckage, and after a long stare, half believing my eyes deceived me, I slid down and began investigation. No one will ever see a more curious sight. A space several hundred feet square was covered with broken masts, yards, beams, planks, boards, ropes, blocks and sails. A large ship had here suffered destruction. Just how I could not determine, but it seemed to me as if a great body of ice had fallen on it as she rested in the crater. No other force unless gunpowder could have so wrecked and scattered her about. Some of the wreckage bore the name Princess.

Late in the afternoon the floe began to break up, and I got back to my boat. By night there were lanes of water in every direction, and a strong breeze set in from the south. I drifted to the north all that night and all the next day, but as the second night came on I was picked up by the Scotch whaler Jeannette, which had captured and was cutting in a whale, and months later was landed at her home port.

Woman's World

The Ill Health of the Kaiserin a Matter of International Interest.

THE KAISERIN OF GERMANY.

Rumors of the ill health of the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria have been circulated for some time. While long officially denied, it is at last apparent that they are not without foundation, for at the latest court function in Berlin, where the kaiserin is expected to stand with the kaiser through part of the ceremonies, she remained seated on the dais. It is said she is suffering from heart trouble. Gossip says that this affliction was brought on by her use several years ago of anti-fat preparations which contained iodine. Knowing that her husband was an admirer of slender women, the royal lady tried to keep down her own increasing weight by the use of these preparations, whose injurious properties were discovered too late.

The kaiserin is fifty-six years of age. She has been married to the kaiser for thirty-three years, and the union, for a royal one, has been singularly happy. In the numerous differences that the kaiser has had with the crown prince she has acted as mediator. She is a woman of tact, good sense and amiable disposition and has endeared herself much to the German people. Her ill health is therefore a matter of much concern to her husband's subjects. It is said that the kaiser has much confidence in her judgment, and in many international affairs her cool, good sense has served to restrain her impulsive and hot headed husband when he was tempted to act rashly. She is believed to be the real power behind the throne in Berlin, although her influence is exercised so quietly and tactfully that most of the world and chiefly those interested are unaware of it.

A SUCCESSFUL VENTURE.

Municipal Market Due to the Enterprise of Local Housewives.

No less a city than Los Angeles has been quietly but successfully developing a plan for municipal markets. Three markets were opened the first week of last May and three more last July. In the first two months about 3,000 people appeared in the markets, many of whom were women who sold bread, cake, jelly, etc., and who were encouraged in every way.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday were chosen as market days, and a charge of 15 cents a day for the use of a stall was made to each vender. This trifling expense, however, covers the operating expense of the market and includes the services of the superintendent and an inspector. These men go the rounds of the market to see that no inferior goods are offered for sale and to prevent the operation of disreputable hucksters who buy up tainted food.

The city did not appropriate funds for this market, but lent a certain sum, which paid for the lease of the ground and the various salaries. At first the stalls and booths were not permanent, but the success of the scheme has been so great that permanent stalls are being made and fitted up.

Los Angeles has benefited by this market to the extent that fully 25,000 people on market days come with their own baskets to carry things home. The result has been not only reduced cost to the consumer, but a great increase in the production, because every owner of a small lot of suburban property has begun cultivating produce to bring to the market where he can exhibit almost free and with very little expense of transportation.

One of the interesting phases of the market is the issuing of a monthly bulletin suggesting what to plant. All questions on gardening are also answered by an expert. These bulletins are widely distributed among school children, as in many Los Angeles schools gardening forms part of the work.

DEATH OF TELLER

Served Five Terms as Senator and Was In Arthur's Cabinet

Denver, Feb. 24.—Former United States Senator Henry M. Teller died at his home here, aged 84. He had been ill for two years. Teller served five terms in the senate and was secretary of the interior in the Arthur cabinet.

Teller was formerly a Republican, but left the G. O. P. in 1896, being one of the leaders of the Silver Republican movement which supported Mr. Bryan for the presidency. He afterward became a Democrat.

Teller was born in Granger, N. Y., May 23, 1830. He studied law and was admitted to practice at Binghamton, N. Y. In January, 1858, he removed to Illinois and practiced law there until April, 1861, when he removed to Colorado and resumed the practice of law. He never held an office until he was elected to the United States senate from Colorado on the admittance of that state.

BOY DENIES CONFESSION

Young Aprahanian Now Says He Did Not Kill Turk

Boston, Feb. 24.—A denial of his written confession was made by Nishan Aprahanian to his mother and her brother, Sarkis Megerdichian, at the Cambridge jail yesterday.

This adds an astonishing new phase to the case, which has attracted so much attention because of the unusual circumstances surrounding the murder of Ishmayel-Oghlo, a Turk.

But the Watertown police still have in their possession two exhibits which will be brought forward to substantiate the confession which they hold. These are a bloodstained overcoat belonging to Aprahanian, who told his father he killed the Turk, and a blood-stained vest, which they claim is owned by Maoog Garabedian. They were taken after the surrender of the boy by his father to face the charge of murder.

PREACH TO MASSES, NOT INDIVIDUALS

Mrs. Stokes Gives Advice to Congregational Ministers

Boston, Feb. 24.—That the salvation of the masses instead of the salvation of the individual should be the message of the churches was the declaration of Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes at a meeting of Congregational ministers in Pilgrim hall.

"During the recent Lawrence strike," said Mrs. Stokes, "the mill owners refused to grant two loaves of bread a week to their employes, but they declared a dividend of 60 percent to stockholders.

"Some of the stockholders were ashamed to receive the money. The owners declared that if they granted the strikers' demands they would have to close the mills. Let them close, I say.

"You ministers need to preach the salvation of the masses as Socialism is doing," continued Mrs. Stokes. "The cost of living must be reduced. The whole scheme of dividends is wrong. Dividends should cease."

REEFING THEIR SAILS

Seventh-Day Adventists Preparing For the World's End

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 24.—The local congregation of the Seventh-Day Adventists have sold their church building to the chamber of commerce and will rebuild on a much smaller scale, because they expect the end of the world at any time and are making no plans for future temporal affairs.

The pastor of the church in a sermon predicted that the millenium is very near at hand, and the sale of the church property is looked upon locally as a sort of sail reefing for the approaching end.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES

Grank Conant, aged 4, was coasting at Pittsfield, Mass., when his sled crashed into a trolley car and the boy was killed.

The 3-year-old son of Norris L. Moore of Ellsworth, Me., died from burns received when his clothing caught fire from an open stove.

Immediately after his marriage to Miss Miriam Dworskey Samuel Lampert of New York gave $5000, which he had intended to spend for lavish festivities, to philanthropic institutions.

Onion reserves in the Connecticut valley, the country's chief source of supply, have dwindled to a few hundred carloads.

"Washington never told a lie. That's a big lie," says Rev. Dr. C. Reisner, pastor of Grace M. E. church of New York.

Mrs. Oliver H. Jellison was burned to death at Portsmouth, N. H., while tending the furnace fire in her home. Her clothing caught fire.

As a result of blood poisoning that followed the breaking of his shoulder in falling on an icy sidewalk Adolph Ekelon, 58, died at Worcester, Mass.

Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, denies his reported engagement to Miss Frewen.

The Cercle Jacques Cartier hall at Warren, R. I., occupied by a moving picture theatre, pool room and lodge rooms, was practically destroyed by fire.

IS PRESSING UNITED STATES

Great Britain Wants to See Mexican Trouble Settled

SHE WILL NOT INTERVENE

Realizes That Attempt of That Character Would Be Both Futile and Impolitic—Confidential Exchanges Kept Secret For Fear of Causing Still Further Trouble

London, Feb. 24.—The British government announced for the first time that it was pressing the United States to bring about the pacification of Mexico. At the same time it stated that Great Britain would not attempt to intervene in that country.

Both these official announcements were made in the house of commons by Under Secretary Acland of the ministry of foreign affairs. They were brought about by the agitation caused by the execution of William S. Benton, a British subject, by General Villa at Juarez.

"The government has been in frequent communication with the United States regarding Mexico, where continued fighting has greatly prejudiced British interests," said Acland. "All desire the pacification of Mexico. It is impossible to effect it by British intervention, however, and we do not propose to make any attempt of that character, which would be both futile and impolitic."

That the exchange of communications between the United States and Great Britain on the subject of Mexico is regarded as of the highest importance was shown by a subsequent statement from Acland that he would produce the documents relating to the Mexican situation only after the United States had granted its permission for the revelation of confidential messages exchanged. He added:

"It is undesirable to publish anything in the meantime that is likely to increase the danger to British lives and property."

The last statement was taken to mean that all the pressure possible had been brought to bear on the United States to induce her to intervene in Mexico and that the English government feared both factions in that country might object to such action by England and molest its subjects.

The replies of Acland to the interpellations of the Unionists failed to satisfy the opposition and the government was pressed for details as to intentions in regard to the execution of Benton.

Foreign Secretary Grey finally rose to answer. He stated that Secretary Bryan had informed the British ambassador in Washington that Benton had been court martialed and shot for attempting to kill General Villa. He said the foreign office had been communicating with Washington regarding further action.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, said Grey, had told Bryan that the public opinion of Europe was likely to be seriously affected by the action of Villa, which announcement was greeted by the members with a cheer.

The foreign secretary assured the house that the government was taking all possible steps to learn the facts of the Benton case and to secure full protection for its nationals in Mexico, but pointed out that the government was powerless to take any measures in the disturbed regions.

VILLA IGNORES REQUEST

Body of Benton Not Yet Turned Over to His Family

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 24.—Interest in the execution of William S. Benton by General Villa continues with little abatement, but all eyes are on developments at Washington.

Consul Edwards at Juarez said the state department's request that Benton's body be turned over to the widow had met with no response from Villa, who is at Chihuahua. The request was telegraphed last Saturday, and it is reported that Consul Letcher at Chihuahua will renew his plea.

Benton's friends assert that while Washington may for diplomatic reasons accept the official version of a court martial, which, the rebels alleged, tried Benton and found him guilty of attempting Villa's life, there is still no disposition among them to change their own verdict of "murder."

STRUCK BY TWO TRAINS

Man Is Killed by First and Thrown From Tracks by Second

Malden, Mass., Feb. 24.—Patrick McKenna, 60 years old, was struck and instantly killed by an in-bound Portland express at the Western station of the Boston and Maine railroad here.

Before any of the witnesses of the accident could pull his mangled body from the tracks an out-bound train tossed it clear of the station platform. It landed at the feet of two small girls.

Brutality Arouses Americans

Panama, Feb. 24.—The brutality of a bullfight brought out a protest from 200 Americans, mostly tourists, who were present in the new amphitheatre. The bulls were tame and unwilling to fight.

Doble estates where there are many fine old trees.

HOSE COMPANY REUNION

Enjoyable Occasion for Several of the Old Vets

The annual mid-winter reunion of the Washington M. French Hose association was held Saturday evening at Grand Army hall, and was as usual an occasion that drew together many who in olden times were active in the Fire department, and many connected with the Fire department at the present time.

The first thing in the evening's program was a clam chowder, one of Billy Bird's best, which was served shortly after 8 o'clock. Fred H. French, the first and only president the association has ever had, occupied the seat at the head of the table, while flanking him on the right and left were Chief Engineer Faxon Billings, President Joseph L. Whiton of the City Council, Ex-Mayor Eugene R. Stone, ex-Engineer James H. Elcock, ex-Chief Engineers Walter H. Ripley and Amos L. Litchfield, City Engineer Sargent, City Messenger Tirrell, Councilman Williams and others, including John Q. A. Field, who in his younger days was active in town affairs, and Representative Edward J. Sandberg.

The dinner over the only Galen at his own request made a little speech of congratulation on the 47th anniversary of the old company, closing by singing that touching song "Robin Adair."

In opening the after-dinner exercises President French said he was glad to see so many present. He also feelingly referred to three members who were always present at gatherings of the association, who had passed away since the summer outing, ex-Mayor William T. Shea, Engineer Daniel J. Nyhan and Quincy Torrey, and he asked all to stand in silent prayer for a minute.

The first speaker was President Whiton, who spoke of Fire department matters and the need of having an up-to-date department in every way. He believed in a modern department with every piece of apparatus being run by power. He believed in getting to a fire as soon as possible. He hoped before he went out of office to see every piece of apparatus equipped with power.

Ex-Mayor Stone spoke of the many pleasant gatherings of the association and said that this was the first social function he had attended since retiring from the office of Mayor, and it gave him pleasure to see so many who had served as officials during his term of office. He agreed somewhat with the last speaker as to Fire department matters and said that the Quincy department was as good as any in the Metropolitan district. He also was sorry to miss those who had passed away.

Chief Billings said this was the first time he had spoken in public. He was glad to be present and hoped to have the pleasure of meeting with the association again.

Representative Sandberg said that he gave up a meeting of a legislative committee at Cape Cod in order to attend this gathering. He spoke of the time when Walter Ripley was chief, who was the first fire fighter he knew. He had always found the members of the association good fellows and was glad to meet with them.

Dr. John H. Ash spoke as one of those that had been retired to private life. He felt sorry for those who could not answer to the roll call on account of sickness or death. He also spoke of the first time he ever saw ex-Chief Ripley, which was when the Quincy department came to North Weymouth to help at a fire. There were three things of importance to the welfare of the city. First, the schools, then the Fire department and then the Police department. These protections to life and property should be supported. In closing he said that he had been retired, but that he was going to try to come back.

Ex-Engineer Elcock told of some reminiscences of the old Granite in her palmy days and he looked back on his old Fire department days as among his happiest.

The last speaker was John Q. A. Field, who defended the old Tiger, although the president took issue with him as to one statement relative to the abilities of the Tiger and Niagara.

This closed the speaking after which the old vets gathered about in little groups and talked over old times..

SAD HOLIDAY

cently he had a recurrence of his old trouble and for several days his life had hung in the balance.

Dr. Welch as born in Boston 59 years ago, obtaining his early education in the public schools of that city. Graduating from Chauncey Hall school of Boston he spent two years in the drug store of Francis Ambler of Weymouth going then to New York where he took his medical course in Bellevue hospital. He was graduated in 1880. Having studied also with one of New York's best eye and ear specialists the opening was made for him to remain permanently. He decided against this however, coming to Quincy instead where he began the practice of medicine that same year 1880. A few years later he married Miss Emma F. Ambler of Weymouth who survives him, also a son Francis Ambler Welch and daughter Miss Marjorie Welch.

During his early residence in Quincy he served for two years on the Board of Health, and from 1894 to 1898 was City Physician, also serving in the same capacity in 1900. He felt the keenest interest in all work pertaining to the Quincy Hospital serving for years as chairman of the board of trustees. He was also instrumental in the formation of the Anti-Tuberculosis society in Quincy, and was its first president, and was very active in the society at the time the Mt. Pleasant camp was built. In addition to this work he was secretary for a number of years of the Norfolk South District Medical society.

Aside from his interest in medical work he was interested in banking and business enterprises, being president of the Quincy Co-operative bank, and vice president of the Quincy Savings bank. He was also a director in the George W. Prescott Publishing Co. In addition to this he was largely interested in the real estate development of Quincy and some years ago built the block of stores on the corner of Hancock and Granite streets, adjoining the block of stores of Henry M. Faxon.

All that made for the good of Quincy was very close to him and it was only the feeling that he must always be the physician first that kept him from taking more active part in city government urged as he was repeatedly to do so. To do the one was to neglect the other and to all who knew Dr. Welch this would have been impossible, whatever he had to do admitted of no half accomplishment. Truly a life of service, with the highest ideals of what a physician's life should be. In the passing of such a life from our midst Quincy meets with a loss immeasurable. A type of splendid manhood, strong, helpful, upright, with a moral force felt by all pointing the way to all that is best in life. With a personality gifted beyond the average he wielded an influence strong yet unconscious as the finer nature is sure to be. He knew but the one way, the way of right and expected equal honesty from those with whom he came in contact. A staunch loyal friend many came to him in trouble to go way with new courage. This to the last when he knew himself how short his time must be, with no thought but to still do. All hearts are saddened in this loss of the dear friend, the beloved physician.

Funeral services will be held at Bethany Congregational church on Thursday at 2 P. M.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS.

Work making the alterations at City Hall to give the Mayor a new office has commenced.

The Mayor had but little in the way of news to give out this morning but it rumored that there will be something drop at City Hall of interest to the general public before many days.

The sand teams were out early this morning sanding the sidewalks in and about City Square.

—We understand that some of the leading life insurance companies are to make some united effort to discourage borrowing upon life insurance policies, which custom in recent years has been growing at an alarming rate. In 1912 the sum of $587,000,000 is said to have been loaned upon policies. Only a very small percentage of such borrowers ever pay back the sum borrowed and an unsuspecting family often finds itself upon the death of the policy-holder with a proposition that yields it scarcely anything. After all, there are some advantages about the scientifically managed fraternal insurance associations, which usually do not allow loans upon policies nor the transfer of the endowment to some other beneficiary than the members of the policy-holder's immediately family.—Spencer Leader.

POSSIBLY A QUINCY MAN.

The body of a man, thought to be a Quincy stone cutter was found on the Boston Maine tracks at Everett Saturday night. In the pocket of his clothing was a book on which was written a name which looked like "Pat" but the last was not legible. The address 81 Garfield street was made out but other addresses could not be deciphered. The address and first name is that of Patrick Cremins of West Quincy, financial secretary of the Granite Cutters Union. He thinks the dead man carried his address in his pocket so as to know where to send his union dues. Up to this morning no word as to the identification had been received at police headquarters.

LADIES NIGHT WALTHER CLASS

Talk on the Man of Leisure by Rev. A. K. De Blois

A large number of the fair sex attended the annual ladies night of the Walther class in the Wollaston Baptist church Tuesday evening. The program consisted of an address and music, followed by a social hour, during which refreshments were served.

Rev. Austin K. de Blois of the First Baptist church Boston was the speaker, and took "The man of leisure" for his subject. The speaker's philosophy was an attractive one and carried with it the conviction that he practised what he preached. It was a plea for that inward calm and freedom from annoyance that constitutes a well ordered life. We should ride our work, instead of letting our work ride us," said Mr. de Blois as he proceeded to show the difference between the two. Hurry and worry are two twin brothers of the evil one, the one a sign of outer ferment the other a sign of inward stress.

"We used to believe there were five senses. We have discovered others One of these is a sense of organic comfort. I plead for the cultivation of this sense. It is so easily disturbed—like a cinder in the eye. We should not let criticism or idle gossip about us disturb us We should be big enough to see the ludicrous features of the situation or have common sense enough to make allowances.

We should take time for friends, for books, for art, for nature. In the midst of the mighty machinery of this material age of ours let us not forget the stars and the things that will

EX-PRESIDENT GEO. S. SMITH

Tells of Three Classes of Man's Movements

The development of three distinct classes of men's organizations was the subject treated by George S. Smith of Boston, ex-president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, at the monthly meeting of the Congregational Mens club, Monday evening.

A fine roast pork supper with all the embellishments was enjoyed and the monthly sing which has become a feature of the club was entered into with great gusto.

The three classes of men's movements mentioned by Mr. Smith were the chambers of commerce or boards of trade, city clubs and church clubs.

The first great principle of a business mens organization said the speaker, is to serve all of the people fairly and squarely, without bias, and prohibiting domination of the organization by an individual or a group of self perpetuating individuals.

The spirit of surcharged goodwill now to be found between merchants in trade organizations, where before it was a case of bitter rivalry, was one reform brought about by such organizations.

A broader viewpoint and a justifiable civic pride with a punch behind it, were other results brought about by chambers of commerce.

The development of a business sentiment for the first time in the nations history by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was one of the forces working toward a fuller conception of patriotism, Mr. Smith declared.

The broad, democracy attained through organizations such as the Boston City club was another point touched upon. The first one in the country was started in Boston eight years ago. Now there are 43.

A discussion of phases of men's club work, and a plea for a strong virile christianity in the churches rather than the sickly, mushy, abnormal effeminacy many times encountered, closed the very interesting address.

SUDDEN DEATH OF YOUNG MAN

Technology Student of Promise Afflicted with Landry

Harvey Field Dewson, a grandson of Deputy Sheriff George H. Field, died at the Quincy City Hospital Tuesday night after an illness of short duration, the immediate cause of his death being what is known as Landry's disease, a very unusual spinal malady closely akin to infantile paralysis.

Young Dewson who was 19 years of age was a student of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and was captain of the sophomore basket-ball team.

He played basket ball at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening, and was then apparently in good health. On retiring he complained of feeling slightly ill. Sunday morning he was worse, although able to sit up for dinner. He continued to grow worse, however, and Monday Dr. N. S. Hunting was called in. The young man grew rapidly worse and Dr. Hunting realizing that he was suffering from Landry's disease ordered his removal to the City Hospital. At that time the young man's limbs were almost paralyzed, and he breathed with difficulty He grew rapidly worse and died about 7 o'clock.

There was a rumor during the early evening that his illness was the result of injuries received in Saturday night's game, but Dr. Hunting said that his playing was in no way responsible for his condition, the exact cause of the disease having never been accurately determined. Lee Brooks who was Dewsons opponent in the game, stated that he was injured in no way during the game.

The young man was a son of Edward Dewson of New York city, his mother being Maud Field, a daughter of Sheriff Field. He was attending the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and during his school term was making his home with his grandfather at 183 Franklin street, there being a warm attachment between the two.

FUNERAL OF JOHN J. BYRON

The funeral of John Byron, for many years a foreman in the Street department of the city, was held this morning from his home at 72 Quincy avenue. Among the many who attended were delegations from various societies of which he was a member.

A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. Patrick Hayes of the Dover and Foxcroft parish of Maine, brother-in-law of Mr. Byron. The Gregorian chant was rendered by the regular choir under the direction of John Mahon, organist.

Among the many floral remembrances were standing cross from Quincy Herd, Benevolent Order of Buffaloes; pillow from the employees of the Street department; standing cross, Quincy branch of the Irish National Foresters; standing cross from Quincy branch, No. 61, Irish National Land League; standing cross from the employees of the F. W. Woolworth Co. of Quincy; standing cross from Div. 5 A. O. H.; wreath from Granite conclave, No. 797, Independent Order Heptasophs and various other pieces from relatives and friends.

The bearers were Edward Powers and Daniel Donahue of Div. 5, A. O. H; Charles H. Finn and Michael Lyons of Quincy herd of Buffaloes; Patrick Cremmins and Thomas Rogan of Quincy Branch of the Irish National Foresters; and Frank Clinton and Peter McConarty of the Irish Land League. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

WANT WOMAN ON SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Equal Suffragists Organize and Will Enter Local Politics Next November

Public Meeting Called in Interest of Votes for Women

An organization for the creation of a sentiment for equal suffrage was regularly organized at the home of Howard G. Hinkley, Prospect avenue, Wollaston, on Tuesday evening and the following officers elected:

President—Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney.

Vice President—Dr. Malcolm D. Miller.

Secretary—Miss Helen E. Comins.

Treasurer—Howard G. Hinkley.

Executive Committee—Mrs. Charles R. Safford, Rodney Gallagher, Mrs. Ama K Lee and Mrs. Richard D. Jacobs.

The organization is sponsor for a public meeting to be held in the interests of "Votes for women," in the Wollaston School hall on Monday evening, March 2. At this meeting Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney will preside and the public are invited to attend. Mrs. Marion Booth Kelley of Boston will speak on "Votes for Women" and her husband Joseph Kelley on the Men's Suffrage League. A one-act play "How the vote was won," will be presented by prominent local talent.

The formation of this organization is the result of a series of meetings held at the homes of members interested during the past month.

One or two public meetings will be held this spring and next fall a strenuous effort will be made to place women on the School Committee as a step in securing equal suffrage.

In order to test public opinion the society has issued cards headed "I believe in votes for women" and is busy getting them signed.

At a meeting to be held in the near future bylaws will be adopted and a name for the organization selected. its members are very enthusiastic and believe that a strong movement for equal suffrage will be fostered in Wollaston.

MORE BONDS SUBSCRIBED

For Clubhouse to be Erected by Sachem Club

Good progress was reported at the meeting of the Sachem club directors held at the business office on Newport avenue, Wollaston, Tuesday evening.

To date $11,00 in bonds have been actually subscribed, and returns are not yet all in. This is a large increase over last meeting, and it is thought that the close of the campaign will see many large contributions come in.

A special meeting of the directors has been called by President Bryant at which certain features of organization will be discussed, and a project that will help meet the operating expenses considered.

The entire movement is now assuming definite shape and it is now but a question of weeks before the start is made. Several of the directors are enthusiastic over a scheme by which they feel sure that a large proportion of the mortgage may be lifted during the first year.

"I WANT YOU TO FILL THIS ORDER, MR. FOY"

—Said a lady who lives on Edgemere Road, as she approached Mr. Foy in the ADAMS MARKET one day last week, and holding out her list of wants, continued——,

"I've just been to Boston and priced everything on this list. In nearly every case your price is lower than the lowest prices there. And then I had expressage to pay. So I brought back the order. Send up everything on the list, Mr. Foy."

We promptly, gladly filled the order and delivered it quickly to her home. Mrs.——— not only saved money by buying here, but secured service no Boston Store could offer, nor any Quincy store excel.

WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES.

The multitudinous cares of the home which brings so much pleasure and profit to countless Quincy women with the innumerable demands of church, social or interests in many benevolences need to be contrasted with the broad line of mutual helpfulnes and it is doubtless for conference, for expression of friendship, that so many clubs are flourishing today.

A citizen recently remarked that he should think that Quincy women concerned themselves only with clubs. Doubtless the remark was occasioned by not understanding how much women need contact with the minds of other women to bring out the best in their nature. In this city the charities are broad and numerous and the delight of people in helping others is demonstrated at all seasons.

The various branches of social activity in the churches, in the circles and guilds and the noble efforts made by the women in aiding in carrying on the expenses of the church is a force that is understood by everyone. The different branches of social service making demands on time, purse and sympathies, are all taxing and so when one has the privilege of club membership it presents an opportunity for relaxation that it is of incalculable benefit. The gatherings of those who have prized long friendships and who have had heart-to-heart talks on topics of importance, who have studied whether wisely or to advantage some important line of thought has been a factor that has kept the mother, the housewife or young woman alert and progressive.

A movement so great as the club movement, the splendid work of organized womanhood in branches of civic endeavor and even the small association for fellowship or study is not to be lightly commented upon. The different gifts which each one brings to any organization make for an ensemble of noble impulses and great achievements the result of which cannot be summed up in one day or week, but contributes to the history of a generation or for all time.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

If George Washington had wished to have his birthday properly celebrated, he should have had it occur at a different season of the year. Most of the centers of population are located in latitudes not favorable to pageants and play festivals on Feb. 22.

Recent years have seen efforts to make it a real national festival. The Union League Club of Chicago for 25 years was held Washington's birthday gatherings with famous speakers, which may have influenced other organizations to work in this direction. In many cities efforts have been made to interest the newer groups of immigrants in the personality of Washington.

The newly arrived alien seems a creature far removed from American ideals. Yet he may be closer to them than one realizes. The sooty laborer in the mine sometimes turns out to be the developed product of a European university, condemned for a time by his ignorance of English speech to do the hardest manual work.

The name of George Washington links the Pole and the Bulgarian and the Finn to American history. The brutal force of despotic government, the appalling obstacles confronting a revolution—these conditions that George Washington surmounted are those which the oppressed people of Europe know from daily life. Washington appeals to their own experience They can easily be shown that Washington's name means not merely freedom and liberty but obedience to law, help to education, public spirited service of the state. and the other principles that link themselves to the word "American."

A MILE OF TREES.

The Massachusetts Forestry association for the revival of tree planting in the State has made a generous offer which should arouse a general interest in the matter of planting trees on the thoroughfares of the Commonwealth. As a prize to stimulate tree planting the society offers to plant one mile of street or road to shade trees at least seven feet in height in the town or city which properly plants this spring the greatest number of shade trees on its streets in proportion to its population, based on the census of 1910. At least 50 towns and cities must have entered the contest before July 1. The prize will be awarded on the number of live trees on Sept. 15.

The men who founded the towns of Massachusetts two centuries ago invariably planted shade trees on the village streets. The people who live in those communities enjoy the comfort which the forefathers provided. Why should not the inhabitants of the towns and cities of today repay the debt they owe the founders of the towns by setting out trees that will prove a joy to those who shall come after them? To do something that will contribute to the beauty of the town or city is highly commendable.

Many of the trees planted by the pioneers are decayed and their removal is necessary. Let them be replaced by others that in time will be as beautiful as those they replace, and whose shade will be a grateful reminder of those whose thoughtful labor placed them where they are. The offer of the Forestry association deserves consideration and if it is taken up, as it should be, a great blesing will be conferred on this and coming generations.

SQUANTUM HEARING.

We wonder if it is necessary to say anything more relative to Squantum's petition for annexation to Boston, the hearing for which takes place at the State House Friday. Undoubtedly the Mayor is opposed and will be represented to register protest. There is no good reason why Squantum should be annexed to Boston; but every reason why it should remain a part of Quincy. First, the present natural boundary of the Neponset river is the best possible boundary. Second, Boston does not want any more territory. Third, Squantum is not neglected by Quincy. Few of its taxpayers who have children in the Quincy schools pay enough in taxes to support their children in school at $50 per child per year.

In general expenses the people of Squantum receive full value for all they pay the city in taxes, and should not expect large special appropriations. At the proper time a schoolhouse will be built, and streets accepted, but it should be remembered that there are greater needs in other parts of the city where people have paid taxes many more years than the Squantum people.

GOGGLES FOR AUTOISTS.

Those who motor should wear goggles, especially if they drive. The glass in cheap goggles is of the poorest quality, and is injurious to the eyes. Various scientific tests have been made by competent experts, showing that almost all cheap, colored spectacles contain waves, bubbles; refractive power and other imperfections that render them unfit for use. If plain glass goggles are desired, they, should be perfect in their plainness. Amber goggles are better than smoke or blue, as they protect the eyes from the sun's most irritating qualities; besides this, objects can be more plainly seen through amber glasses than through glasses of any other color. If goggles are worn, they should be large and convexed outward, and should fit as closely to the face as possible. The use of colored goggles while automobiling protects the eyes from the sun and also from the irritating effects of the wind. and, furthermore, lessens the liability of foreign bodies, such as sand and dirt, being driven into the eyes. All that has been said of automobilists applies equally well to motorcyclists. If you drive a car or a motorcycle wear amber goggles (made to suit your vision if necessary), but do not purchase cheap ones. You cannot afford to injure your eyes, and, besides this, cheap goggles will probably cost you an oculist's bill in the end.

ARBOR DAY.

A rather unusual incentive to make Arbor Day something more than an occasion for more or less general ceremonies, is presented by the Massachusetts Forestry Association, which offers to set out a mile of shade trees in the town or city that shall properly plant this spring the greatest number of shade trees in proportion to its population, based on the last census, provided that at least fifty towns and cities shall have notified their intention of entering the contest previously to July 1, the prize to be awarded on the number of live trees, Sept. 15. There should be no difficulty in securing that number of competitors or even a much larger one. Whether the prize is won or not the shade trees will constitute the reward for the town that generously plants them. They add wealth, beauty and comfort to every community enterprising enough to establish such a feature.—Boston Transcript.

SAVINGS BANK INSURANCE

Miss Grady's Address Before Associated Charities

At the conference of the Associated Charities of Quincy this morning, Miss Alice H. Grady, the financial secretary of the Massachusetts Savings Insurance League, was the speaker. Her subject was "Savings bank insurance and old age pensions." She said in part:

"It is pretty generally admitted that if we die provision should be made for those dependent upon us, but we are only just coming to face squarely the proposition that if we live, provision should be made against the days when our wage-earning years shall have passed and we are no longer able to support ourselves out of current earnings.

"Therefore, to every wage-earning man and woman in Massachusetts the Savings Bank Insurance Act of June 26, 1907, has a double significance. It offers him, on the one hand, insurance against death at a net rate which is more than 40 per cent. below what it cost him in the industrial insurance companies prior to 1907, and on the other hand, an opportunity to provide out of current earnings by small monthly payments a reasonable income for old age.

Prior to Jan. 1, 1907, if a young man 15 years of age wanted $200 of insurance he must buy it through one of the large industrial companies, and it would cost him at the rate of 10 cents a week, or $5.20 a year, the premiums being collected weekly at the home of the insured.

"The Savings Bank Insurance plan undertakes to do away with the house-to-house collector, and if the same young man now wants $200 of insurance, he can buy it from the Savings Bank at the rate of 30 cents a month, or $3.60 a year,— the banks not being permitted to employ paid collectors.

"At the end of the first year the policy holder will receive a dividend equal to one month's premium, and each year thereafter an increasingly large dividend, so that at the end of the fifth year his dividend will equal 20 per cent of a year's premium, or 72 cents, thus making the net cost of his insurance in the fifth year only $2.88. This is a practical illustration of what the Savings Bank Insurance system is doing for wage-earners in the Commonwealth.

"In addition to the policies issued by the banks on the monthly premium plan, policies in units of $500 are also issued payable quarterly, semi-annually and annually. The plan also provides a system of old age pensions paid for by a small saving monthly."

SUDDEN DEATH JANE CAVEN

Jane Caven, mother of Patrick Caven, a popular conductor on the Bay State street railway, died suddenly in her home at Grove street, West Quincy, Tuesday morning. Rigor mortis had set in when her body was discovered in the kitchen of her home about eight hours later. The cause of death has been given as heart disease.

The general appearance of the kitchen and the foodstuffs about the room denote that Mrs. Caven was preparing breakfast when the final summons came. Her body when found lay partially on the floor and partially on a couch, close by the stove.

Mrs. Caven was one of the best known residents of West Quincy and had a wide circle of friends. She was a member of Div. 5, A. O. H., and active in its welfare. The funeral will take place Thursday morning and a high mass of requiem at St. Marys church will precede burial in St. Marys cemetery.

TOO COLD TO CUT GRANITE

Granite Cutters Have Been Idle Several Weeks

Business in the granite district is practically at a standstill, and has been so for several weeks on account of the severe winter weather. A few of the sheds are so constructed that it is possible for men to work in ordinary cold weather but with weather like Tuesday it is impossible for the cutters to work to advantage to themselves or to the manufacturers. Work of any kind in the quarries is out of the question.

In the meantime the manufacturers remain in their offices looking after the office end of the business. Orders for spring delivery have begun to come in fairly well, and the spring season promises to be a busy one. The most of the orders booked at the present time are for medium sized jobs, although there are one or two fairly good sized jobs in the city.

There has not been a winter for many years when the yards were obliged to be closed down as long as they have been this winter. Usually during the winter months the manufacturers are busy finishing up jobs that are to be delivered in the early spring, so that they are all ready for the Memorial Day rush, when it comes. This year however, they have been able to do but little of this work with the result that when seasonable weather does arrive they will be rushed.

LENTEN SERVICES.

The topics and leaders for the Lenten midweek services at the Wollaston Congregational church will be:

February 26, "The Lord's Supper, Pastor.

March 5, "Farewell conversations," Deacon Tobey.

March 12, "The Gethsemane scenes" Deacon Thompson.

March 19, "The trials and judgment," Deacon Besse.

March 26, "The crucifixion," Deacon Smith.

April 2, "The resurrection," Supt. Campbell.

April 9, The communion service.

DANGER IN SCHOOL TRIPS.

Lysander S. Richards who is spending the winter in Washington says that parents in New England ought to be more careful concerning their children as graduates of the High Schools, classes of which have been in the habit of visiting Washington during their spring vacation. Sometimes they go there with a chaperone, and some times not, but in either case it is not always safe.

In the daytime there is not as much danger, but at night there are plenty of land sharks watching for the chance to decoy them to their haunts. Even if they have a chaperone she often retires early and the boys of the class think it a good time to see what is going on in the city and invite the girls to go with them. They have been known not to return to their hotel until the small hours of the morning. At any rate it is better, the people of Washington say, that the girls go there by themselves, and the boys by themselves, and accompanied by a careful trustworthy chaperone.

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER.

SCIENTIFIC FORESTRY

To Woodland, orchard and shade tree owners of Quincy:

The Massachusetts Forestry Association is bringing scientific forestry to the people of the State. Our field secretary, Mr. W. L. Hamel is in your city for the purpose of arousing interest in this important subject. He is a trained forester and will be glad to give you any advice or information concerning your shade-trees orchards or woodlands free of charge. All you need to do is to write a postcard to him addressed care of Mrs. J. D. Mackay, 75 Greenleaf street, and he will call to see you.

The advice he gives will be gratis but if you think it will be of advantage to you to have your trees pruned or cemented or your woodlot thinned, we recommend that Mr. Hamel do the work because of his training and experience. You can arrange with him as to the cost of doing the work and will not be under obligations to hire him, because of the advice he gives you which is free. The object of the Association is to protect the trees and this has proved the most efficient way of doing it.

PUT A TRACTOR ON STEAMER

Quincy Has One of Best Steam Fire Engines

Editor Daily Ledger:

I noticed in your paper of Feb. 17, there was an order put in the City Council for a $10,000 pumping engine.

Why expend $10,000 when the city has got one of the best steam fire engines in the State? When the steamer was bought, the contract called for 800 gallons of water per minute. When it was tested and turned over to the city it registered 957 gallons per minute. The American and British Mfg. Co., turned the steamer over to the city, and claimed it was the bests team fire engine they had built in 42 years.

If the city wants a motor pumping engine put a tractor on the steamer and they wil have one of the best motor pumping engines in the State.

If this is done they will have three horses to use, as they are needed very badly.

HOLIDAY PARTY WOMANS GUILD

A Washington Birthday party was held by the Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church in the parish rooms Monday evening, under the direction of Mrs. Daniel C. Miller and Mrs. Howard D. Fowler with Mrs. J. Willard Hallett, Mrs. H. Kneeland Ellis Jr., and Mrs. Henry J. Landry in charge of the refreshments.

Mrs. David L. Jewell gave a history of the Guild since its organization 24 years ago when the parish was a mission of Christ church Quincy. She paid a warm tribute to the spirit of the members, and to elucidate some particular points of the Guild's different activities several bright humorous bits were interposed, and greatly enjoyed.

The musical part by members of the Fowler family was varied and pleasing to the audience. There is much of sweetness and harmony in their voices which called forth much applause. "A birthday" by Woodman "Mighty lak' a rose" by Nevin, and "A little dutch garden" was sung by Miss Edna H. Fowler. The quartette "Come where the lilies bloom" by Thompson, by Jessie, Edna, Raymond and Linde Fowler, and a duet "O that we two were Maying" by Smith, by Jessie and Raymond Fowler were enjoyed. Mrs. Ernest R. Brooks accompanied.

Mrs. William F. Hodgkinson was warmly applauded and pleased her listeners with two selections, "The Laird of Cockpen" and "The old Scotch songs."

Refreshments of sandwiches, coffee and Washington pie were served, the special feature of which was a large pie with whipped cream decorated with cherries and served with a tricolor hatchet. The waitresses in white gowns with white caps pinned on with flags were Dorothy Parker, Gladys Parlee, Marion Orr, Rose MacDonald, Bernice Stoddard and Sadie Wheeler. The decorations were effectively done in red, white and blue festoons from the ceiling and on the walls, to which were attached numerous flags and hatchets.

Much amusement and merriment ws caused by guessing the names of a gallery of photographs taken in youthful days. The evenings pleasure came to a close by the singing of a medley ending with patriotic songs.

PANAMA CANAL TOLLS.

Quincy Branch of the American Society of Marine Draftsmen has written Congressman Gilmore advocating his support of three propositions in connections with Panama Canal Tolls. They are:

First—No tolls for coastwise ships, except those owned by railroads.

Second—That ships, wherever built may apply for American registration when owned by American individuals or corporations.

Third—That all materials of foreign production necessary for the repair of vessels or machinery built in the United States should be admitted by import free.

FEED THE BIRDS THEY DESERVE IT

Editor Daily Ledger:

May I not urge the public through the columns of your paper to feed the wild birds with grain, crumbs and suet while the snow lasts? Our winter birds do splendid work for humanity all winter long by devouring larvae and eggs of noxious insects and seeds of troublesome weeds. They do not mind the cold if well fed. But the snow covers their food supply and starves them.

To tie suet and meat scraps to trees and scatter grain and crumbs on hard tramped snow, or better on a "food-table"—a box or board on a post set up out of reach of cats—is a kindness to suffering wild creatures.

But, it is more than that. It is a public spirited act, redounding to the welfare of mankind. The birds saved will repay a thousand fold in their work on garden, shrubbery and orchard. Chaff from the barn floor and scraps from the table are fine for this work. If we can afford it, hemp and sunflower seed are splendid. But, let us each do something in the name of humanity, until bare ground and warmer weather relieve the strain.

RUNNING A PAPER.

Jim Jones he was an editor—that's what he tried to be;
He bought himself a printin' press and started in to see
Just what there was in editin', but when he'd canvassed round
Some fifteen hundred editors in that same town, he found.

They all knew more about it than he could hope to know,
They told him: "You must run her,
Jones, and run her so and so,
Be sure to boom the Baptists—they're sure to help you out,
And give the good old Methodists a good salvation shout."

"Give every man a notice—be sure and let be known
Whenever Major Jinks is seen perambulatin' town.
Put in a few free locals for all the stores and give Away some free subscriptions if you wish your sheet to live."

Well, Jones, he did just what they said, for fear they'd make a row
But, the more he tried to please 'em all, the more they told him how,
Until at last he took his book and laid
it on the shelf,
Then ran the paper in the ground and followed it himself.

MUSICALE OF QUINCY CLUB

A fine program was given Tuesday afternoon at Music hall for the annual musicale of the Quincy Women's club, the artists being the Brooke Trio of Boston, made up of Arthur Brooke, flute; Ludwig Nast, 'cello; Ethel Harding, piano. The following program was rendered:

Trio — Weber
Moderato. Scherzo, Shepherd's Song. Finale
Flute Solo Fantasie Pastorale Hongroise — Doppler
Mr. Brooke
Duet (Flute and 'Cello) Serenade — St. Saens
Messrs. Brooke and Nast
Piano Solo, Etude en Forme Valse — St. Saens
Miss Harding
Liebestraume, (for 'Cello, Flute and Piano) — Liszt
Cello Solo—Andante — Davidoff
Scherzo — Von Goens
Mr. Nast.
Trio — Hunten

Mr. Brooke and Mr. Nast are members of the Boston Symphony orchestra and musicians of note. Miss Harding also ranks high as a pianist and the combination is one of the best in Boston.

The program of Tuesday contained only six numbers but the variety in the solo and ensemble work was most pleasing and it was regretted that the artists were limited as to time and so could not respond to the hearty encores. The flute solo, the 'cello solo, and the duet for flute and 'cello were especially pleasing. Miss Harding in solo or ensemble was more than satisfactory—playing with artistic interpretation. The Trio opened the program winning instant recognition of their fine work, which was fully sustained during the three selections on the program.

It was one of the best and most enjoyable of the club musicales, and was arranged by the music committee, Mrs. Walter P. Emery, chairman, resigned, and Mrs. Frank J. Moore, the present sub-chairman.

Following the musicale a brief business session was held, the president Mrs. Chandler W. Smith presiding. Announcement was made that the play "Our Boys" given so successfully by club members on Feb. 10, was to be repeated on the evening of Tuesday, March 10, at Quincy Music hall for the benefit of the endowment fund of the General Federation of Women's clubs. Tickets at 25 cents and reserved seats at 50 cents would go on sale soon. Only ladies would be privileged to buy tickets and attend the performance. It was hoped to raise $100 to be sent to the General Federation from the club as a memorial to one of its beloved presidents who had passed on, Mrs. George W. Morton.

An invitation was received to attend a meeting Monday night March 2, in Wollaston School hall in the interests of Equal Suffrage. A play "How the Vote was Won," would be given.

Names were asked to be sent to the president of any club members intending to attend the biennial in Chicago in June that the club might be represented by delegates.

Mrs. Tenney for the Art committee spoke feelingly of Mrs. Charles L. Seavey and her interest and work for the club—how she wished to form a study class to study pictures and now that she had passed on her committee desired to carry out her ideas. Instead of class they would have one large meeting at the clubhouse Friday afternoon, April 17, when Mr. Whitney would be present and with blackboard and reproductions teach how to study art intelligently. She hoped every club member would buy tickets for the meeting in appreciation of Mrs. Seavey. The proceeds would go to buy pictures for the clubhouse as a memorial to Mrs. Seavey. Tickets or information may be had of Mrs. Tenney and members of the Art committee.

Mrs. Arnold for the Literature committee announced an hour with George Eliot, Monday afternoon, March 9 at the clubhouse, which should prove profitable and interesting to club members.

Mrs. Moore for the Music committee spoke of the opera talk by W. L. Hubbard at the clubhouse March 18 and urged members to secure tickets.

It was voted to send a letter of sympathy to Mrs. John F. Welch.

The next meeting will be the annual held March 10 at the clubhouse. The Legislative committee Mrs. Albert E. Avery, chairman, has secured Mrs. Glendower Evans of Boston for the speaker of the afternoon, subject "The New Freedom." Mrs. Evans is interested in the work of womankind for the benefit of woman. She recently was given a personal audience at Washington by President Wilson, an honor many men would appreciate. She is surely a woman club women should be interested in and all should attend the next meeting of the club and give her an appreciative welcome to Quincy.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL CLUB

Another women's club studies its city government. The City Beautiful club of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, had a city survey in December the eight days showing the following:

Dec. 16—"City doctor" explains work at meeting of city council, city officials co-operating.

Dec. 17—Tells of poor system for keeping city records. Make recommendation to show how better information may be secured.

Dec. 18—Need better buying system. City should cut out leaks in buying supplies. Present system permits heads of each department to make purchases to suit himself and city loses benefits of competitive bids for yearly supplies.

Dec. 19—Cost accounting urged. "City doctor" goes over records. Says public should inquire into costs of departments products.

Dec. 20—District funds in too many hands. Would centralize the money collected for public improvements.

Dec. 21—Police and firemen give good service. "City doctor" says they do fine work.

Dec. 22—Mayor Taylor recommends that Little Rock follow Pine Bluff's lead and make survey of state.

Dec. 23—City government plans discussed with citizens in school of civics—questions asked by interested citizens—various features of government plans also discussed.

Some people argue that to call attention to lax methods which might have been used in the past would hurt the city, claiming it was undesirable publicity. Publicity of this kind can have but one result, and that is for the good. When the publicity carries with it the information that the ills are to be remedied and progressive plans adopted, the publicity will cause others to know Pine Bluff as a city which is shaking off antiquated customs and systems in all branches and becoming a modern city, conducted along modern ideas.—Editorial, Pine Bluff Commercial.

Other states, counties, cities and towns have found out the value of survey publicity. If you are interested to know what Ohio and Wisconsin, Westchester County, N. Y., Multnomah Co., Oregon, New York, Cincinnati, St. Paul, Montclair, N. J., Pittsburgh, Rochester, Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., the Four Oranges, N. J., etc., have found out, write to Bureau of Municipal Research, 261 Broadway, New York City.

THE BIENNIAL CONVENTION

The thoughts of 1,000,000 club women turn to the Biennial Convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Chicago, June 18, 1914. It is to be a big convention, earnest and purposeful. More than a century ago Robert Burns wrote:

Look abroad through Nature's range
Nature's mighty law is change;
Ah! not women e'er complain
Of inconstancy in love.

And she certainly has no reason to complain in this age, for the feminist movement looms large and no greater proof of the "change" can be found than the activities of the women's clubs, in which one million American women are fulfilling the "mighty law" of which Burns wrote. Further tangible evidence of this will be seen in the Biennial convention, the plans for which are each day being perfected.

While the work of the General Federation Program Committee has not yet been completed, it is definitely known that each department chairman is working out splendid plans and her department will have a place on the program.

There will be but seven actual working days of the convention, leaving opportunity for the sociological pilgrimage planned by the excursions committee and directed by one of the prominent social settlement workers of Chicago. This will be of interest and worth to every club woman who has made a study of any of the questions which are dealt with in the social center work.

The personnel of the Local Board is perhaps a matter of interest and it is believed that the women selected, all experienced in club work, are thoroughly competent to handle the Biennial in a way that will make the meeting one long to be remembered. By virtue of their present offices as well as their ability Mrs. Francis D. Everett, director of the General Federation of Women's clubs, Mrs. Minnie Starr Grainger, General Federation state secretary, and Mrs. Frederick A. Dow, state president of Illinois, are members. They constitute the connecting link between the state and General Federations and the Local Board, with a hand outreaching to each. Mrs. Everett is closely in touch with all of the General Federation officers and gives valuable assistance where the work of the Local Board touches that of the national organization. Mrs. Grainger gives the "personal touch" that, after all, is the vital spark. As General Federation state secretary she is carrying the message of the national organization to individual clubs and arousing their interest to the wider range of the General Federation. Mrs. Dow, state president, traveling from one club to another, is also carrying the message which is drawing one million club women into closer relations. The chairman of the local board is Mrs. George Bass, president of the Chicago Women's club one of the largest department working clubs of the country. She was at the head of the Reform Department of her club and has been a part of every reform and civic movement of note in Chicago during the last fifteen years. She was one of the group instrumental in securing the passage of the bill and the establishment of the Juvenile Court, and has been particularly active for some years in efforts to get the city and county institutions out of the hands of "spoils politicians" and to have the schools removed from political influence.

The first vice chairman of the local board, Mrs. Frederick K. Tracy, has been termed "the little giant in club work." A former president of the West End Woman's club, three years second vice president of the Woman's club and chairman of its Reform Department for two years, a D. A. R. and a member of the board of the Chicago Home for the Friendless, perhaps her greatest work has just been accomplished in raising among club women of the state ten thousand dollars for the erection of the Illinois Cottage at the Industrial School for Girls.

CHRONIC COLDS

Are Contracted by Changeable Weather. A Simple Remedy.

Sudden changes are particularly trying for old people or those who suffer from a weakened, run-down condition, chronic coughs, colds or bronchitis, but if such persons would only apply common sense methods in the treatment of their condition, much discomfort and suffering might be avoided.

The most essential thing to do is to build up strength, enrich the blood, increase vital resistance and to accomplish this nothing equals Vinol, our cod liver and iron tonic.

Mrs. M. J. Grimes of Springfield, Ohio, says: "I was badly run-down, nervous and weak, and while in this condition I contracted a heavy cold and rheumatism. Vinol was recommended and I am happy to say it cured my cold and restored me to health again."

Old people, delicate children, rundown, overworked and tired women, those suffering from bronchitis, chronic coughs and colds should try a bottle of Vinol. We will return your money if it does not help you. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

O'NEILS HOLD FIRST PLACE

Close Contest in the Clan MacGregor League

The O'Neils, at the close of the Clan MacGregor matches Tuesday night, had increased their lead three points, and the Michaels in second place, made a similar increase, and continue pressing them hard. The dropping of one point by the Michaels several weeks ago broke the tie between these two teams and since then the scores have been splitting, so that the O'Neils hold first place. The league runs until April 14 and most any kind of an upset may occur before then.

Dackers got the best single, rolling 116 in his third string. Dell, second, with 114, took the three string total with 318. Craig fitted third with 113, and Nicoll fourth with 112.

The Clan MacGregor league standing to date is:

GARDNER CLUB DEBATE.

"Resolved that the United States should build more battleships yearly." This is the resolution which will be debated at the Gardner Club of Christ's church on Thursday evening. The speakers for the affirmative are: Dr. T. H. Veale and Russell Westland. those for the negative are Everett Prout and Ellis Young.

Since the debate was announced two weeks ago the interest in it has grown rapidly and there will be a goodly num br at the Parish House tomorrow evening a t 8 o'clock to hear both sides of the argument. Any man who feels at all interested is invited to come down, as the question will be open for discussion by all those present after each of debaters has used the ten minutes allotted him. After the debate has been decided there will be a short entertainment which we are sure will measure up to the usual high standard of the Gardner Club.

Since this club began its present season its' membership has doubled and it has not stopped growing yet. This augurs well for any thing that is attempted by the Gardner Club.

Sick-Room Light.

If there are electric lights in the sick room they will generally be found too brilliant, hurting the eyes of the patient, and not every sick room has the electric lights that can be turned up or down. WOMEN MORE INTERESTED.

Women are more interested in modern government than men, Dr. Charles W. Eliot told the Women's City Club at Hotel Somerset Monday. Women's services in this connection are greatly needed he said, as their hold is the hold of the ideal. Dr. Eliot said: "There is a very urgent need that women take action—a new need, an urgent need and, sometimes I think, a desperate need. The civilization of the last 120 years has developed evils which will work its destruction and the destruction of the white race unless remedies are applied. One of these evils is city life and the other is the factory system. The human body was not made for either. You do not expect to correct these evils on the spot. It is for future generations that you are going to work. It seems to me that women are better adapted to work for the human beings of the future than men are."

MISS WHITTIER RETIRES.

Quincy club women are among countless others who will extend the most cordial greetings to Miss Helen A. Whittier, former president of the State Federation, who has recently retired from active duties as associate manager of the general Federation magazine, a position held with distinction to herself and the magazine during the past four years. Previously or since 1903 Miss Whittier, with Mrs. May Alden Ward, founded the Federation Bulletin and made the publication one of the powers of the times. Miss Whittier has held many important offices in her career as a club woman and at present is chairman of the art department of the state organization. Her present plans are for an extended stay in the Mediterranean countries and on her return she will give undivided attention to art classes in which she is interested.

TWO-BATTLESHIP PROGRAM

Building Scheme of Navy Calls For $140,200,000 Appropriation

Washington, Feb. 25.—Formal approval was given the administration's two-battleship program by the house naval affairs committee after the "small navy" men had made their final stand against it.

The navy department's construction plans were changed so as to provide for six instead of eight destroyers, and for additional submarines.

As reported to the house, the bill carries $140,200,000, exclusive of amounts to be spent for armor and armament.

REGULATIONS FOR LENT

The Roman Catholics are today observing Ash Wednesday, the first day of the holy season of Lent, and this afternoon and evening the clergy will distribute the sacred ashes at all the Catholic churches of the city. The masses this morning were largely attended. During the Lenten season in all the churches there will be a sermon on Wednesday evening, followed by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, and on Friday evenings there will be the service at the Stations of the Cross.

The regulations have been issued by Cardinal O'Connell for this year and are as follows:

1. All the days of Lent, except Sundays, are fast days of obligation.

2. Those only are bound to fast, however, who are over 21 years old and not of advanced age, no one in any case being bound to fast who is 60 years old. The following persons are also exempt from fasting: The sick and convalescent; women in delicate health and condition; those to whom fasting would cause grave injury to health, or produce such illness or exhaustion as would interfere with their daily duties; and those whose occupations are of a very laborious and exhausting nature. Those who doubt whether they are excused or not should consult their confessor.

3. On fast days those under the law are allowed but one full meal and a light supper.

4. Those whose habit it is to take their dinner in the evening are allowed a slight refection in the middle of the day. In all cases the breakfast should not be a meal, but should consist simply of a cup of coffee, chocolate or some other drink, with a small portoin of bread.

5. Though the fast days of Lent are also days of abstinence, by virtue of Apostolic Indult even those who are obliged to fast may use flesh meat once a day on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, except the second and last Saturdays; those not obliged to fast may eat meat more than once on these days; but by special privilege granted by the Holy See, working men and all the members of their families who are keeping the fast may eat meat once a day on all the days of Lent save Fridays, Ash Wednesday and Wednesday and Saturday of Holy Week; those of the family who are not obliged to fast may eat meat more than once a day on any day when the use of meat is at all permitted.

6. The use of flesh meat and fish at the same meal is forbidden to all persons during Lent, even on Sundays.

7. Those who are in some way or other dispensed from fasting or abstinence during Lent must remember that they are all the more strictly bound to mortify and deny themselves in some other way. Abstinence from all intoxicating drinks in honor of the Sacred Thirst of our Lord is especially commended.
ly commended.

8. The usual Lenten devotions will be provided in all the churches of the Diocese, and the faithful should be reminded that they should endeavor by earnest prayer, heartfelt contrition, and the worthy receiving of the sacraments to profit by the special graces of the Holy Season.

A Wireless Message From The Dead

By F. A. MITCHEL

We are moving so fast in scientific discoveries that, lost in wonder at what we know, we have no time to consider what our attained knowledge is likely to develop in future. For instance, we know that an electric current may be transmitted without any other medium than the atmosphere. We also know that functions of the body, if not electric, are a force something like electricity.

When I was a boy I was constantly finding myself saying something to a companion who would say, "Why, I was just about to say that myself!" At the time I considered this a coincidence. Now I believe it to be a power I possessed in receiving the mental impressions of others by a sort of wireless process. I studied medicine and became a doctor. Then during hospital work I broke down and, though it was between winter and spring, was obliged to go to the country to recoup.

I stopped at a house that looked down a valley, and the view was uninterrupted. I used to sit on the porch wrapped in rugs and enjoy the view in the sunshine. About a mile distant was a house that bore evidence of having been built in colonial times. It was not by any means a farmhouse, but something quite handsome. The architecture was that peculiar style involving a porch with pillars.

One night I was awakened by the sound of wheels stopping right under my window and thought I heard some one call "Doctor!" I raised the sash and put my head out through the window. A man in a wagon asked me if I was a doctor, and I said I was, whereupon he begged me to come with him at once. I dressed myself unwillingly, went downstairs and got into the wagon with him. I asked him to tell me about the nature of the case I was expected to treat, but could get nothing out of him. He seemed entirely absorbed in some powerful emotion.

We were but a few minutes in reaching our destination, drawing up before a house with pillars from the porch to the roof. I inferred that I had come to the house about which I had so often dreamed. The door was opened by a woman in a short petticoat full at the hips, a kerchief across her bosom and a dainty cap on her head. She looked very much troubled.

"Come upstairs," she said.

I followed her up a winding staircase, and the woman opened a door with a glass knob. I entered the sickroom to see a young woman lying on a bed with four high posts surmounted by a canopy. On one side of her was a man holding one of her hands; on the other side was a young girl holding the other. These two looked at me with that mute appeal a doctor is so often obliged to meet.

As I drew near the bed the girl with the invalid pulled down the bedclothes, and I saw at once from blood stains and temporary bandages that my patient had been wounded. I was not a surgeon, but felt obliged to perform a surgeon's part. I examined the wound and saw that it was near the heart, so near that I wondered that the wounded woman lived. There was nothing that I could do for her except bind up the wound in a more professional manner and await results.

Presently I saw her gasp, and between gasps she said to the man beside her:

"You are convinced of the unjustness of your suspicions?"

"Yes, yes; forgive me."

"I forgive you. Goodby."

She fell back dead.

Amid a wail of those present I retired from the room. Notwithstanding the tragical circumstances, I could not but notice the costume of those in the house. "What singular persons!" I said to myself. "Not content with living in a colonial house, they adopt the colonial costume." This was especially marked in their collars, which were like those I had seen in pictures of America's early settlers. I was ushered out by the woman who received me and driven back to my home, where I went to bed, remaining half awake, half asleep, for the rest of the night.

Now, there was something uncanny about my visit, and I hesitated to talk about it to those in the house. I asked if any of the family had heard a wagon stop before the house during the night, but no one had heard any such sound. This induced me to maintain a reserve about my visit. Presently I ventured to ask who lived in the house with pillars and was told that no one lived there. It had been unoccupied for many years. The last tenant had vacated some thirty years before. I asked if anything peculiar had taken place there, but no one had heard of anything unusual. But before returning to the city I heard from a very old resident of the region there was a legend that long before the Revolution a murder had been committed there. A man in a fit of jealousy had stabbed his wife.

And now in this second decade of the twentieth century I have come to believe that the scene I witnessed took place as I saw it many years ago; that it was stored somewhere; it may be in some soul across the border, possibly one of the participants who flashed it to me by some such process as a wireless operator will flash a message from one side of the world to another.

ACCORDING TO PRECEDENT.

The hen that cackles loudest may not lay the largest eggs;
The mule that kicks the hardest may not have the longest legs;
The tree that is the tallest may not bear the sweetest fruit
And the girl that is the fairest may not wear the smallest boot.

The man whose brow is highest may not always know the most;
The hero who is bravest may not make the loudest boast;
The arm that is the strongest may not have the farthest reach.
And the man who talks the longest may not make the finest speech.

The rose that is the reddest may not have the sweetest scent;
The man whose strut is proudest may not be most prominent;
The woman who has jewels that she measures by the peck,
May not have the slimmest fingers or the most delightful neck.

The man who works the hardest may not draw the highest pay;
The one with deepest knowledge may not have the most to say;
But the man who is most modest gets the last seat in the rear,
And the one who blows his bugle is the one whom people hear.
—Chicago Record-Herald.

ST. FRANCIS IN ASSISI

A lecture on St. Francis of Assis. illustrated by slides and accompanied by a selected chorus in habit that rendered the music of Franciscan friars, was given at the parish house of Christ church Tuesday evening by Mrs. Everett C. Bumpus under the auspices of St. Margaret's guild. The attendance was large and included art lovers from all parts of the city. Mrs. Bumpus, who is a widely travelled woman and an accepted art connoisseur, cleverly lectured on the life and characteristics of St. Francis and its far reaching results. The Gregorian chants were particularly well rendered and at the close warm applause was given for the pleasant hour.

GROWING CHILD'S NEEDS.

The appetite of a growing boy is a constant source of astonishment to his mother, and the ease with which he consumes more food than the adult members of the family convinces her that his tastes are abnormal. She forgets that in the second period of rapid growth that comes early in the "teens" Nature is making every effort to build a perfect individual and needs all the help she can get. She cannot build without a wealth of material, and so every boy who is physically more active than his father and mother, who is using his brain for study and growing rapidly besides, needs an abundant supply of food. What should this food be? Should his diet be limited or his taste questioned? Generally speaking, no. He needs all kinds of food, and he generally craves what he needs. He needs protein to build a man's frame and he needs a larger proportion of it than the average adult requires. He also needs fat and starches to furnish the heat and energy burned out in his ever-active body and to keep his tissues plump and rounded. While he needs much protein, do not expect him to get it all from meat. Indeed, it is better that no small part of this nitrogenous food come from milk and eggs, cheese, beans and peas. If he has plenty of these rich and relatively cheap foods he will not crave meat so inordinately as some growing boys do. The boy needs a large quantity of carbohydrates. That is why his demand for bread and butter is limited only by the supply at hand, and why he uses almost as much butter as bread. Let him have all he wants. By the pound, butter is expensive, but it is pure, wholesome food, and he can use it readily. It will not make him ill; quite the contrary. And do not be afraid of sugar and sweet foods Sugar is a true, concentrated food. Give him candy for dessert. He craves it and his craving is natural, not abnormal. The boy's instincts will lead him to choose the all-around diet he needs. To limit his choice to a few articles compels him unconsciously to overuse the one he likes the best. To regulate his diet to the tastes or foods of his father or mother is cruelty and will probably result in an undernourished child. If grown people wish to experiment on new foods they have the right to do so, but they do not have the right to inflict their ideas of what is good for them on their growing children. Good food in variety and plenty of it is what the child needs, and if it is provided his taste will not be abnormal nor will his astonishing appetite result in more than healthy rapid growth.

NEW YORK SPRING TROUSSEAUX

Pretty Outfits for a Modest Expenditure—New Materials Afford Opportunity for Up-to-date Effects.

It is rumored that Vincent Astor is having his yacht made ready for a cruise to France with his fiancee Miss Huntington, chaperoned by her mother and Mrs. Astor, and that the trousseaux is to be selected in Paris for their Spring wedding. It all sounds regal and alluring, but the great majority of the coming bevy of Spring brides will purchase most of their outfits here in New York and wear their clothes so well that no one will question whether they were made here or abroad.

NEW MATERIALS.

Never were materials more appealing than those now shown, whether in the piece, or made up after modish models, and a wonderfully pretty outfit can be had for a comparatively modest expenditure.

NEW SUITS.

English serge in navy, white or black made with a double skirt, the upper part modelled on peplum lines, and with a decided ripple at the edge because of its circular cut. Facings of the very fashionable Roman striped taffeta or plainer contrasts hem this over-skirt and show prettily as it ripples in walking. A short bolero blouse coat finished with a wide shaped girdle that is prolonged in the back in semi-empire lines has a Medici collar and vest of white pique, a black satin collar and sash-end and jade buttons.

5371—5267

Another suit built of self-stripped wool crepe in navy, black Paquin blue, green or mahogany is built with a short kimono coat, Gladstone collar of fine white lawn, revers of Persian striped eponge which can be worn open or closed forming vestee effect, coat lined with fancy brocaded silk, and skirt in new yoke tunic style. Plain tailormades are notably absent from fashionable showings, except in suits designed for golf and general sport wear, and the tendency toward rippling flares in skirts of coats and over tunics is smartly endorsed.

FUSSY FROCKS.

For fussy frocks that are at once so pretty and useful for all sorts of festive wear, there is an endless variety of materials and makings and the widest possible range in price. The new goods shown in the "cotton" sections, many of them part silk, if well made, go suitably beside materials at many times their cost. Bordered voiles in exquisite printed designs are sold at from twenty-five cents per yard up and if one selects the right type of gown for these bordered effects, little other trimming is needed. Figured silks especially taffetas, are exceedingly smart, and some of the best models show the peg skirt of plain silk or satin, and the upper draperies and bodice of the figured stuff.

A FRENCH GOWN.

A French gown shown at an exclusive place, had the lower skirt to a little above the knee of soft rather dull black satin. Above this the foundation of the shirt and kimono cut waist was white net, overlaid with fine black net, and over this heavy embroidered batiste in very open pattern formed a short valance on the skirt and high bodice on the waist.

It is possible to ring many changes with extra tunics of embroidery, lace, or net, or perhaps a combination of all three materials in one garment.

WEDDING GOWNS AND VEILS.

White satin or crepe meteor is the popular choice for elaborate wedding gowns, but just now when white taffeta is the tip-of-the-mode for dressy frocks, it would make a charmingly youthful bride's gown, that could be worn oftener after the wedding, than a more elaborate frock.

Veil arrangements vary from an all enveloping cloud of lace that covers the train, to a more wisp of tulle falling from the side or back of the coiffure. Some brides wear the veil arranged in a sort of mob cap, the frills encircling the face, but this is rarely the best choice if the bride is young and pretty. Coronet arrangements are also considerably worn.

AN EXTRA COAT.

For the coat that can be worn over any dress and that is practically suited to any occasion once warm Spring days arrive, no better choice could be made than one of the new corduroy models, built on straight, but ample lines belted like the sport coats that have proved so popular. These come in white, which is practical because it launders so easily, in rose color, in maize, as well as in deeper tones, but the light ones are newer and smarter.

Plaided coats of white velvet-finished woolens barred in black with occasional lines of poppy red, yellow, green or blue are also new and chic. These are made on models similar to the corduroys.

AN ERECT CARRIAGE.

Stand up straight and get the full Horsepower out of your Human Machine.

The way the human body is used is of the utmost importance if the person is to have the best of health of which the person is capable. With a person it is much the same as with the automobile. One represents a 50-horsepower engine, another a 40, another a 30, still another 20, and if the body is used rightly this full amount of energy can be developed without harm. If the body is used wrongly as is true with the machine, it may be ruined in developing half the amount of the designed horsepower. When rightly used, the parts are all in balance; there is no undue strain to any part, the chest is carried high, so that the breathing is easy, and there is the full amount of "wind power." The abdominal organs are properly supported and work with the least difficulty, the digestion and nutrition are good. If the body is drooped or buckles in the middle, the whole body suffers and many times disease conditions start in this way. In such drooped position the chest is flattened, so that the lungs cannot work rightly and become weak, the abdomen is telescoped and the stomach, bowels and other organs are crowded together and work badly, so that indigestion and constipation result. Health or the best possible efficiency, the full horsepower of the person cannot result under such conditions any more than an engine can develop its rated horsepower if the cylinders are full of carbon, or that the fuel in the furnace can be consumed properly if the drafts are not properly open or the ashes are not removed. The position most favorable for health and in which the load or burden of life can be carried most easily is with the body both when sitting and when standing, as it would be if a person were trying to sit or stand as tall as possible. This gives the high chest, the flat abdomen, the erect head square shoulders, straight knees, and the springs of the whole body are set in the best way. This is the position recognized by the athletic trainers by the singing-teachers and by all those who are expected to train individuals for great effort. The same position is best for everyone, whether the effort be great or small, or whether the work be with the head or muscle.

SOCIAL CUSTOMS.

Good Form to be Observed in Cards and Calls.

The question of when to call and how many cards to leave is one of the nic points which frequently arise in social affairs. Most persons dislike making formal calls; but even in small towns, if you want to keep many friends, calling is obligatory. Everybody who goes out at all should have engraved cards; for they are so inexpensive that they are well within the means of a modest income. A properly engraved card of good quality is a mark of refinement, says the Pictorial Review.

Just at present, old English type seems to be the favorite, but it is the most expensive of all lettering. Script type, which is the cheapest of all is still in use, and plain block lettering is popular among men.

A wife's card should have her husband's full name on it with "Mrs." prefixed. For instance it should read "Mrs. John Truman Brown" and not "Mrs. J. T. Brown." Initials on a card are not good form. The husband's card should read, "Mr. John Truman Brown," except in business when the prefix "Mr." is left off.

The cards of the oldest daughter should read "Miss Brown," while the younger daughters must have their names engraved in full, reading "Miss Mary Elizabeth Brown." If named for his father, the son's card must read "Mr. John Truman Brown, Jr."

Years ago when a woman became a widow she at once dropped the use of her husband's name on her cards; but this custom is not always adhered to. In case she continues to use her husband's name and she has a married son who bears his father's name she should have the word "Senior" added to her card to prevent conflict with the cards of her son's wife.

If you are married to a professional man your cards do not bear his title. You are "Mrs. John Whitson Ford," while your husband is "Dr. John Whitson Ford,"

Formal calls should be made between 3 and 6 in the afternoon, while men call in the evening and on Sunday afternoons. Morning calls are to be tabooed except between intimate friends or for business purposes.

The safest and really the sanest solution to the question of when to receive and pay calls is for every woman to have a day at home.

The older residents of a town or village should call on the newcomer, and this call should be made as soon as the new neighbor has had time to settle her house.

A bride should always be called on first as soon as she has settled in her new home or has come back to her old home to live. A bride, however, should send out cards with her new name and full address on them and should have her "day" engraved in the lower left-hand corner. A married woman calling on a bride should leave one of her own cards and two of her husband's. This means that a woman caller never leaves any cards for the men of a household.

Paying formal calls is not always a very pleasant task; but when you have accepted hospitality from a friend the least you can do is to drop in on her day at home and have a little chat.

As a rule young men wait to be invited to call on a girl. The girl having met him at some place outside of her home should tell him she would be glad to have him drop in some evening. Such invitations are generally given informally. When the young man pays his first call the girl should be sure to have him meet her parents or at least her mother. After that formal rules will be dropped and he will feel at liberty to call when he wishes to.

If when you are making a call your hostess should open the door do not give her your cards. Put them back in your purse or drop them on the table as you go out of the house. As a rule a small china or silver tray is left on the hall table for cards.

A great many women indeed most of them do not consider it necessary to make a formal call after having attended an afternoon tea. Going to the tea seems to constitute a call. But if you are especially invited to a dinner reception, wedding or any other distinct entertainment you must call upon your hostess within a month afterwards.

EXHIBITIONS OF THE TANGO

Features at Two Largely Attendad Dances

The tango, virulent and otherwise, with variations that included La Maxixe and steps from LaGiocondo, was given in exhibition at the two last pre-Lenten dances in this city Tuesday night.

Tradition that has ruled Music hall and forbidden rag time and all other forms of dancing, except the modest glides, was broken, for it was on that highly polished floor, in the centre of a human circle of admirers, that Miss Ethel VanDerstreet of Brockton and Paul Franzi of South Quincy performed. All that could be danced in the short time allotted to the exhibition was far too little for the boys and girls in the circle who liberally applauded when Miss VanDerstreet swung through the stage door, signaling the close of a dancing act that has never been surpassed in Quincy.

In Alpha hall where tango and other dances have been popularized by the more select gatherings, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Johnson of Boston appeared. They in a manner different in no way from the custom in vogue at private parties in the hall this winter did all the fancy steps they could jam into their time allowance and as the minutes sped they just ate up distance and licked speed to a frazzle.

It was the first time that tango exhibitions have been given at public dances in the city, although long before the patronizing public really well knew the modern dances were, well known individuals of the city contentedly gave them at private parties, joined classes and did all they could indirectly to popularize the tango.

The dance in Music hall was under the auspices of the Pastime club. Among those that attended were the Mystic, Elco, Greysing Boat, Taykoma, Halcyon and Linga Longa clubs of Brockton while guests from other towns on the South Shore were present in large numbers.

The Alpha hall dance was the annual of the Manet Social Club which for the past nine years have entertained their friends at a dance on the night before the opening of the Lenten season.

Daniel DiBona was floor director at the Pastime dance and he was assisted by Charles French. Irving Hayden was chief of aids and the aids were James K. Morrison, F. G. Smith, W. B. Allicon, A. A. Eaton, M. H. Currie, H. W. Smith L. L. Lewis W. B. Childs S. Eaton, G. H. Blanchard.

William McDermitt was in charge of the floor in Music hall with Frank Ferguson as president. The aids were Clarence Frazier, Murray Kerr, Fred Hayden, Daniel Mahon and Joseph Driscoll.

CLAIM FOR DAMAGES.

A communication was received from Miss Beatrice H. Rothwell, the teacher at the Adams school who was seriously injured some months ago by falling down stairs and through a glass door in the dark, to be reimbursed for the expense she had been to for medical attendance and nursing, amounting to $277.

As there was some question as to the authority of the School Committee to take care of the matter out of regular appropriation, the chairman was instructed to confer with the City Solicitor The general sentiment, without a formal vote on the matter, was that Miss Rothwell who is still out as a result of the accident should be reimbursed

Several vocal solos by Miss Ruth Hardy were enjoyed. They included "Rose softly blooming" by Sphor, "Mary of Argyle" by Nelson, "Goodbye" by Tosti, and "Annie Laurie" arrangement by Lehman. Mrs. Joseph Walther was the accompanist.

At the close of the program President Charles B. Hall, who presided, invited the members and their guests to the chapel where refreshments were served. Composing the entertainment committee were Eben Hardy, Kendall F. Harriman, Ernest W. Campbell and E. H. Sears.

WAS AN EVERETT MAN.

Patrick Cremins of 81 Garfield street went to Everett on Tuesday to view the body found on the Boston & Maine tracks Saturday night, and instead of finding a Quincy stone cutter as he expected identified the body as that of Timothy Reardon of Everett.

The funeral of Jane Donaldson, wife of John Donaldson, was held Tuesday afternoon from her home on Watson road, Quincy Point, with a large attendance of relatives and friends. Services were conducted by Rev. James A. Matheson of the First Presbyterian church. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Chief Billings Fills Vacancy on Board of Engineers

Mayor Miller was at his office but a short time today as he was obliged to go to Boston on city business.

The Mayor is to have his home connected by telephone. His telephone will not be listed however as he does not desire to have people call up his home on city business. When he gets home he says he desires to enjoy its privacy, which he could not do if everybody knew his telephone number.

Ex-Councilman Gauthier, who is the contractor making the alterations at City Hall to provide more room, is making good progress. The enlarged room in the basement is now already for the plasterers who will begin their work today.

Chief Engineer Billings has appointed Albert E. Stephenson as assistant engineer to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Assistant Engineer Nyhan. Engineer Stephenson has been a member of the fire department for 18 years. Of this period he was for eight years attached to the combination company at Atlantic, and for the past ten years to the Hook and Ladder truck at Wollaston, as foreman of the company. Engineer Stephenson has been acting as assistant engineer since the death of Engineer Nyhan.

It is said that Miss Tyler of the City Treasurer's office, who was taken ill Friday night with scarlet fever, contracted the disease from handling money that came from an infected house.

Miss Farrell of the Tax Collector's office is helping out City Treasurer Curtis during the illness of Miss Tyler.

The city officials have received invitations to attend the opening of the automobile show at Wollaston.

The standing Committee on Ordinances will meet Thursday evening, and the Finance Committee on Friday evening.

The Mayor will forward the Mayor and Treasurers budget for 1914 to the City Council at its meeting next Monday evening. As the wants of all departments have increased the grand total is expected to be considerably in excess of last year.

The pocket manual issued by the City Council and City Clerk is in the hands of the binders and will be ready for delivery the latter part of the week. The manual aside from containing names and addresses of all the members of the City Council and council officers, contains the rules of the council, the names of the city officials, the school committee and members of its sub-committees, the vote by precincts at the last state and municipal elections, the list of fire alarm boxes and the City Hall telephones.

Andrew H. Morrison, who received the Progressive nomination for Councilman from Ward Three at the caucus last week, has declined to accept that nomination. Mr. Morrison was one of the candidates for the Republican nomination but was defeated at the primaries and remains loyal to the party.

The time for filing nomination papers for candidates for councilman from Ward Three to be voted for at the special election March 10, expires at 5 o'clock tonight. There have been several rumors that independent nomination papers would be filed, but up to noon none had been and it is very doubtful if there will be, so that the election will be between Robert T. Foye, Democrat, and Charles F. Barnicoat, Republican.

LUNCH BASKETS AT AUCTION

Squantum Party Enjoy Novelty and Play Whist

The largest and most enjoyable event of the season was held Monday night at the basket lunch and whist given by the Squantum Improvement Association at Lee's Inn.

At 7 o'clock Auctioneer Herman Berghaus started to sell off the attractive baskets, beautifully trimmed, containing a lunch for two. A huge bushel basket with enough for ten people brought the highest price. Mr. Berghaus made good fun out of his droll manner of auctioning the baskets. When every gentleman had bought a basket he had to hunt up the owner to share the lunch. Hot coffee was served by Mrs. Lee.

At 8 o'clock the tables were cleared for whist, and many who were not present for the lunch came later for the whist. Twelve tables were arranged around the large dining room. Souvenirs were given to the holders of the four largest scores Mrs. Richardson, James Allen, John R. Nelson and Eugene Rounds. The party broke up at 11 o'clock, every one declaring they had had the best time ever.

The committee who worked hard to make this affair a success were: Chairman—Perley Bostwick, James Foster, Charles Bostwick, Roger Mason, Herman Berghaus and Herbert A. Smith.

Among those present were: President Herbert A. Smith and Mrs. Smith Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. James Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bostwick, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Uppling, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Carlson, Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ramsdell, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Morse, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Anderson, Roger Mason, Perley Bostwick, Eugene Rounds, Thelma Holt Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Callahan, Mrs. Kokerda, Mrs. Helen McGowan, Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Richardson, Mrs. George Hersey, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Berghaus, James Allen, Francis and Agne Allen, Mildred Hersey, David Olsson, Warren Fifield, Edward Carlson, Miss Gustavson, Mrs. Matthew McGrain, Joseph Uppling, Jr. Francis Callahan, Miss Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Bond, Mrs. John Jepson, Capt. Andrew Peterson, Mildred and Francis Bean, Paul and George Hersey.

GOOD TO THE BIRDS.

The interest which Frank Nightingale has taken in feeding and preserving birds while the ground is covered with snow is deserving of note. But for his thoughtfulness the marsh quail at Houghs Neck might have perished. Until he placed food in a place accessible to them they were almost lifeless from starvation and the cold. Their recovery has been very marked. Others should feed the birds at a season like this.

STANDPIPE AT GREAT HILL

Will Be Conspicuous Object in Boston Harbor

Material for the standpipe that is to be erected on the top of Great Hill at Houghs Neck has been shipped and four freight cars, heavily loaded with sheet metal, are expected to arrive in this city within a few days.

The tower will be 140 feet in height and from its top every inlet and outlet of Boston harbor will be visible, and it will further be one of the few points that will be prominently in view to those aboard incoming and outgoing ships.

The concrete foundation has been completed for several weeks. Considerable digging was necessary in some sections because workmen struck a bed of clay which ran beside a bed of sand, but it was not difficult to overcome this.

The tank when filled will have a capacity of 400,000 gallons and will be a reserve supply for Houghs Neck and will be fed by the regular line of pipe now in service.

Whether you believe in woman suffrage or not, you will enjoy the play "How the Vote was Won," which is to to be given in the Wollaston School hall, Monday evening. Admission free to adults.

TOOK LIFE IN BOSTON HOTEL

Suicide of Washington Williams of Elm Avenue

Washington Williams of Elm avenue Wollaston, who committed suicide in Boston on Wednesday, was well known in Quincy, especially by those interested in gunning. Among his Quincy friends he was known as "Wash." and was always of jovial nature, as well as being a kind-hearted man. His home was at 42 Elm avenue. He leaves a wife and three children, all being grown up and married.

He was very fond of gunning and belonged to the Wollaston Gun club, and in the fall of the year he always spent several weeks at the gunning stand on Merrymount sub-division which was burned a few weeks ago.

He had no business reverses as far as known and to all appearances was in the best of health. The police went to his home in Wollaston, Wednesday evening to notify his family but were unable to gain entrance, the neighbors informing the officer that Mrs. Williams had gone to visit one of her children.

Mr. Williams was a brother of Alphonse Williams, a former well known Wollaston man who is now the proprietor of the Avon hat store near the Dudley street terminal. His brother was also a member of the Wollaston Gun club, and the two brothers spent many days in the fall at the club's gunning stand.

Mr. Williams took his life at the New Marlboro hotel at 763 Washington street, Boston. Just about noon the clerk on duty at the desk answered a telephone call from Williams' room and as he did so he heard a gasping sound. The clerk immediately sent a bell boy to the room to learn the trouble. The boy found Mr. Williams lying on the floor dead, having drank poison. On a table near by were two notes. One read "Love to all. It is just 12 o'clock." The second note stated that his sons were E. P. Williams of Wollaston and E.D. Williams of Auburndale. Both were notified and shortly after went to the hotel and claimed the body.

Apparently Mr. Williams took the fatal draught while communicating with the hotel office. Associate Medical Examiner Watters after viewing the body ordered its removal to the morgue. The Medical Examiner said that Mr. Williams was evidently despondent when he committed the rash act. Mr. Williams, who was 59 years of age, came to the hotel Monday evening and seemed in the best of spirits. He was employed as a hat blocker.

A campaign for members was launched at a meeting of John Adams Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles at their meeting in Electa hall on Wednesday night.

THE COUNTRY MINISTER

Dramatics at Wollaston Proved Great Success

The presentation of "The Country Minister" in the Unitarian Vestry, at Wollaston, Wednesday evening, announced as the seventh annual production of the Imperial Dramatic Company brought before the footlights several local amateurs that have not appeared for a number of years.

The reappearance of Charles T. Baker in the cast recalled to old residents the dramatics of ten or twelve years ago when Mr. Baker, in company with Walter E. Simmons and others now retired from the amateur field, held forth at the Unitarian Vestry.

The play was a rural drama in five acts which centered around the love affairs of Rev. Ralph Underwood, a bashful but manly village curate and Helen Burleigh an heiress from the metropolis.

Action opens in the yard of Miss Judkins general store and post office in Mullinsville one August morning. Sorely pressed for funds, Gregory Heath, a worthless adventurer steals a registered letter, with money in it, addressed to Miss Burleigh.

Jud Pardoe an escaped jail bird and Heath's former partner in counterfeiting days appears and demands money of Heath. They discover that Roxy, a waif sent from the city and adopted by Miss Judkins, is Pardoe's deserted daughter.

So that Heath may attempt an alliance with the heiress undiscoverd Roxy is spirited away. The theft of the letter comes out. The Rev. Mr. Underwood discovers the culprit but bides his time.

Act Three opens in Grannie Grimes garret in New York where Roxy is confined. Being repulsed by Miss Burleigh Heath plots with Pardoe to rob her mansion.

A fellow lodger, an old man, from across the hall, with whom Grannie Grimes has made friends was hidden by Grannie in the room and overhears the plot.

When the two villians go out this lodger drops a drug in Grannie Grimes dram. She falls in a stupor. The lodger liberates Roxy and tearing off his wig and false beard discovers himself as Rev. Mr. Underwood.

Scene four is Miss Burleigh's New York home. Mr. Underwood and Roxy call. The latter is found to be Miss Burleigh's neice. Seeing how the land lies, Roxy, who is in love with them both, forces the bashful Mr. Underwood to propose. A happy grouping ensues.

Heath calls and being again repulsed hides in the house with intent to rob. He is discovered by Rev. Underwood and the maid. His villainy

FUNERAL OF DR. WELCH

Large Attendance This Afternoon at Bethany Church

The funeral of Dr. John F. Welch, Quincy's beloved physician, was held this afternoon from the Bethany Congregational church, and was very largely attended. Aside from many of the families to which Dr. Welch has been the family physician for years, there were delegations from the Masonic fraternity, as well as the various societies and institutions with which he was prominently identified. Aside from these there were among the mourners many physicians from Quincy as well as from the adjoining towns composing the Southeastern district.

Directly in front of the pulpit was a large oil painting of the Doctor while a mass of flowers completely hid the front of the platform.

Friends almost without number came to pay their last tribute of respect to their friend and the spacious church was filled almost to overflowing.

The body was borne into the church preceded by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Willmott and was followed by the bearers and the members of the immediate family.

The bearers were C. Theodore Hardwick, Dr. John A. Gordon, Richard D. Chase, Otho A. Hayward, Dr. Willis J. Middleton and Fred B. Rice. The ushers at the church were Frank W. Crane, Abbott L. Melcher and Bert Miller.

The services were conducted by Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, pastor of the church, and during the services Mrs. Emma S. Moore and Albert L. Hayden sang two selections, "Light of the world" and "No night there." Mrs. John F. Hunt presided at the organ.

There was a profusion of beautiful flowers for aside from the set pieces sent by the various organizations with which Dr. Welch was affiliated, there were many flat bouquets from those to whom he had ministered to so often during their illness. These flowers were arranged about the casket, in front of the desk, and almost hid from view the casket.

At the close of the services an opportunity was given for a last look at the remains after which they were taken to the Forest Hills crematory.

Several of the business places in City Square were closed during the services.

The third degree staff of Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., visited John Hancock lodge at Wollaston, Wednesday evening, and exemplified the third degree upon candidates from the two lodges. The work was done in a manner that called for much praise. A banquet followed the business of the evening.

IMMIGRANTS FROM SEVERAL COUNTRIES

Pass Through the Inspectors at West Quincy Methodist Church

Practical Lesson Which Was Very Instructive

The Epworth League of the Hall Place M. E. church gave a demonstration of the landing of the Immigrants at Ellis Island in the church Wednesday evening. The parts were taken by members of the League costumed in the garb of the countries they represented. Mrs. Joseph M. Francis was in charge of the demonstration and gave an explanation of the work.

The first official whom the immigrants met was the "Watchman" whose duty it was to examine the tickets and credentials of the immigrants. From this officer they were passed to the "first medical officers," who looks for obvious defects. They are then passed to the "Second medical officer" who examines the eyes for traces of "trachoma." The matron next takes them in charge and cares for them until they are summoned before the "inspector," where they are questioned from the "Ship's manifest" as to their name, age, place of birth, place where they are coming from, whether married or single, number of children, place they are going to, who paid passage, amount of money they have, nearest relative in the old country, what they expect to do here, whether they know where they are going to work, and whether fare is paid to destination, whether they have ever been in prison, almshouse or asylum and condition of health.

If satisfactory answers are given, they are allowed to land, but should answers be questionable they are either temporarily detained awaiting arrival of friends or are held for "board of special inquiry." There are a great many reasons for refusing to allow immigrants to land in the United States, some of which demonstrated namely; trachoma, insufficient funds, counterfeiting, immoral person, and perjury.

The official parts were taken by the following persons.

Watchman,—Alex Stewart.

First medical officer—D. H. McNeil.

Second medical officer,—George Stewart.

Matron,—Mrs. J. M. Francis.

Inspector,—J. Lawrence Martin.

Guard,—Edward Newcomb.

Missionary,—Rev. T. C. Martin.

The nationalities represented were: Italians, Germans, English, French, Jews, Bulgarians, Turks, Slovaks, Swedes, Irish and Syrian.

Those taking immigrant parts were Florence Manhire, Mona Norris, George Hazel, Milton Miller, two Ellis girls, Harold Norris, Camille Fuller, Albert Miller, Addie Newcomb, Angelo Bianchi, Joseph M. Francis, Hilda Francis, Jennie Manhire, Warren Jordan, Ernest Briggs, Bessie Nichols, Charles Hazel, Ralph Newcomb, Sarah Fuller, Ethel Nichols, Edna Burke, Julius Fuller, Mary J. Williams, Bessie Dunn, Herbert Noyes and William Shirley.

This demonstration was given by the Missionary department of the League. At the close of the demonstration ice cream and candy were sold in the vestry.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A very pleasant evening was enjoyed at the home of Isabel Laing, a popular young lady of Bedford street Wednesday evening, when she was tendered a surprise party. In behalf of those present she was presented a beautiful bracelet. With a few well chosen words she thanked her friends for their kind token of friendship. Refreshments were served and games were enjoyed until a late hour. Guests were present from Quincy, Braintree, Wollaston and Medford.

Miss Edith Randall had the misfortune Wednesday to slip on the ice and break the bones of her right wrist. She was on her way to Whitman to speak at the presidents' day meeting of the Whitman Woman's club and was changing cars at North Abington, when the accident occurred. She returned to Quincy and is resting comfortably although it will be several weeks before she can use her arm.

Any one who ever played the good old game of squat tag should be able to do the low dips in the tango.

It is no longer possible to call Japan a semi-civilized nation, now that the opposition in their parliament destroyed the ballot box in order to win a political move.

Sixteen years since the Maine was blown up in Havana harbor. Probably our naval forces down at Vera Cruz remembered the anniversary, also possibly some of the Mexicans.

Some people seem to think that observing "Go to Church Sunday" constitutes an immunity bath for the rest of the year.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, who is fighting dangerous drugs, says about five per cent. of the people use them. Some men are so constituted that an item like this is regarded in the light of a business opportunity.

The imposition of a fine on joy-riding automobiles produces good feeling all around. The court feels satisfaction at the performance of duty, and the defendant considers his fun cheap at the price.

When a man buys a paper to get the war news, it may not be so much for intelligent study of the Mexican situation as to get the latest tips on the baseball row.

It is predicted that the "pear shape" will be woman's next figure. The present style must be the pear upside down.

From the way President Wilson suffers from bad colds, it would seem that a dozen handkerchiefs would be about the most suitable gift admiring friends could make him.

Mrs. Bryan put her hand over the champagne glass her husband picked up, but many women have often done the same by their husband's mouth.

COLD WAVES.

The winter now coming to its close has seen two cold waves of exceptional severity that spread over most of the United States. Usually the weather is a minor matter of conversation, but sometimes temperature vitally affects economic life. Physiologists claim cold revitalizes human beings, but there are losses that make the balance at least doubtful.

The cold waves mostly come from Canada, and are great overflows of dry air chilled to a very low temperature. They either follow along the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence river, or may go as far south as Colorado, and then turn eastward.

Thus they envelop for the most part a population that is trained to undergo their rigors. Old Boreas has to take it out in splitting unprotected plumbing, in which he joyfully gets away with many millions ofdollars every winter. Agriculture being suspended, the farmer does not suffer much.

An enormous tax is laid on the community for coal and wood. If the cold is recharging the human dynamo the operation is for the time provocative of friction. Extreme temperatures get on the nerves and produce a feeling of the hostility of nature.

The worst damage of cold comes in the infrequent instances when a wave goes well down toward Texas and sweeps eastward. In 1890 the farm values of Florida were computed at $81,000,000; in 1900 they were called but $56,000,000. This was the result of several frosts reaching in some instances zero temperatures.

These sudden shifts are an illogical kind of enemy for the truck farmers of the South to meet. They are too infrequent to be considered much, yet when they do come they seem to upset all energy and foresight.

Still by comprehensive weather forecasts, by the spread of information by telephone, burning of fires in fruit orchards, by protection of fruit and vegetable trains, etc., Southern produce dealers and growers are enabled to avoid many losses that once would have proved crushing.

DOESN'T WANT TO GIVE BODY

Villa's Action Regarding Benton Viewed With Suspicion

A FURTHER PROD BY BRYAN

Charges Against Englishman Who Was Shot to Death Will Be Fully Investigated by American Government, Which Will Not Act Hastily —Carranza's Good Offices Sought

Washington, Feb. 26.—Further representations have been made by the American government to General Villa, pointing out the importance of giving up the body of William S. Benton, the British subject, recently executed at Juarez, whose death is being officially investigated by both the United States and Great Britain.

Immediately upon receipt of word from Consul Letcher at Chihuahua that Benton's body would be exhumed for the benefit of Benton's widow and relatives, who could visit the cemetery with an American representative, a second request went forth to Villa asking that the corpse be turned over to the widow on American territory.

Villa's refusal to accede to the request for the body has not met with favor by officials here, who are seeking to impress upon him, through Letcher, the importance the world generally will attach to such a refusal.

Upon the character of the wounds found rests proof of Villa's version of the killing. If the body is found riddled with rifle bullets, officials think the story of an execution after a court martial will be confirmed, and attention then will be further directed to a point now carefully being investigated as to whether Benton had committed crimes, as Villa charges, and was of a disposition to fight with firearms. Indications are that the investigation will last for several days. Officials regard the delivery of the body as of first importance.

The incident was fully discussed at a cabinet meeting. Ambassador Spring-Rice later called on Secretary Bryan and arranged for the visit of British Consul Perceval to El Paso to supplement the American inquiry, though not to interfere with it. The secretary then conferred again with the president at the White House.

Cabinet officers indicate clearly that official judgment of the Benton incident will not be hasty and that the American government is chiefly occupied just now in gathering the facts.

The fact that the United States had instructed its consuls to have the body exhumed and examined and to employ legal assistance and examine witnesses indicated the far-reaching nature of the inquiry. In addition to this Bryan announced that a communication had been telegraphed for presentation to General Carranza by an American consul, asking the constitutionalist commander-in-chief for more information about the Benton incident.

In some quarters the sending of a communication to Carranza about Villa's act was regarded as involving a technical recognition of Carranza's jurisdiction over Villa, but Bryan stated that he regarded the message as similar to others which previously have been presented by American consuls to Carranza and the de facto authorities in Mexico.

Dealings with the de facto officers in the north Bryan regards as no different from the informal relations at Mexico City with the unrecognized Huerta government. Upon the receipt of information from Carranza and the progress of the inquiries at Juarez, both by the American consuls and the British consul at El Paso, the development of the next few days seem to hinge.

LAND SLIDES AWAY

Full Extent of Damage In the Berkshires Not Yet Known

Pittsfield, Mass., Feb. 26.—What is believed to be the largest landslide that has occurred in the Berkshire hills in a century was discovered in the gorge leading up October mountain, near the road to Lee.

Lee residents think the mountain slide was dislodged by the recent earthquake. Because of the depth of the snow it is difficult to estimate the amount of the damage, or what will be the future movement of the landslide.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

Alleged Pickpocket Given Time to Prove Her Innocence

Boston, Feb. 26.—Mrs. Annie Cohen, 43 years old, who, with a startling number of sparkling jewels on her person, was arrested on Washington street, charged with picking pockets, was sentenced to an indefinite term in the woman's prison at Sherborn.

Upon objection by her counsel, however, who declared the woman could prove that the jewels found on her were all her own and that she was innocent of the charge of picking pockets, Judge Burke suspended sentence.

Mrs. Cohen gave her residence as Hartford. She said she would send for her husband to come from Hartford and help her in her defense. She was held in $1000 bail and was informed that should she fail to prove her contention by March 4, she would have to accept the Sherborn sentence.

TAKEN FROM SINKING BOAT

Starving Crew of Fishermen Are Safely Landed at Boston

Boston, Feb. 26.—Two days without food and water, Captain Brown and three men of the forty-foot fishing schooner Dolly Gray of Lockeport, N. S., were rescued far at sea by the schooner Mary, when their vessel was sinking fast, with all boats gone, a week ago, and landed here.

The men, who left Lockeport a week ago last Monday, took only some hardtack for food, because they expected to do only a day's fishing or make one set of their trawls.

But they were caught unprepared in a ninety-mile southwest hurricane, blown off shore, and their little craft in an hour was practically a derelict.

They had lost all hope of ever seeing land again when Captain French and his men sighted their flag of distress in the rigging and soon had the thankful quartet safe on board.

CONVICTS TO WORK WITHOUT GUARDS

Dallas, Feb. 26.—Revokable paroles for fifty convicts were signed by Governor Colquit of Texas and with their departure from the Huntsville penitentiary the state will inaugurate an experiment in the management of prisoners without guards or shackles and with a profit-sharing plan for their work on public roads.

The state will receive $15 a month for each convict's labor. Half of this will go to the penitentiary fund and half to the man's personal account. The county in which the men work will maintain them without the expense of guard and overseers.

WOOD ALCOHOL IN WINE

Three Girls Die as Result of Drinking It at Wedding Reception

New York, Feb. 26.—A coroner's physician decided that three girls who died after attending an Italian wedding reception were poisoned by wood alcohol.

The police found that wines and cordials served at the reception were home-made, compounded of alcohol, sugar and coloring-matter. The host, Carmino J. Colino, and his bride said they had often used liquors made by this formula.

The police believe that on this occasion, through some oversight, they used wood alcohol instead of grain alcohol.

SCORE PARCEL POST

Boston Expressmen Say It Threatens to Ruin Their Business

Washington, Feb. 26.—That the parcel post is driving small expressmen out of business and will do so completely, if the powers of the postmaster general to increase the weight of parcels are not taken away, was represented to the senate postoffice committee by a delegation from the Expressmen's league of Boston.

The expressmen contended the government ought not to conduct the business at a loss, and that in any case it should reimburse those whose business had suffered.

THREAT TO KILL DEWEY'S MEN

Made by German Admiral In Bay of Manila

A CONFLICT OVER VISITS

Could Have Been Avoided by an Official Protest of American Commander About Two "Trivial Incidents"—Von Diederichs Sheds Further Light on "Unfriendly Acts"

Baden, Baden, Ger., Feb. 26.—Admiral Von Diederichs himself admits he informed the British naval commander in Manila bay, at the time of the Spanish-American war, that he would shoot any American officer who attempted to board a German warship "to make inquiry and establish her identity" in carrying out the orders of Admiral Dewey. This admission was made in the course of a further narrative of events given to the press.

The strained relations between Dewey and Von Diederichs arose over the visiting between the vessels of the various powers, which, according to Von Diederichs' story, was quite promiscuous. He admitted there was a certain justice in Dewey's complaint as to the German ships being constantly on the move, although this was necessary, and in no way meant to be unfriendly.

The bulk of the German squadron was about to be withdrawn, said Von Diederichs, when the conflict arose over the right of visitation, and he then decided to retain his whole force there.

Von Diederichs blamed Dewey for the clash, and intimated that it would never have arisen if the American commander had protested officially about two "trivial incidents." These included the firing of shots by the Americans in order to stop two German pinnaces. One of them was passing the American vessels, and was held up because her flag was not showing plainly, and the other was approaching the Olympia at night with a message and was not properly identified.

The German admiral felt that Dewey's action was decidedly unfriendly. He sent his flag lieutenant, Von Hintze, to make a formal protest against the action of the McCullough in halting the German cruiser Irene in order to learn her identity. This, said Von Diederichs, was the incident incorrectly attributed to the Cormorant by Dewey.

The American admiral retaliated with an announcement that no ship, commercial or naval, would be allowed to pass his lines, and announced his intention of sending an officer on board every warship arriving in the bay, "to make inquiry and to establish her identity." The word "inquiry" apparently aroused the ire of the German admiral, who identifies it even now with a claim to the right to cross-examine any German commander.

Von Diederichs says he discussed the situation with the British commander and told him he would shoot any officer attempting to carry out Dewey's order. A substantial victory for the Germans was claimed by Von Diederichs in the final settlement by which any arriving warship was to report itself to the American commander and afterward be required only to show its flag.

According to Von Diederichs, his call on the Spanish authorities was justified by the fact that no blockade had been formally proclaimed.

ONE WATCHMAN ASLEEP

Thieves Overpower Two Others In State House and Tackle Safe

Des Moines, Feb. 26.—An unsuccessful attempt to dynamite the vault in the state treasurer's office here was made, after two of the state house watchmen had been bound and gagged. The safe blowers obtained only $5, which they took from a cash drawer in the treasurer's office.

A third watchman was said by the police investigating the affair to have been asleep in the supreme courtroom while the attempted robbery was in progress.

Dewey Remains Mum

Washington, Feb. 26.—Admiral Dewey is adhering to his determination to make no comment upon Admiral Von Diederichs' account of the Manila bay incident. Further publication of the German admiral's comment did not change his attitude.

WOLLASTON AUTO SHOW

Will Eclipse the Successful One Last Year

Last year's Automobile Show at Wollaston was a grand success, but the second annual show which opens this week Saturday promises to eclipse it. More cars and a greater variety of cars will be exhibited, and also many accessories of interest to auto owners and prospective owners. Thirty or more companies will make exhibits.

Manager Winsloe expects to have many notable guests at the opening, including Gov. Walsh, Lieut. Gov. Barry, Mayor Curley of Boston, Mayor Miller of Quincy, Chester I. Campbell, the manager of the Boston show and others. Some of these will speak, and every afternoon and evening there will be music by a Ladies' orchestra and songs by soloists.

The decorators began work Wednesday and will transform the spacious garage into an attractive exhibition hall. A special effort has been made to interest the women's clubs as well as the men's clubs, not only in Quincy, but in Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hingham, Hull. Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Mansfield, Canton, Holbrook, Stoughton, Sharon and elsewhere. The afternoons are to be devoted largely to the women's organizations and the evenings to the men's organizations, everything being done on a grand scale.

BIRTHDAY REMEMBERED.

Edward E. Jameson, of Wollaston, commander of De Molay commandery Knights Templar, was cheered and congratulated by the 350 fraters who attended the banquet and annual inspection of the commandery Wednesday night at Masonic Temple, Boston. Announcement that it was his birthday anniversary was made at the banquet which preceded the inspection by Generalisimo William M. Farrington, who presented the eminent commander with a box of cigars. In accepting them, Mr. Jameson said that he would smoke them with fortitude while accepting them with gratitude. A cabaret show followed after which the annual inspection was made by Grand Captain General Samuel D. Sherwood. Among the fifty or more on the inspecting officers suite were Em. Commander Walter E. Piper and Generalsimo John Morgan of Quincy commandery. During the evening the commandery presented the inspecting officer and his warder with diamond stickpins.

ANNUAL REPORT PUBLIC LIBRARY

Miss White the Librarian Tells of Work Accomplished the Past Year

Large Circulation at Both the Branch Reading Rooms

The annual report of Miss Alice G. White, librarian of the Thomas Crane Public Library, is exhaustive and of interest, and the Daily Ledger reprints it in full:

To the Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library:—

With an increase in the city appropriation of but $595.58 for the year 1913 over that appropriated for the library for the year 1912, we were confronted with the problem of carrying on the newly opened reading room at Atlantic for twelve months instead of for two months and one week, less the expense of its establishment. Besides this extra charge, we could not anticipate that our regular running expenses otherwise would be less, as every year in which we grow adds to our cost of maintaining that growth. As we look back over the year's work, what has happened?

The total circulation for the first full year at Atlantic has been 23,397. But this year the West Quincy reading room's circulation is over 5,000 larger than last year. The Children's room figures show a gain of 2,668 in 1913, and from the main desk there is an increase of 4,801 over 1912. In all, we have a grand total of circulation for the year 1913 of 150,986, or an increase of 30,427 over the year 1912. To the new reading room at Atlantic is due 60 per cent. of this increase. But the rest of the library system has carried the other 40 per cent.

Such increase of circulation means more assistance at desk, wear and tear, telephone calls, questions, etc. The wear and tear, for instance, means the mending of 8,337 books and 938 periodicals as against 5,788 books and 307 periodicals in 1912. The saving in binder's bills indicates the stitch in time that saves nine, for many more books would have been sent away to be repaired and rebound with consequent increase of expense, also longer withdrawal from circulation, but for this time spent in mending by our own assistants.

But this circulation of its books, periodicals, stereoscopic views, mounted pictures, music or whatever else, covers but a small part of the real work of a public library as a public educator. As a fellow servant with the public schools the library this year as never before has had its resources drawn upon to supply books for the required reading in English of the High school pupils. Since the opening of the fall term nearly every day at the close of the school session has seen a crowded delivery desk some[illegible] requiring four attendants for an hour. It is not surprising that large increases of circulation are to be found in the classes of fiction, travel, and biography. One most pleasing thing to note is the very great improvement in the behavior of the High school patrons. No confusion, no conversation, no disorderly manners while they crowd around the card catalogue or the delivery desk or the lists and shelves of their "outside required reading," the fiction of which we put on outside shelves, buying as many duplicates as we could afford. May it be that the five years of the children's room is bearing some fruit as to the library habit, the uses of the library and behavior in it? Besides this home use of books for outside reading, books in history, science, and arts have been reserved for High school pupils' use at the library. Four bulletins have been loaned to the new Adams school and one to the High school. We look forward to still further co-operation the coming year of the library with the schools both teachers and pupils.

But not only come the pupils thronging to the library to find out who said "You may fool all the people some of the time, etc."; material for a debate on woman suffrage; something for and against the new dances, or something about coral. The library is now rightfully regarded as a place in which all kinds of information on all sorts of subjects may be sought by all classes of people. So there has come to be the need of a regular reference department to which can be referred, while the work at the delivery desk is being carried on, such questions, for instance, as the above, or "Where can I find the story of the camel poking his nose in at the window and finally driving the Arab out of his house?" 'For this ought we to have done and not to leave the other undone.' And we have tried to do both, hoping for still further progress toward a reference department next year.

In September the hours of the Main hall were extended by opening from 9 A. M. until 9 P. M. There is no doubt that these two extra hours daily have been appreciated, especially the evening one when men and boys, in particular, who have finished their day's occupation, are seen using the magazines, newspapers and reference books.

Again this year as three years ago we have made as thorough a revision of the registration as we were able to give the time to, and, adding to 244 names void by death or removal from the city, the 2,035 cancelled by revision, we have as the total number of borrowers at present using the library, 7,205.

As to the inventory, fiction in the Main hall has been read, last previously read in 1908, and 32 books are reported missing. Over 1,000 of these volumes of fiction have been rotated on the outside shelves during the year. Of the other books put on the outside cases, new fiction and non-fiction for the most part, 22 books are missing. The Children's room inventory shows 20 books missing from their open shelves. No doubt some of these books will turn up in most unaccountable ways.

The feat most worthy of mention in the catalogue department has been the long business of getting the valuation of the books in the library.. A beginning was made in 1912, but the more complicated part of the finishing, with charts to continue for the future, has been done the past year. Incidentally, this recount of the books showed that there were 423 less books in the library on Dec. 31, 1912, than had been reported. Bulletins with lists of interesting books on the subjects have been made on Panama canal, Hallowe'en, Football, and others. A weekly article has been written for the educational page of the Quincy Daily Ledger and our thanks are due to the publishers of the same for this free publicity given the library. Special reading lists have been published on a variety of subjects: Birds, Gardening, Camping and scouting, Boat-building and boating, Resorts and historic places in Massachusetts, Business, Labor, Amusements, Municipal government. The Quarterly Index and special lists have been mailed or distributed in outlying sections. A much needed aid in the use of the card catalogue of the Main hall has been supplied by a set of 5,000 guide cards, and 500 have also been filed in the card catalogue of the Children's room. The schedules are also made out by the head of the catalogue department, and on account of the many changes on the staff, new apprentices, and sickness, there have had to be frequent changes of schedules, a real tax in itself to so dovetail all that nothing too important shall be neglected when the workers have been too few.

Of the books recommended for purchase by the library, many of them technical books, 151 have been bought. Only 13 suggested were not added by the book committee for various reasons—out of print—too expensive—too special, etc. Magazine articles are often found of use in reference work, and those periodicals which the library has have been checked in red ink in the Readers' Guide, Poole's Index, and the American Library Annual.

The new reading room at Atlantic has justified our expectations from the start, and I wish to express my extreme satisfaction with Miss Saville's results. Both she and I believe that the difficulties of discipline would be lessened on the one hand, and the use by and enjoyment of the adult patrons would be increased on the other, if we could have a room much better adapted for the purpose than these two rooms of a private house, attractive as they are. In short, in a year the reading room has outgrown its capacity. And I therefore hope that early in the coming year steps will be taken towards a different housing of our second Branch reading room. Aside from the expense of moving, the cost would still be no more or not as great as that at West Quincy with its rent and care, if plans, for sometime in the air, could be brought down to earth.

A story hour has been started at the Atlantic reading room and bulletins with lists have been made. Both have not failed of worth and appreciation. The deposit of books is now only 700 and must be increased. An average number of 90 has been exchanged monthly, and 803 have been sent on request from the Central library. With the help of a young assistant, the mending of 1,371 books and 419 periodicals has kept the collection in good condition.

In May we received a most useful and greatly appreciated gift from the Literature Committee of the Quincy Women's Club, who presented the Library with an opaque projector known as the Balopticon, manufactured by the Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., of Rochester, N. Y., whose lenses are of the best. The instrument was connected for use at the West Quincy reading room and a demonstration followed. Four illustrated talks have been given on the closed evening of the week. Our thanks are due to the Reverend Richard E. Armstrong for the lecture on the Philippine Islands. With the children this instructive entertainment has quite overshadowed the story hour, and one of the picture talks had an audience of 200 young enthusiasts.

A glance at the regular work of this reading room shows that the deposit of books from the Central library, having been increased this year by 300, now numbers 1,100 volumes. An average of 94 has been exchanged monthly. The circulation figures show that in every month of each succeeding year since the opening of the reading room, July 1910, there has been an increase over the corresponding month of the previous year. Miss Wainwright seems to think that a proportionate increase can no longer be hoped for unless the Central library is enabled to expend from its supply more for the enlarging of the usefulness and widening of the influence of this very greatly appreciated reading room in this section. Hence, the necessity for more books. The fiction output in the large increase here the past year has dropped 2 per cent. Mounted colored pictures are largely used, reference work has increased, and co-operation with both teachers and pupils is a large factor of the reading room's varied and valuable activities. Miss Gertrude Callahan, assistant here, having given her time in the summer to training at the Central, broadened by the experience at the Branch, is becoming more and more useful. The expense of maintenance of this reading room the past year has increased to $1,344.60 from $1,248.61 in 1912. More money has been paid for assistance; one of the large awnings had to be replaced; a table and chairs for the little children, and a much needed stand for the Balopticon have been purchased.

An expense account of the two reading rooms has been kept by Miss Baxter through the year. Also an order list, showing date, cost, and source of all library supplies.

In April, Miss Camp resigned to take charge of the Wellesley Free Library at a much larger salary. Miss Barker was put in charge of the desk and we struggled through the vacation time, doubly short-handed with Miss Saville and two apprentices, Miss Hyland and Miss Ford, taking the Simmons College summer course in library science. On Oct. 1, Miss Morrison resigned to be married after three years of such faithful, valuable work as to leave her absence sorely felt on the library staff. Then Miss Hibbard who had had charge of the children's room since its opening in June, 1908, left for Schenectady, N. Y., where she is employed as assistant to the librarian of Union College. Miss Ford, owing to illness in the family, was very irregular at the close of the year, and after being put in charge of the children's room in November, felt obliged to resign on Dec. 31. Miss Ina E. Brackett, a graduate of the Simmons College summer class of 1911, has begun upon her duties in charge of this room. Miss Hyland was added to the staff in September and Miss Helen L. Follansbee of Amesbury in November.

With the opening of the library 12 hours a day in September the hours of the staff were reduced one hour, to 42 per week. Thus we began the fall with more hours open to the public's demands and less assistants to meet it; more circulation; more reference work.

Notwithstanding the hard luck in the children's room at the close of the year, its increase of circulation is to be noted. A guessing contest on authors and books by means of pictures on the bulletin board, was held in the room by Miss Hibbard and Miss Eleanor Whittemore, which may account for some of the increase. A special list of stories for older girls was made, and ten sets of pretty colored post cards "Little phostint journeys" were added to the mounted picture collection.

For its restoration to its original charm of coloring, its new bulletin boards on the pillars in time for the attractive Christmas pictures, the librarian voices the thanks of herself and our most critical patrons, the children, and wishes also to express appreciation of the bright light at the entrance of the Main hall.

We have received the usual number of Library Art Club pictures for exhibition, and the gallery has been more frequently visited this year owing to the publicity given the exhibits by our newspaper articles.

Through the Inter-library loan system our patrons have had the use of 12 volumes from the Boston Public Library, and we ourselves have loaned books to the public libraries of Braintree, Milton, and Belfast, Maine. It is a matter for rejoicing that libraries will on March 16 be able to exchange their books by parcel post.

It was with much pleasure that the Librarian attended the Massachusetts Library Club meeting at Williamstown, and also with two assistants attended the meeting at Medford and with two others the one at Brockton.

There has come the call for books in the Spanish language. Our Italian readers come, both here and at West Quincy, and read the meagre supply we have to offer them of books in their own language, and then go again because we cannot afford to buy more books. Just at this writing comes a letter from the new director of work with foreigners, appointed by the Massachusetts Free Library Commission, who, knowing our great need for work along this line, offers the loan of some 50 or more Italian books for six months. We certainly hope to be able to buy some to eke out our scanty supply for the rest of the year.

In thus trying to show what we have done with the appropriation granted us by the city, less by $622.43 than your Honorable Board asked, what has suffered? It cost $951.56 to maintain the Atlantic reading room for 1913. Subtracting $595.58.—the item with which my report began,—namely, the amount given to support the Atlantic reading room, we have a difference of $355.98. That money has been needed for books—every cent of it. Books in duplicate for the High school, that one copy may be reserved for their use and that other readers may not be unfairly treated in thus not being able to have enough copies of standard novels. One or the other must go away unsatisfied. Which? Books for the children's room especially, for which only a paltry 312 have been bought this past year; for this department is the one which has suffered most for books. The children's room is where the grade teachers find their supply for the schools; where two Branches now instead of one make large and ever larger demands for their increasing juvenile circulation. Books for the Italian readers and those who would be readers. This year we bought 347 less books than last year. This year we spent $350.03 of the city appropriation less for books than last year. The figures practically tally with the above ($355.98), which seems to show that which I submitted, namely; that the increase for expenses appropriated over the amount in 1912, having to be taken to maintain the Atlantic reading room, would leave us short of money for our regular needed living expenses. For we cannot supply live Branches if we do not have the wherewithal; and it is books, books for which I continually hear the call from inside as well as from the public.

In closing my report, two things I reiterate, as stated in my last report—the need of more books and of increased salaries. Efficiency is coming to be the word par excellence of the 20th century. Perhaps the word is overdone, but certain it is that we cannot keep efficient workers on meagre salaries.

The ideal, as held forth to the least apprentice, is that in the two words—for service. Severe as have been the losses of the staff, to the cheerful, willing helpers who have remained or who have come to us, my thanks are due for whatever we have accomplished during the past year which, without doubt, has been the busiest year of the library's existence.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Two excellent books on Germany have recently been added to the Thomas Crane Public Library. The first, "Germany and the Germans from an American point of view," by Price Collier, made its appearance originally as a series of articles in Scribner's Magazine. It presents a graphic picture of present day men, institutions, social and national characteristics of Germany. "The essays are brilliantly written," says one reviewer, "stimulating, shrewd and just." The author believes Germany is a non-progressive nation, under the heel of bureaucracy and militarism.

While Collier's book takes up the country from an economic standpoint, Henri Lichtenberger's "Germany and its evolution in modern times" traces historically development along not only the economic and political lines, but includes religion, philosophy and art since the Middle Ages. The points of similarity and difference in the American and Continental attitudes toward the much discussed German question will prove interesting to all students of this subject.

In this day of fads and fancies in household management, it is rather pleasant to find a really sensible cook book, which gives practical recipes, both from the point of expense and time of preparation, which may add variety to the "three meals a day" problem. The "Round-the-world-cook book," by Mrs. Mary Louise Hoyt Barroll, it just such a book. The author, the wife of a naval officer, has collected here 600 tested recipes, "gleaned from many sources in many lands," and from famous cook books of New England and the South in our own country. The second part of the book has chapters on the removal of stains, care of furniture, and rules for making simple toilet preparations.

A second interesting cook book which is now ready for circulation is by Caroline French Benton. In "Easy meals" she suggests menus for each day in each season, following them with explicit directions for preparing the dishes mentioned in the most economical and easiest ways. The index of the book is an excellent feature, as the recipes are classed as well as alphabeted.

Anyone who enjoys candy making will find many new ideas for both simple and elaborate sweets in Marion H. Neil's "Candies and bon-bons and how to make them."

For men and boys who enjoy thrilling tales of adventure, another of our recently added books will have a particular interest. William Stone Booth has edited a collection of adventure stories, many of them personal narratives, under the title, "Winderful escapes by Americans" The stories selected deal with Indian rescues, war-prison escapes, fires, floods and shipwrecks, and are not only decidedly interesting but well written as well.

These books are placed with other new non-fiction in the outside case at the right of the loan desk.

is disclosed. The final act is in Miss Judkins sitting room where Mullinsville learns o fthe happy culmination.

In the title part of Rev. Mr. Underwood. George E. Brown carried off the honors. His role called for varying attitudes and was well carried out. Mr. Brown will be remembered for creating the minstrel character of George Skalem several years ago.

Axel G. Nelson carried off Gregory Heath the gentleman villain with great finesse. His part called at times for a touch of the well known brand of melodrama and Mr. Nelson always arose to the occasion.

In Jud Pardoe, Charles T. Baker faithfully portrayed a criminal of the rougher type. In his conception Mr. Baker created probably the most loathsome and at the same time the most picturesque character of the production.

As Deacon Potter "very deef," and Timothy Hodd, an inveterate whittler, Jesse I. Litchfield and Roy C. Baker created no end of laughter as rival suitors for the hand of Jerusha Jane Judkins the village postmistress.

William Henry and Tom Sparrow were ardent youthful admirers of Roxy. Charles E. Barker took former and C. W. Estes the latter part. Mr. Estes stutter was one that would be difficult to duplicate.

Clifton H. Baker was Mr. Tilkins, a policeman, silent but whose presence spoke volumes. Mr. G. Ernest Carr took the part of Fanny, Miss Burleigh's maid.

As Helen Burleigh, the heiress, Mrs. Helen Baker was an attractive heroine and was all that the part called for.

Mrs. Alice Oldham took the part of Miss Judkins the village postmistress and was as buxom and quaint a character as could be desired.

As Granny Grimes, the old hag pressed down by temptation and poverty, Mrs. Jane Litchfield proved an actress of no mean ability and her interpretation was realism itself.

The vestry was packed with an appreciative audience that repeatedly interrupted the performance with applause.

BIG VICTORY FOR QUINCY

Cambridge Juniors Defeated by Employed Boys

The claimants of the Junior championship of Greater Boston received a severe set-back Wednesday night when the Quincy Employed Boys second team defeated them by the overwhelming score of 42 to 13. This makes but 5 lost out of 22 games played by the Cambridge team and the Quincy boys have the honor of having defeated them twice.

For Quincy, John Osberg was the star player, making 12 goals from the floor and also shooting one foul. Joe Robertson and John McNeil did fine work as forwards for Quincy and the backs shut out the visitors forwards without a score. McDonald who played center for the Cambridge team made all of their points, scoring 6 goals from the floor and one foul point.

DICKENS' ROMANCE.

His Early Love, Who Jilted Him, and Her Pathetic End.

The story of how Charles Dickens was jilted is particularly interesting. When he was eighteen Dickens became acquainted with the three daughters of George Beadnell, a Lombard street banker. With one of them, Maria (the original of Dora in "David Copperfield"), who was a year his senior, he immediately fell in love, and Maria flirted with him very desperately. But the love making of the future novelist was not treated very seriously, for he was not considered by any means an eligible party, and even Maria herself adopted an attitude of amused tolerance.

For three years the affair went on, and then Dickens realized that his case was hopeless. He pleaded in vain with the girl, whose caprices maddened and gladdened him alternately, for, as a matter of fact, Maria Beadnell was a willful coquette. The end of it all was a reply that held out no hope, and so the parting came. For twenty years they saw no more of one another.

Ultimately Maria Beadnell was married to Henry Louis Winter, and when Dickens met her again time had wrought sad havoc on his youthful ideal. Mrs. Winter wrote to her old lover, but Dickens did not care to renew a correspondence with his old sweetheart. Then Mr. Winter failed, and the chagrined wife appealed to the lover of her girlhood for help, but without avail, and the romance ended long before the death of Dickens in 1870.—Exchange.

THE LADY EXPLAINED.

Then He Probably Smiled, but It Must Have Been a Sickly Effort.

A woman with fifteen bundles boarded the street car the other afternoon when I was on my way to my suburban residence. She was a very pretty young woman. I felt sorry for her. She was returning from a shopping tour. Being a man with a kind heart, I helped her upon the car and piled her bundles about her. A man got on at the same time and took a seat on the other side of the young lady.

When the car came to my street I was surprised to see her rise and begin to pick up her bundles. Instantly my sense of chivalry prompted me to help her off the car, and, as I was going in the same direction, I asked permission to carry her fifteen bundles. The man got off also and started on ahead.

I was loaded down like a camel crossing the desert. In those packages she had everything from an electric flatiron to a five pound bag of prunes. We trudged along about a half mile. The man turned in at a gate.

When we reached this gate the young lady thanked me and said: "This is as far as I go. I live here. Thank you very much."

"But the man ahead of us, the man who came out on the car with us, turned in here too."

"Yes," she said. "He is my husband, but he hates to carry packages through the street."—Brooklyn Eagle.

NORTHWESTERN COACH.

Fred J. Murphy Will Run Athletic Affairs at University.

Fred J. Murphy, Yale, 1910, has been appointed football coach at Northwestern university to succeed Denis Grady.

Murphy lives in New York city and has assisted every year in the coaching at Yale, being field coach in 1911 and advisory coach since that time. His work at Northwestern will be continuous throughout the collegiate year. The contract is for three years.

Murphy's experience in football has been thorough. In 1905 he played left halfback on the Yale varsity. Yale winning all their Harvard and Princeton games during that time, except the Harvard game of 1908, which the Crimson won, 4 to 0.

Gainer Signs With Tigers.

Del Gainer, first baseman of the Detroit Tigers, who has been holding out for more salary, has signed a three year contract with President Navin. Gainer is said to have turned down a federal league offer of $20,000 for the same period.

English Boat Race.

The seventy-first annual boat race of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge has been scheduled to take place on Saturday, March 28.

CANING THE CULPRIT.

The Marks It Leaves Look Worse Than the Whaling Feels.

In a London police court recently a teacher in a public school was prosecuted for assaulting a pupil by caning him. The magistrate decided that he had not used undue violence and therefore discharged the master.

In this case the father of the boy who had been caned took him to a physician on the evening of the day of his castigation and this doctor found about fifteen wheals on the lad's back. This was evidence of severe punishment, but the magistrate considered it was not too severe for the offense which had caused it, and said that parents had formed an exaggerated opinion of the amount of force that had been used.

Commenting on this the London Lancet says:

"A blow from a cane causes at the time an appreciable amount of pain (which, by the way, is what it is intended to do), but it leaves behind a mark quite out of proportion in its formidable character to the amount of suffering which it causes after the first sting has been endured. If any one doubts this, having perhaps avoided the opportunity to observe it in the course of an exemplary boyhood, the experiment is easily made. Any small boy will be willing to do his share by inflicting upon the seeker after truth a sharp cut or two, the results of which will no doubt be distinctly felt for a time, but only for about an hour, while there will be visible on the well protected and tender skin of the back for some days wheals which would harrow the heart of any mother."

In other words, a boy's back after a caning looks far worse than it feels.

HARDY TUSCAN WOMEN.

One Vigorous Old Dame Who Acted as a Mountain Guide.

Illustrative of the hardiness of women in Tuscany, Sir Francis Vane relates in "Walks and People in Tuscany" the experiences of two Englishmen who were traveling in Italy and who appealed to a village innkeeper for a trustworthy guide to conduct them over the pass between the mountains of Rondinajo and Tre Potenze. To their surprise an old woman appeared and announced that she had come to make arrangements for the journey. They concluded she must be the mother of their guide.

"What was our amazement to learn that this elderly dame was our destined leader, and indeed she was got up for the fray in long boots and short skirts.

"On we tramped, she always ahead, walking with a fine military swing which a lifeguardsman might have envied. The path was difficult and could not be used by vehicles. Our guide led us up the steep way which follows a small and rushing stream issuing from out the side of Rondinajo, and up it we ascended for an hour or more until the pass was reached.

"We here had the merciful intention of sending the old woman back, an intention, however, she very strongly opposed. It was only by allowing her to come some few miles farther on that we could induce her to leave us before she had seen us safely to the end of the journey."

Father and His Daughters.

The habits of a lifetime which began a generation or more ago, the habit of being a source of maintenance and the need of keeping in hand the means of maintenance, the habit of power and of keeping hold of the source of power, may make a man less than fair perhaps in dividing his acquisitions with his wife, but when it comes to the daughters whom he is going to leave in the world when he quits it he is all for securing to them as far as he can a full share of all that is worth having. Hardly can sex selfishness squeeze in between him and his girls. As between them and all males, he is for them. He wants them to lose no good thing that may lawfully be coming to them. He wants no man to bully them, no man to impose upon their generosity, no man to bring them to want, to sorrow or a hungry heart.—Edward S. Martin in Atlantic.

A Maker of Cripples.

Dr. Charlton Wallace once investigated with great care 400 cases of hip joint disease—tuberculosis of the hip. He found that of this number 70 per cent came of tuberculous families or had lived in houses where there had been known cases of active tuberculosis within a year. In both cases the explanation was the same—exposure to infection. When the tubercle germ cannot murder a victim it does its best to cripple him. The only safeguard is to make sure personally that your house does not harbor this greatest of human enemies.—Chicago Journal.

Inappreciative Man.

"You say you occasionally smoke one of your wife's birthday cigars?"

"Yes; I dug 'em up the other day, and they are a great help in my present situation."

"What is that?"

"I am trying to quit smoking for good."—Albany Knickerbocker Press.

Courtesy at the Pawnshop.

"You go first, Frau Meier. I can wait."

"Thanks. I'd have you know I'm in no more hurry for my money than you."—Fliegende Blatter.

Real Ability.

"What is the secret of success?" asked the fool.

"The ability to conceal your lack of ability," replied the sage.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

SPORT NEWS

Harvey Hintze and Mickey McKee are trailing Paul Poehler and Archie Walsh for a 20 string match. It will be arranged to take place in two weeks.

Once again the scene of battle has changed for the N. E. A. A. A. U. league basket ball games between Quincy A. A. and St. Alphonsus. Tonight the game will be played in Faxon hall. If the first team beats the visitors they will be the leaders, and unless some untoward incident arises to slow up the fast working second team they will be victorious. Both Quincy teams and the majority of the sporting public realizes that the St. Alphonsus aggregations are hard nuts to crack and that they have strength experience and vitality to withstand a fearful onslaught. Quincy is prepared however, and if in these games, as in the recent ones between the fives in Hibernian hall, any rough tactics are adopted the most spectacular contests in the history of the game in the city will ensue.

The Fall River Technical School will be the guests of Quincy High school on Friday afternoon and one of the best basket ball games of the season on the local court should result. The Fall Rivers claim all sorts of championships, and to back up their claim can show a record string of victories and few defeats. Teams that they have played against say that they measure up to all the basket ball standards of the year and with Quincy High demonstrating the caliber of basket ball they occasionally flash a rattling good game should result.

A special bowling match between a picked team from the Quincy council, Knights of Columbus league, and John Adams aerie, F. O. E., will roll in the All-city series at the City Square alleys Tuesday night. The match is the first of a series of post season contests which when they commence in earnest will furnish enough excitement to keep the fans running from one alley to another.

An amateur boxing tournament to be given in Faxon hall on the evening of March 16 has been announced by the Quincy A. A. Four classes will be included, 108, 115, 125 and 135 pounds.

By defeating the Davis class last week the Rand class of Wollaston took a clear lead in the Sunday School bowling league, and now have a mark of 87 per cent, having won 7 and lost 1 point. Their pinfall is 2347. The Davis class is in second place with an average of 37 per cent with 3 points won and 5 lost; pinfall 2162. The Makaria and Clark classes are tied for the third place with averages of 2505. Each team having won 1 point and lost 3. The pinfall of the Makaria is 1166 and that of the Clark Class is 1047. The match tomorrow night is between the Makaria and Clark classes and some classy bowling may be looked for, each team being determined to get out of last position.

☞George Kleine's glorious photo-drama production "Quo Vadis" which established a record run of six months at the Astor Theatre, New York City, has exercised a potent influence in all circles of society, religious and educational. Large theatre parties were formed from various schools and colleges and in several instances Sunday schools attended the performances in a body. The lessons taught by these wonderful pictures are both impressive and inspiring. Mr. Kleine's production which is the only bona fide and important production of Quo Vadis, is announced at Quincy Music Hall for 3 days beginning Monday March 2, with matinees daily at 2.30. How a Secret Was Obtained

By MARTHA MONROE

Two men met on the custom house wharf in Naples, where baggage was being transferred from a recently arrived ocean steamer.

"Good morning, Vincenzo," said one. "What are you doing here?"

Vincenzo Fabroni gave the other a look enjoining silence and led the way to a place where they would not be observed.

"Well, Giuseppe, I am trying to make an honest living carrying baggage. The truth is I am tired of a criminal life and wish to reform."

"But you have nothing to fear. Being a member of the Camorra, you are always sure of protection whatever you do."

"That may be, but I am not naturally a villain. I was made so by circumstances."

"Well, Vincenzo, I wish you success in your efforts to carry rich men's trunks for an occasional lira that you may make by doing so. As for me, I wish I had your opportunities in a membership of the Camorra."

"Why don't you join the society?"

"It won't have me. I have secret enemies among the members who keep me out. Nevertheless I have been reasonably successful without the Camorra's assistance. I have just steered an American tourist into the hands of bandits and shared in the ransom."

"I wish you would lend me some of it. I would like to set up a wineshop whereby to make a living."

"How much do you need?"

"Five hundred lire would start me."

Giuseppe Zarrella thought a few minutes, then said: "I need something you possess. You need something I possess. Suppose we make a trade. You wish money to set you up in business. I wish to be a member of the Camorra. I will give you all you require for your purpose. You give me a secret that will enable me to gain admission into the society."

"What secret?"

"Who murdered Di Guido?"

Vincenzo winced. "What good would it do you to know that?" he asked.

"It would open to me the doors of the Camorra. The police are straining every nerve to discover who committed that crime. Let me once intimate that I am in the secret and the Camorra will gladly admit me."

After some more talk Vincenzo said that he would think the matter over and would give his friend an answer on the steps of the sea wall at 9 o'clock the next evening. When they came together again Vincenzo said:

"Giuseppe, the risk I would run in giving you the information you wish—the risk of my life—is worth much more than 500 lire."

"How much is it worth?"

Giuseppe looked at the other, wondering how high a price he could put on his secret. Finally he said, "Could you give me 3,000 lire?"

"Yes, I will give you that. An admission to the Camorra would be worth that to me."

"Swear that you will divulge the secret to no one."

"How could I use it without divulging it?"

"I see. Swear that you will tell no one that I gave it to you."

"I swear to that."

"When will you make the trade?"

"Now. I came provided with the money."

Giuseppe took a roll of bills from his pocket, counted out 3,000 lire and put the rest back. With the money in his palm he clasped Vincenzo's hand. Vincenzo whispered the secret in his ear, the hands were unclasped, and the bills remained in Vincenzo's.

"Now, Vincenzo," said his friend, "I will tell you what to do. Report to the Camorra that you have made this money by robbery and expect an arrest, warning them to be ready to clear you. That will account for your having such an amount, and they need not suspect that I got my secret from you."

"That I will surely do."

A few days later Vincenzo reported that he had waylaid an Englishman on the heights back of the city and taken considerable money from him. He was promised that should he be arrested and tried members of the Camorra would be present at the trial and intimate by signs to the judge that if Vincenzo were convicted he (the judge) would be assassinated.

Within a week a man was arrested for the Di Guido murder. He remained in jail some time while the government was working up a case against him and taking steps for his conviction despite the threats of the Camorra. Meanwhile Vincenzo Fabroni opened his wineshop and was making, for him, a good living. One day a member of the national police walked by his shop several times and, when he saw it was empty, walked in. Fabroni stood looking at him with astonishment mingled with horror.

"Giuseppe!" he exclaimed or, rather, moaned.

"Don't be afraid," said the carabineer. "You are safe so far as the government is concerned. Serve me a liter of wine, and I will tell you something."

Vincenzo pulled himself together, brought the wine, and Giuseppe told him that he had bought his secret not to secure a membership in the Camorra, but to discover the murderer of Di Guido.

BOYS HELD FOR HEARING

Four Men In Watertown Turk Murder Case Are Discharged

Watertown, Mass., Feb. 26.—Nishan Aprahanian, 16, and Manoog Garabedian, 17, the two Armenian boys who, according to the Watertown police, confessed to the murder of Ishmayel Ismerly-Oghlo, a Turk, were arraigned before Judge Luce in court here on the murder charge. On the request of Assistant District Attorney O'Donnell their cases were continued one week for a hearing.

Four men who have beeen held by the police in connection with the killing of Ismerly-Oghlo were released by the court on the recommendation of the assistant district attorney.

The police declare the Aprahanian boy said to them before entering the court: "I'll tell the truth when I get on the stand."

When the case came on a large crowd thronged the courtroom, including about 100 Armenians from the Watertown colony.

QUARANTINE FOR SMOKERS

Voliva Prefers a Skunk to Users of Tobacco or Whiskey

Zion City, Ills., Feb. 26—A national campaign against the use of tobacco will be started in Zion City, Overseer Voliva of the Dowdite colony announced, commenting on the decision of the supreme court, which held smoking one of man's constitutional liberties and declared the Zion City ordinance prohibiting it unconstitutional.

"Any man who undertakes to smoke in this town," said Voliva, "will find hell a cold storage house compared with Zion City. We will quarantine every smoker in the city.

"If I had to sleep with a man who drinks whiskey or one who chews tobacco, I would take the whiskey drinker every time. I would sleep with a skunk in preference to either."

MACHINE CLOGGED BY WOMEN'S VOTES

Ten Democratic Candidates at Chicago Are Ousted

Chicago, Feb. 26.—Although but 30 percent of the women whose names were on the poll books voted in the primaries, it was seen that a monkey wrench had been hurled into the machinery of organized politics of Chicago.

The 47,529 women who voted were instrumental in ousting ten Democratic candidates for aldermen who sought re-election.

Of the nine women candidates for places on the ballot, seven, unopposed, were successful. Miss Marion Drake, Progressive, First ward, will oppose "Bathhouse" John Coughlin, Democratic ward boss, in the April election.

PUPIL OF WOMAN FAGIN?

Boston Police Arrest Young Girl For Picking Pockets

Boston, Feb. 26.—Boston is being raked by the police for a female Fagin who has been teaching little girls to thieve.

The officers, who have been looking about in a quiet way for some time for a West End woman through whose agency many small girls, too young to hold, have recently got into trouble, they claim, were stimulated to greater activity after the arrest of 12-year-old Jennie Desalvo, charged with stealing the pocketbook of Mrs. John DeJong in a department store.

The little girl operated with all the skill of a trained criminal. It was only by luck she was caught by Officer Carey. She had been previously arrested for stealing.

Total of $104,000,000 on Deposit In New Hampshire Banks

Concord, N. H., Feb. 26.—Deposits in New Hampshire savings banks increased $5,000,000 in 1913, reaching a total of $104,000,000, according to the annual report of the state banking department.

Three and a half millions were paid in dividends at an average rate of 3.61 percent, a decrease from the previous year of .01 percent.

An increase of almost $2,000,000 in mortgage loans on New Hampshire real estate is the principal feature of the returns of investments.

NORRIS PLAN IS REJECTED

Senate Acts on New England Railroad Situation

CONDUCT EXPLAINED BY LODGE

Taking Over of Boston and Maine Stock by the New Haven Was In Accordance With Law—No Contract Possible by Attorney General—Vote Is 32 to 23 to Lay on Table

Washington, Feb. 26.—By a vote of 32 to 23, the senate tabled the Norris resolution requiring the department of justice to inform the senate of the exact negotiations with the New Haven railroad in its reorganization and whether any exemptions were being granted. The only New England senator to vote for the Norris plan was Hollis of New Hampshire.

Senator Lodge addressed the senate on the resolution. He agreed with Senator Norris, he said, that the senate cannot look to the resolution for any information. Whatever its purpose, it will have a very bad effect on what the attorney general and the governors of New England are trying to bring about. The attorney general cannot enter into any "contract" with anybody.

The situation of the Boston and Maine is totally different from that of the New Haven. It is not conceded that the taking over of the Boston and Maine stock was a "lawless" proceeding. It was taken over under the laws of Massachusetts. The Boston and Maine is not suffering from buying up other properties, as is the New Haven. It has no debt. It has been starved and, in the parliance of the street, "skinned." Mr. Tuttle, the former president, repeatedly asked for improvements which were refused.

Senator Gallinger here interjected that the Boston and Maine had suffered also from unwise leases made long ago.

To Senator Works Lodge replied that he did not know the nature of the arrangement pending between the New Haven and the Boston and Maine—the vital question is the board of trustees. Works remarked that he never had any idea that the attorney general had authority to contract as to the future management of the road.

Norris inquired how long the Boston and Maine stock had been held by the New Haven; had not the "skinning" taken place since this stock was acquired?

"No," retorted Lodge, "the New Haven, whatever its faults, spent a great deal of money on the Boston and Maine."

Lodge described the improvements briefly, and said his personal belief is that if the road can be placed in good hands in two or three years it can be placed on a paying basis. Lodge said he never owned a share of Boston and Maine or New Haven. "I am interested only because this matter is vital to New England," he said.

HEINZE SUES MORSE

Brings Action to Recover Nearly $600,000 With Interest

New York, Feb. 26.—F. A Heinze obtained a supreme court order permitting him to serve summonses on Charles W. Morse in an action to recover $597,257 from him with interest from Jan. 8, 1909. He and Morse both figured in the failure of banks after the financial panic of 1907. Morse went to prison and was pardoned.

The complaint sets forth that on or about Jan. 8, 1908, an account was started between the pair and that when it was balanced, Morse owed Heinze the amount now sued for. The complaint says Morse agreed to pay this.

SAM'S NEGRO KINGDOM

Great Britain Wants to Know Something About the Proposition

Washington, Feb. 26.—At the request of the British government, the state department has asked the department of justice to inquire into the proposed establishment of a negro kingdom on the Gold Coast of Africa by Chief Sam of Oklahoma.

An investigation will be made, although it is believed the American government can take no action to prevent the emigration of negroes.

The British officials suggested that Sam and his followers might find the Gold Coast unsuitable for their kingdom.

STEAMER LINGAN SAFE

Collier Thought to Have Been Lost Was Held Up at Sea

Halifax, Feb. 26.—The Dominion Coal company's steamer Lingan, with forty men aboard, which it was feared had been lost in the ice off this coast, has arrived at Louisburg.

BOSTON SLEUTHS ARE SENT TO JAIL

Man and Woman Tried to Defraud Taxicab Company

New York, Feb. 26.—Nellie G. Guertin and J. A. Patron, private detectives of Boston, were given prison sentences by Judge Thomas here following their conviction of perjury and conspiracy in an effort to collect $75,000 damages from a taxicab company here. Patron was sentenced to serve one year on Blackwell's island. Miss Guertin was given a sentence of eight months.

Patron bitterly attacked Dr. Richard Wynne of Boston, who told the story of Miss Guertin having an old wen on her head opened that it might appear she had been seriously injured.

Wynne was indicted with Patron and Miss Guertin, but turned state's evidence. Patron sought to assume all responsibility and begged that Miss Guertin be shown clemency.

MAY BAR THAW "MOVIES"

Talk of Injunction Against Film Taken In Concord Court

Concord, N. H., Feb. 26.—It is understood that a federal injunction may be issued to prevent Hal Reid from exhibiting in any portion of the country the film which he took in the United States courtroom in this city during the recent Thaw hearing.

To various persons Reid confided that the film was to be included in a feature entitled "Thaw's Last Stand." To others, he related that the canned drama was to be labelled "The Man Hunt," but according to Clerk of Court Hodgman and United States Marshal Nute, Reid stated that he was acting solely for the government at Washington, and he presented communications from persons in Washington of high authority.

Judge Arrests Witness For Prosecution In Perjury Case

Chicago, Feb. 26.—Edwin H. Deuter, a witness for the prosecution in the perjury trial of Miss Aileen Heppner, was ordered taken to the county jail and held on a charge of perjury.

Judge McDonald, after hearing Deuter testify that he had borne false witness against Clarence S. Funk in the alienation suit of John C. Henning, ordered a deputy sheriff to arrest the witness.

Deuter said he had sworn falsely to serving drinks to Funk and Mrs. Henning, whereas he had never seen either of them.

CONDUCTOR NOT GUILTY

A charge of assault, preferred against Lewis Malnati, a conductor on the Bay State Street Railway, by Lewis Pantelli, known in all parts of the city as "Lewie, the peanut man" was dismissed by Judge Albert E. Avery this morning after the complainant and several witnesses testified.

Pantelli, according to his testimony, was put off a car in City Square Thursday evening by Malnati, although he said he was willing to pay his fare. One witness testified that he had refused to pay his fare, and two others said that he was escorted to the door only after he had used profane and indecent language on at least two occasions. All witnesses agreed in their testimony that no undue force was used.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Mayor to Appear Against the Squantum Petition

Commissioner Brown had a narrow escape from a bad accident Wednesday afternoon on School street. He was riding through the street in his automobile and turned out to let a street car pass. As his auto reached the side of the street his engine suddenly became stalled. At first he thought that the wheel had sunk into a hole in the snow. Getting out to make an examination he found that one of the axles had broken off short, letting the side of the auto drop into the street. Had his car been going at any speed when the axle broke, a bad accident would have resulted with probable injuries to the Commisioner The damaged car was taken to a garage for repairs.

City Solicitor Walter S. Pinkham had an unusual experience this morning when for the first time in his life he signed his name to a pay roll and drew a salary. When the City Solicitor was graduated from college he immediately opened a law office and has never had that pleasant feeling of walking up and signing a pay roll and drawing a salary until this morning. However, when he signed the pay roll in the City Treasurer's office this morning and drew his first month's salary as City Solicitor, it was with a firm hand, and he appeared like a veteran at the business. He also remarked that it was a very pleasant occupation and he would not mind doing it every day.

A hearing is to be held at the State House Friday morning on the petition of the residents of Squantum that it be annexed to the City of Boston. While the general impression gained from similar hearings already held, particularly that of the town of Revere is that the petitioners will be given leave to withdraw, Mayor Miller and City Solicitor Pinkham will attend the hearing in opposition to the bill.

The Mayor attended a meeting Wednesday of the trustees having in charge the building of the new bridge over the Neponset river on Granite avenue. At this meeting bids were opened for the superstructure and later the bid was awarded to the Boston Bridge Co. for $20,200. The contract for the foundation, which is now nearly completed was for $35,000. Added to this was the sum of $3,000 which the trustees were obliged to pay as royalty to a Chicago firm for the design of the bridge used. The trustees are very much pleased with Wednesday's bids as it assures the trustees that the structure will be completed within the amount authorized by the act of the legislature for the bridge. This amount was $70,000.

ELIAS LIVENDALE.

Elias Livendale, formerly of Quincy, died this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Antone Thompson of Jamaica Plain, after an illness of some weeks' duration, due largely to advancing age. Mr. Livendale was 82 years of age, and has made his home with his daughter for some time past. In addition to a daughter he leaves a son who resides in the west. The body will be brought to Quincy and services will be held at the Swedish M. E. church.

The second of a series of private dancing parties was given in Colonial hall Wednesday evening with many guests present from Quincy and Milton. The matrons were Mrs. Fred Drake and Mrs. Annie Betts.

The Ladies Sewing circle of the Swedish Luthern church met this afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. O. Johnson on Newbury avenue, Atlantic, and the Young People Luther league of the church will meet there this evening.

Elva M. Jewell of Cambridge and John A. McKinnon of Somerville were married Wednesday night by Rev. A. M. Thompson, pastor of the St. Andrews church of Boston, at the home of Rev. Mr. Thompson at 198 Whitwell street. The couple are members of his church.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Delorey of 143 Arlington street and Walter H. Bradley were married Tuesday evening at the Sacred Heart parish house bp Rev. Fr. J. P. Cuffe, pastor. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick H. Bradley of Garfield street. Mr. and Mrs. Bradley will live in this city.

The funeral of Mrs. Jane Caven, who died suddenly Tuesday, was held this morning from her home at 42 Grove street. There was a large attendance of long time friends and a profusion of floral rememberances. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. Mary's church by Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy. The Gregorian chant was sung by the regular choir. Burial was in Mt. Mary's cemetery.

Muscular Christianity.

Muscular Christianity found an exponent in the curate of an English diocese of whom James Bryce tells in his "Studies In Contemporary Biography." He "had once, under the greatest provocation, knocked down a person who had insulted him, and the bishop wrote him a letter of reproof, pointing out, among other things, that, exposed as the Church of England was to much criticism on all hands, her ministers ought to be very careful in their demeanor. The offender replied by saying, 'I must regret that, being grossly insulted and forgetting in the heat of the moment the critical position of the Church of England, I did knock the man down.'" The bishop—it was Fraser of Manchester—retaliated by asking the curate to dinner.

Indian Caricature.

Humor is more or less a secular enjoyment, and its suggestion in pictorial art therefore necessarily has a secular significance. And as the chief motive of Indian art was religious expression, secularism in the form of caricature was never very much emphasized. But this aspect, though not very frequently represented, was not entirely absent in Indian art. Even the oldest records of Indian painting bear evidence to the fact that the sense of ridicule or satire was not altogether divorced from the canons of art of those times.—Calcutta Modern Review.

Lille and Its Pictures.

Lille, according to a writer in the London Academy, is one of the few uninteresting towns of France. He went there "obstinate in the belief that no town in France with over 200,000 inhabitants could be entirely without interest," but finally "fled to the station, defeated, and took train for Laon." In justice, however, the critic makes the considerable admission that "Lille has perhaps the finest collection of pictures in France outside Paris."

ESMERALDA AT WOLLASTON

Miss Irene Bewley Delights a Large Audience

The dramatic reading of "Esmeralda," a four-act comedy, by Miss Irene Bewley, impersonator, attracted a large audience to the Wollaston Methodist church, Wednesday evening.

The affair was given under the auspices of a committee of ladies headed by Mrs. H. B. L. Dimmick which comprises one of the four groups into which the Ladies' Aid Society is divided this year for the purpose of raising money.

Miss Bewley opened her program with two shorter readings, one entitled "Angela on the missionary society," a bright juvenile piece and a monologue which burlesqued the manner in which a woman purchases a hat.

The reading of "Esmeralda" called for the impersonation of nine widely varying characters and in each of the roles, Miss Bewley was all that could be desired.

The production was in four acts, the first opening on the farm of Mr. Rogers Esmeralda's father, in North Carolina. A vein of iron ore is discovered there by speculators. Dave Hardy, Esmeralda's lover, suspects and discovers their scheme.

The farm is purchased to be run on shares. Mrs. Rogers has high social aspirations now that she has become possessed of wealth and Esmeralda is separated from her country lover.

Act two opens in Paris where Mrs. Rogers' money has given her some distinction. Mr. Rogers and Esmeralda are forced into society, much to the former's discomfort. Mrs. Rogers favors the Marquis as Esmeralda's suitor.

Act Three takes place at the Rogers' mansion, where Mrs. Rogers is giving a ball. Esmeralda hears that Dave is in Paris and she defies her mother and the Marquis.

Jack Desmond's studio in Paris is the closing scene. Word is received that the vein of ore has worked out and the Marquis retires. Mr. Rogers "stands up agin mother" and she is subdued. Dave and Esmeralda meet and as Mr. Rogers says, "things come out more evener."

Between the various acts Mrs. Myra Safford Goodwin contributed vocal solos. Her selections included "The white throat" by Aspinall, "The dove" a Tuscany folk song, "Hymn to the night" by C. Tipton, "A Madrigal" by Harris, "Her rose" by Coombs.

BOX ALARM AND TWO STILLS

All the Fires Were Slight With Little Damage

The alarm from Box 173 at 10.18 this morning was for a slight fire in the house of Henry Clayman at 50 Main street. The fire was caused by some clothing that hung near the kitchen stove taking fire. The loss was slight.

The West Quincy apparatus responded to a still alarm Wednesday afternoon for a chimney fire at the wet wash laundry of Johnson & Perry on Copeland street. No damage.

In the early evening the same apparatus responded to a still alarm for a fire in the laundry of Su Long at Brewers Corner. A sewer pipe in the laundry froze up and Su was trying to thaw it out with a torch when he set fire to the woodwork. The damage was slight.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A large party of young people tendered Miss Dorothy Myatt a surprise party Tuesday evening at her home, 40 Baxter street. During the evening William Baker presented Miss Dorothy in behalf of those present with a handsome gold ring. Games of various kinds were played during the evening and refreshments were served. Miss Catherine Murrah presided at piano and Miss Myatt, hostess rendered several vocal selections. The committee in charge of the evening were Miss Catherine Murrah and Francis Myatt.

THE YOUNG LADY REPORTER

Wonders Why Men Are at Head of City Departments

Why Mayor Miller did not appoint at least one woman to office?

Why women, who own most of the property in Quincy, do not have a representative on the Board of Assessors?

Why the poll tax on bachelors is so small?

If women held the offices at City Hall instead of men, if Chief Burrell would not be obliged to have a squad of officers on hand all the time to prevent some bachelor running away with some of the pretty women?

If women had the privilege of voting how many women in Quincy would take advantage of the opportunity to exercise this franchise?

If women held the city offices if they would have eligible young men as their clerks?

Would they flirt with these same young men or attend strictly to business?

If it would not be a little embarrassing at times for these same women officials?

If a woman could control an unruly City Council as well as Joe Whiton does?

If they would invite the men clerks to the Saturday afternoon dinner and theatre parties?

If they would insist that their young men clerks report for duty every morning promptly at 8 o'clock?

If they would not prohibit men going about City Hall with sneakers on so that their approach might be noted?

What will eventually happen to that chair in the Overseer of Poor's office if Perry Green does not have it enlarged?

What will happen if Gus Bates boosts the valuation of certain estates to the linit, as rumored?

Why it is that men will take a city job for much less salary than they can earn at their own business?

If Joe Whiton becomes a candidate for Mayor next fall will it be as a Democrat, Republican or Progressive?

Why it is that when a man like Chief Billings passes with a handsome uniform on, all the women turn around to look at him?

If a woman reporter in answering a midnight fire alarm would take the time necessary to fix her hair so that it would be presentable or if she would respond to the alarm with her golden hair hanging down her back?

Why it is that City Messenger Tirrell always wears a happy smile when he opens the magic door to the Mayor's office to admit some visitor?

If a woman in his position would be as diplomatic and keep the many City Hall secrets inviolate as he does??

Often do the people hear the spokesmen of this country oppose socialism, but now there is an opportunity for them to hear socialism expounded by a socialist.

NANTUCKET ICE BOUND.

The steamer Sankaty, built at Quincy for the Woods Hole steamship company, especially for winter work through the ice, made two attempts Wednesday to break through the ice at Nantucket, to make her trip to New Bedford. She encountered the heaviest ice pack of the winter and after two attempts was obliged to put back to Nantucket. She will probably be tied up for several days by the ice field.

BOSTON OPPOSED TO BOSTON PETITION

Says Neponset Bridge Is Not Unsafe and Objects to Proposed Assessment

Quincy Legislators Were Recorded in Favor

(Special from State House.)

That the city of Boston is unalterably opposed to the reconstruction of the Neponset bridge was again made manifest Thursday at the hearing of another bridge proposition by the legislative committee on roads and bridges, on petition of Dorchester members of the Legislature.

Further opposition to the proposition was raised by the Bay State Street Railway Company through its counsel, James F. Jackson.

The hearing Thursday was confined to the bill presented by Senator Francis J. Horgan of Boston. This bill provides substantially the same improvements contained in the bills previously heard by the committee. There is, however, the provision that the city of Boston shall pay forty-five percent of the total cost. Quincy would pay twenty-five percent and the county of Norfolk five percent, a total of seventy-five percent. Further provision is made that the State should bear five percent of the burden and any street railway companies operating upon the bridge would pay fifteen percent.

Corporation Counsel John A. Sullivan, appearing for the city of Boston, said that this bill is fifteen percent worse, from Boston's viewpoint, than the other bills that have been presented. "The city of Boston cannot afford to assume this burden," he said.

"The bridge is not unsafe," Mr. Sullivan continued. "There is perhaps a little congestion at the draw but we are willing to remove that by the construction of a new drawbridge. We will construct and maintain the draw at our own expense.

"The bridge is 735 feet long and of that amount 600 feet is in Quincy. If the legislature should finally decide to construct a bridge it does not seem just that the city of Boston should bear the highest proportion of the cost. I understand that the estimated cost of a new structure is approximately $400,000. We are decidedly opposed to the proposition."

Senator Louis F. R. Langelier and Representatives Sullivan and Sandberg were recorded in favor of the proposition. They said that their position is well known to the committee because of the earlier hearing on similar bridge propositions.

Attorney Jackson said that his company objected to two provisions of the bill. He said that in one section it is provided that the approaches of the bridge would be constructed as a highway and that evidently no provision would be made for benefit of any street railway company.

He also objected to the provision which would require any street railway company operating upon the bridge to bear fifteen percent of the total cost. He said that the bill contains no provision under which the Bay State Street Railway Company would have a say in the proposed construction despite the fact that the company would be required to pay more than one-seventh of the total cost.

He asked for time in which to submit figures to the committee describing the amount of traffic on the bridge and what he said was the comparatively small use of it by the Bay State company.

COURT OFFICERS HEARING.

The Committee on Public Service gave a hearing on the bill to give court officers of police, district and municipal courts, thirty days vacation instead of fifteen as at present. William M. Marden of Quincy, president of the Massachusetts Court Officers League, spoke in favor. He contended that much of the work of the court officers was after court adjourned in committing prisoners to jail. Others to speak in favor were A. B. Hultman of Quincy and Arthur Kirby of Dedham.

The same committee gave a hearing to James L. MacDonald and others that the assistant clerks may be appointed in the absence of the clerk as clerk protem. Mr. MacDonald and others appeared.

MANY PAY TRIBUTE

FUNERAL OF EDWARD SOUTHWORTH AT BETHANY

The funeral of Edward Southworth, for many years master of the Mather school of Boston and earlier at the Coddington school in Quincy was held this afternoon from the Bethany Congregational church. The services were largely attended, among those present being many of the graduates of the Mather school, as well as many who for years were associated with him on the teaching force of the Boston public schools.

The attendance included members of the Grand Army, Loyal Legion and Bethany Brotherhood of which Mr. Southworth was a member, and also a large representation of Bethany church people with whom Mr. Southworth has worshipped for many years.

His class of ladies in the Bible school was there, also many of his former pupils in the Bible school for in Mr. Southworth they had a friend a man of integrity and honor, who did much for the uplift of his fellow man; one who could always be depended upon.

The entire front of the platform was hidden beneath a wealth of beautiful flowers. At the right of the platform was the banner of the Loyal Legion, draped in mourning while directly in front of the platform were the blue and yellow Loyal Legion flags, the white Massachusetts State flag and the Stars and Stripes.

The train arriving from Boston a few minutes before 2 o'clock brought a large delegation of the Boston Teachers' Association, as well as officials connected with the school department of the City of Boston. Seats were reserved for these delegations.

The services were conducted by Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. George L. Cady, D. D. of the Uphams Corner Congregational church, a life-long friend of Mr. Southworth.

Miss Ruggles presided at the organ and during the services a quartette composed of Mrs. Emma S. Moore, Mrs. Russell B. Worster, Robert FitzGerald and John E. Greene, sang, "Abide with me" and "Heart be still."

The ushers at the church were Abbott L. Melcher, Frank W. Crane and Charles W. Bailey. The honorary bearers were: Dr. Van Duyn of New York; Mr. Miner and Mr. Horne, two of the older Boston school masters; F. P. Ellis of the Norcross school; Joshua Dill of Newton, Lola P. Howard of the Charles Summer school, and Arthur Lincoln of the Allston school, former sub-masters at the Mather school; George A. Smith, who succeeded Mr. Southworth as master of the Mather school; Thomas J. Emery, a well known Boston attorney and a graduate of Mr. Southworth's school; Abbott L. Melcher and Frank W. Crane representing Bethany church.

There was a profusion of beautiful flowers, which included set pieces from the School Masters of Boston as well as from the present and past pupils of the Mather school of Boston.

At the conclusion of the services, taps were sounded by a bugler from the Loyal Legion.

At the conclusion of the services at the church an opportunity to view the remains which were as natural and composed as in life, after which the body was taken to Forest Hills.

SCHOOLMATES AS ESCORTS

Pay Tribute to Their Friend Karl W. Sidelinger

Thirty to forty young men, schoolmates and associates of Karl W. Sidelinger gathered this afternoon at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Sidelinger, 148 Washington street, to escort his body to Bethany Congregational church. There were prayers at the house at 2.45. Mr. Frank Drake, the boy's grandfather, who lives next door, was unable to attend the services because of poor health, but watched the departure of his grandson from a window at his home.

The bearers were Stanwood Ford, Philip Innis and Webster Pierce of the Knights of King Arthur; Earl Winslow, a close friend and Sturgis Hunt and Wesley Williams honorary.

At the church the ushers were in charge of Frank W. Crane. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, the pastor, conducted the service. Two duets by Mrs. Emma S. Moore and John Greene added much to the service—"Sometime we'll understand" and "Oh Paradise." Burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery in charge of John Hall.

NOTED DIVINE COMING.

All Scandinavian people of the city are invited to the three services which will be held at the Swedish Congregational church, Garfield street Sunday morning and Monday and Tuesday evenings, when Rev. E. August Skogsbergh will speak. He is the most prominent Swedish minister in the country and a pioneer in the middle west. For 25 years he was pastor at the tabernacle in Minneapolis and is now pastor emeritus, also vice president of the Swedish Evangelical Mission Covenant of America.

The postponed afternoon dance under the auspices of the Quincy Day Nursery Association is to be held Saturday at Alpha hall. The young people are looking forward to a good time.

DEFAULT ON SQUANTUM PETITION

No One Appears in Favor of Movement for Annexation to Boston

Boston and Quincy Officials Recorded in Opposition

Several hearings of interest to city were held this morning at the State House Boston. At 10 o'clock there was a hearing before the Ways and Means committee relative to granting authority to pay Officer Patrick A. Milford of Quincy and James R. Qualey of Braintree the reward of $500 offered for the arrest and conviction of Louis G. Restelli for the Hardwick murder. At that time the City Council offered the above reward for the arrest of Restelli.

There was a general feeling of unrest all over the city at that time, and until the dead body of the murderer was later recovered in a quarry hole by Messrs. Milford and Qualey. Under the law, the city was not allowed to pay the reward for the recovery of the dead body without special act of the legislature. The matter was taken up a year ago but too late to be acted upon. This year it was again brought before the legislature.

Representatives Sullivan and Sandberg appeared in favor of the proposed bill.

SQUANTUM HEARING.

Another hearing of local interest held this morning was by the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs on the petition of certain citizens of Squantum that that section of the City of Quincy be annexed to the City of Boston.

Certain residents of Squantum have had this bee in their bonnet for a long time. A number of years ago a similar petition was presented to the legislature and the committee visited Quincy and in company with a committee of the City Council visited Squantum, and looked over the ground enjoyed a fine dinner given by one of the residents and returning to Boston promptly turned the petition down. The matter has been dormant

Although Abe Lincoln signed the emancipation proclamation 51 years ago, the ball players still seem to be held in involuntary servitude.

The politicians of all parties deny responsibility for the earthquake that shook the East, but the plain people know better.

The Mexican government will no doubt protest against the inhumane act of our soldiers, who made the 5000 Mexican refugees take baths.

It is hoped the churches don't get to quarreling over which shall have the spending of Andy Carnegie's new peace fund.

Some cities are fining people $5.00 for tangoing, but the dancing teachers deny that this was done to increase their business.

Although the world looks pretty black to the income taxpayers about now, they should reflect that while there is life there is hope.

A Ponca chief has just died in Oklahoma at the age of 111, but probably he never ate any of the health foods.

AMERICAN RAILROADING.

The accident account of American railroads is such as no European system ever permits. Yet the country has a lot of very competent railroad men as suggested by the success of General Manager Thornton of the Long Island road. He is to manage the Great Eastern road of England, on the ground that English railroading does not turn out men of the capacity required.

The trouble with our railroads, as respects accidents, is not lack of technical ability. It is partly that in the national anxiety to develop our territory, there has been a tendency to spend money developing new lines, rather than providing the existing systems with the best safety equipment.

After a big disaster there is always a spasmodic demand for safety measures. But this does not counteract the persistent growling from passengers because of late trains. This has a tendency to promote the type of man who can get his train in on time regardless.

"LOVE IN A COTTAGE."

If the marriage rate is low, the scramble for licenses at the Ford works in Detroit tells one reason why. When the profit sharing scheme was announced, 75 employes reported marriage engagements. Others are coming.

"Love in a cottage," still exists. Theoretically it is ideal and poetic. In Mrs. Burnett's latest story, "T Tembarom," everybody admires Tem and Little Ann for their longing for the Harlem flat on $15 per. But the average reader of polite fiction would secretly commiserate them, had not good fortune averted that fate.

Philosophers says there is too much "Keeping up with Lizzie." Delayed marriage is attributed to the feeling that a young couple must start where their fathers left off. They must swap social favors and buy a minimum of style, all which costs a good lot of money.

Still an ambitious young man hates to take a family of children into a neighborhood of non-English speaking people, which in many growing towns proves the only quarters for which he has "the price." The liking for emulation of "style" is meretricious, but the desire to consort with refined and educated people is praiseworthy. It sometimes costs money to butt your back yard up against people with whom you can swap poetical quotations.

There does seem to be a decline in thrifty forethought in money matters. Old time housekeepers were wonderful planners. Every expense was thought out ahead. They never wore their Sunday best when the knock-about would do as well. In the attic were reserves against many household needs. Nowadays people buy what they need when they need it, and some of them do not even wait for the bargain sales. All which has a vital relation to the marriage rate.

HAINES ACTED WITHIN RIGHTS

Appointment of Sheriff In Moulton's Place Was Legal

DECISION OF MAINE COURT

Governor Had Removed Cumberland County Sheriff at Behest of Legislature After Impeachment Proceedings Convicting Sheriffs of Failure to Enforce Prohibitory Law

Bangor, Me., Feb. 27.—A rescript sustaining the Maine legislature in the adoption of an address to Governor Haines calling for the removal of Sheriff Lewis W. Moulton of Cumberland county for non-enforcement of the Maine prohibitory liquor law was received from the Maine supreme court. It was drawn by Associate Justice Spear, following arguments before the full bench of the law court.

It was found that the elector, Moulton, was lawfully removed from the office of sheriff. The information was dismissed with costs.

The question of the constitutional right of the legislative branch of the state government to remove an officer selected by the people went to the law court for the first time on record last July, when the arguments were made in the quo warranto proceedings instituted by Moulton against the late Everett G. Scully, who was appointed by Haines to succeed him.

Moulton, together with Sheriffs Ballou of Sagadahoc coupnty and Emerson of Penobscot county, was removed from office by Haines last April at the conclusion of impeachment proceedings before the legislature at which they were convicted of failure to enforce the prohibitory liquor law.

The suit was brought to determine the right of Scully to hold the office by appointment from the governor, after the removal of Moulton by the direction of the legislature. He claimed the right to retain the office through virtue of his election by the people of the country.

ANTI-JAPANESE OUTBURST

Hayes Says He Is Tired of Putting Soft Pedal on Discussison

Washington, Feb. 27.—Another anti-Japanese outburst occurred before the house immigration committee, despite the administration ban on its discussion. Pacific coast members aired the Japanese question and revolted against the anti-publicity program.

"The chief trouble in keeping out these aliens," said Representative Hayes of California, referring to Japanese immigration, "is that sentiment is against it. We are ordered to put the soft pedal on the discussion. I am tired of that."

HAS SENSE OF HUMOR

Justice Makes Man's Name Become Green on St. Patrick's Day

New York, Feb. 27.—Morris Greenspun, a manufacturer of lubricating oils, decided that he would be socially and commercially benefited if he changed his name to Green. He petitioned the supreme court for permission to make the change, which he suggested to take place March 7.

Justice Giegerich granted the application, making Greenspun Green, but he changed the date when the new name shall become effective. The justice fixed the date as March 17.

PROMISE OF MAINE MEN

Will See That Diseased Spuds Are Kept From Commercial Market

Washington, Feb. 27.—Assurance that disease-bearing potatoes in Maine would be quarantined and kept from commercial markets were given to the department of agriculture by representatives of that state at an informal conference here.

The discovery of diseased potatoes at certain points in Maine by the federal authorities had led to an inquiry as to what steps the state was taking to protect interstate commerce.

Greenland, N. H., Feb. 27.—Rev. Dr. Edward Robie, pastor of the Congregational church of this town, who enjoys the distinction of having filled only one pastorate since he was ordained to the ministry in 1854, celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of his pastorate.

Robie is 83 years of age. The church over which he presides was organized in 1707.

LINGAN PICKED UP MINUS PROPELLOR

Red Cross Liner Is Towing Disabled Collier to Boston

Boston, Feb. 27.—In tow of the Red Cross liner Morwenna the collier Lingan, minus its propeller, is headed for Boston. The Lingan sailed from here Feb. 19 for Louisburg, C. B., and had not been reported since. The steamer was picked up yesterday 110 miles southeast of Highland light.

The Lingan was due in Louisburg last Saturday. Just when the propeller was lost is not known, but it was presumably some days ago and the steamer has been drifting about since.

The Lingan had been reported as having reached the Cape Breton port, but it was found another vessel had been mistaken for the collier.

IN NAME OF UNITED STATES

New Formula for Christening of Naval Vessels

Hereafter in christening vessels of the United States navy the sponsors will say, "I christen thee in the name of the United States," instead of the old formula, "I christen thee."

This change was announced Wednesday at a meeting of the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy. The society also went on record in favor of a federal law to prevent discrimination against naval uniforms.

Mrs. Reynolds Thomas Hall of Philadelphia was chosen as president of the society and Secretary Daniels and Mrs. Daniels were chosen honorary member and vice president of the society.

Quincy is interested in this society from the fact that a number of its members have been sponsors for naval vessels built at the Fore River shipyard

SECOND NIGHT OF DRAMATICS

The second night of "The County Minister," at Wollaston, was marked with unqualified success. The audience, which was an exceedingly merry one, laughed and laughed again.

One of the stella parts of the production aws that of Roxy, the waif, who in the end is discovered to be the niece of the heroine. It was a juvenile part calling for much life and many mischievous pranks. The part was taken with inimitable sang froid by Mrs. Elsie Weston.

Another to come in for mention is Clifton H. Baker. He took the part of Officer Filkins and his lines were perfect.

Between the acts Dr. John Merrill presided at the piano and candy was sold by Mrs. Clifton H. Baker, Mrs. Charles E. Barker and Mrs. Axel G. Nelson.

The scenery for the five acts was extremely good and contained many details not always observed in amateur productions. It was the work of Arthur W. Rohn assisted by Roy C. Baker and a corps of efficient helpers.

Composing the entertainment committee were: Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Oldham, Mr. and Mrs. Axel G. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Barker, Mr. and Mrs. Roy C. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton H. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. G. Ernest Carr and George E. Brown.

MACON, GA., CHILD

Made Strong and Well by Vinol.

When we tell you that Vinol is the best remedy in our whole stock for making weak, puny, ailing, children strong, robust and rosy we are only telling you what has been proved by hundreds of mothers.

J. L. Fickling, Macon, Ga., says: "My child was very thin and delicate, no appetite, nervous, and did not sleep well. Doctors did not help her. Vinol was recommended and the change after a fair trial was wonderful. She sleeps soundly all night, has a splendid appetite and has gained in weight. I wish every mother knew what Vinol will do for delicate children."

What Vinol did for this little girl it will do for every weak and ailing child because sickly children need the strengthening cod liver elements and the tonic iron that Vinol contains—that is why Vinol builds them up quickly and give them a fine, healthy color. It is pleasant to take and we guarantee that the results will satisfy you—money back if they do not. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

"EVERY MAN FOR HIMSELF"

Monroe Passengers Did Not Know Lifeboats Had Been Launched

Philadelphia, Feb. 27.—Clarence H. Davids of Yonkers, N. Y., a passenger on the steamship Monroe, which was sunk in a collision with the Nantucket, was a witness in the trial of Captain Berrry of the latter vessel, and testified that, so far as he could observe, "it was every man for himself" after the Monroe was rammed and began to sink.

He admitted, however, that he did not know when he jumped into the sea that lifeboats had been launched from the Monroe. Davids was saved by a boat from the Nantucket.

Adolph Doehler, chief wireless operator of the Nantucket, testified that he had heard messages exchanged between the Monroe and her sister ship, the Hamilton. He said these messages related to the weather and the position of the ships, and he did not think it necessary to repeat them to his captain.

The hearing was adjourned until March 9.

BARRED BY "ET CETERA"

Warden of Ohio State Prison Keeps Sentenced Man Out

Columbus, O., Feb. 27.—Ed Proctor was sent to the penitentiary here from Mahoning county for "assault and battery and entering a building with felonious intent." His commitment papers read "Assault and battery, etc."

Warden Thomas refused to accept the prisoner because assault and battery is not a penal offense and "et cetera" is not menitionel in the state criminal code as a crime.

Proctor was taken to the county jail, where he will stay until the Mahoning county officials fill cut new commitment papers.

"Et cetera" had been substituted for "entering a building with felonious intent."

CARTOONIST FOR HALF A CENTURY

Tenniel, Who Terrified Statesmen With Pencil, Is Dead

London, Feb. 27.—Sir John Tenniel, the great world-cartoonist, died in his 95th year, after a career in which his pencil had for fifty years dealt unsparingly with the whole gamut of human affairs, thrilling nations and puncturing the pride of emperors and kings.

Through the medium of London Punch he swept the affairs of the world with a freedom that placed him in a rank by himself among cartoonists. He left Punch in 1900 and his closing years were embittered by blindness, due to his close application to his work.

While he terrified the greatest statesmen by his biting drawings Tenniel won an everlasting place for himself in the hearts of the world's children by his creation of the likenesses of the foremost modern fairy tales, "Alice in Wonderland" and "Alice Through a Looking Glass."

"NOT ACTING SQUARE"

Complaint of Waitresses Against Women Who Arrested Them

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Six union waitresses were marched off to the police station by two police women from in front of a down town restaurant against which the waitresses declared a boycott several weeks ago.

The waitresses had demanded that police women be substituted for policemen on the strike detail. The prisoners offered no resistance.

"Those police women are not acting square," said Miss Carrie Alexander, president of the Waitresses' union. "We thought they would give us fair play. Our girls were not doing anything."

Resolutions Adopted by Marine Draftsmen of Quincy

Editor Daily Ledger:

My attention has been called to a paragraph which appeared in Wednesday's Ledger, under the caption "Panama Canal Tolls," purporting to give the views held by Quincy branch of the American Society of Marine Draftsmen on the subject of Panama Canal legislation, as expressed by them in a communication addressed to Congressman Gilmore.

Unfortunately, the three "propositions" you adduce as advocated by the American Society of Marine Draftsmen are in fact three sections of the Panaman Canal Act of 1913, two of which the resolutions, adopted by all the branches of the society, "urgently request" Congress to repeal.

I quote below the text of the Resolutions as actually adopted:—

"Whereas, the Government of the United States in constructing, entirely at its own expense and risk, the Panama Canal Act of 1913, two of own people, as a military measure for the protection of its two coast lines and a facilitation of its domestic and foreign commerce

"Whereas, it is of vital domestic importance for the United States to build up its own merchant marine which has practically disappeared from the oceans, as an auxiliary to the American Navy and for economic reasons;

"Whereas, the higher cost of American labor and the lack of sufficient marine work for our shipyards make it impossible to compete with foreign shipbuilders, be it

"Resolver, That the United States have the perfect right and exercise this right to exempt all its ships from canal tolls.

"Resolved, That the United States tional measures to promote the upbuilding of the American Merchant Marine as a matter of National defense and of economy, that the American Society of Marine Draftsmen urgently requests the repeal of the section of the Panama Canal Act, granting American registry to foreign built ships, and also the section, importing material for shipbuilding duty-free, And be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the members of the United States Congress from all districts in which our Society is represented."

Please print this letter in full and correct as far as possible the very bad impression that must have been created by the mistake.

Very truly Yours,
B. G. Barnes,
Secretary, Quincy Branch American Society of Marine Draftsmen.

PATRIOTIC CELEBRATION

Flags of Many Countries at Calvary Baptist Church

The prettiest little concert that was ever the writer's privilege of witnessing was given Wednesday evening at Calvary Baptist church by the Ladies' Sewing Circle. It was a patriotic celebration and it lived up to its name. Four different nationalities responded when their respective flags were displayed and national anthems played. Canada lead with nineteen, Scotland had eleven, Sweden four, and when the harp with its beautiful rich green back ground was unfurled one woman stepped out majestically and proudly stood beneath it amid thunderous applause. The flags of ten nations were displayed when the tri-colors of Italy gracefully added their rainbow. The writer having no flag as some seem to think, rose and saluted the banner that made the Turkish bear take to the woods.

The program included addresses of welcome by Mrs. Lindsey Smith, flag salute, important points in the life of Washington, patriotic address by Mrs. Cortrell, reading by Miss Hoffman, duet by Mrs. Kidder and Mr. Farquhar, national anthems, followed by refreshments. The flags were: American, Canadian, English, Scotch, Irish, French, Swedish, Norwegian, Italian and German. After the play there was a social hour.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are, we honestly believe, the best remedy made for Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all other Stomach Ills

We Know They're Good

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, in addition to other ingredients, contain Pepsin and Bismuth, two great digestive aids used by the entire medical profession. They soothe the inflamed stomach, check the heartburn and distress, stimulate a healthy secretion of the gastric juice, aid in rapid and comfortable digestion of the food and help to quickly convert it into rich red blood, and thereby into flesh, bone and muscle. They relieve stomach distress promptly, and, used regularly for a short time, tend to restore the stomach to a comfortable, easy-acting, healthy state. They aid greatly to promote regular bowel action.

Delays Are Dangerous

Don't neglect indigestion, for it frequently leads to all sorts of ills and complications. The pain and discomfort is not the most unfortunate part. The fact that when the stomach is not acting right, the material needed to repair the wastes that are constantly taking place in the body is not being given to the blood either in the proper condition or fast enough is far more serious. Nothing will cause more trouble than an unhealthy stomach. The blues, debility, lack of strength and energy, constipation, biliousness, headaches and scores of other serious ailments result from the failure of the stomach to properly do its work.

You Risk No Money

Our willingness to have you use Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets entirely at our risk proves our faith in them. We always sell them this way, and it is because we know that they have greatly benefited scores of sufferers to whom we have sold them. There's no red tape about our guarantee. It means just what it says. We'll ask you no questions. You needn't sign anything. Your word is enough for us. We know that when they help you you will consider it money well spent even if they had cost you ten times as much. If they don't help you, the money you paid for them is yours, and we want you to have it.

Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores—the World's Greatest Drug Stores. In convenient boxes—three sizes: 25c, 50c, $1.00

NOT MILITANT SUFFRAGIST

Marion Booth Kelley Who Wil Speak at Wollaston

Mrs. Marion Booth Kelley, state lecturer for the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association who is to speak at the Wollaston School hall, Monday evening, is regarded as one of the ablest woman speakers in this section of the country. A cool, convincing, easy talker, she is anything but masculine, either in manner or speech. There is nothing about her that suggests the militant suffragist. Rather she is the distinctly womanly woman who believes that women can help men secure the right kind of government, and who knows how to present her views upon the subject in a clear, forceful way.

Mrs. Kelley is a Philadelphian by birth, and before her marriage she was Miss Marion Booth Smith. She was educated at the "Friends School" one of the oldest and best known institutions of learning in the Quaker city. For some years prior to her marriage she taught school and was upon the lecture platform through Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Mrs. Kelley has travelled extensively and has made a deep study of the suffrage movement; its causes, reasons, and probable results. She is a member of the Professional Woman's Club, the Woman's City Club of Boston, the Grange, the Woman's Trade Union League, and the Colonial Dames of New Jersey. She is an ex-president and an honorary member of the Salem, New Jersey, Woman's Club.

Mrs. Kelley, who employs some of her spare time in lecturing upon political history, is the great-great-grand-daughter of Dr. Abraham Pierson, the first president of Yale, and is the great-grand-daughter of Dr. Samuel Finley, one of the early presidents of Princeton. She is the wife of Joseph Foster Kelley of Boston. Mrs. Kelley has one son, who is now a student at Phillips-Exeter academy.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Mayor Miller Creates New Office at Salary of $1500

Mayor Miller has appointed Thomas Cahill of West Quincy as Assistant Commissioner of Public Works at a salary of $1,500 a year. Mr. Cahill takes the place of Michael E. Shea who was general foreman of the Street department, which was technically the same position to which Mr. Cahill has been appointed, only under a different name. The Mayor said this morning that he had consulted with the Civil Service Commission who had written him that he had authority to create the office of assistant commissioner.

There are quite a few citizens however who question if the Mayor has the authority without the consent of the City Council, to create a new office and fix its salary. Usually in such cases the method has been for the City Council to create the office by ordinance and fix the salary. The new appointee assumed duty this morning.

City Clerk Crane has completed his tabulation of vital statistics for the year 1913 and announces this morning that the total number of births recorded during the year was 1,004 of which there were fourteen pair of twins. The total number of births shows an increase of 41 over the year 1912. The number of births by months in 1913 was as follows: January 81; February 86, March 85; April 90; May 74, June 66; July 92;; August 92, September 85; October 80; November 83;; December 90; total 1,004. A big record for a city of 35,000 population.

The annual tournament between the St. Mary's C. T. A. & M. R. Society and Ave Maria council, Knights of Columbus, was held at St. Mary's hall Thursday night with a large attendance. St. Mary's won 12 to 5.

The feature of the evening was the checker matchs between Michael Kiley, representing St Mary's and Napoleon Grignon who played for Ave Maria. The men played two draws and will meet again Monday night in the Knights of Columbus rooms. The games were witnessed by a large crowd, conspicuous among them being E. C. Waterhouse, an expert player of the Boston Checker club. The men played the Fife and Glascow openings and switched to variations, holding to safeties on each move.

St. Mary's gathered five points in the whist division. Bizzozero and O'Toole, who beat Welsh and Morrisette took the lonesome point for Ave Maria. The summary:

The eyes of the sporting public have been directed toward Chris Mahoney of Milton who has been sold to the Victoria club of the Northwestern league. His career has been a queer one. Starting as a box artist at Milton High he came to Quincy and held up its end in many tight games. He was finally coralled by the Red Sox and farmed. When Chris is hitting he can't pitch but when he has a batting slump he works like a fiend. Only once has been known to slump in both at the same time. No knowing what Chris will do, say the fans that know him —Boston has selected May 3 to 9 as a "Clean-up and Paint-up" day. What is the reason that Quincy cannot do the same? If every house owner in the city would spend only a few hours of that week in cleaning up yards, removing unsightly rubbish, etc., the results would be appreciated by visitors.

—The building of an automobile in 11 minutes, and speeding it along the road in 19 minutes from the commencement of the work, was the result of a test at a factory in Manchester, England. This beat a similar test made at Detroit a short time since by six minutes.

QUINCY A. A. WIN AGAIN

Surprise St. Alphonsus Team by Score of 22 to 15

The Quincy A. A. first team beat St. Alphonsus 22 to 15 in Faxon hall Thursday night and gave to "Als" championship aspirations a setback. The second Quincy team lost 21 to 17, both teams, playing but four men.

The first team of St. Alphonsus appeared on the floor with two of the regular players missing and two second team men were substituted. Captain Manning of the Quincy second team played in the big game.

The feature of the evening was a long shot by Charlie Hebert who caged the ball in the basket at the east end of the hall on a long throw from the southwest corner. Joe O'Rourke made three baskets for Quincy and shot six fouls. Dacey starred for the visitors, getting four baskets and three fouls.

The first game at times tended to roughness, but the men contained themselves and no untoward incidents occurred to marr the contest. Both teams were off color in their shooting. A decided brace by St. Alphonsus, who rolled up nine points in as many minutes, made the outlook for Quincy rather dreary, but the period closed before the seven points needed to tie were scored.

The first team game:

MAWSON PARTY SAFELY HOME

Expedition to Antarctic Has Been Successful

VAST COAL DEPOSIT FOUND

Other Important Discoveries as Result of Exploration Along Unknown Coast, During Which Severe Hardships Were Encountered—Made Special Study of Weather Conditions

Adelaide, Aus., Feb. 27.—Dr. Douglas Mawson, the Australasian explorer, returned here from the Antarctic on board the Aurora. He said his expedition had been eminently successful.

Mawson declared that dredging had yielded the best collection of biological specimens ever obtained in the Antarctic. Many mineral deposits had been exposed, some of them rich. Their extent, however, was not traceable, owing to the ice. Occasional rocks exposed indicated the existence of a vast coal bed.

The Mawson expedition, consisting of fifty men, most of them college graduates, under the leadership of Mawson, a young professor of geology at Adelaide, set out on Dec. 2, 1911, to explore more than 2000 miles of unknown coast between Cape Adare and Caussburg through three land parties.

It took along a complete wireless apparatus and erected stations at Macquarie island and Adelie Land, through which it has from time to time kept in touch with civilization by way of Hobart, Tasmania, telling of its progress and disasters.

In March, 1912, Captain Davis of the Aurora reported landing Mawson and a party on Adelie land and another party on Termination Land, and announced some of the early discoveries made by the explorers.

In February, 1913, a message told of the death of two members of the expedition. Lieutenant Ninnis of the Royal Fusilliers and Dr. Mertz, a Swiss scientist, the former of whom disappeared in a crevasse with a dog team and the latter of whom died of malnutrition.

Mawson, who had gone on an exploring trip with these two, barely escaped himself, reaching his hut on Feb. 7, ill and almost starved to death. He found that the Aurora, after waiting as long as was safe for his return, had departed, leaving a party of six men to search for him. With this party he carried on sledging expeditions throughout the winter. The party encountered severe blizzards, the wind blowing at times at a rate of 200 miles an hour.

The Australian government sent out a relief vessel for the explorer and his party of six, after the return of the Aurora to Tasmania. The relief ship found them sadly reduced by hunger and cold, having subsisted for some time on the hearts and tongues of sea elephants.

The last message received prior to the present one from Mawson was on Nov. 18, 1913, when, after a long silence, he reported the breaking up of the ice pack and the beginning of the recovery of the expedition's stores from under the snow that buried them. The members of his paarty were then all well, and busily engaged in making scientific observations.

One of Mawson's aims in undertaking his expedition was to study weather conditions in the Antarctic, with a view to forecasting through the knowledge gained the weather of Australia.

CHARGES AGAINST JUDGE

Financier Alleges Improper Conduct Off and on the Bench

Washington, Feb. 27.—Sensational charges of professional and private misconduct were filed against Judge Wright of the District of Columbia supreme court by Wade H. Cooper, a local financier.

The charges include allegations of financial and moral wrong-doing; that certain corporations have been favored by Wright and that in general his conduct on and off the bench has been improper for a judicial official.

RECEIVES DEATH THREAT

Priest Asks State Police to Hunt For Supposed Insane Person

New Britain, Conn., Feb. 27.—Rev. Lucyan Bojnowski, pastor of the Sacred Heart church (Roman Catholic), asked the state police for assistance in finding some person who, in a letter, threatens to kill him.

Bojnowski attributes the threat to some insane person, who recently did much damage in the church by mutilating images and shrines and destroying vessels used about the altar.

Fourteen Years For Robbing Bank

Mansfield, La., Feb. 27.—J. N. Johnson and W. G. Cole, who pleaded guilty to robbing the Bank of Logansport of $6000, were sentenced to fourteen years each in the penitentiary.

Earl Relieved of $2500 Scarfpin

London, Feb. 27.—Earl Chesterfield was robbed of a $2500 scarfpin while attending the Giants-White Sox baseball game. He was a guest in King George's personal party.

PRICELESS RELICS LOST

Ancient Scottish Church Destroyed by Militant Suffragettes

Edinburg, Feb. 27.—An "arson squad" of militant suffragettes burned to the ground the historic Parish church of the village of Whitekirk. The church was erected in 1297 and contained many relics of the battle in which the Scots were routed by Oliver Cromwell's forces in 1650.

In the vicinity is the famous battleground of Dunbar where the English routed the Scots in 1296 and caused John Baliol to give up the crown of Scotland.

The fire was plainly of incendiary origin and militant literature and placards scattered about the grounds left the police no doubt that the women caused it.

Many priceless scriptural relics and curios from the Holy Land were destroyed by the fire.

THE BRITANNIC LAUNCHED

White Star Steamer the Very Last Word In Marine Architecture

Belfast, Ire., Feb. 27.—Safety, so far as human foresight and the best engineering skill of the age can provide it, is the feature of the transatlantic steamship Britannic, built for the White Star line and launched here. She is 900 feet long.

The keel of the 50,000-ton craft had just been laid when the Titanic, then the last word in marine architecture, on her first voyage crushed her hull against an iceberg and sank, the loss of life aggregating about 1500.

This disaster prompted a general revision of the plans for the Britannic, which greatly delayed her progress to the launching stage.

FULL AGREEMENT FURTHER DELAYED

Term of Railroad Trustees Is Still Under Discussion

Washington, Feb. 27.—Attorney General McReynolds took up personally for the first time with Chairman Elliott, counsel and George W. Anderson of the Massachusetts public service commission the proposed settlement of the department with the New Haven railroad, providing among other things for the dissolution of the New Haven and the Boston and Maine merger.

It is believed that agreement has been reached as to the personnel of the proposed board of trustees for the Boston and Maine, but all the details of the general agreement have not been determined.

The period of the trust continues to be a point of sharp issue between the New Haven officials and the department and enough other questions are said to be under debate to make it doubtful whether public announcement of the results of the conference can be made immediately.

IN COURT ON STRETCHER

Girl of Fourteen Is Accused of Slaying Her Infant

Chelsea, Mass., Feb. 27.—So ill that she was carried into the courtroom on a stretcher, Mary Reynaud, a 14-year-old Revere schoolgirl, was accused in court here of slaying her child, a baby boy.

Evidently ignorant of the seriousness of the charge, the young girl remained on the stretcher for an hour in the courtroom, while other cases were being disposed of. Then after the charge against her was read, the Revere police had the case continued until March 5, and the girl was committed to jail without bail.

BECKER AGAIN IN TOMBS

Former Policeman Back In Old Quarters to Await New Trial

New York, Feb. 27.—After a trip from Ossining, accompanied by his wife, Charles Becker, the former lieutenant of the New York police department, was lodged in a cell in the Tombs last night.

He was placed in cell No. 117, three doors from the one he occupied before he was taken to Sing Sing on Oct. 30, 1912, to be exected for the part he is alleged to have played in the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

A Persistent Poisoner

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

The use of the poisoned needle is not new. In the early part of the seventeenth century a man named Tebaldo in Venice invented an instrument in the form of a key from which he shot a tiny needle into the flesh of one he wished to kill.

In Rome during the period when the use of poisons was an art in Italy there occurred a similar case to that of this Venetian. One Lorenzo Luchese went from Florence to Rome, taking with him a more minute knowledge of poisons and poison methods than existed anywhere except in the city on the Arno. There was something uncanny about him that soon turned the Romans against him. A certain young lady, Bianca Ranzine, attracted the attention of the stranger, and he was observed to cast longing eyes upon her. But she was betrothed to a noble Venetian, Ricordo Mantel, and it was assumed that Luchese's love was hopeless. But one day Signorina Ranzine's lover after having mingled with a crowd witnessing a race on the Corso was seized with a sharp pain and died within a few hours. It was supposed he died of heart disease.

Not long after this Luchese proposed to Signor Ranzine for the hand of his daughter. The application was declined on the ground that the lady's heart was buried with the lover she had lost and she would never marry. Luchese said that he would not give up hope and took every means to ingratiate himself with Signorina Ranzine. But she took a dislike to him and would have nothing to do with him.

After awhile the young lady met a man named Francesco Demetrio, a handsome and in other ways a charming man, who fell desperately in love with her and won her from her intended celibacy. They became engaged, and Bianca's friends rejoiced that the heart of one so young would not after all be buried. Demetrio had heard something from Florence about Luchese that put him on his guard against the man.

Every one knew that Luchese had cast longing eyes on Bianca Ranzine before the death of her betrothed and that he had proposed for her hand soon after his death. Moreover, poisoning being much in vogue at that time, there were those who believed that Ricordo Mantel had not died of heart disease, but had been secretly poisoned. Demetrio after hearing the reports from Florence about Luchese strongly suspected not only that Mantel had been poisoned, but that Luchese had been the poisoner.

However, he kept his own counsel and at the same time a strict watch on Luchese. If Demetrio was in any room where Luchese was present he would immediately leave. On several occasions he noticed that the Florentine tried to get near him, but he had always prevented his doing so by moving away. One day Demetrio was talking with a friend on a street on a fete day when a procession of the church was passing and suddenly felt a sharp pain in his arm. Turning, he saw Luchese pushing his way from him among the crowd.

"Seize that man!" Demetrio said to his friend. "He has punctured my arm and doubtless poisoned me."

The friend gave chase and caught Luchese. As soon as he laid hands on him he felt a sharp pain in his hand. There happened to be a doctor in the crowd, who, learning what had occurred, asked Demetrio to show him where he had been pricked. So small was the wound that it could scarcely be discovered, but the doctor whipped out a lancet and cut away a piece of the flesh. Demetrio's friend, having turned Luchese over to an officer, came reeling back, and the doctor, learning that he, too, had been pricked, treated his hand as he had treated Demetrio's arm.

The doctor took both pieces of flesh to his house, and on cutting them into bits found in each a small needle not half an inch long. Whether there had been poison in either of them he could not tell, but the evidence was strong enough against Luchese to insure his conviction. He was searched as soon as arrested, but nothing incriminating was found on him. His house was searched, and in it were found a variety of poisons and a little box containing needles similar to those that had been put into Demetrio and his friend. The instrument with which he had shot the needle into the flesh was picked up on the street near where the attack had been made. It was simply a small brass tube with a spring in it, which could be loosened by a pressure of the thumb.

Luchese was tried and executed. Demetrio suffered but little from the effects of the puncture, but his friend was ill a long while.

The fact that Mantel had doubtless been poisoned by the man who wished Bianca for himself was kept from her. Indeed, she was not informed that Luchese had tried to poison her second lover. After Luchese's execution she and Demetrio were married, and great interest was manifested in the wedding, for every one except the bride knew that one lover had been murdered and the second had nearly met the same fate.

But it was not to be expected that what was common property could be kept from her always. She learned in time and in consequence always dreaded that her husband might fall at the hands of some secret enemy.

THE PLYHOUSE

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

At Music Hall Saturday matinee and night will be seen a two-reel feature that should be seen by every woman in Quincy the title is "A Pitfall of the Instalment Plan." The cast of players Warren Kerrigan, Vivian Rich, Alonzo Greenwood, Helen Armstrong, Jack Richardson, George Periolat, Louise Lester give one of the most interesting photoplay performances given this season and the human nature shown in this picture is well worth witnessing. A. Keystone comedy will also be seen Saturday, "When Dreams Come True." The whole play is a combination of scream and shiver, suffocating laughter and creepy, crawly sensation. See it by all means.

At Music Hall next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the attraction will be the moving picture performance of "Quo Vadis. Quincy people will witness there the faith of Lygia, a primitive Christian, who flees from the man she loves because he woes her in words of passion. They will witness a sweetness and gentleness of character that cries out timidly amid the erotic orgies of Rome's licentious women, but does not blink death in Nero's amphitheatre for the cause of her master. They will witness the conversion of a brutal patrician through the simplicity and kindnes and moral cleanness of his girl. They will come away inspired. They will come away grieved, perhaps, that the sublimation of character portrayed in the life of Lygia cannot be the character of every woman, everywhere. They may come away fearing that the dance of indecency is as true a sign of future degeneration as it is a reflection on the society of which they are a part. "And his is the beginning of wisdom."

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

Many people said the show the first half of this week was the best ever at Kincaide Theatre. It certainly was good, but Manager Wardwell has secured one equally as good for the last of this week.

Merrill & Hilton have a very pretty little novelty sketch entitled "The Maid of Cinnabar." Both girls are splendid singers and have a lot of special scenery which makes the act extra pleasing. Neil Sullivan Co. presented a very pleasing comedy sketch entitled "The Irish Millionaire" which caused no end of laughter and merriment and received great applause. Vaudeville attraction engaged to appear next Monday include Faye O'Neil, character change artiste; Budd & Claire, two English entertainers, Maurice Wood & Co. singing and pianologue fun makers; Leska Anita & Co., European juggling artists. All new pictures will be presented.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

While the outstanding event of the forthcoming week at the Boston Opera House will be the first appearance for the season of Nellie Melba, the rest of the performances scheduled for the week will be of the highest order, and will yield in interest only to Mme. Melba's impersonation of Mimi.

The week will begin with a concert at the Opera House on the evening of Sunday, Maria Gay will be the principal soloist, and with her will appear Miss Scotney, and Mm. Grand and Gardones, and Mr. Horace Britt, cellist.

"Don Giovanni" will be the first opera of the week, beginning at 7.30 Monday evening. "Romeo et Juliette" will be given its first performance Wednesday evening, at 7.45. Friday evening, "Die Meistersinger" will be repeated and Saturday matinee, "La Boheme." Saturday evening, the popular "Jewels of the Madonna" will be given.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Miss Billie Burke, one of the most popular and most charming American stars, comes to the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, for her annual two weeks' engagement, beginning March 2. "The Land of Promise," by W. Somerset Maugham is the play that she will now be seen in at the Hollis. "The Land of Promise," as this statement indicates, is a gripping drama that deals with primitive conditions and fundamental human passions. Mr. Maugham, it may be remembered, was the author of "Smith," a play in which John Drew appeared with great success a few years ago. In this new play he has dealt with a very different theme and in a much more vigorous style. His scenes are laid in rough farmhouses on the frontier of Manitoba, where neighbors are few and far between and where each man is a law unto himself. The heroine is a young English woman, well bred, well educated, who finds herself suddenly thrown upon her own responsibilities in the midst of these primitive and, to her, absolutely unknown conditions and who, through sheer pluck, wins her way to love and happiness after many hard and bitter experiences.

Miss Burke impersonates the heroine, of course, and it is a very different role from any of those she has played in the past. It gives her an opportunity to prove her right to a place among the emotional actresses of the American stage—to confirm and justify the enthusiastic praise of the critics for her splendid performance last season in the one strong scene of "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl."

"LES MISERABLES""

"Les Miserables," Victor Hugo's world-famous story told in motion pictures will begin a two weeks engagement at the Tremont Temple, Boston, on next Monday afternoon. The production is the same that scored such a tremendous hit at this place last fall. The engagement at that time was cut short because of previous bookings. Those who failed to view this remarkable production should take advantage of this limited opportunity. The engagement is positively for two weeks only. Every particle of interest that this renowned author's masterpiece affords the reader is admirably sustained in the play. The costumes and settings are realistic while the acting of the principal characters is highly commendable. The production is presented in 9 reels. There will be daily matinees and a popular scale of prices—25c, 35c and 50c—will prevail.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

There will be a double event at the Castle Square next week. The long expected production of David Belasco's romantic drama, "The Girl of the Golden West," and the reappearance of Miss Mary Young. As the girl, Miss Young will be the bright and shining light of the play, and surrounded by a multitude of the rough characters of the California mining days of '49 she will take part in a thrilling drama. The dramatic situations of which the play is made and in which she is involved are romantic in the extreme, and the stage settings add to the picturesqueness and dramatic power of the play.

In addition to Miss Young, the cast will include Mr. Craig's entire company, with Mr. Carleton as Dick Johnson, and Miss Colcord, Mr. Ormonde, Mr. Meek and Mr. Walker in other leading roles.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

The original all star production of Eugene Walter's remarkable play, "Fine Feathers," direct from its season's run at the Astor Theatre, New York, will come to the Colonial Theatre, Boston, for two weeks, beginning Monday evening. During this engagement the usual matinees will be given Wednesdays and Saturdays. The coming of "Fine Feathers" with its original cast of prominent stars, including Robert Edeson, Wilton Lackaye, Max Figman, Rose Coghlan, Florence Rockwell, Lydia Dickson and all the others who shared in the Broadway success of this play, is without a doubt the most important dramatic event in years. Never before have so many dramatic celebrities appeared in a single cast, and each of these stars has a role which brings into play all the skill and artistry for which each is noted. It is a big, tremendous story of modern life, dealing with characters with whom everyone is familiar and treating of a theme that is familiar to every American home. For an entire season this play, with its gripping situations and its wonderful insight into human nature electrified the playgoers of New York as has no other drama in years. And the acting as may be imagined, is the treat of a lifetime.

PARK THEATRE.

It is rarely one has the opportunity of sitting through such a delightful piece of work as George Bernard Shaw's latest comedy "Fanny's First Play" which Messrs. Shubert and Granville Barker present at the Park Theatre commencing March 2, direct from a run of two years in London and one year in New York. "Fanny's First Play" presented by the original English company is bound to make an impression on Boston theatregoers by its remarkably fine interpretation of this clever satire. One of the chief charms of "Fanny's First Play" is that although the scenes are laid in the homes of two middle-class Britishers, the fun applies to American conditions, just as well as the conditions in England.

The presentation of "Fanny's First Play" has tended to revive widespread discussion of George Bernard Shaw and his literary achievements and it is the concensus of opinion that he has performed his most charming and victorious feat in the construction of this latest masterpiece. There is enough wit, satire and humor in "Fanny's First Play" to furnish a dozen comedies. In it the sardonically brilliant Irishman furnishes an evening of sheer delight and there is perhaps no play on the stage today which is so successful a vehicle on the part of its author for taking up the absurdities of a very limited class of persons and creating therefrom a humor the appeal of which is as universal as it is delightful and entertaining.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

The pink and pristine Gaby Deslys, more bewitching than ever and with her marvelous collection of new Paris gowns comes to the Shubert Monday evening for one week. Her visit is a limited one, because Gaby is making her farewell tour and must hurry back to Paris. She is playing the leading role in "The Little Parisenne," a modern 3-act musical comedy. Matinees Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday. Gaby, without question, of all foreign stars, has risen to the greatest heights of fame. In "The Little Parisenne," she will, of course, be given every opportunity to display her talent as an actress, a singer and a dancer. With Mr. Pilcer she will do four or five specialties that have brought fame to both of them at the Winter Garden, and in many European music halls. Among them may be mentioned the well known "Gaby Glide."

Coming here almost direct from Paris, Gaby brings with her many gowns that have never been worn. They are all the very latest Parisian creations. Most of them have been designed by Gaby, while she has had the help of the leading dressmakers of the French capital. Her stage gowns are all, as in keeping with Gaby, exotic and bizarre. She prides herself on being the best and most expensively dressed woman in the world, which is no hazard.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

The third week of that widely heralded and long-waited for dramatic sensation, "Within the Law," still continues to play to capacity houses at the Majestic Theatre where it has settled down for a long run. The company is the original one direct from the Eltinge Theatre, New York, and a 75 weeks' sensational run. The members are distinguished artists whose individual triumphs in other plays have placed their names in the front rank of the metropolitan favorites. Heading the cast is Miss Jane Cowl, considered the most beautiful actress on the American stage. "Within the Law" was written by Bayard Veiller, a native dramatist, and produced by Selwyn & Company of New York. Among the many notable citizens of this country to endorse the play's overwhelming interest and worth by personal letters to the producers are Woodrow Wilson, Col. Roosevelt, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont; Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch; the eminent social and suffrage leader; Julius Harburger, sheriff of New York county; David Belasco, wizard of the American drama; Geo. S. Dougherty, police commissioner of New York and others equally prominent.

CORT THEATRE.

Joseph Santley, who has danced and sung himself into great popularity at the Cort Theatre during the past seven weeks ends his engagement this week and will be followed by the distinguished actress Margaret Anglin and a notable organization of Shakespearean actors in a series of complete and elaborate revivals, embracing three of the most delightful comedies of the bard. The first week will be occupied with "Twelfth Night" the first half of the week including Wednesday matinee and "The Taming of the Shrew" the latter half of the week.

The scenic equipment, costumes and lighting effects for each of Miss Anglin's revivals represent an outlay of nearly $50,000 and are said to be the most vast and beautiful scenic productions ever given to Shakespeare in this country. One feature that will delight the suburban theatregoers is that there will be no long and tedious "waits" between scenes and acts. Miss Anglin's productions are so arranged that the shifting of the scenes will be accomplished with so much ease and celerity that the final curtain of even the longest plays will be down by eleven o'clock. Miss Anglin's engagement is one of the most important, interesting and scholastic bookings of the present Boston season. The usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

"Under Cover" is on the eve of its twelfth week at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston. One has only to see this play to learn why it has scored one of the biggest successes seen in Boston in many years. While it is destined for other metropolitan successes it will always be remembered as having been "born and brought up" in Boston. When the piece first opened at this theatre, last December, it was greeted by a very small audience. It wasn't long however, before playgoers recognized it as an extremely brilliant play that merited success and patronage. It has already scored the season's record run and is now the most talked of play in Boston. There is a magnetic charm about "Under Cover" that makes an emphatic appeal to all classes of theatregoers. The opening scene shows the office of the United States Customs. The chief inspector has just been informed that Steven Denby, a friend of a wealthy New York family, has smuggled into this country a pearl necklace valued at $2,000,000. He is allowed to slip by but is subsequently spied upon by Ethel Cartwright, a society girl, who is forced into the work, in order to save her sister from disgrace. The series of events that follow the young lady in her effort to capture the supposed smuggler, how she falls in love with him and is finally—oh, well, why say it. It's a corking good show and well worth seeing.

SCOLLAY SQUARE OLYMPIA.

Like the great army of bargain hunters who seek the most for their money at the department stores, the present day theatregoers look for the best and most for their money at the theatres. For this reason amusement seekers can assure themselves of the biggest theatre bargain at Gordon and Lord's Scollay Square Olympia, Boston's newest and most magnificent playhouse. This theatre which is installed with a great Moller pipe organ, operated by an organist of international fame, is located in Scollay Square, a few steps from Tremont Street, almost in the very heart of the shopping district. One can step into this beautiful theatre at any time of the day and procure for their money the longest and best show of vaudeville and feature photo plays given in the city. The policy of the Alympia is continuous. An entire bill however runs approximately four hours without a single repeat. There is a big bargain bill every Friday when the regular program is augmented by several acts of vaudeville and picture plays.

LOVE'S ARRIVAL.

"Oh, will he come," a maiden said,
"With a shining crown upon his head
And martial music grand and sweet
And garlands strewn at his feet?

"Oh, will he come a gallant knight,
With honors and victory beaming bright,
Upon a noble steed astride,
To claim me for his own fair bride?"

"Oh, no!" the rose in whisper said;
"He'll wear no crown upon his head,
Nor will he come with pomp or pride
To claim you for his own fair bride.

"But softly, as the dew of night
Falls upon the lily white,
From out the commonplace will love
Come meek and gentle as a dove."

—May E. Clough.

NEWSY BRIEFS

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Atlantic Memorial church will have a musicale in the church this evening.

The high temperature of today and yesterday is taking off the snow, but good sleighing continues on most of the streets. This is the 14th consecutive day of sleighing.

George Everett Bishop, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bishop of 159 Independence avenue, died this morning of scarlet fever. He was a pupil at the Adams school.

The date for the Quincy show of the Pi Eta Club of Harvard University is Friday evening, March 27, at Music hall. These annual theatricals by the college boys are always enjoyed, but this year have an added interest because a Quincy young man was one of the authors of the comedy—Paul Blackmur, '15, being assisted by J. R. O. Perkins '14. The circuit includes six performances.

The parish committee of the Universalist church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Spooner, Revere road, Thursday evening. It was an enthusiastic meeting, there was a good report of finances and the outlook for the year is good. Mr. and Mrs. Spooner having returned a few days ago from Florida and Cuba there were many souvenir postal cards to look at and the account of their six weeks trip was quite interesting.

Mrs. Cora Bailey, division superintendent of the Sons of Veterans Auxiliary, was the guest of the Quincy auxiliary at its meeting Wednesday evening. During the first part of the evening the good of the order committee served supper after which regular business was transacted. Others who were guests at the meeting included the members of Camp 95. An enjoyable evening was had. On March 11, the auxiliary will hold a whist party at Grand Army hall.

—The bill before Congress appropriating $25,000,000 for good roads to be distributed among the various states, conditioned upon a dollar-for-dollar appropriation by each state, was passed by the House Tuesday by a vote of 282 to 42, and now awaits the the action of the Senate.

—With Easter on April 12th there is a chance for the ladies to don some really summerish attire—especially if they care to take chances. Easter last year was so very early that springtime gayety in attire was largely out of the question.

A TRIBUTE.

While the Board of Trustees of the Quincy Savings Bank will give due expression to the great loss sustained in the decease of Vice President Welch—the Board of Investment are constrained to record their feeling of loneliness and loss as they meet for their weekly duties.

The Doctor's loyalty to the Bank, his knowledge of men and property, his retentive memory, his sagacity, his keen grasp of subjects, his safe judgment, his prompt and diligent attendance of meetings and appointments, have all been qualities of great value to the Citizens of Quincy as constituents of the Bank.

Our years of business comradeship are now sadly broken. We shall miss his "Good Morning" salutations and anticipate a renewal in a realm where the good physician and his grateful patients no longer succumb to earth's great enemy.

MILTON TOWN MEETING

East Milton for Acceptance of Petersburg Avenue

The voters of Milton will elect their town officers Monday. It is generally conceded that Maurice J. Duffy and George Eaton will be re-elected to the Board of Selectmen. William P. Batchelder, James Mitchell and Jacob Turner have conducted a strenuous campaign for the vacancy on the board caused by the death of Henry Barnes. The mails the past three days have been flooded with political literature. The polls can close as early as two o'clock.

The town meeting will be called to order during the afternoon and a warrant containing 84 articles presented. Owing to recent legislation the town's financial year ends Dec. 31, 1914. The appropriation made at this meeting, therefore, covers a period of ten months instead of 12 months, as in the past. This has resulted in a decrease in many of the appropriations recommended by the warrant committee.

The warrant includes a recommendation for the borrowing of $250,000 in anticipation of taxes and an appropriation of $1400 for the purchase of a Stanley steamer auto for Maurice Pierce, chief of police.

Much interest centers on article 13, to see if the town will vote to appropriate the sum of $1100 for the services of an additional permanent firemen so that they may be granted one day off in five. In East Milton the great majority will favor the appropriation.

A recommendation which will probably go into effect is that the sum of $9,000 be appropriated out of the sewer assessment account for the extension of the sewerage system. Last year's appropriation of $12,000 was raised by the sale of bonds.

The East Milton residents who live on or near are interested in the acceptance of Petersburg avenue as a town way plan to fight the adverse recommendation of the warrant committee. The forces are being organized and each man that takes the floor will discuss a feature. Round this article alone may centre one of the warmest debates on record.

SQUANTUM PETITION

since that time until this year when it was again revived.

When the Squantum petition was reached no sponsor appeared in favor, probably because of the action of Mayor Curley of Boston who told the petitioners lately that there would be no annexations to Boston during his term if he could prevent them.

Corporation Counsel Sullivan of Boston, Representative Sullivan of Quincy, Mayor Miller and City Solicitor Pinkham of Quincy were recorded in opposition to the petition.

HOUGHS NECK SEA WALL.

At the hearing before the Metropolitan Affairs Committee, on the petition for a sea wall to protect the bluff along Manet avenue at Houghs Neck, ex-Commissioner Frederick L. Tupper appeared in favor. Mayor Miller, City Solicitor Pinkham and Representative Sullivan were also recorded in favor. There was no opposition.

LEAVE TO WITHDRAW.

The petition presented to the legislature by Theophilus King of Quincy for a franchise to construct and maintain a freight railroad at West Quincy was given leave to withdraw on Thursday by the committee on railroads.

The petitioner appeared before the committee and filed this request at the time the matter was assigned for a hearing.

—"Men are not homemakers," says a philosophic one, "and women are." Still, there are a few women in the world who welcome the assistance of the male animal to the extent at least of paying the bills that enable the woman to show that homemaking is her forte.

—Collectors are forbidden to disclose the names of those who pay income tax. The government will lose a great deal because of this policy. There are many who would admit an income they don't get and pay a small tax as penalty in order to get before the people as $4,000 men.

☞Mrs. Marion Booth Kelley who is to speak on Equal Suffrage next Monday evening, is a very bright and convincing speaker.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

A Farce That Greatly Interested West Quincy People

An "open night" was held by the "Adelphians" of the Hall Place M. E. Sunday School in the vestry, Thursday evening to which the older members of the Sunday school and members of the parish were invited. A very pleasing program was arranged with original "Me-'n'—You" cards.

The program consisted of solos by Harold Williams, vocal duets by J. Lawrence Martin and Camille B. Fuller, and selections by the Quartette composed of Edward Newcomb, George Stewart, Camille Fuller and J. Lawrence Martin. Julius Fuller was the accompanist. Mrs. Martin, teacher of the young men's class welcomed the guests of the evening in the name of the class and wished every one an enjoyable time. Julius Fuller president of the class, made a few remarks on the occasion and gave a cordial invitation to any young men who would like to join the class to do so.

The hit of the evening was a farce entitled "The freedom of the press," in which Increase Doolittle, a would-be-editor, finds "that while the press is a mighty engine, it needs a great deal of care and attention; and of all freedom, that which is most comfortable and easy for its possessors is not the "freedom of the press." The parts were all well taken, especially that of "'Sorts,' the printer's delight," who being of a theatrical nature cannot resist repeating all he remembers of the play he saw the night before, much to the annoyance of the would-be-editor.

The cast of characters:

Harry Higgins, editor of "The Bird of Freedom" George Stewart
Increase Doolittle, would-be-editor, J. L. Martin
Highflier Nightshade, a sensational author Angelo Bianchi
Milkenwater, a poet Edward Newcomb
Hon. Frothy Buncombe, from Charcoal Hollow Camille Fuller
Teddy O'Brien, Irish of course Warren Jordan
Sporter, one of the Shakers Julius Fuller
Sorts, the printers de-light, Robert McCormick

The program was in charge of the Social and Literary committees, with Julius Fuller as chairman. Cocoa and cake were served by the young men. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all.

THE ONE TRAIL.

Many shall follow the one trail,
And the one trail runs full long
From the morn of the first creation
To the din of the sunset gong.
It came to the gates of Eden
When Adam and Eve were there,
And it came to the trail that doth not fail
And over which all men fare.

The old and the middle aged ones,
And mostly the very young
Along its height to the altar light
Through many an age have swung.
The giddy and gay and festive,
The somber and grave and poor.
Have followed it still o'er dale and hill
To the light of a vine clad door.

Oh, it is the trail of the many,
The one trail all must go,
The trail of love, with the stars above
And the red rose down below.
The trail of the hiving spirit,
Of the mating of women and men,
And the kiss of bliss that ye shall not miss
Who seek for the trail again.

DRAMATICS AT POLAND HALL

Under Auspices of Norfolk Downs Improvement Asso.

A very interesting concert and dramatic program was offered Thursday evening at the entertainment of the Norfolk Downs Improvement Association in Poland hall. An appreciative audience taxed the seating capacity and heartily applauded the varied numbers.

The feature of the evening was the one-act comedy "A co-eds strategy," produced for the first time on any stage. This was an original production written by the members of the cast and well received by the audience.

The scene is laid in a room at Pratt Boarding School. Jack Davenport who is Barbara Fairchild's admirer, has been seen in company with another girl. This displeases Barbara and she schemes with her girl chums to make Jack jealous. By dressing up as Lord Van Ashcan and playing ardent suit for Barbara's hand Dorothy Goldthwaite one of the girls does succeed in making Jack exceedingly jealous and the play ends with a reconciliation between the estranged pair.

Several musical numbers were successfully introduced during the action of the piece including a piano solo by Miss Marjorie Prescott, vocal solos, "Isle D'Armour" by Miss Gladys Phelps, "Goodbye boys" by Miss Ethel Thomas, and "Come and kiss your baby" by the entire cast.

All of the parts were taken by girls, those in the masculine roles making an especial hit. The production was coached by Senator Louis F. R. Langelier.

The cast was as follows:

Peggy Bradford, Marjorie Prescott
Dorothy Goldthwaite, Gladys Phelps
Betty Longworth, Betsy Bailey
Virginia Lee, Annie Thomas
Barbara Fairchild, Lucia Bailey
Jack Davenport, Ethel Thomas
Lord Van Ashcan, Gladys Phelps

The program opened with selections by an orchestra consisting of Edward Bullock, piano; Pitt Robinson, violin; Charles Littlefield, flute and Ryder Gay, drums.

P. J. Brown played several selections on the harmonica and Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook contributed "Awake, 'tis the dawn" by Hawley and "The swallows." In the absence of her regular accompanist Edwin Wallace consented to play at sight and performed in a manner to bring loud applause on the pair.

Piano solos by Miss May Stevens were appreciated and the readings of Bart Donovan brought marked attention. They included "In Bohemia," and the pathetic poem by James Whitcomb Riley. "The old man and Jim." The lines were intensely dramatic and he received an ovation.

Tenor solos "A perfect day" "Mr. Dream Maker," and "Night and morning" by Edwin Wallace, accompanied by Miss Edna Robinson were well received.

Several violin solos were rendered by Miss Beatrice Costello accompanied by her sister Miss Costello.

"Mattinata" by Leoncavallo and "Its very vexin" were sung by Miss Holbrook and received well merited applause. Miss Emily Bjorkman was the accompanist. Orchestra selections closed the program.

Much of the evening's success was due to the untiring efforts of the chairman of the entertainment committee Carl Maibach, who was ably assisted by Harry W. Dunmore, Mr. Small and Senator Louis F. R. Langelier.

☞It is not often that one has an opportunity to hear a young man and his wife speak for equal suffrage on the same platform. Joseph Kelley will follow his wife March 2d at the Wollaston School hall.

A CARD.

The family of Dr. Welch deeply appreciate the tribute paid him. They intend personally to thank all those who have expressed their sympathy in any way but fear that through an oversight some friend may not be reached.

HUERTA'S WORD IS DISPUTED

Said Wilson Wanted Marines to Guard Mexican Legation

DENIAL BY THE PRESIDENT

Says Matter Has Never Even Been Discussed In Washington—Villa Ignores Our Demand Concerning Benton's Body—Carranza Receives Sharp Message From Bryan

Washington, Feb. 27.—According to a City of Mexico dispatch Provisional President Huerta refused permission to the United States government to send 2000 American marines as a guard for the legation at the Mexican capital.

Huerta says he was asked by Washington to agree to the dispatch, in addition to the Americans, of 1000 more men made up of Germans, English and French. To all of this he returned a negative reply on the ground that there was no need for such precautions. Nelson O'Shaughnessy refused either to confirm or deny the information.

President Wilson says the United States has never requested permission to send marines to Mexico City and had not discussed nor taken up the subject in any way with Mexican officials.

For several days there has been considerable discussion in official circles about the sending of a legation guard to Mexico City similar to those sent by Great Britain and Germany, and while it is admitted that the Washington administration had been considering the advisability for such a step it was positively stated that no decision in the matter had been reached.

It also has been reported in Washington that the Huerta government was not averse to having foreign countries send legation guards to Mexico City, and that the diplomatic representatives in Mexico City from practically all the nations had recommended such action. The United States has each time been advised previously of the intention of other countries to send marines to Mexico City and has offered no objections.

Very recently President Wilson told callers he saw no occasion to follow the action of other nations in sending marines to Mexico City. It was stated that his position is unchanged.

Federal officials made it plain that they regarded such an announcement by Huerta as being made for its possible effect in Mexico City and to accentuate the provisional president's repeated assurances that foreigners are in no danger.

The American government is exerting every influence at its disposal to obtain from General Villa the surrender of the body of William S. Benton, the British subject recently executed at Juarez. No reply has been received to the instructions sent to Consul Letcher to find Benton's grave, and Secretary Bryan was surprised by news dispatches quoting Villa as saying Benton was buried in Chihuahua City.

High officials conceded that future development of the American policy toward Mexico hinged largely on the outcome of the inquiry in the Benton case.

As a result of the unsatisfactory attitude of Villa, at a conference between Bryan and Ambassador Spring-Rice it was decided that British Consul Perceval will not proceed into Mexico for the examination of Benton's body until "better arrangements can be made."

"Curb Villa or admit that he is the real leader of the revoutionary forces in the north, and that you are powerless."

In effect this message was delivered to General Carranza at Nogales. On the answer to it will depend whether this government will continue its policy of patient, watchful waiting in Mexico or consider other tactics.

Carranza holds in his hands the key to the entire situation it is said. Despite the utmost secrecy at the state department, which even has gone so far as to deny facts easily proven from independent sources, it was learned that Carranza has been told the United States will not submit longer to having its demands defied. He has been warned that Villa's action in the Benton case is indefensible. He has been warned that popular opinion in the United States will no longer support the administration's semi-recognition of the constitutionalists so long as the lives of Americans and foreigners generally are not held sacred by Villa and his subordinates.

INSPECTION BY GRAND STANDARD BEARER

Also Return Visit by Cambridge Commandery to Quincy Commandery

Notable Day for Knights Templar of the City

An event of more than usual interest in the annals of Quincy commandery, Knights Templar, took place Friday in the Masonic apartments, City Square. The event, which was a double one, was the annual inspection of the commandery by Grand Standard Bearer, Everett Chamberlin Benton, assisted by Em. Sir Frank L. Gibson of St. Bernard commandery as grand warder, and suite and a return visit to Quincy commandery by Cambridge commandery of Cambridge. Some two years ago Quincy commandery paid a fraternal visit to Cambridge.

The Cambridge fraters, parading seventy swords, arrived on special cars at 6.30 under command of Captain General Hugh M. Tolar as acting commander, and with him were Past Commander Alfred Parker, now an Atlantic resident, as acting generalissimo; Past Commander Howard F. Peak, as acting captain general; George B. Colesworthy as senior warden; Herbert F. Hawthorn as junior warden; Gustav F. Carstein as sword bearer and Isaac Bradford as warden.

The regular conclave of Quincy commandery for the transaction of business met at 4.30 in the afternoon and at 6 o'clock a recess was taken until 8 o'clock. During this time a banquet was served by Westover & Foss which was attended by upwards of 200.

CAMBRIDGE COMMANDERY.

At 8 o'clock the lines were formed for the reception of Cambridge commandery. A committee consisting of Past Commanders Albert W. Fay, Arthur W. Stetson, Henry P. Furnald and Charles E. Pierce, honorary, with the guard under command of Adjutant David Hanson, escorted Cambridge commandery to the asylum, the sir knights of Quincy commandery being drawn up in two divisions to receive them. The first division was in command of Senior Warden, Sir Knight Edward H. Bushnell and the second division in command of Junior Warden, Sir Knight John H. Whitehead. Sir Knight Herbert Y. Follett presided at the organ.

E. C. BENTON.

The visitors were received by Em. Commander Walter E. Piper who expressed his regrets that illness of Em. Commander Walter C. Wardwell of Cambridge commandery prevented his being present.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

No Limit This Year on Amount in Budget

Among the important matters that will come before the City Council at its meeting Monday evening will be the annual budget of the Mayor and Treasurer. There are several new matters that come up in relation to the budget this year for the first time. First, the form of the budget will be under the new form as approved by the State system. A second is, that while in other years the Council by a two-thirds vote might increase any amount recommended by the Mayor, it cannot do so this year. The Council may decrease any item submitted by the Mayor but cannot increase any.

Another and perhaps the most important is the amount that the city can raise in the budget for current expenses. In other years the limit that could be raised in the budget was $12 on $1,000 based on the average valuation for the past three years. A year ago the Legislature enacted a law which obliged every city to fix its own tax limit. The law called for a public hearing after which the limit should be fixed by ordinance.

The City Council of 1913 complied with the law in so far as the public hearing was concerned, and at this hearing the sentiment was unanimous that it should not be raised over $12. The City Council however failed to fix by ordinance what the limit should be. As a result the city finds itself without any tax limit. As usual the several departments of te city will ask for increases and the Mayor is having a hard time whittling the several items down, so as not to increase the tax rate but to reduce it.

There seems to have been a little mixup, or rather misunderstanding relative to the bill before the Legislature to authorize the City of Quincy to pay to Patrick A. Milford and James R. Qualey the reward of $500 offered for the apprehension of Louis G. Restelli.

It seems according to Representative Sullivan that there were two bills before the Legislature. One was to authorize the City of Quincy to pay the reward of $500 and the second bill to authorize the state to pay a similar reward. It will be remembered that rewards were offered both by the city and state. The bill authorizing the City of Quincy to pay the reward has been passed by the legislature and approved by the Governor. The bill authorizing the state to pay the reward is still pending. It was on this latter bill that a hearing was scheduled to be held Friday before the Ways and Means Committee but which was postponed until a later date.

WELL KNOWN LAWYERS

Are Retained by G. B. Bates in Railroad Fight

That G. B. Bates proposes to continue his fight against the grade crossing decree, is evidenced by the fact that he has retained such a prominent law firm as Brandeis, Dunbar & Nutter. His lawyers inform him that the State of Massachusetts has also filed exceptions to the decree, on the ground that the special commission did not pass on the issue raised as to whether Saville street is a public street. It is claimed that the State may not be liable for an assessment.

Heavy expenses to the city are said to be involved whenever the railroad decides to become a four-track road, especially at School street, Granite and Goffe streets, Dimmick street, Adams street, Beale street and Squantum street. When the bridges are raised and widened out the street approaches must be changed.

Many recall the expense to the city when the bridge at Hancock street was built, requiring a new lay out of streets in the vicinity, involving land damages.

PRIVATE DANCE AT ALHPA HALL

Fifty of the younger couples of the city, most of them members of the three upper classes of Quincy High school, attended a private dancing party in Alpha hall Friday night. The affair was informal and was one of a series of invitation parties to be held before the graduation.

The matrons were Mrs. G. S. Burr, Mrs. G. Richardson and Mrs. W. G. Young. Until nine o'clock they received, and from then out, to the music of Somerville's orchestra from the Winthrop Yacht club, the guests danced.

The affair was run under the direction of four Quincy High school boys—Stanley Smith, Frederic Schenkleberger, Earle Richardson and Clifton Young. Ices were served during the evening.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The Epworth League of the Swedish M. E. church met last evening with Misses Edith and Olga Olson, 28 Ryden street. The program included readings by Miss Olga Anderson, and quartet numbers by Alfred Olson, Elmer Carlmark, Richard Carlmark and Fred Peterson. Refreshments were served.

Tuesday evening's meeting of St. Margaret's Guild is to be a Lenten service addressed by the rector.

TENNIS CLUB DANCE

Pretty Dance and Where New Steps Prevail

The subscription dance given by the Quincy Tennis club at Music hall last evening was a very pretty mid-winter party, largely attended by well-known people of the city. Nearly 100 married ladies, prominent in Quincy affairs, were patronesses and 24 well known young men acted as ushers.

The decorations were largely confined to the platform and the corner occupied by the matrons. On the platform was located Poole's orchestra of Boston, nine pieces, surrounded by palms and other plants, with two large American flags as a background, and overhead numerous lighted Japanese lanterns. The music rendered by this favorite orchestra was inspiring and pleasing.

The three matrons were located in the corner to the left of the platform. Mrs. Clarence Burgin was gowned in blue with lace trimmings; Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann in yellow chiffon trimmed with lace and fur; and Mrs. Joseph B. Grose in black charmeuse with violets. At the opening of the party the guests were presented to the matrons by the ushers.

The officers of the club were designated by small tennis racquets on the lapels of their coats, and all the ushers wore white carnations, and were alert for the success of the party.

All the new dances were gracefully and prettily shown, winning approval, the new and attractive steps as danced not being open to censure.

During the intermission lemonade was served at the right of the platform.

The ushers were: Herbert S. Barker, Jr., Walter H. Binnian, Paul Blackmur, Walter E. Burke, John J. Crain, Richard Crane, L. Kenneth Edwards, William C. Edwards, Henry M. Faxon, Henry R. Holden, Delcevare King, Carleton C. Lane, Hobart A. Lawton, Warren G. Ogden, George E. Pfaffmann, John S. Pfaffmann, Henry W. Porter, Charles A. Price, Fred B. Rice, A. F. Schenkelberger, Carl R. Sheppard, James H. Slade, Morton Smith and Moreton T. Swallow.

DISTRICT COURT.

William E. Dewcett was fined $25 for assault on Assed Nohamed at Quincy shipyard.

Walter A. Pellerin was sentenced to one month in the house of correction for drunkenness at Braintree and ordered to pay a fine of $7 upon which he has a suspended sentence.

Manro Rubbi was arraigned for the larceny of a pair of rubber boots at Quincy. Case continued until March 2.

MINSTREL SHOW AT WOLLASTON

School Hall Was Like a Ladies' Hobble Skirt---Standing Room Only

Many Local Hits Which Were Keenly Relished

"Why is this hall like Mrs. Bain's hobble skirt?" ran one of the gags at the Congregational Mens club minstrels held in Wollaston school hall, Friday evening.

"Because there is standing room only" was the answer, and it was literally true. The show was witnessed by the largest audience ever present at an entertainment in Wollaston. Only at the school dedication was the audience exceeded. Seats were at a premium at 7.30 and many minutes before the show there was only standing room and it was necessary to turn people away.

In fact President Campbell was obliged to announce that the show would be repeated. More tickets were distributed than the capacity of the hall called for and the unprecedented demand brought about a condition the committee did not foresee. Needless to say the show was a thorough success.

Shortly after 8 the strains of the opening overture were sounded and the huge curtain was lifted disclosing the stalwart minstrel crew and Interlocutor Chester I. Campbell, president of the club.

Enter the end men with white suits and the customary cake walk gyrations. "Gentlemen be seated" cried Mr. Interlocutor and the show was on. A rapid crossfire of gags and jokes and the singing of rousing minstrel songs kept up a continual stream of laughter and applause.

The local hits were numerous and there was clever work with the bones and tambours. The ends were: Charles E. Hathaway, Martin H. Stearns, Harry W. Titus, Clifton Hill, Edward Brown, Harry Campbell, William A. Mann, H. G. Crory and Harvey Everett.

Music was furnished by the ladies orchestra of Miss Edna Frances Simmons with Charles E. Decker at the piano. Charles Everett was the musical director.

"Loves own sweet song" was rendered by Mr. Abele and "Swanee river" by William A. Mann, chorus in each case by the entire company.

A feature of the first part was the recitation of a revised version of "Barbara Freitchie" by the only living colored Dutchman in Quincy and "Grady's goat" by the only living colored Irishman in Quincy. Both parts were assumed by Clifton Hill.

Two songs that got across the footlights in good shape were "Beans, beans, beans" by Harvey Everett and "Next week sometime—not now" by Edward Brown. The clog of Mr. Brown in the latter took so well that he was encored until his feet refused to respond.

"Old Black Joe" in appropriate costume by Mr. Van Buskirk called forth carked attenti on"Sit down you're rocking the boat" was sung by Mr. Crory. The novelties introduced into this chorus caused it to be repeated again and again.

The closing chorus by the entire company brought to an end Part One. The minstrel choruses were especially written and compiled for the club by Harry J. Batton.

The olio was a long one and contained many numbers of unusual merit. First came the Schumann quartette composed of Messrs. Hopkins, Rogers, Everett and Weston in "Little cotton dolly."

Xylophone solos to the accompaniment of the orchestra were played with fine effect by Frank V. Russell.

One of the hits of the evening was scored by William Murphy in his Italian sketch which included the songs "Oi Marie" and "My Marina," His Italian touch brought him again and again before the footlights.

"A bunch of nonsense" by Hill and Campbell, —"Clif" and Harry—brought forth much laughter and applause. Harry was a walter, and a tough proposition. Clif was an Irish workman. There was much farce in the act and aHrry handled the names of various articles of diet in a very careless manner. The act closed with a military march and an exhibition of

All the congressmen seem to feel uneasy because they are merely passing laws when they ought to be out shaking hands with the voters.

Not much reason to complain of the shortage of money in Mexico, when they can make a lot more just as good with a rubber stamp.

Mr. Edison says the best training for children is found at the mother's knee. It certainly is the only position in which the slipper can be used effectively.

Who says that the American temperament lacks courage, when the military critics declare so boldly that the army officers should learn to navigate aeroplanes?

There is a disagreement of opinion as to whether the smaller number of people carried by the railroads is due to hard times or the growing scarcity of passes.

THE DAUGHTERS.

The annual February gathering of the Daughters of the American Revolution, that organization of patriotic women at Washington has for years caused a friendly amusement, from the combative tendencies that are so frequently displayed. And the joke that they are inheriting the war-like characteristics of their ancestors may not be wholly distant from the truth.

Women have ordinarily a pretty keen sense of stage play and of decorative values. Most of their big organizations have their scraps and tiffs, but they are kept under the surface. When the public doings come off, every one is apt to be serene and sweet for dress parade, in appearance at least.

But if the D. A. R.—ters feel ill-treated, they are apt to say so right out loud, with the comments that seem to them just and proper. It is a very useful organization, in what it does to keep alive patriotic tradition, and if its members are not quite as conventional as other organizations, their frankness has a certain refreshing quality.

LAND IN MEXICO.

As one reads further into the Mexican problem, the more startling appear the lights and shades of that unhappy people. On one hand you find a class possessing education and culture comparable to the finest polish of America or Europe. Underneath the thin upper crust composed first of cultivated and educated people, second of the feudal owners of the land, are the millions of "peons," who are practically serfs A bad economic system keeps them always in debt and ignorance

The situation is really about 300 years behind the age. The feudal hierarchy of land ownership is like what existed in Europe a number of centuries ago. It is no wonder that the peon, hopeless in his life of low wages or heavy taxes, frequently quits the despairing task of agriculture, which seems only to enrich the proprietor. Under such circumstances he feels he has nothing to lose by brigandage, or by espousing the cause of some demagog, and he might possibly gain something.

Observers of the problem incline to one of two alternatives. Does the country need another Diaz, some strong man who shall restore order, establish a benevolent despotism, with the end in view a gradual enlightenment of the working classes, until some future day when they can undertake some share in self government?

Or is the time ripe now for a more democratic movement, in which the attempt shall be made to establish a real republican government in this land of darkness?

Whichever attitude one may take, this one thing seems clear, that whatever power shall rule at Mexico City, it must take determined measures to encourage private holding in land. Th small farmer must be protected. There must be courts that will defend his right to enjoy the fruits of his land in peace.

TALK ON FOUR FAMOUS FOOLS

Third of the Mens Meetings Held Sunday Afternoon

The third of the series of Sunday afternoon meetings for men under the auspices of the Quincy Young Men's Christian Association will be held in Kincaide Theatre tomorrow afternoon at 3.30.

There has been over 800 men at each of the two meetings of the series that have been held, and the association wants very much to have the house packed to the doors tomorrow. Every man is not only invited to come, but is urged to bring others along with him to share the good time.

And it's certainly going to be one mighty good time. The speaker of the afternoon is Ora Samuel Gray, who is known all over the country as one of the most forceful speakers on the American platform. Mr. Gray will take for his subject "Four Famous Fools" and incidentally speak of some others not so famous. Virile, replete with logic and sound thought, this talk alone is well worth coming miles and paying a good price to hear. And yet its free to all men, thanks to this live and helpful association.

Then there's a musical treat too. Prof. A. M. Kanrich, the great Boston violinist, will play several selections, a double quartet with John White, soloist, will aso be there to add to the afternoon's enjoyment. There will be a men's chorus of 40 to lead the lively singing that has been such an inspiration to all in the meetings that have been held.

The doors will open at 3 P. M. and the first to come will secure the best seats, all of which are free. Now get busy men and let's have every seat filled for this great Sunday meeting.

baton, twirling by Hill that made the lights seem in danger.

In an original monologue "Folks I have met" Thomas G. Breen drew upon his native Irish wit and scored a decided hit. His many imitations and impersonations closed with the impressive recitation of "The poor old bachelor."

"Breakfast food harmony" by the White Sox Four brought ragtime into favor. Their songs included "Stick to your mother, Mary," "Goodbye summertime" and "Dreaming."

"A travel in mimicry" with illustrations by Captain Philip A. Carr was a very novel act, Captain Carr was introduced by Ernest W. Campbell and the number took the form of a story by Mr. Campbell with the illustrations by Captain Carr.

Captain Carr proved himself an acute observer of sounds and human nature and his extended fund of imitations brought applause.

"Just vaudeville" by Crory and Kerr brought in several song novelties that received a generous hand. Among the songs were "I'm on my way to Mandalay" and "Where the red red roses grow."

"Do'an yo' cry ma honey" by the Schumann quartette brought the evening to a close. As the large flags fell again into place some one was heard to remark "Well, that was some show," and this sentiment was shared by the entire audience.

☞Whether you believe in woman suffrage, or not, see the play in the Wollaston school hall Monday evening. Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, Mrs. Charles E. Sweet, Miss Theodora Luard and Miss Elizabeth Hubbard, are to have parts in "How the Vote was Won."

INSPECTION

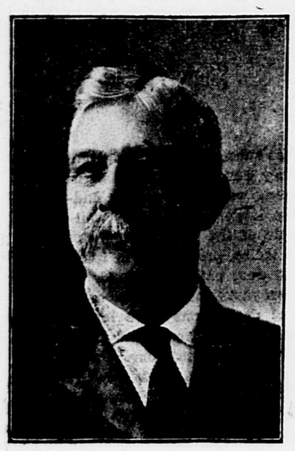
GRAND OFFICERS ARRIVE.

A few minutes later the Grand Standard Bearer and suite were announced in waiting and were escorted to the asylum by a committee composed of Generalissimo John Morgan and Past Commanders Albert W. Fay, Arthur W. Stetson, Henry P. Furnald, Charles E. Pierce and Sir Knights Eugene R. Stone and Andrew Milne. The formation of the lines to receive the Grand Officers were the same as that which received the visitors from Cambridge.



WALTER E. PIPER.

Grand Standard Bearer Everett C. Benton, was most cordially greeted. and in reply said that he was no stranger in Quincy, although this was the first occasion he had ever visited Quincy commandery. He had often wished to visit the baby commandery of the jurisdiction, but had neglected to do so, so that he was doubly pleased to have the opportunity to make his visit as Inspecting officer on the occasion of the visit of the sir knights from Cambridge.

LARGE SUITE.

The inspecting officer was accompanied by a large suite, among whom were Deputy Grand Commander Walter F. Medding; Grand Captain of the Guard, Isaac Chase; Grand Lecturer Asa A. Jewett; Past Grand Commander William H. H. Soule; Past Grand Warden Henry H. Litchfield and Past Grand Lecturer Henry A. Yenetchi.

Others on the suite were: Em. Com. William A. Seward of Ceour de Lion commandery; Em. Com. George E. Safford and Generalissimo George F. Reif of William Parkman commandery; Em. Com. Charles J. Sheppard of Gethsemane commandery; Past. Com. Samuel H. Capen of Cyphus commandery; Generalissimo H. B. Hazelwood and Captain General Edgar W. Evans of DeMolay commandery; Past Commanders George W. Knowlton and Varnum Waugh of Joseph Warren commandery; Commander Gardner R. P. Barker and Past Commanders Charles J. Jordan, William S. Wallace, David J. Pierce and Arthur W. Burr of South Shore commandery and Generalissimo William G. Irwin and Captain General Herbert Sawyer of St. Omer commandery.

The official count showed Quincy commandery parading 60 in uniform while the suite and visitors brought the attendance to over 200.

RED CROSS DEGREE.

The work of the evening was the Illustrious Order of the Red Cross which was exemplified in an impressive manner.

Following the business of the evening the Grand Standard Bearer brought the greetings of William W. Johnson, Grand Commander of Massachusetts and Rhode Island and complimented the commandery on its fine appearance and its work. He briefly told of his visit to South America to visit the lodges there while Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, stating that these South American lodges obtained their charter from Massachusetts, one of the first in America. He also told of constituting the lodge at Colon, whose members represented almost every country in the world and spoke of the rapid growth of Free Masonry.

Other brief remarks were made by Past Grand Commander Soule and Deputy Grand Commander Medding, who was particularly interested in the charter, as his name appeared upon it as one of the Grand Commandery officers.

FLOWERS PRESENTED.

As the Grand Officers were obliged to take the 10 o'clock train they retired at this time, but before doing so Commander Piper presented the inspecting officer and his warder with handsome bouquets of carnations.

Following the departure of the Grand Officers brief remarks were made by Acting Commander Tolar, Past Commander Parker and Sir Knight Larkin of Cambridge commandery and Em. Sir Albert W. Fay of Quincy commandery.

TRACTOR JUST THE THING

Would Equip Our Steam Fire Engine With One

Editor Quincy Ledger:—

I have read with interest the communication in Wednesday's Ledger in favor of equipping our new and efficient steam fire engine with a tractor instead of the Council appropriating $10,000 for the purpose of purchasing an auto piston pumping fire engine. I think that "Expert's" opinion is certainly worth heeding. With a $23.70 tax rate, and possibly a larger one coming this year, it is certainly arrant folly to talk of spending $10,000 for one piece of auto fire apparatus, when for the sum of $4,500, our new steam fire engine can be immediately equipped with a gasoline two-wheel front-drive truck of 72-horse power.

One of the largest manufacturers, if not the largest, of fire-apparatus in the country—the American La France Fire Engine Co. of Elmira, N. Y., has examined our new steamer, and has made that offer to the writer, and I am not sure but what it has also been made to our city officials.

For this city to spend several thousand dollars for a new steam fire engine and then in a short time relegate it to the scrap heap, is the height of extravagance. By the exercise of a little horse sense and prudence our Fire department can be at once equipped with as good a "piston pumping" engine as there is in the state.

If New York city, with all of its wealth, does not hesitate to equip its steam fire engines with tractors, it surely is not out of place for Quincy to do the same.

When our new steamer "Amoskeag" was bought of the Manchester Locomotive Works, our city officials let the old steamer go. It should have been rebuilt and held in reserve. This was one of the worst blunders ever made in the management of our on up-to-date equipment, Plymouth Let us hope that this blunder will not be repeated.

There is no question but what the department is undermanned and short on up-todate equipment. Plymouth with but 12,000 population has three steam fire engines and one auto fire engine, besides the usual outfit of hose and ladder companies, according to the Chief Engineer's last report.

I believe that our Fire department should be thoroughly overhauled by a commission or committee appointed for that purpose; that a comprehensive plan should be mapped out for the gradual retirement of all obsolete apparatus that cannot be equipped with tractors; and that in the course of the next three to five years the department should be so equipped and manned that the continual calling for outside help when a fire of any magnitude gets underway will be unnecessary

James S. Whiting.

BRAINTREE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

The people of the United States are puzzled about Mexico. The object of the second forum meeting of this year is to help solve the puzzle for the people of Braintree. Few persons on the public platform could better fill an hour with enlightenment regarding Mexico and its present crisis than can E. Philip Terry who has consented to speak for us on the afternoon of Sunday, March 1st. Mr. Terry recently spoke before the Boston Chamber of Commerce with great acceptance. He has lived for many years in Mexico, is the author of the standard book of travel concerning that country, and is an engaging speaker.

His address will comprise an outline history of Mexico telling of the primitive tribes that inhabited the territory, of the civilization which the Spaniards found and conquered, of the throwing off of the Spanish yoke, of the years of Mexican independence up to the time of Diaz, of the reign of Diaz and the conditions leading up to the present situation. Mr. Terry will give special attention to President Wilson's policy towards Mexico, will tell its effect upon the country and its probable future consequences. After the address he will answer questions relative to the subject.

No one who wishes to be informed upon this extremely vital topic of the day can afford to be absent from the meeting. There will be no further meetings of the forum this year. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

HARRY LOUD REMOVED

Has Been Foreman for the Board of Hea'th

The axe fell at City Hall again last night, although this time it was not the axe of the Mayor but that of the Board of Health, and as a result the head of Harry Loud, foreman of the Board of Health department, fell into the bucket.

Loud has been employed in the department for several years and his particular duty was to look after the man handling the scavenger and ash departments. He was not a civil service appointee although he was serving provisionally as such. For his work he drew a salary of $21 a week.

It is understood that no one will be appointed in his place, but that the work he has been doing will be done by John C. Murray, chairman of the board, although under the City Charter he can not draw any salary as such.

All the salary Mr. Murray can draw under the charter is that fixed by the ordinances for the chairman of the Board of Health, and legally he can not draw in addition the sum paid Mr. Loud. Mr. Murray intends to give his whole time to the position.

FEMALE VOTERS.

There are now twenty-four of Braintree's intelligent and respected women registered and they may now cast special ballots once a year for two members of the school committee for three years. Twenty-three of them are in precinct two, only one in precinct one, and none in precinct three. Will they cast ballots next Monday? Can you imagine those of precinct two climbing up the breakneck stairs in the engine house on Hollis avenue to cast their little ballots? If there is no contest on, will they cast their ballots just the same? Should not the women be allowed to vote the full ballot? The list of female voters to date is as follows:

BRIEFS

Mrs. Henry VonEmden of Botolph street, has been confined to her home several days this week with the grip.

Mr. Badger of Clive street has taken several trips out into the harbor this week in his ice boat.

The annual meeting, supper and election of Atlantic Memorial church takes place Wednesday evening.

Mrs. John Murray moved her store this week from Sagamore block to the block on the corner of Newbury avenue and Sagamore street.

About 30 young people of the West Quincy Epworth League with their pastor Rev. T. L. Martin gave the Ellis Island Immigrant demonstration at the Atlantic M. E. church Tuesday night. A good audience greeted them. Their entertainment is commendable, being educational and missionary in character. The Atlantic league served lunch after the entertainment.

At the board meeting last week of the Atlantic M. E. church, a unanimous vote was taken to request the Bishop to return Rev. E. C. Pollard to Atlantic for another year. The $500 local indebtedness has been met; the pastor's salary paid in full to date; 100 per cent added to the membership and the church is taking on new life. An Epworth League has been organized which promises to be a useful factor in church work.

FORE RIVER LEAGUE GAMES

Machine Gallery Makes Grand Total of 1439

A lively bowling session took place at the Coliseum alleys Friday night when the Fore River league teams met in the regular matches. It is the first time for several weeks that eight teams appeared on the same night.

Only four men tripled, Tirrell of the Machine Gallery leading the way with 334, attained with the help of singles of 120 and 117. Smith followed with 312, his high string being 119. Burke of the Gallery and Clark of the ex-Apprentices closed the procession with an even three hundred each. At times there was much excitement caused by the spectacular buying up of spares by several bowlers. The rolling of the four high men was sensational to the extreme at times.

The Machine Gallery beat the All Stars, 4 to 0.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAGUE

Makaria Class Defeats the Clark Class

The Makaria class went into second place in the Sunday School bowling league by defeating the Clark Class last night on the Y. M. C. A. alleys. The winners took three points out of the four possible but the odd point was not decided until the last man had rolled, and then it was found that the Bethany church team was two pins to the good on the total score. French was high man for the evening with a three string total of 269; while Nicoll had the high single string making a mark of 102.

Nero Plays The Lyre and Sings to the Populace While Rome Burns In Quo Vadis at Quincy Music Hall

SPORT NEWS

The N. E. A. A. A. U. basketball league may be disbanded if the St. Mary's team, as rumored withdraw from the league. Nothing official has been sent to the basketball commission on this point as yet, but such action would be no surprise.

The St. Mary's first and second teams forfeited their games to the Quincy A. A. Friday night, word being received by Manager Flynn before his team left this city. The reason given for the forfeits was that the St. Mary's are pretty well shot to pieces, most of the men being out of the game owing to illness or absence from Boston.

The basketball commission meets Monday night when it will be known officially if St. Mary's are out for the balance of the season. The unplayed games, in the event of their discontinuing will be forfeited to the teams billed against them.

In more ways than one basketball this season has been no where nearly as successful as in the past two years. In this city, the home of the Quincy A. A., twice holders of the New England championships and representatives of this section at the national championships at Chicago last summer, but little support has been offered by the sporting public.

Despite this fact the team intends to play the remaining games on its schedule, even if the only witnesses to the games are the officials directing the play. Quincy is in first position with seven wins and three losses and St. Alphonsus and St. Josephs are tied for second place with seven wins and four losses. St. Mary's are in the cellar position with only three wins and nine losses, a situation it is almost impossible to overcome under the conditions.

The warrant committee of Milton has recommended that the question of a municipal gymnasium and the general development of the Brook road playground be considered by a committee of five citizens and that $500 be appropriated for the necessary expenses of such committee. The article will be discussed at the town meeting and will have the support of the younger residents of the western end of the town. The project of a gym was launched several years ago but this is the first time that it will come before the voters.

The Tech Freshmen will be the attraction at the Y. M. C. A. tonight in the weekly basket-ball game. The Tech boys have been putting up a great game for the past five weeks winning 7 games and losing only one during this time. They have defeated all of the "Prep" schools in this vicinity and are almost certain to win the Tech championship next week when they play the Sophomore team. The second team will play the Silent Five and a rattling good game ought to result for the Silent Five boys think that there is not much difference between the two teams.

PHILERGIAN NOTES.

The next meeting of the club will be known as Reciprocity day. There will be music and tea and the date is March 3. It is expected that Mrs. Mulligan of Natick, past state president, will be present, also Mrs. Jenkins president of the Whitman Woman's club, Mrs. Andrews, president of the Women in Council of Boston and Mrs. Simmons, president of the Brockton Woman's club.

The class in Modern Literature, with Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney as teacher, met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Horace R. Drinkwater of Park street. The subject was Ellen Key, the great Swedish author and her teachings. Mrs. Gurney departed from her usual custom of reading selections from the works of the author and spent the entire time in discussion of her life and aims, leaving it to the members of the class to do the reading themselves. She spoke of her best known books, "The Century of the Child," "Love and Marriage" and "The Woman Movement."

A NEW MATRIMONIAL SOCIETY

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Between the mountains of India and Persia there is a tribe among whom the women choose their husbands. When a single woman wishes to marry a man she sends a servant to his house to pin a handkerchief to his hat as an intimation of her desire. Unless he can show that he is too poor to purchase her at the price her father requires he is obliged to marry her.

Until the organization of the Arlington club for men there was no superfluity of spinsters over bachelors in a certain American town, but from then on marriages began to fall off. One of the most popular married women called the maidens together and organized an association for the advancement of matrimony based on the Indian-Persian plan. The first young lady to secure a husband by the method was invited to state before the association how it had worked in her case. She arose and said:

"Mrs. President, I had long admired Mr. George Luddington, who had paid me some attention, and had it not been for the organization of the Arlington club I believe he would have asked me to be his wife. But that pestiferous institution reduced him from an incident lover to a vacillating hanger on. Soon after the adoption of the plan which we are associated to carry out I worked Mr. Luddington's initials on a fine cambric handkerchief and, calling a messenger, told him to take it to the club at the hour I knew Mr. Luddington dined there, obtain access to the coat room and pin it to his hat.

"The messenger had no difficulty in executing his commission. I did not know for some time that Mr. Luddington knew from whom the token came. I have since learned that he knew very well, and the action he took in the matter was intended to frighten me off. A few evenings after receiving the handkerchief he called on me, and I saw at a glance that he was or pretended to be very irate.

"'What do you suppose has happened to me?' he asked brusquely.

"'I can't imagine,' I replied meekly.

"'An association has been formed in this town—so I understand—to drive us bachelors into matrimony. If a girl wishes to marry a man she sends some one to pin a handkerchief to his hat. Did you ever hear of such immodest impudence?'

"'Never in my life.'

"'You must excuse me, ladies, for my weakness, but he frightened me out of my wits.

"'Who do you suppose this person is?' he growled.

"'I can't imagine,' I replied.

"'Don't you think her very unmaidenly?' he asked in a less threatening tone, for my agreeing with him rendered him less severe to me.

"'I certainly do. I wonder how she could have had the face to do it!'

"I shrank into a corner of a sofa, as far away from him as I could get. He sat down on the other end and looked at me kind of puzzled. He knew I had sent him the handkerchief and couldn't understand how I could condemn myself for doing it. He looked very terrible, but not quite so terrible as when he first came. Then he began a system of torture to find out what it all meant.

"'The handkerchief,' he said, 'was very dainty, though the initials were badly worked. They looked as if they had been executed by some one with fingers so big that they were only fitted to work with a skewer.'

"At this I said nothing. I dared not speak for fear of betraying a tremolo in my voice.

"'If a girl,' he went on, 'had sent me a gift without an immodest intention I should have been deeply impressed with it. Quite likely I would have been affected to the point of making love to her and proposing marriage.'"

This statement was received with cries of "No!" "Don't you believe it!" "They all talk that way, but they don't propose!" When the commotion subsided the speaker went on with her recital:

"'But for a girl deliberately to tell a man she wants him to marry her, thus usurping his privilege, there's nothing she could do to so effectually turn him'—

"He got no further. I was full to the top of my throat. I made several convulsive gulps and burst into a torrent of tears.

"I don't know what he was doing for a few moments, for I held my handkerchief to my face. I heard nothing, but presently felt his arm around my waist. Then he drew my head down on his breast.

"'If the fool killer comes this way,' he said, with his lips pressed against my cheek, 'he'll yank me out, certain sure. Don't cry, little girl. Dear little girl, forgive me! I've loved you ever since'"—

Again there were cries of unbelief. "Oh, bosh!" "What a whopper!" and such like expressions of disapproval, whereupon the speaker indignantly turned her back on the assembly and with her nose in the air marched out of the room.

"Ladies," said the president severely, "I'm astonished at you. This society was organized to promote marriage, not to destroy romance. To doubt the word of a lover who says he has always loved the girl to whom he proposes would be to destroy nine-tenths of the delight attending such occasions."

SAYS RECALL IS HARMFUL

Taft Argues That Court Can Be Vindicated Without It

PLEADS FOR CLAYTON BILL

Congress Should Remove Temptation For Judges to Build "Judicial Families"—Need of Uniformity of Judicial Procedure Also Urged by Parker and Root

Washington, Feb. 28.—Former President Taft appeared before the house committee on judiciary, in the capacity of president of the American Bar association, and, with several other members of the association, advocated passage of the Clayton bill to authorize the supreme court to prescribe forms and rules of procedure for federal courts on the common-law side.

"All men delight in the exercise of patronage," said Taft. "Of course," he added, with a smile, "on this matter I am speaking to the Republicans on your committee, not the Democrats."

One of the troubles with life appointments for judges, Taft said, was that the temptation was strong to build up about themselves "judicial families." Lawyers knew, he said, that it was often a dangerous thing to make any charge against a court clerk before the judge who had appointed him.

That temptation could be removed by congress, Taft insisted, and the courts as they are now constituted could be vindicated without resort to the recall, which he believed harmful. He thought appointments of receivers by federal judges should be made from a list furnished by the interstate commerce commission.

Mr. Taft added that at some later date it probably would be advisable to provide for the examination of the rules of procedure by a commission, with a view to harmonizing and administering the two sides of federal court work. He wished to call the committee's attention to one fact.

"You can safely consider this bill," he said, "since it has the approval of the Progressive party and of Mr. Root and myself. I want the committee to get that fact; that where two so widely divergent views agree upon a thing, it is probably a thing to be desired." For the present he thought the authorization contained in the bill was all that should be attempted.

Alton B. Parker also dwelt upon the need of uniformity. Parker said there was an ideal in view, as suggested by Taft, of complete uniformity in procedure throughout the federal courts, and perhaps the state courts, at some time.

Senator Root declared legislatures had built up under the pressure of individual interests codes of procedure which prevented the courts from administering justice. His own state, he said, was the worst sinner in that respect, and that there a man might be compelled to try twenty suits to reach a decision on a simple claim.

Corps of "acute, adroit code lawyers" had grown up under this abuse, he said, who were able to clog the wheels of justice with technical evasions. The man of small means soon became discouraged or even ruined, he said, while men of wealth secured immunity from being brought to justice.

ELLIS JEALOUS OF WIFE

"Something Snapped In His Head" and Then He Killed Her

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Jealousy caused him to kill his wife, but he has no recollection of committing the crime, was the testimony of William C. Ellis, former Cincinnati leather merchant, on trial for the murder.

Ellis, in the effort to avoid the death penalty, told a story of his wife becoming infatuated with a young Canadian merchant.

"Something snapped in my head," said Ellis. "I don't know what happened. I only know that I felt I had more misery than I could bear."

"NOW I LAY ME"

Last Testament of Chicago Man Starts With Childhood Prayer

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Lynn K. Cook had ideas of his own when it came to drawing up an $8000 will, as evidenced when the document was filed. Here it is:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake
"It is my wish that $1 be paid to my foster daughter, Roberta Cook, and that everything else that I may possess be given without restrictions to my wife, Lydie, she to do with it as she only knows best."

BAN PLACED ON DRINKERS

Must Withdraw From Organizations Which Maintain Sideboards

Pittsburg, Feb. 28.—Rum and drinkers are under the ban of various plants of the American Sheet and Tin Plate company, whose employes have been notified that they must withdraw from fraternal organizations which maintain sideboards or cease to be employes of the company. The order affects all plants of the company located in various parts of the country and affects upwards of 30,000 men.

Members of the Benevolent Order of Elks have called a meeting to take action on the order. Members of the Moose, Eagles, Owls and other orders maintaining sideboards will also hold meetings of protest, following the lead of the Elks. Some of the employes who are members of these orders regard the edict of the company as a curtailment of their personal liberties.

MANDAMUS FOR MAYOR

Newburyport School Fight to Be Threshed Out In Court

Newburyport, Mass., Feb. 28.—Newburyport's school war has been brought into court by Lawrence P. Dodge and nine other taxpayers, who wish to have Mayor Landford compelled to return the tools and equipment for the teaching of manual training which he took from the Price street school.

They asked the supreme court for a writ of mandamus for that purpose, and also to compel the mayor and the board of aldermen to furnish a suitable place for the teaching of manual training. An order of notice returnable Tuesday was issued.

Landford has opposed the teaching of manual training and domestic science in the schools, and lopped $4000 off the school committee's estimates because of that fact.

BEGINS NEW LIFE AT AGE OF SIXTY

Woman Who Killed Husband Pardoned After Many Years

Reading, Pa., Feb. 28.—Mrs. Kate Edwards, who has been in the shadow of the gallows for nearly thirteen years for the killing of her husband, was released from the Berks county jail under a pardon by Governor Tener and secretly taken from the city to begin life over again.

She was convicted of first degree murder in 1901 and sentenced to be hanged, but four governors declined to fix a day for her execution.

Mrs. Edwards is nearly 60 years old. She was convicted of the murder along with a negro, who was employed with her husband in a quarry. A short time after her arrest Mrs. Edwards gave birth to a negro child.

The woman later confessed that the negro was innocent of the crime, and he was granted a new trial and acquitted.

New York, Feb. 28.—Believing that he has talked too much since the court of appeals granted him a new trial, Charles Becker, former police lieutenant, said he would have no more statements to make until he takes the stand in his own defense when again tried for the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

Becker told reporters it might be announced positively that under no circumstances would he seek reinstatement on the police force.

District Attorney Whitman declared Becker would be placed on trial again in April or May. Justice Seabury or Justice Davis will preside.

DEBATE OF GARDNER CLUB

United States Should Build More Battleships

The United States should build more battleships yearly as our present navy is entirely inadequate for our protection in time of war. On account of the way in which President Wilson is handling the Mexican situation we are liable to incur the hostility of Great Britain and go to war with her in the near future. This was the verdict Thursday evening by the judges of the debate, which was held by the Gardner Club of Christ church, after each side had rendered their most forceful arguments.

The question for debate was "Resolved, that the United States should build more battleships yearly."

The speakers for the affirmative were Russell Westland and Dr. T. H. Veale; for the negative, Ellis Young and Everett Prout.

The judges of the debate were Rev. R. E. Armstrong, Arthur Newton and Norman Ross.

The debate was very heated and interesting, and one side no sooner advanced an argument than the other side promptly refuted it. As a result of this, it took the honorable judges practically twenty minutes to agree on the winner, and then they bestowed the honors to the affirmative side.

After the debaters had finished their speaking the question was thrown open to the audience, and an even more heated debate ensued, which was only terminated by the refreshment committee giving the "all ready" signal.

A collation of crab meat salad, hot rolls, cocoa and cake was served which put the finishing touches on the first debate of the Gardner Club, which was so successful.

The funeral of Washington Williams was held this afternoon from his home at 42 West Elm avenue with a large attendance. Services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Isiah W. Sneath, pastor of the Wollaston Congregational church. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

AUTO SHOW OPENS TONIGHT

State and City Officials to Participate

Scores of workmen have been busy for the past few days getting the interior of the Wollaston Centre Garage ready for the automobile show which opens tonight, and they have done their work well. The entire lower floor has been given up to the exhibition of cars of various makes, and the space not occupied by these cars is covered with carpeting.

Around the sides of the main room as well as about the booths in the centre lattice work has been placed, which has been gaily decorated with bunting, palms, and fernery of various kinds. A large number of American flags are also tastefully arranged about the garage.

On one side of the garage is the display of the White and Overland cars. The White company not only show a truck, but a three seated sight-seeing car, a runabout five and seven passenger cars. The Overland company also show a number of handsome cars.

In the centre is the exhibit of the Rambler cars made by the Jeffery Co. This is a very attractive booth and all of the various style 1914 models made by this company as seen, which include the Jeffrey six and the Little Jeffery.

On the opposite side cars of the Regal Co., the Chevrolet, Krit, Metz, Case, Ford, Maxwell and other companies are shown. In all there are upwards of one hundred cars of the 1914 models.

In addition to the cars shown there are the usual booths at which are the necessary auxiliaries such as presto tanks, horns, oils, etc. The Freestone Tire Co. also have a fine exhibit.

In addition there is a booth where all the latest sheet music is for sale, and a platform from which the opening exercises will be held tonight and from which concerts will be given each evening during the show.

While the show is not of course on as large a scale as that given at the Mechanics Building, it is, considering the space available equally as good a show, for all of the leading makes of automobiles both pleasure vehicles and those especially constructed for business are seen.

The formal opening will be at 7 o'clock this evening, when officials prominent in the State, the city of Boston and the city of Quincy, will take part. The program also includes vocal and instrumental music.

The net proceeds of the recent play given in the town hall for the benefit of the Friendly Aid Association was about $215. This gratifying donation was due very largely to the untiring efforts of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Scott of Presidents road under whose direction the play was given.

The scramble for town offices will be unusually lively this year unless all signs fail and the voter who goes to the polls March 2, will have quite a list of candidates to choose from. Although we hear it said that this man or that man will have no show, such predictions are likely to prove far from correct when the votes are counted and at any rate it is a healthy sign to have so many citizens so much interested in the town and its welfare that they aspire to public office and a chance to have a hand in the administration of affairs. We wish them all good luck and may the best men win.

BATES WINS FOR QUINCY

Does All the Scoring Against Fall River

Earl Bates, right forward of Quincy High school defeated Fall River Tech school Friday afternoon in the High school gymnasium. It was the second defeat administered Tech in 17 games.

Bates, the only Quincy player to score, shot seven goals from the floor, and 10 on free tries, getting 24 points against 22 for the visitors. All athletic honors that could be showered on a player were given him at the close of the game.

The game is thought to have been the only one played in the state this season in which all the points of the winning team were scored by one man, and all were the result of cool, calculating work and on three occasions bordered on sensations.

Quincy played a fine offensive game and when Fall River opened up their strong offense in the second period they met with an equally strong defence by Quincy.

The ball had been in play only a few minutes when Bates tossed his first foul called by Referee Thompson on a Fall River player for holding. Several others followed in quick successions because of minor violations, due probably to the anxiety of the visitors to cop the victory. Umpire White of the visiting team made only one decision.

The score at the close of the first period was 10 to 8 in favor of Quincy. Inside of the first minute of the second period, Fall River had scored a point from a foul through a sensational shot by their centre, tied the score and took the lead by Hibbard tossing of a goal on a free try. The game then seesawed, Bates striving to maintain the lead for his team but with only five minutes remaining the visitors led 18 to 15. Bates through a flash of style that he has not exhibited in previous games rounded up the needed points.

The winning basket was made in the last minute of play and when the whistle blew the Fall River boys maintained that there remained three seconds in which to play. One assumed a threatening attitude, at seeing his team defeated. When the whistle blew the ball was dead and it is extremely doubtful that it could have been put in play long enough for a score within the limited time as claimed by Fall River.

Between the halves the Juniors defeated the Sophomores, 14 to 11 and tied with the Seniors for the lead in the Interclass series.
